The end then of Learning is to repair the ruins of our firſt Parents by regaining to know God aright, and out of that knowledg to love him, to imitate him, to be like him, as we may the neareſt by poſſeſſing our ſouls of true vertue, which being united to the heavenly Grace of Faith, makes up the higheſt perfection. But becauſe our underſtanding cannot in this body found it ſelf but on ſenſible things, nor arrive ſo clearly to the knowledg of God and things inviſible, as by orderly conning over the viſible and inferior creature, the ſame method is neceſſarily to be follow'd in all diſcreet teaching. And ſeeing every Nation affords not experience and tradition enough for all kind of Learning, therfore we are chiefly taught the Languages of thoſe people who have at any time been moſt induſtrious after Wiſdom; ſo that Language is but the Inſtrument conveying to us things uſeful to be known. And though a Linguiſt ſhould pride himſelf to have all the Tongues that Babel cleft the world into, yet if he have not ſtudied the ſolid things in them as well as the Words and Lexicons, he were nothing ſo much to be eſteem'd a learned man, as any Yeoman or Tradeſman competently wiſe in his Mother-Dialect only. Hence appear the many miſtakes which have made Learning generally ſo unpleaſing and ſo unſucceſsful; firſt we do amiſs to ſpend ſeven or eight years meerly in ſcraping together ſo much miſerable Latin and Greek, as might be learnt otherwiſe eaſily and delightfully in one year. And that which caſts our proficiency therin ſo much behind, is our time loſt partly in too oft idle vacancies given both to Schools and Univerſities, partly in a prepoſterous exaction, forcing the empty wits of Children to compoſe Theams, Verſes and Orations, which are the acts of ripeſt judgment, and the final work of a head fill'd by long reading and obſerving, with elegant maxims, and copious invention. Theſe are not matters to be wrung from poor ſtriplings, like blood out of the noſe, or the plucking of untimely fruit: beſides the ill habit which they get of wretched barbarizing againſt the Latin and Greek idiom, with thir untutor'd Angliciſms, odious to be read, yet not to be avoided without a well continued and judicious converſing among pure Authors digeſted, which they ſcarce taſte; wheras, if after ſome preparatory grounds of ſpeech by thir certain forms got into memory, they were led to the praxis therof in ſome choſen ſhort book leſſon'd throughly to them, they might then forthwith proceed to learn the ſubſtance of good things, and Arts in due order, which would bring the whole Language quickly into thir power. This I take to be the moſt rational and moſt profitable way of learning Languages, and wherby we may beſt hope to give account to God of our youth ſpent herein. And for the uſual method of teaching Arts, I deem it to be an old error of Univerſities, not yet well recover'd from the Scholaſtic groſsneſs of barbarous ages, that inſtead of beginning with Arts moſt eaſy, and thoſe be ſuch as are moſt obvious to the ſence, they preſent thir young unmatriculated Novices at firſt coming with the moſt intellective abſtractions of Logic and Metaphyſics: ſo that they having but newly left thoſe Grammatic Flats and Shallows where they ſtuck unreaſonably to learn a few words with lamentable conſtruction, and now on the ſudden tranſported under another climat to be toſs'd and turmoil'd with thir unballaſted wits in fadomleſs and unquiet deeps of Controverſy, do for the moſt part grow into hatred and contempt of Learning, mock[illegible] and deluded all this while with ragged Notions and Babblements, while they expected worthy and delightful knowledg; till poverty or youthful years call them importunately thir ſeveral ways, and haſten them with the ſway of friends either to an ambitious and mercenary, or ignorantly zealous Divinity; ſome allur'd to the trade of Law, grounding thir purpoſes not on the prudent and heavenly Contemplation of Juſtice and Equity which was never taught them, but on the promiſing and pleaſing thoughts of litigious terms, fat contentions, and flowing fees; others betake them to State-affairs, with ſouls ſo unprincipl'd in vertue, and true generous breeding, that flattery and Court-ſhifts and tyrannous Aphoriſms appear to them the higheſt points of wiſdom; inſtilling thir barren Hearts with a conſcientious ſlavery, if as I rather think, it be not fain'd. Others laſtly of a more delicious and airie ſpirit, retire themſelves, knowing no better, to the enjoiments, of eaſe and luxury, living out thir days in feaſt and jollity; which indeed is the wiſeſt and the ſafeſt courſe of all theſe, unleſs they were with more integrity undertaken. And theſe are the fruits of miſpending our prime youth at the Schools and Univerſities as we do, either in learning meer words, or ſuch things chiefly as were better unlearnt.

I ſhall detain you no longer in the demonſtration of what we ſhould not do, but ſtrait conduct ye to a hill ſide, where I will point ye out the right path of a vertuous and noble Education; laborious indeed at the firſt aſcent, but elſe ſo ſmooth, ſo green, ſo full of goodly proſpect, and melodious ſounds on every ſide, that the harp of Orpheus was not more charming. I doubt not but ye ſhall have more ado to drive our dulleſt and lazieſt youth, our ſtocks and ſtubs, from the infinite deſire of ſuch a happy nurture, then we have now to hale and drag our choiceſt and hopefulleſt wits to that aſinine feaſt of ſowthiſtles and brambrambles which is commonly ſet before them, as all the food and entertainment of thir tendereſt and moſt docible age. I call therfore a compleat and generous Education, that which fits a man to perform juſtly, skilfully and magnanimouſly all the offices both private and public of Peace and War. And how all this may be don between twelve, and one and twenty, leſs time then is now beſtow'd in pure trifling at Grammar and Sophiſtry, is to be thus order'd.

Firſt to find out a ſpatious houſe and ground about it fit for an Academy, and big enough to lodg a hundred and fifty perſons, wherof twenty or therabout may be attendants, all under the government of one, who ſhall be thought of deſert ſufficient, and ability either to do all, or wiſely to direct and overſee it don. This place ſhould be at once both School and Univerſity, not needing a remove to any other houſe of Scholerſhip, except it be ſom peculiar Colledg of Law, or Phyſick, where they mean to be Practitioners; but as for thoſe general ſtudies which take up all our time from Lilly to the commencing, as they term it, Maſter of Art, it ſhould be abſolute. After this pattern, as many Edifices may be converted to this uſe as ſhall be needful in every City throughout this Land, which would tend much to the encreaſe of Learning and Civility every where. This number, leſs or more thus collected, to the convenience of a foot Company, or interchangeably two Troops of Cavalry, ſhould divide thir days work into three parts as it lies orderly. Thir Studies, thir Exerciſe, and thir Diet.

For thir Studies. Firſt they ſhould begin with the chief and neceſſary rules of ſom good Grammar, either that now us'd, or any better: and while this is doing, thir ſpeech is to be faſhion'd to a diſtinct and clear pronuntiation, as near as may be to the Italian, eſpecially in the Vowels. For we Engliſhmen being far Northerly, do not open our mouths in the cold air, wide enough to grace a Southern Tongue; but are obſerv'd by all other Nations to ſpeak exceeding cloſe and inward: ſo that to ſmatter Latin with an Engliſh mouth, is as ill a hearing as Law-French. Next to make them expert in the uſefulleſt points of Grammar, and withal to ſeaſon them and win them early to the love of Vertue and true Labour, e're any flattering ſeducement, or vain principle ſeize them wandering, ſom eaſy and delightful Book of Education would be read to them; wherof the Greeks have ſtore, as Cebes, Plutarch, and other Socratic Diſcourſes. But in Latin we have none of claſſic authority extant, except the two or three firſt Books of Quintilian, and ſome ſelect pieces elſwhere. But here the main skill and groundwork will be, to temper them ſuch Lectures and Explanations upon every opportunity, as may lead and draw them in willing obedience, enflam'd with the ſtudy of Learning, and the admiration of Vertue; ſtir'd up with high hopes of living to be brave Men, and worthy Patriots, dear to God, and famous to all Ages. That they may deſpiſe and ſcorn all thir childiſh and ill-taught qualities, to delight in manly and liberal Exerciſes: which he who hath the Art and proper Eloquence to catch them with, what with mild and effectual perſwaſions, and what with the intimation of ſom fear, if need be, but chiefly by his own example, might in a ſhort ſpace gain them to an incredible diligence and courage: infuſing into thir young breſts ſuch an ingenuous and noble ardor, as would not fail to make many of them renowned and matchleſs men. At the ſame time ſom other hour of the day, might be taught them the rules of Arithmetic, and ſoon after the Elements of Geometry, even playing, as the old manner was. After evening repaſt, till bed-time, thir thoughts would be beſt taken up in the eaſy grounds of Religion, and the ſtory of Scripture. The next ſtep would be to the Authors of Agriculture, Cato, Varro, and Columella, for the matter is moſt eaſy; and if the language be difficult, ſo much the better it is not a difficulty above thir years. And here will be an occaſion of inciting and inabling them hereafter to improve the tillage of thir Country, to recover the bad Soil, and to remedy the waſte that is made of good; for this was one of Hercules's praiſes. E're half theſe Authors be read (which will ſoon be with plying hard and daily) they cannot chuſe but be maſters of any ordinary proſe. So that it will be then ſeaſonable for them to learn in any modern Author the uſe of the Globes, and all the Maps; firſt with the old names, and then with the new, or they might be then capable to read any compendious method of natural Philoſophy. And at the ſame time might be entring into the Greek tongue, after the ſame manner as was before preſcrib'd in the Latin; wherby the difficulties of Grammar being ſoon overcom, all the Hiſtorical Phyſiology of Ari- ſtotle and Theophraſtus are open before them, and as I may ſay, under contribution. The like acceſs will be to Vitruvius, to Seneca's natural queſtions, to Mela, Celſus, Pliny, or Solinus. And having thus paſt the principles of Arithmetic, Geometry, Aſtronomy, and Geography with a general compact of Phyſics, they may deſcend in Mathematics to the inſtrumental ſcience of Trigonometry, and from thence to Fortification, Architecture, Enginry, or Navigation. And in natural Philoſophy they may proceed leiſurely from the Hiſtory of Meteors, Minerals, Plants and living Creatures as far as Anatomy. Then alſo in courſe might be read to them out of ſom not tedious Writer the Inſtitution of Phyſic; that they may know the tempers, the humours, the ſeaſons, and how to manage a Crudity: which he who can wiſely and timely do, is not only a great Phyſitian to himſelf and to his friends, but alſo may at ſomtime or other, ſave an Army by this frugal and expenſleſs means only; and not let the healthy and ſtout bodies of young men rot away under him for want of this Diſciplin; which is a great pity, and no leſs a ſhame to the Commander. To ſet forward all theſe proceedings in Nature and Mathematics, what hinders but that they may procure, as oft as ſhall be needful, the helpful experiences of Hunters, Fowlers, Fiſhermen, Shepherds, Gardeners, Apothecaries; and in the other Sciences, Architects, Engineers, Mariners, Anatomiſts; who doubtleſs would be ready, ſom for reward, and ſom to favour ſuch a hopeful Seminary. And this will give them ſuch a real tincture of natural knowledg, as they ſhall never forget, but daily augment with delight. Then alſo thoſe Poets which are now counted moſt hard, will be both facil and pleaſant, Orpheus, Heſiod, Theocritus, Aratus, Nicander, Oppian, Dionyſius, and in Latin Lucretius, Manilius, and the rural part of Virgil.

By this time, years and good general precepts will have furniſht them more diſtinctly with that act of reaſon which in Ethics is call'd Proaireſis: that they may with ſom judgment contemplate upon moral good and evil. Then will be requir'd a ſpecial reinforcement of conſtant and ſound endoctrinating to ſet them right and firm, inſtructing them more amply in the knowledg of Vertue and the hatred of Vice: while thir young and pliant affections are led through all the moral works of Plato, Xenophon, Cicero, Plutarch, Laertius, and thoſe Locrian remnants; but ſtill to be reduc't in thir nightward ſtudies wherwith they cloſe the days work, under the determinate ſentence of David or Salomon, or the Evanges. and Apoſtolic Scriptures. Being perfect in the knowledg of perſonal duty, they may then begin the ſtudy of Economics. And either now or before this they may have eaſily learnt at any odd hour the Italian Tongue. And ſoon after, but with warineſs and good antidote, it would be wholſom enough to let them taſte ſom choice Comedies, Greek, Latin, or Italian: Thoſe Tragedies alſo that treat of Houſhold matters, as Trachinia, Alceſtis, and the like. The next remove muſt be to the ſtudy of Politics; to know the beginning, end, and reaſons of Political Societies; that they may not in a dangerous fit of the Common-wealth be ſuch poor, ſhaken, uncertain Reeds of ſuch a tottering Conſcience, as many of our great Counſellers have lately ſhewn themſelves, but ſtedfaſt Pillars of the State. After this they are to dive into the grounds of Law, and legal Juſtice; deliver'd firſt and with beſt warrant by Moſes; and as far as human prudence can be truſted, in thoſe extoll'd remains of Grecian Law-givers, Licurgus, Solon, Zaleucus, Charondas, and thence to all the Roman Edicts and Tables with thir Juſtinian; and ſo down to the Saxon and common Laws of England, and the Statutes. Sundaies alſo and every evening may be now underſtandingly ſpent in the higheſt matters of Theology, and Church-Hiſtory antient and modern: and e're this time the Hebrew Tongue at a ſet hour might have been gain'd, that the Scriptures may be now read in thir own original; wherto it would be no impoſſibility to add the Chaldee, and the Syrian Dialect. When all theſe emploiments are well conquer'd, then will the choice Hiſtories, Heroic Poems, and Attic Tragedies of ſtatelieſt and moſt regal Argument, with all the famous Political Orations, offer themſelves; which if they were not only read, but ſom of them got by memory, and ſolemnly pronounc't with right accent and grace, as might be taught, would endue them even with the ſpirit and vigour of Demoſthenes or Cicero, Euripides, or Sophocles. And now laſtly will be the time to read with them thoſe organic Arts which inable men to diſcourſe and write perſpicuouſly, elegantly, and according to the fitted ſtile of lofty, mean, or lowly. Logic therfore ſo much as is uſeful, is to be referr'd to this due place with all her well coucht Heads and Topics, until it be time to open her contracted palm into a graceful and ornate Rhetoric taught out of the rule of Plato, Ariſtotle, Phalereus, Cicero, Hermogenes, Longinus. To which Poetry would be made ſubſequent, or indeed rather precedent, as being leſs ſuttle and fine, but more ſimple, ſenſuous, and paſſionate. I mean not here the proſody of a verſe, which they could not but have hit on before among the rudiments of Grammar; but that ſublime Art which in Ariſtotles Poetics, in Horace, and the Italian Commentaries of Caſtlevetro, Taſſo, Mazzoni, and others, teaches what the Laws are of a true Epic Poem, what of a Dramatic, what of a Lyric, what Decorum is, which is the grand maſter-piece to obſerve. This would make them ſoon perceive what deſpicable Creatures our common Rimers and Play-writers be, and ſhew them what religious, what glorious and magnificent uſe might be made of Poetry both in divine and human things. From hence, and not till now will be the right ſeaſon of forming them to be able Writers and Compoſers in every excellent matter, when they ſhall be thus fraught with an univerſal inſight into things. Or whether they be to ſpeak in Parlament or Councel, honour and attention would be waiting on thir lips. There would then alſo appear in Pulpits other viſages, other geſtures, and ſtuff otherwiſe wrought then what we now ſit under, oftimes to as great a trial of our patience as any other that they preach to us. Theſe are the Studies wherin our noble and our gentle Youth ought to beſtow thir time in a diſciplinary way from twelve to one and twenty; unleſs they rely more upon thir anceſtors dead, then upon themſelves living. In which methodical courſe it is ſo ſuppos'd they muſt proceed by the ſteddy pace of Learning onward, as at convenient times for memories ſake to retire back into the middle ward, and ſomtimes into the rear of what they have been taught, until they have confirm'd, and ſolidly united the whole body of their perfeted knowledg, like the laſt embattelling of a Roman Legion. Now will be worth the ſeeing, what Exerciſes and Recreations may beſt agree, and becom theſe Studies.

Thir Exerciſe.

The courſe of Study hitherto briefly deſcrib'd, is what I can gueſs by reading likeſt to thoſe antient and famous Schools of Pythagoras, Plato, Iſocrates, Ariſtotle and ſuch others, out of which were bred ſuch a number of renowned Philoſophers, Orators, Hiſtorians, Poets and Princes all over Greece, Italy and Aſia, beſides the flouriſhing Studies of Cyrene and Alexandria. But herein it ſhall exceed them, and ſupply a defect as great as that which Plato noted in the Commonwealth of Sparta; wheras that City train'd up thir Youth moſt for War, and theſe in thir Academies and Lycæum, all for the Gown, this inſtitution of breeding which I here delineate ſhall be equally good both for Peace and War. Therfore about an hour and half ere they eat at Noon ſhould be allow'd them for exerciſe, and due reſt afterwards; but the time for this may be enlarg'd at pleaſure, according as thir riſing in the morning ſhall be early. The Exerciſe which I commend firſt is the exact uſe of thir Weapon, to guard, and to ſtrike ſafely with edg or point; this will keep them healthy, nimble, ſtrong, and well in breath, is alſo the likelieſt means to make them grow large and tall, and to inſpire them with a gallant and fearleſs Courage, which being temper'd with ſeaſonable Lectures and Precepts to them of true Fortitude and Patience, will turn into a native and heroic Valour, and make them hate the cowardiſe of doing wrong. They muſt be alſo practis'd in all the Locks and Gripes of Wreſtling, wherin Engliſhmen were wont to excel, as need may often be in fight to tug or grapple, and to cloſe. And this perhaps will be enough, wherin to prove and heat thir ſingle ſtrength. The interim of unſweating themſelves regularly, and convenient reſt before meat, may both with profit and delight be taken up in recreating and compoſing thir travail'd ſpirits with the ſolemn and divine harmonies of Muſic heard or learnt; either while the skilful Organiſt plies his grave and fancied deſcant in lofty Fugues, or the whole Symphony with artful and unimaginable touches adorn and grace the well-ſtudied chords of ſome choice Compoſer; ſomtimes the Lute, or ſoft Organ ſtop waiting on elegant Voices either to religious, martial or civil Ditties, which, if wiſe Men and Prophets be not extreamly out, have a great power over Diſpoſitions and Manners to ſmooth and make them gentle from ruſtic harſhneſs and diſtemper'd paſſions. The like alſo would not be unexpedient after Meat to aſſiſt and cheriſh Nature in her firſt concoction, and ſend thir minds back to ſtudy in good tune and ſatisfaction. Where having follow'd it cloſe under vigilant eyes, till about two hours before ſupper, they are by a ſudden alarm or watch word to be call'd out to thir military motions, under skie or covert, according to the ſeaſon, as was the Roman wont, firſt on foot, then as thir age permits, on horſe-back, to all the Art of Cavalry; that having in ſport, but with much exactneſs and daily muſter, ſerv'd out the rudiments of thir Souldierſhip in all the skill of embattelling, marching, encamping, fortifying, beſieging, and battering, with all the helps of antient and modern Stratagems, Tactics, and warlike Maxims, they may as it were out of a long War com forth renowned and perfect Commanders in the ſervice of thir Country. They would not then, if they were truſted with fair and hopeful Armies, ſuffer them for want of juſt and wiſe diſciplin to ſhed away from about them like ſick Feathers, though they be never ſo oft ſuppli'd: they would not ſuffer thir empty and unrecrutible Colonels of twenty men in a Company to quaff out, or convey into ſecret hoards, the wages of a deluſive liſt, and a miſerable remnant: yet in the mean while to be over-maſter'd with a ſcore or two of drunkards, the only ſouldiery left about them, or elſe to comply with all rapines and violences. No certainly, if they knew ought of that knowledg that belongs to good men or good Governours, they would not ſuffer theſe things. But to return to our own Inſtitute, beſides theſe conſtant exerciſes at home, there is another opportunity of gaining experience to be won from pleaſure it ſelf abroad; in thoſe vernal ſeaſons of the year, when the air is calm and pleaſant, it were an injury and ſullenneſs againſt nature not to go out and ſee her riches, and partake in her rejoicing with Heaven and Earth. I ſhould not therfore be a perſwader to them of ſtudying much then, after two or three year that they have well laid thir grounds, but to ride out in companies with prudent and ſtaid Guides to all the quarters of the Land; learning and obſerving all places of ſtrength, all commodities of building and of ſoil, for Towns and Tillage, Harbours and Ports for Trade. Somtimes taking Sea as far as to our Navy, to learn there alſo what they can in the practical knowledg of Sailing and of Sea-fight. Theſe ways would try all thir peculiar gifts of Nature, and if there were any ſecret excellence among them would fetch it out, and give it fair opportunities to advance it ſelf by, which could not but mightily redound to the good of this Nation, and bring into faſhion again thoſe old admired Vertues and Excellencies with far more advantage now in this purity of Chriſtian knowledg. Nor ſhall we then need the Monſieurs of Paris to take our hopeful Youth into thir ſlight and prodigal cuſtodies, and ſend them over back again transform'd into Mimics, Apes, and Kicſhoes. But if they deſire to ſee other Countries at three or four and twenty years of age, not to learn Principles, but to enlarge Experience, and make wiſe obſervation, they will by that time be ſuch as ſhall deſerve the regard and honour of all men where they paſs, and the ſociety and friendſhip of thoſe in all places who are beſt and moſt eminent. And perhaps then other Nations will be glad to viſit us for thir breeding, or elſe to imitate us in thir own Country.

Now laſtly for thir Diet, there cannot be much to ſay, ſave only that it would be beſt in the ſame Houſe; for much time elſe would be loſt abroad, and many ill habits got; and that it ſhould be plain, healthful, and moderate, I ſuppoſe is out of controverſie. Thus Mr. Hartlib, you have a general view in writing, as your deſire was, of that which at ſeveral times I had diſcours'd with you concerning the beſt and nobleſt way of Education; not beginning, as ſom have done, from the Cradle, which yet might be worth many conſiderations, if brevity had not been my ſcope: many other circumſtances alſo I could have mention'd, but this to ſuch as have the worth in them to make trial, for light and direction may be enough. Only I believe that this is not a Bow for every man to ſhoot in that counts himſelf a Teacher; but will require ſinews almoſt equal to thoſe which Homer gave Ulyſſes: yet I am withal perſwaded that it may prove much more eaſy in the aſſay then it now ſeems at diſtance, and much more illuſtrious; howbeit not more difficult then I imagin, and that imagination preſents me with nothing but very happy, and very poſſible according to beſt wiſhes, if God have ſo decreed, and this Age have ſpirit and capacity enough to apprehend.

To the READER.

I*T hath bin long a general complaint, not without cauſe, in the bringing up of Youth, and ſtill is, that the tenth part of man's life, ordinarily extended, is taken up in learning, and that very ſcarcely, the* Latin Tongue. Which tardy proficience may be attributed to ſeveral cauſes: In particular, the making two Labours of one, by learning firſt the Accedence, then the Grammar in Latin, e're the Language of thoſe Rules be underſtood. The only remedy of this, was to join both Books into one, and in the Engliſh Tongue; wherby the long way is much abbreviated, and the labour of underſtanding much more eaſy: A work ſuppos'd not to have been don formerly; or if don, not without ſuch difference here in brevity and alteration, as may be found of moment. That of Grammar, touching Letters and Syllables, is omitted, as learnt before, and little different from the Engliſh Spelling-book; eſpecially ſince few will be perſwaded to pronounce Latin otherwiſe then thir own Engliſh. What will not com under Rule, by reaſon of the much variety in Declenſion, Gender, or Conſtruction, is alſo here omitted, leſt the courſe and clearneſs of method be clog'd with Catalogues inſtead of Rules, or too much interruption between Rule and Rule: Which Linaker, ſetting down the various Idioms of many Verbs, was forc't to do by Alphabet; and therfore, though very learned, not thought fit to be read in Schools. But in ſuch words, a Dictionary ſtor'd with good Autorities will be found the readieſt guide. Of figurate Conſtruction what is uſeful is digeſted into ſeveral Rules of Syntaxis: and Proſodie, after this Grammar well learnt, will not need to be Engliſht for him who hath a mind to read it. Account might be now giv'n what addition or alteration from other Grammars hath bin here made, and for what reaſon. But he who would be ſhort in teaching, muſt not be long in prefacing: The Book it ſelf follows, and will declare ſufficiently to them who can diſcern.

ACCEDENCE
Commenc't
GRAMMAR.

Latin Grammar is the Art of right underſtanding, ſpeaking, or writing Latin, obſerv'd from them who have ſpoken or written it beſt.

Grammar hath two Parts: right-wording, uſually call'd Etymologie; and right-joyning of words, or Syntaxis.

Etymologie, or right-wording, teacheth what belongs to every ſingle word or part of Speech.

Of Latin SPEECH
Are eight General Parts:

| NounPronounVerbParticiple | Declin'd. | AdverbConjunctionPrepoſitionInterjection | Undeclin'd. |

Declin'd are thoſe words which have divers endings; as homo a man, hominis of a man; Amo I love, amas thou loveſt. Undeclin'd are thoſe words which have but one ending, as bene well, cum when, tum then.

Nouns, Pronouns, and Participles, are declin'd with Gender, Number, and Caſe; Verbs, as hereafter in the verb.

Of Genders.

Genders are three, the Maſculin, Feminin, and Neuter. The Maſculin may be declin'd with this Article Hic, as hic Vir a Man, the Feminin with this Article Hæc, as hæc Mulier a Woman; the Neuter with this Article Hoc, as hoc Saxum a Stone.

Of the Maſculin are generally all Nouns belonging to the Male kind, as alſo the Names of Rivers, Months and Winds.

Of the Feminin, all Nouns belonging to the Female kind, as alſo the names of Countries, Cities, Trees, ſom few of the two latter excepted: Of Cities, as Agragas and Sulmo, Maſculin; Argos, Tibur, Præneſte, and ſuch as end in um, Neuter; Anxur both. Of Trees, Oleaſter and Spinus, Maſculin; but Oleaſter is read alſo Feminin, Cic. verr. 4. Acer, ſiler, ſuber, thus, robur, Neuter.

And of the Neuter are all Nouns, not being proper Names, ending in um, and many others.

Som Nouns are of two Genders, as hic or hæc dies a day; and all ſuch as may be ſpoken both of Male and Female, as hic or hæc Parens a Father or Mother: ſom be of three, as hic hæc and hoc Felix happy.

Of Numbers.

Words declin'd have two Numbers, the Singular and the Plural. The ſingular ſpeaketh but of one, as Lapis a Stone. The plural of more then one, as lapides ſtones; yet ſomtimes but of one, as Athenæ the City Athens, Literæ an Epiſtle, ædes ædium a Houſe.

Note that ſom Nouns have no ſingular, and ſom no plural, as the nature of thir ſignification requires. Som are of one Gender in the ſingular; of another, or of two Genders in the plural, as reading will beſt teach.

Of Caſes.

Nouns, Pronouns, and Participles are declin'd with ſix endings, which are called Caſes, both in the ſingular and plural number. The Nominative, Genitive, Dative, Accuſative, Vocative, and Ablative.

The Nominative is the firſt Caſe, and properly nameth the thing, as Liber a Book.

The Genitive is engliſht with this Sign of, as Libri of a Book.

The Dative with this Sign to, or for, as Libro to or for a Book.

The Accuſative hath no ſign.

The Vocative calleth or ſpeaketh to, as O Liber O Book, and is commonly like the Nominative.

But in the Neuter Gender the Nominative, Accuſative, and Vocative, are like in both Numbers, and in the Plural end always in a.

The Ablative is engliſht with theſe Signs, in, with, of, for, from, by, and ſuch like, as De Libro of or from the Book, pro Libro for the Book; and the Ablative Plural is always like the Dative.

Note, that ſom Nouns have but one ending throughout all Caſes, as Frugi, nequam, nihil; and all words of number from three to a hundred, as quatuor four, quinque five, &c.

Som have but one, ſom two, ſom three Caſes only, in the Singular or Plural, as uſe will beſt teach.

Of a Noun.

A Noun is the name of a thing, as Manus a Hand, Domus a Houſe, Bonus Good, Pulcher Fair.

Nouns be Subſtantives or Adjectives.

A Noun Subſtantive is underſtood by it ſelf, as homo a man, domus a houſe.

An Adjective, to be well underſtood, requireth a Subſtantive to be join'd with it, as bonus good, parvus little, which cannot be well underſtood unleſs ſomthing good or little be either nam'd, as bonus vir a good man, parvus puer a little boy; or by uſe underſtood, as honeſtum an honeſt thing, boni good men.

The Declining of Subſtantives.

NOuns Subſtantives have five Declenſions or forms of ending thir Caſes, chiefly diſtinguiſht by the different ending of thir Genitive Singular.

The firſt Declenſion.

THe firſt is when the Genitive and Dative ſingular end in æ, &c. as in the Example following.

| Singular. | Plural. |
|---|---|
| No. Vo. Abl. muſa | Nom. Voc. muſæ |
| Gen. Dat. muſæ | Gen. muſarum |
| Acc. muſam | Dat. Abl. muſis. |
| | Acc. muſas |

[illegible] one word familia joyn'd with pater, mater, filius, or filia, endeth the Genitive in as, as pater familias, but ſomtimes familiæ. Dea, mula, equa, liberta, make the Dative and Ablative plural in abus; filia and nata in is or abus.

The firſt Declenſion endeth always in a, unleſs in ſom words deriv'd of the Greek: and is always of the Feminin Gender, except in names attributed to men, according to the general Rule, or to Stars, as Cometa, Planeta.

Nouns, and eſpecially proper Names derived of the Greek, have here three endings, as, es, e, and are declin'd in ſom of thir Caſes after the Greek form. Æneas, acc. Ænean, voc. Ænea; Anchiſes, acc. Anchiſen, voc. Anchiſe or Anchiſa, abl. Anchiſe. Penelope, Penelopes, Penelope, Penelopen. voc. abl. Penelope. Somtimes following the Latin, as Marſya, Philoctetа, for as and es; Philoctetam, Eriphylam, for an and en. Cic.

The ſecond Declenſion.

| Sing. | Plur. |
|---|---|
| Nom. Voc. Liber | Nom. Voc. Libri |
| Gen. libri | Gen. librorum |
| Dat. Abl. libro | Dat. Abl. libris |
| Acc. librum | Acc. libros. |

Note that when the Nominative endeth in us, the Vocative ſhall end in e, as Dominus ô Domine, except Deus ô Deus. And theſe following, Agnus, lucus, vulgus, populus, chorus, fluvius, e or us.

When the Nominative endeth in ius, if it be the proper name of a man, the Vocative ſhall end in i, as Georgius ô Georgi; hereto add filius ô fili, and genius ô geni.

All Nouns of the Second Declenſion are of the Maſculin or Neuter Gender; of the Maſculin, ſuch as end in ir, or, or us, except ſom few, humus, domus, alvus, and others deriv'd of the Greek, as methodus, antidotus, and the like, which are of the Feminin, and ſom of them ſomtimes alſo Maſculin, as atomus, phaſelus; to which add ficus the name of a diſeaſe, groſſus, pampinus, and rubus.

Thoſe of the Neuter, except virus, pelagus, and vulgus (which laſt is ſomtimes Maſculin) end all in um, and are declin'd as followeth:

| Sing. | Plur. |
|---|---|
| No. Ac. vo. Studium | No. Ac. Voc. Studia |
| Gen. ſtudii | Gen. ſtudiorum |
| Dat. Abl. ſtudio | Dat. Abl. ſtudiis. |

Som Nouns in this Declenſion are of the firſt Example Singular, of the ſecond Plural, as Pergamus the City Troy, Plur. Hac Pergama; and ſom names of hills, as Mænalus, Iſmarus, hac Iſmara; ſo alſo Tartarus, and the Lake Avernus; others are of both, as ſibilus, jocus, locus, hi loci, or hac loca. Som are of the ſecond example Singular, of the firſt Plural, as Argos, Cælum, Plur. hi Cæli; others of both, as Raſtrum, Capiſtrum, Filum, Frænum; Plur. fræni or fræna. Nundinum, & Epulum, are of the firſt Declenſion Plural, Nundina, Epula; Balneum of both, balnea or balnea.

Greek proper names have here three endings, os, on, and us long from a Greek Dipthong. Hæc Delos, hanc Delon. Hoc Ilion. The reſt regular, Hic panthus, ô panthu, Virg.

The third Declenſion.

THe third is when the Genitive ſingular endeth in is, the Dative in i, the Accuſative in em, and ſomtimes in im, the Ablative in e, and ſomtimes in i; the Nom. Acc. Voc. Plural in es, the Genitive in um, and ſomtimes in ium, &c.

| Sing. | Plur. |
|---|---|
| No.Gen. Vo. Panis | Nom. Ac. Vo. panes |
| Dat. pani | Gen. panum |
| Acc. panem | Dat. Abl. panibus. |
| Abl. pane. | |

| Sing. | Plur. |
|---|---|
| Nom. Voc. Parens | No. Ac. vo. parentes |
| Gen. parentis | Gen. parentum |
| Dat. parenti | Dat. Ab. parentibus. |
| Ac. parentem | |
| Abl. parente. | |

This third Declenſion, with many endings, hath all Genders, beſt known by dividing all Nouns hereto belonging into ſuch as either increaſe one ſyllable long or ſhort in the Genitive, or increaſe not at all.

Such as increaſe not in the Genitive are generally Feminin, as Nubes nubis, Caro carnis.

Except ſuch as end in er, as hic venter ventris, and theſe in is following, natalis, aqualis, lienis, orbis, callis, caulis, collis, follis, menſis, enſis, fuſtis, funis, panis, penis, crinis, ignis, caſſis, faſcis, torris, piſcis, unguis, vermis, vectis, poſtis, axis, and the compounds of aſſis, as centuſſis.

But Canalis, finis, clunis, reſtis, ſentis, amnis, corbis, linter, torquis, anguis, hic or hæc: To theſe add vepres.

Such as end in e are Neuters, as mare, rete, and two Greek in es, as hippomanes, cacoëthes.

Nouns encreaſing long.

Nouns encreaſing one ſyllable long in the Genitive are generally Feminin, as hæc pietas pietatis, virtus virtutis.

Except ſuch as end in ans Maſculin, as dodrans, quadrans, ſextans; in ens, as oriens, torrens, bidens, a pick-ax.

In or, moſt commonly deriv'd of Verbs, as pallor, clamor; in o, not thence deriv'd, as ternio, ſenio, ſermo, temo, and the like.

And theſe of one ſyllable, ſal, ſol, ren, ſplen, as, bes, pes, mos, flos, ros, dens, mons, pons, fons, grex.

And words deriv'd from the Greek in en, as lichen; in er, as crater; in as, as adamas; in es, as lebes; to theſe, hydrops, thorax, phœnix.

But ſcrobs, rudens, ſtirps, the body or root of a tree, and calx a heel, hic or hæc.

Neuter, theſe of one ſyllable, mel, fel, lac, far, ver; cor, as, vas vaſis, os oſſis, os oris, rus, thus, jus, crus, pus. And of more ſyllables in al and ar, as capital, laquear, but halec hoc or hæc.

Nouns encreaſing ſhort.

Nouns encreaſing ſhort in the Genitive are generally Maſculin, as hic ſanguis ſanguinis, lapis lapidis.

Except, Feminin all words of many ſyllables ending in do or go, as dulcedo, compago; arbor, hyems, cuſpis, pecus pecudis: Theſe in ex, forfex, carex, tomex, ſupellex: In ix, appendix, hiſtrix, coxendix, filix; Greek Nouns in as and is, as lampas, iaſpis: To theſe add chlamys, bacchar, ſyndon, icon.

But margo, cinis, pulvis, adeps, forceps, pumex, ramex, imbrex, obex, ſilex, cortex, onix and ſardonix, hic or hæc.

Neuters are all ending in a, as problema; in en, except hic pecten; in ar, as jubar; in er theſe, verber, iter, uber, cadaver, zinziber, laſer, cicer, ſiſer, piper, papaver; ſomtimes in ur, except hic furfur, in us, as onus, in ut, as caput; to theſe marmor, æquor, ador.

Greek proper names here end in as, an, is, and ens, and may be declin'd ſom wholly after the Greek for[illegible] as Pallas, pallados, palladi, pallada; o[illegible]rs in ſom Caſes, as Atlas, acc. Atlanta, voc. Atla. Garamas, plur. garamantes, acc. garamantas. Pan, panos, pana. Phyllis, phyllidos, voc. phylli, plur. Phyllides, acc. phyllidas. Tethys, tethyos, acc. tethyn, voc. tethy. Neapolis, neapolios, acc. neapolin. Paris, paridos or parios, acc. parida or parin. Orpheus, orpheos, orphei, orphea, orpheu. But Names in eus borrow ſomtimes thir Genitive of the Second Declenſion, as Erechtheus, erechthei. Cic. Achilles or Achilleus, Achillei; and ſomtimes thir Accuſative in on or um, as Orpheus Orpheon, Theſeus Theſeum, Perſeus Perſeum, which ſomtimes is formd after Greek words of the firſt Declenſion Latin, Perſeus or Perſes, Perſæ Perſæ Perſen Perſæ Perſa.

The fourth Declenſion.

THe fourth is when the Genitive Singular endeth in us, the Dative Singular in ui, and ſomtimes in u, Plural in ibus, and ſomtimes in ubus.

| Sing. | Plur. |
|---|---|
| No. Ge. Vo. Senſus | No. Ac. Vo. Senſus |
| Dat. ſenſui | Gen. ſenſuum |
| Acc. ſenſum | Dat. Abl. ſenſibus. |
| Abl. ſenſu. | |

The fourth Declenſion hath two endings, us and u; us generally Maſculin, except ſom few, as hæc manus, ficus, the fruit of a tree, acus, porticus, tribus; but penus and ſpecus hic or hæc. V of the Neuter, as gelu, genu, veru; but in the Singular moſt part defective.

Proper Names in os and o long, pertaining to the fourth Declenſion Greek, may belong beſt to the fourth in Latin, as Androgeos, Gen. Androgeo, Ac. Androgeon; Hic Athos, hunc Atho, Virg. Hæc Sappho, Gen. Sapphus, Acc. Sappho. Better Authors follow the Latin form, as Dido Didonis Didonem. But Jeſus Jeſu Jeſu Jeſum Jeſu Jeſu.

The fifth Declenſion.

| Sing. | Plur. |
|---|---|
| Nom. Voc. Res | No. Acc. Voc. res |
| Gen. Dat. rei | Gen. rerum |
| Acc. rem | Dat. Abl. rebus. |
| Abl. re | |

All Nouns of the fifth Declenſion are of the Feminin Gender, except dies hic or hæc, and his Compound meridies hic only.

Som Nouns are of more Declenſions then one, as vas vaſis of the third in the Singular, of the ſecond in the Plural vaſa vaſorum. Colus, laurus, and ſom others, of the ſecond and fourth. Saturnalia, ſaturnalium or ſaturnaliorum, ſaturnalibus, and ſuch other names of feaſts. Poëmata poëmatum, poematis or poëmatibus, of the ſecond and third Plural. Plebs of the third and fifth, plebis or plebei.

The Declining of Adjectives.

A Noun Adjective is declin'd with three Terminations, or with three Articles.

An Adjective of three terminations is declin'd like the firſt and ſecond Declenſion of Subſtantives joyn'd together after this manner.

| Sing. | Plur. |
|---|---|
| Nom. bonus bona bonum | Nom. Vo. boni bonæ bona |
| Gen. boni bonæ boni | Gen. bonorum bonarum bonorum |
| Dat. bono bonæ bono | Dat. Abl. bonis |
| Ac. bonum bonam bonum | Ac. bonos bonas bona. |
| Voc. bone bona bonum | |
| Abl. bono bona bono | |

In like manner thoſe in er and ur, as ſacer ſacra ſacrum, ſatur ſatura ſaturum; but unus, totus, ſolus, alius, alter, ullus, uter, with thir compounds Neuter, uterque, and the like, make thir Genitive Singular in ius, the Dative in i, as Unus una unum, Gen. unius, Dat. uni, in all the reſt like bonus, ſave that alius maketh in the Neuter Gender aliud, and in the Dative alii, and ſomtimes in the Genitive.

Ambo and duo be thus declin'd in the plural only.

Nom. Voc. Ambo ambæ ambo
Gen. amborum ambarum amborum.
Dat. Abl. ambobus ambabus ambobus
Acc. ambos or ambo, ambas ambo.

Adjectives of three Articles have in the Nominative either one ending, as hic, hæc, & hoc felix; or two, as hic & hæc triſtis & hoc triſte; and are declin'd like the third Declenſion of Subſtantives, as followeth.

| Sing. | Plur. |
|---|---|
| Nom. hic hæc & hoc Felix. | Nom. hi & hæ felices, & hæc felicia |
| Gen. felicis | Gen. felicium |
| Dat. felici | Dat. Abl. felicibus |
| Acc. hunc & hanc felicem, & hoc felix | Acc. hos & has felices & hæc felicia |
| Voc. ô felix | Voc. ô felices, & ô felicia. |

| Sing. | Plur. |
|---|---|
| No. hic & hæc triſtis & hoc triſte | Nom. hi & hæ triſtes & hæc triſtia |
| Gen. triſtis | Gen. triſtium |
| Dat. Abl. triſti | Dat. Abl. triſtibus |
| Ac. hunc & hanc triſtem, & hoc triſte | Ac. hos & has triſtes, & hæc triſtia |
| Voc. ô triſtis & ô triſte | Voc. ô triſtes, & ô triſtia. |

There be alſo another ſort which have in the Nominative Caſe three Terminations and three Articles, as hic acer, hic & hæc acris, hoc acre. In like manner be declined equeſter, volucer, and ſom few others, being in all other caſes like the Examples beforegoing.

Compariſons of Nouns.

ADjectives, whoſe ſignification may increaſe or be diminiſht, may form Compariſon, wherof there be two degrees above the poſitive word it ſelf, The Comparative, and Superlative.

The Poſitive ſignifieth the thing it ſelf without comparing, as durus hard.

The Comparative exceedeth his Poſitive in ſignification, compar'd with ſom other, as durior harder; and is form'd of the firſt Caſe of his Poſitive that endeth in i, by putting therto or and us, as of duri, hic & hac durior, & hoc durius: of dulci, dulcior, dulcius.

The Superlative exceedeth his Poſitive in the higheſt degree, as duriſſimus hardeſt; and it is form'd of the firſt Caſe of his Poſitive that endeth in is, by putting therto ſimus, as of duris duriſſimus, dulcis dulciſſimus.

If the Poſitive end in er, the Superlative is form'd of the nominative caſe by putting to rimus, as pulcher pulcherrimus. Like to theſe are vetus veterrimus, maturus maturimus; but dexter dexterrimus, and ſiniſter, ſiniſterior, ſiniſterrimus.

All theſe Nouns ending in lis make the Superlative by changing is into limus, as humilis, ſimilis, facilis, gracilis, agilis, docilis docillimus.

All other Nouns ending in lis do follow the general Rule, as utilis utiliſſimus.

Of theſe Poſitives following are form'd a different ſort of Superlatives; of ſuperus, ſupremus and ſummus; inferus, infimus and imus; exterus, extimus and extremus; poſterus poſtremus.

Som of theſe want the Poſitive, and are form'd from Adverbs; of intra, interior intimus, ultra ulterior ultimus, citra citerior citimus, pridem prior primus, prope propior proximus.

Others from Poſitives without Caſe, as nequam, nequior, nequiſſimus.

Som alſo from no Poſitive, as ocior ociſſimus. Some want the Comparative, as novus noviſſimus, inclytus inclytiſſimus.

Som the Superlative, as ſenex ſenior, juvenis junior, adoleſcens adoleſcentior.

Som ending in us, frame thir Comparative as if they ended in ens, benevolus, maledicus, magnificus magnificentior magnificentiſſimus.

Theſe following are without Rule, Bonus melior optimus, Malus pejor peſſimus, Magnus major maximus, Parvus minor minimus; Multus plurimus, multa plurima, multum plus plurimum.

If a Vowel come before us, it is compared with magis and maximè, as pius, magis pius, maximè pius; idoneus, magis and maximè idoneus. Yet ſom of theſe follow the general Rule, as Aſſiduus aſſiduiſſimus, ſtrenuus ſtrenuior, exiguus exiguiſſimus, tenuis tenuior tenuiſſimus.

Of a Pronoun.

A Pronoun is a part of Speech that ſtandeth for a Noun Subſtantive, either at preſent or before ſpoken of, as ille, he or that, hic this, qui who.

There be ten Pronouns, Ego, tu, ſui, ille, ipſe, iſte, hic, is, qui and quis, beſides thir Compounds, egomet, tute, hicce, idem, quiſnam, aliquis, and ſuch others. The reſt ſo call'd, as meus, tuus, ſuus, noſter, veſter, noſtras, veſtras, cujus and cujas, are not Pronouns, but Adjectives thence deriv'd.

Of Pronouns ſuch as ſhew the thing preſent are called Demonſtratives, as ego, tu, hic; and ſuch as refer to a thing antecedent, or ſpoken of before, are called Relatives, as qui who or which.

Quis, and often qui, becauſe they ask a queſtion, are called Interrogatives, with thir Compounds ecquis, numquis.

Declenſions of Pronouns are three.

Ego, tu, ſui, be of the firſt Declenſion, and be thus delin'd.

| Sing. | Plur. |
|---|---|
| Nom. Ego | Nom. Acc. Nos |
| Gen. mei | Gen. noſtrum or noſtri |

| Sing. | Nom. Voc. caret | Dat. ſibi |
| Plur. | Gen. ſui | Acc. Abl. ſe. |

From theſe three be deriv'd meus, tuus, ſuus, noſter, veſter, noſtras, veſtras, (which are called Poſſeſſives) wherof the former five be declin'd like Adjectives of three Terminations, except that meus in the Vocative Caſe maketh mi, mea, meum; Noſtras, Veſtras, with three Articles, as hic & hæc noſtras, & hoc noſtras or noſtrate, veſtrate. In other Caſes according to rule.

Theſe three, ille, iſte, ipſe, be of the ſecond Declenſion, making thir Genitive ſingular in ius, thir Dative in i; and the former two be declin'd like the Adjective alius, and the third like unus before ſpoken of.

Sing. Nom. ille illa illud, Gen. illius, Dat. illi.
Nom. iſte iſta iſtud, Gen. iſtius, Dat. iſti.
Nom. ipſe ipſa ipſum, Gen. ipſius, Dat. ipſi.

Theſe four, hic, is, qui and quis, be of the third Declenſion. making thir Genitive ſingular in jus, with j conſonant, and be declin'd after this manner.

Of a Verb.

A Verb is a part of ſpeech, that betokeneth being, as ſum I am, or doing, as laudo I praiſe; and is declin'd with Mood, Tenſe, Number and Perſon.

Moods.

THere be four Moods which expreſs the manner of doing; the Indicative, the Imperative, the Potential or Subjunctive, and the Infinitive.

The Indicative Mood ſheweth or declareth, as laudo I praiſe.

The Imperative biddeth or exhorteth as lauda praiſe thou.

The Potential or Subjunctive is engliſht with theſe Signs, may, can, might, would, could, ſhould: Or without them as the Indicative, if a Conjunction go before or follow; as laudem, I may or can praiſe. Cum laudarem when I praiſed. Caviſſem, ſi prævidiſſem, I had beward if I had foreſeen.

The Infinitive is engliſht with this ſign to, as laudare to praiſe.

Tenſes.

THere be three Tenſes which expreſs the time of doing: The Preſent, the Preterit or paſt, and the Future.

The Preſent Tenſe ſpeaketh of the time that now is, as laudo I praiſe.

The Preterit ſpeaketh of the time paſt, and is diſtinguiſht by three degrees: the Preterimperfect, the Preterperfect, and the Preterpluperfect.

The Preterimperfect ſpeaketh of the time not perfectly paſt, as laudabam I praiſed or did praiſe.

The Preterperfect ſpeaketh of the time perfectly paſt, as laudavi I have praiſed.

The Preterpluperfect ſpeaketh of the time more then perfectly paſt, as laudaveram I had praiſed.

The Future Tenſe ſpeaketh of the time to come, as laudabo I ſhall or will praiſe.

Perſons.

THrough all Moods, except the Infinitive, there be three Perſons in both Numbers, as, Sing. Laudo I praiſe, laudas thou praiſeſt, laudat he praiſeth; Plur. Laudamus we praiſe, laudatis ye praiſe, laudant they praiſe. Except ſom Verbs which are declin'd or form'd in the Third Perſon only, and have before them this ſign, it, as Tædet it irketh, oportet it behoveth, and are called Imperſonals.

The Verb which betokeneth being, is properly the Verb ſum only, which is therſore call'd a Verb Subſtantive, and formed after this manner.

Indicative.

Preſ. ſing. I am.
Sum, es, eſt, Plur. ſumus, eſtis, ſunt.

Pret. imp. I was.
Eram, eras, erat, Pl. eramus, eratis, erant.

| | I have been. |
| Pret. perfect | Fui, fuiſti, fuit, Plur. fuimus, fuiſtis, fuerunt or fuere. |
| | I had been. |

Infinitive.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Pref. and preter-imperf. | Eſſe, to be. | Preter-perfect, & pret. pluper. | Fuiſſe, to have or had been. |
| Future | Fore, to be hereafter. | | |

In like manner are form'd the Compounds; Abſum, adſum, deſum, obſum, præſum, proſum, poſſum; but poſſum ſomthing varies after this manner.

Indicat. Preſ. Sing. Poſſum, potes, poteſt, Plur. poſſumus, poteſtis, poſſunt. The other are regular, poteram, potui, potueram, potero.

Potent. Preſ. Poſſim, &c. Preterimperfect, Poſſem.

Voices.

IN Verbs that betoken doing are two Voices, the Active and the Paſſive.

The Active ſignifieth to do, and always endeth in o, as doceo I teach.

The Paſſive ſignifieth what is done to one by another, and always endeth in or, as doceor I am taught.

From theſe are to be excepted two ſorts of Verbs. The firſt are called Neuters, and cannot take or in the paſſive, as curro I run, ſedeo I ſit; yet ſignifie ſomtimes paſſively, as vapulo I am beaten.

The ſecond are call'd Deponents, and ſignifie actively, as loquor I ſpeak; or Neuters, as glorior I boaſt: but are form'd like Paſſives.

Conjugations.

VErbs both Active and Paſſive have four Conjugations, or forms of declining, known and diſtinguiſht by thir Infinitive Mood active, which always endeth in re.

In the firſt Conjugation, after a long, as laudare to praiſe.

In the ſecond, after e long, as habere to have.

In the third, after e ſhort, as legere to read.

In the fourth, after i long, as audire to hear.

In theſe four Conjugations, Verbs are declin'd or form'd by Mood, Tenſe, Number and Perſon, after theſe Examples.

Infinit. Ferri.

Of Gerunds and Supines.

THere be alſo belonging to the Infinitive Mood of all Verbs certain Voices called Gerunds and Supines, both of the Active and Paſſive ſignification.

The firſt Gerund endeth in di, as Laudandi of praiſing or of being praiſ'd. The ſecond in do, as Laudando in praiſing or in being praiſ'd. The third in dum, as Laudandum to praiſe or to be praiſ'd.

Note that in the two latter Conjugations, the Gerunds end ſomtimes in undi, do, dum, as dicendi or dicundi: But from Eo alwayes eundi, except in the Compound Ambiendi.

Supines are two. The firſt ſignifieth Actively, as laudatum to praiſe; the latter Paſſively, as laudatu to be praiſed. Note that moſt Neuters of the ſecond Conjugation, and volo, nolo, malo, with many other Verbs, have no Supine.

Verbs of the four Conjugations irregular in the Preterperfect Tenſe or Supines.

VErbs of the firſt Conjugation form thir Preterperfect Tenſe in avi, Supine in atum, as Laudo laudavi laudatum.

Except

Poto potavi potatum or potum; neco necavi necatum or nectum.

Domo, tono, ſono, crepo, veto, cubo, form ui, itum, as cubui cubitum; but ſecui ſectum, fricui frictum, mico micui: yet ſome of theſe are found Regular in the Preterperfect Tenſe or Supine, eſpecially compounded, as increpavit, diſcrepavit, dimicavit, ſonatum, dimicatum, intonatum, infricatum, and the like.

Plico and his Compounds form ui or avi, as explicui explicavi, explicitum or explicatum; except ſupplico, and ſuch as are compounded with a Noun, as Duplico Multiplico in avi only.

But Lavo lavi lautum lotum or lavatum, juvo juvi, adjuvo adjuvi adjutum.

Do dedi datum, Sto ſteti ſtatum, in the Compounds, ſtiti, ſtitum and ſomtimes ſtatum, as Preſto preſtiti preſtitum and preſtatum.

VErbs of the ſecond Conjugation form thir Preterperfect Tenſe in ui, thir Supine in itum, as habeo habui habitum.

Some are Regular in thir Preterperfect Tenſe, but not in thir Supines, as doceo docui doctum, miſceo miſcui miſtum, teneo tenui tentum, torreo torrui toſtum, cenſeo cenſui cenſum, pateo patui paſſum, careo carui caſſum and caritum.

Others are Irregular both in Preterperfect Tenſe and Supines, as Jubeo juſſi juſſum, ſorbeo ſorbui ſorpſi ſorptum, mulceo mulſi mulſum, luceo luxi.

Deo in di, as ſedeo ſedi ſeſſum, video vidi viſum, prandeo prandi pranſum. And ſome in ſi, as ſuadeo ſuaſi ſuaſum, rideo riſi riſum, ardeo arſi arſum. Four double thir firſt Letters, as Pendeo pependi penſum, mordeo momordi morſum, ſpondeo ſpopondi ſponſum, tondeo totondi tonſum, but not in thir Compounds, as dependi depenſum.

Geo in ſi, and ſome in xi, as urgeo urſi, mulgeo mulſi mulxi mulctum, augeo auxi auctum, indulgeo indulſi indultum, frigeo frixi, lugeo luxi.

Ieo leo and neo nevi, vieo vievi vietum: But Cieo cievi citum, deleo delevi deletum, fleo flevi fletum, compleo complevi completum; as alſo the Compounds of Oleo, except redoleo and ſuboleo; but adolevi adultum, neo nevi netum, but maneo manſi, torqueo torſi tortum, hæreo hæſi.

Veo in vi, as ferveo fervi, but deferveo deferbui, conniveo connivi and connixi, movi motum, vovi votum, cavi cautum, favi fautum.

THe third Conjugation formeth the Preterperfect Tenſe, by changing O of the Preſent Tenſe into I; the Supine without certain Rule, as lego legi lectum, bibo bibi bibitum, lambo lambi, ſcabo ſcabi, ico ici ictum, mando mandi manſum, pando pandi paſſum, edo edi eſum or eſtum, in like manner comedo, the other compounds eſum only; rudo rudi, ſallo ſalli ſalſum, pſallo pſalli, emo emi emptum, viſo viſi viſum, verto verti verſum, ſolvo ſolvi ſolutum, volvo volvi volutum, exuo exui exutum, but ruo rui ruitum, in compound rutum, as derui derutum; ingruo, metuo metui.

Others are irregular both in Preterperfect Tenſe and Supine.

In uo, pluo plui pluvi plutum, ſtruo ſtruxi ſtructum, fluo fluxi fluxum.

THe fourth Conjugation formeth the Preterperfect Tenſe in ivi, the Supine in itum.

Except, Venio veni ventum, comperio, reperio, reperi repertum, cambio campſi campſum, ſepio ſepſi ſeptum, ſarcio ſarſi ſartum, fulceo fulſi fultum, ſentio ſenſi ſenſum, haurio hauſi hauſtum, ſancio ſanxi ſanctum ſancitum, vincio vinxi vinctum, ſalio ſalui ſaltum, in Compound ſultum, as deſilio deſilui deſultum, amicio amicui amictum, aperio, operio perui pertum, veneo venivi venum, ſingultivi ſingultum, ſepelivi ſepultum.

Of Verbs Compounded.

THeſe Verbs Compounded change a into e throughout, Damno, lacto, ſacro, fallo, arceo, tracto, partio, farcio, carpo, patro, ſcando, ſpargo, as conſpergo conſperſi conſperſum.

Theſe following change thir firſt Vowel into i, and ſom of them thir Supines into e, habeo, lateo, ſalio, ſtatuo, cado, lædo, cano, quæro, cædo, tango, egeo, teneo, taceo, ſapio, rapio, placeo, diſpliceo, diſplicui diſplicitum; except complaceo perplaceo poſthabeo.

Scalpo, calco, ſalto, change a into u, as exculpo; claudo quatio lavo loſe a as excludo, excutio, eluo.

Theſe following change thir firſt Vowel into i, but not in the Preterperfect Tenſe, and ſomtimes a into e in the Supine, emo, ſedeo, rego, frango, capio, jacio, lacio, ſpecio, premo, as comprimo compreſſi compreſſum, conjicio conjeci conjectum, pango in two only, compingo, impingo: Ago, in all but perago, ſatago, circumago, dego and cogo coegi: Facio with a Prepoſition only, not in other Compounds, as inficio, olfacio: Lego in theſe only, diligo, eligo, intelligo, negligo, ſeligo, in the reſt not, as prælego, add to theſe ſuperſedeo.

Of Verbs Defective.

VErbs called Inceptives ending in ſco, borrow thir Preterperfect Tenſe from the Verb wherof they are deriv'd, as tepeſco tepui from tepeo, ingemiſco ingemui from ingemo; as alſo theſe Verbs, cerno to ſee, vidi from video, ſido ſedi from ſedeo, fero tuli from tulo out of uſe, in the Supine latum, tollo ſuſtuli ſublatum from ſuffero.

Theſe want the Preterperfect Tenſe.

Verbs ending in aſco, as pueraſco; in iſco, as fatiſco; in urio, except parturio, eſurio: theſe alſo, vergo, ambigo, ferio, furo, polleo, nideo, have no Preterperfect Tenſe.

Contrary, theſe four, Odi, cœpi, novi, memini, are found in the Preterperfect Tenſe only, and the Tenſes thence deriv'd, as odi, oderam, oderim, odiſſem, odero, odiſſe, except memini, which hath memento mementote in the Imperative.

Others are defective both in Tenſe and Perſon, as Aio, ais, ait, Plur. aiunt. The Preterimperfect aiebam is intire. Imperative, ai. Potential, aias, aiat, Plur. aiamus, aiant.

Auſim for auſus ſim, auſis, auſit, Plur. auſint.

Salveo, ſalvebis, ſalve ſalveto, ſalvete ſalvetote, ſalvere.

Ave aveto, avete avetote.

Faxo, faxis, faxit, faxint.

Quæſo, Plur. quæſumus.

Infit, infiunt.

Inquio or inquam, inquis inquit, Plur. inquiunt. Inquibat, Cic. Topic. inquiſti, inquit. Future, inquies, inquiet, Imperat. Inque inquito. Potent. Inquiat.

Dor the firſt Perſon Paſſive of do, and for before farris or farre in the Indicative, are not read, nor der or fer in the Potential.

Of a Participle.

A Participle is a part of Speech, partaking with the Verb from whence it is deriv'd in Voice, Tenſe, and Signification, and with a Noun Adjective in manner of Declining.

Participles are either of the Active or Paſſive Voice.

Of the Active Two. One of the Preſent Tenſe ending in ans, or ens, as laudans praiſing, habens, legens, audiens, and is declin'd like fælix, as hic hæc & hoc habens, Gen. habentis, Dat. habenti, &c. Docens docentis, &c. But from eo, euns, and in the compounds iens euntis, except ambiens ambientis. Note that ſome Verbs otherwiſe defective, have this Participle, as a ens, inquiens.

The other of the Future Tenſe is moſt commonly form'd of the firſt Supine, by changing m into rus, as of laudatum laudaturus to praiſe or about to praiſe, habiturus, lecturus, auditurus ; but ſom are not regularly form'd, as of ſectum ſecaturus, of jutum juvaturus, ſonitum ſonaturus, partum pariturus, argutum arguiturus, and ſuch like ; of ſum, futurus: This, as alſo the other two Participles following are declin'd like bonus.

This Participle, with the Verb Sum, affordeth a ſecond Future in the Active Voice, as laudaturus ſum, es, eſt, &c. as alſo the Future of the Infinitive, as laudaturum eſſe to praiſe hereafter, futurum eſſe, &c.

Participles of the Paſſive Voice are alſo two, one of the Preterperfect tenſe, another of the Future.

A Participle of the Preterperfect Tenſe, is form'd of the latter Supine, by putting thereto s, as of laudatu laudatus prais'd, of habitu habitus, lectu lectus, auditu auditus.

This Participle joyn'd with the Verb Sum, ſupplieth the want of a Preterperfect and Preterpluperfect Tenſe in the Indicative Mood paſſive, and both them and the Future of the Potential ; as alſo the Preterperfect and Preterpluperfect of the Infinitive, and with ire or fore the Future ; as laudatus ſum or fui I have been prais'd, Plur. laudati ſumus or fuimus we have been prais'd, laudatus eram or fueram, &c. Potential, laudatus ſum or fuerim, laudatus eſſem or fuiſſem, laudatus ero or fuero. Infinit. laudatum eſſe or fuiſſe to have or had been prais'd ; laudatum ire or fore to be prais'd hereafter.

Nor only Paſſives, but ſom Actives alſo or Neuters, beſides thir own Preterperfect tenſe borrow another from this Participle ; Cæno Cænavi and Cænatus ſum, Juravi and Juratus, Potavi and Potus ſum, Titubavi and titubatus, Careo carui caſſus ſum, Prandeo prandi and pranſus, Pateo patui and paſſus ſum, Placeo placui placitus, Sueſco ſuevi ſuetus ſum, Libet libuit and libitum eſt, Licet licuit licitum, Pudet puduit puditum, Piget piguit pigitum, Tædet tæduit pertaſum eſt, and this Deponent Mereor merui and meritus ſum.

Theſe Neuters following, like Paſſives, have no other Preterperfect Tenſe, but by this Participle, Gaudeo gaviſus ſum, fido fiſus, audeo auſus, fio factus, ſoleo ſolitus ſum.

Theſe Deponents alſo form this Participle from Supines irregular ; Labor lapſus, patior paſſus, perpetior perpeſſus, fateor faſſus, confiteor, diffiteor diffeſſus, gradior greſſus, ingredior ingreſſus, fatiſcor feſſus, metior menſus, utor uſus, ordior to ſpin orditus, to begin orſus, nitor niſus and nixus, ulciſcor ultus, iraſcor iratus, reor ratus, obliviſcor oblitus; fruor fructus or fruitus, miſereor miſertus, tuor and tueor tuitus, loquor locutus, ſequor ſecutus, experior expertus, paciſcor pactus, nanciſcor nactus, apiſcor aptus, adipiſcor adeptus, queror queſtus, proficiſcor profectus, expergiſcor experrectus, comminiſcor commentus, naſcor natus, morior mortuus, orior ortus ſum.

A Participle of the Future Paſſive is form'd of the Gerund in dum, by changing m into s, as of laudandum laudandus to be prais'd, of habendum habendus, &c. And likewiſe of this Participle with the Verb Sum, may be form'd the ſame Tenſes in the Paſſive, which were form'd with the Participle of the Preterperfect Tenſe, as laudandus ſum or fui, &c.

Infinit. Laudandum eſſe or fore.

Of Verbs Deponent com Participles both of the Active and Paſſive form, as loquor loquens locutus locuturus loquendus ; wherof the Participle of the Preter Tenſe ſignifieth ſomtimes both Actively and Paſſively, as dignatus, teſtatus, meditatus, and the like.

Of an Adverb.

AN Adverb is a part of Speech joyn'd with ſome other to explain its ſignification, as valdè probus very honeſt, benè eſt it is well, valdè doctus very learned, benè mane early in the morning.

Of Adverbs, ſom be of Time, as hodiè to day, cras to morrow, &c.

Som be of Place, as Ubi where, ibi there, &c. And of many other ſorts needleſs to be here ſet down.

Certain Adverbs alſo are compar'd, as Doctè learnedly, doctiùs doctiſſimè, fortiter fortiùs fortiſſimè, ſæpe ſæpius ſæpiſſime, and the like.

Of a Conjunction.

A Conjunction is a part of Speech that joyneth Words and Sentences together.

Of Conjunctions ſome be Copulatives, as & and, quoque alſo, nec neither.

Som be disjunctive, as aut or.

Som be Cauſal, as nam for, quia becauſe, and many ſuch like.

Adverbs when they govern Mood and Tenſe, and joyn Sentences together, as cum, ubi, poſtquam, and the like, are rather to be call'd Conjunctions.

Of a Prepoſition.

A Prepoſition is a part of Speech moſt commonly, either ſet before Nouns in Appoſition, as ad patrem, or joyn'd with any other words in Compoſition, as indoctus.

Theſe ſix, di, dis, re, ſe, am, con, are not read but in Compoſition.

As Adverbs having Caſes after them, may be call'd Prepoſitions, ſo Prepoſitions having none, may be counted Adverbs.

Of an Interjection.

AN Interjection is a part of Speech, expreſſing ſom paſſion of the mind.

Som be of ſorrow, as heu, hei.

Som be of marvelling, as papæ.

Som of diſdaining, as vah.

Som of praiſing, as euge.

Figures of Speech.

WOrds are ſomtimes encreaſt or diminiſht by a Letter or Syllable in the beginning, middle or ending, which are call'd Figures of Speech.

Encreaſt

In the beginning, as Gnatus for Natus, Tetuli for tuli. Protheſis.

In the middle, as Rettulit for Retulit, Cinctutus for Cinctus. Epentheſis.

In the end, as Dicier for dici. Paragoge.

Diminiſht.

In the beginning, as Ruit for Eruit. Apheriſis.

In the middle, as Audiit for Audivit, Dixti for dixiſti, Lamna for lamina. Syncope.

In the end, as Conſili for conſilii; ſcin for ſciſne. Apocope.

The ſecond Part of Grammar, commonly called Syntaxis, or Construction.

HItherto the Eight Parts of Speech Declin'd and Undeclin'd have been ſpoken of ſingle, and each one by it ſelf: Now followeth Syntaxis or Conſtruction, which is the right joyning of theſe parts together in a Sentence.

Conſtruction conſiſteth either in the agreement of Words together in Number, Gender, Caſe, and Perſon, which is call'd Concord; or the governing of one the other in ſuch Caſe or Mood as is to follow.

Of the Concords.

THere be Three Concords or Agreements.

The Firſt is of the Adjective with his Subſtantive.

The Second is of the Verb with his Nominative Caſe.

The Third is of the Relative with his Antecedent.

An Adjective (under which is comprehended both Pronoun and Participle) with his Subſtantive or Subſtantives, a Verb with his Nominative Caſe or Caſes, and a Relative with his Antecedent or Antecedents, agree all in number, and the two latter in perſon alſo: as Amicus certus. Viri docti. Preceptor prælegit, vos vero negligitis. Xenophon & Plato fuere equales. Vir ſapit, qui pauca loquitur. Pater & Praceptor veniunt. Yea though the Conjunction be disjunctive, as Quos neque deſidia neque luxuria vitiaverant. Celſus. Pater & Præceptor, quos quæritis. But if a Verb ſingular follow many Nominatives, it muſt be applyed to each of them apart, as Niſi foro & curia officium ac verecundia ſua conſtiterit. Val. Max.

An Adjective with his Subſtantive, and a Relative with his Antecedent agree in Gender and Caſe; but the Relative not in caſe always, being ofttimes govern'd by other conſtructions: as Amicus certus in re incerta cernitur. Liber quem dediſti mihi.

And if it be a Participle ſerving the Infinitive Mood future, it oft-times agrees not with the Subſtantive neither in Gender nor in Number, as Hanc ſibi rem præſidio ſperat futurum. Cic. Audierat non datum ire filio Uxorem. Terent. Omnia potius actum iri puto quam de provinciis. Cic.

But when a Verb cometh between two Nominative Caſes not of the ſame number, or a Relative between two Subſtantives not of the ſame Gender, the Verb in Number, and the Relative in Gender may agree with either of them; as Amantium iræ amoris integratio eſt. Quid enim niſi vota ſuperſunt. Tuentur illum globum qui terra dicitur. Animal plenum rationis, quem vocamus hominem. Lutetia eſt quam nos Pariſios dicimus.

And if the Nominative Caſes be of ſeveral perſons, or the Subſtantives and Antecedents of ſeveral Genders, the Verb ſhall agree with the ſecond perſon before the third, and with the firſt before either; and ſo ſhall the Adjective or Relative in thir Gender; as Ego & tu ſumus in tuto. Tu & Pater periclitamini. Pater & Mater mortui ſunt. Frater & Soror quos vidiſti.

But in things that have not life, an Adjective or Relative of the Neuter Gender, may agree with Subſtantives or Antecedents, Maſculin or Feminin, or both together; as Arcus & calami ſunt bona. Arcus & calami quæ fregiſti. Pulcritudinem, conſtantiam, ordinem in Conſiliis factiſque conſervanda putat. Cic. Off. 1. Ira & ægritudo permiſta ſunt. Sal.

Note that the Infinitive Mood, or any part of a Sentence may be inſtead of a Nominative Caſe to the Verb, or of a Subſtantive to the Adjective, or of an Antecedent to the Relative, and then the Adjective or Relative ſhall be of the Neuter Gender: And if there be more parts of a Sentence then one, the Verb ſhall be in the plural number; Diluculo ſurgere ſaluberrimum eſt. Virtutem ſequi, vita eſt honeſtiſſima. Audito proconſulem in Ciliciam tendere. In tempore veni, quod omnium rerum eſt primum. Tu multum dormis & ſæpe potas, quæ duo ſunt corpori inimica.

Somtimes alſo an Adverb is put for the Nominative Caſe to a Verb, and for a Subſtantive to an Adjective; as Partim ſignorum ſunt combuſta. Propè centies & vicies erogatum eſt. Cic. verr. 4.

Somtimes alſo agreement, whether it be in Gender or Number, is grounded on the ſenſe, not on the words; as Illum ſenium for illum ſenem. Iſte ſcelus for iſte ſceleſtus. Ter. Tranſtulit in Eunuchum ſuam, meaning Comœdiam. Ter. Pars magna obligati, meaning Homines. Liv. Impliciti laqueis nudus uterque for Ambo. Ov. Alter in alterius jactantes lumina vultus. Ovid. that is, Alter & alter. Inſperanti ipſa refers te nobis, for mihi. Catul. Diſce omnes. Virg. Æn. 2. for tu quiſquis es. Dua importuna prodigia, quos egeſtas tribuno plebis conſtrictos addixerat. Cic. pro Seſt. Pars merſi tenuere ratem. Rhemus cum fratre Quirino jura dabant. Virg. that is, Rhemus & frater Quirinus. Divellimur inde Iphitus & Pelias mecum. Virg.

Conſtruction of Subſtantives.

Hitherto of Concord or Agreement; the other part followeth, which is Governing, wherby one part of Speech is govern'd by another, that is to ſay, is put in ſuch Caſe or Mood as the word that governeth or goeth before in conſtruction requireth.

When two Subſtantives com together, betokening divers things, wherof the former may be an Adjective in the Neuter Gender taken for a Subſtantive, the latter (which alſo may be a Pronoun) ſhall be in the Genitive Caſe; as Facundia Ciceronis. Amator ſtudiorum. Ferimur per opaca locorum. Corruptus vanis rerum. Hor. Deſiderium tui Pater ejus.

Somtimes the former Subſtantive, as this word Officium or Mos, is underſtood; as Oratoris eſt, It is the part of an Orator. Extrema eſt dementia, It is the manner of extream madneſs. Ignavi eſt, It is the quality of a ſlothful man. Ubi ad Dianæ veneris; Templum is underſtood. Juſtitiæne prius mirer belline laborum. Virg. Underſtand Cauſâ. Neque illi ſepoſui Ciceris, neque longæ invidit avenæ. Hor. Supply partem.

But if both the Suſtantives be ſpoken of one thing, which is call'd appoſition, they ſhall be both of the ſame Caſe; as Pater meus vir, amat me puerum.

Words that ſignifie Quality, following the Subſtantive wherof they are ſpoken, may be put in the Genitive or Ablative Caſe; as Puer bonæ indolis, or bonâ indole. Som have a Genitive only; as Ingentis Rex nominis. Liv. De- cem annorum puer. Hujuſmodi pax. Hujus generis animal. But genus is ſomtimes in the Accuſative: as Si hoc genus rebus non proficitur. Varr. de re ruſt. And the cauſe or manner of a thing in the Ablative only; as Sum tibi natura parens, preceptor conſiliis.

Opus and Uſus when they ſignifie Need, require an Ablative; as Opus eſt mihi tuo judicio. Viginti minis uſus eſt filio. But Opus is ſomtimes taken for an Adjective undeclin'd, and ſignifieth Needful: as Dux nobis & Author opus eſt. Alia quæ opus ſunt para.

Conſtruction of Adjectives, governing a Genitive.

ADjectives that ſignifie Deſire, Knowledg, Ignorance, Remembrance, Forgetfulneſs, and ſuch like; as alſo certain others deriv'd from Verbs, and ending in ax, require a Genitive; as Cupidus auri. Peritus belli. Ignarus omnium. Memor præteriti. Reus furti. Tenax propoſiti. Tempus edax rerum.

Adjectives call'd Nouns Partitive, becauſe they ſignifie part of ſom whole quantity or number, govern the word that ſignifieth the thing parted or divided, in the Genitive; as Aliquis noſtrum. Primus omnium. Aurium mollior eſt ſiniſtra. Oratorum eloquentiſſimus. And oft in the Neuter Gender; as Multum lucri. Id negotii. Hoc noctis. Somtimes, though ſeldom, a word ſignifying the whole, is read in the ſame Caſe with the Partitive, as Habet duos gladios quibus altero te occiſurum minatur, altero villicum, Plaut. For Quorum altero. Magnum opus habeo in manibus; quod jampridem ad hunc ipſum (me autem dicebat) quædam inſtitui. Cic. Acad. 1. Quod quædam for cujus quædam.

A Dative.

ADjectives that betoken Profit or Diſprofit, Likeneſs or Unlikeneſs, Fitneſs, Pleaſure, Submitting, or belonging to any thing, require a Dative; as Labor eſt utilis corpori. Equalis Hectori. Idoneus bello. Jucundus omnibus. Parenti ſupplex. Mihi proprium.

But ſuch as betoken Profit or Diſprofit have ſomtimes an Accuſative with a Prepoſition; as Homo ad nullam partem utilis. Cic. Inter ſe æquales.

And ſom Adjectives ſignifying Likeneſs, Unlikeneſs, or Relation, may have a Genitive. Par hujus. Ejus culpæ affines. Domini ſimilis es. Commune animantium eſt conjunctionis appetitus. Alienum dignitatis ejus. Cic. Fin. 1. Fuit hoc quondam proprium populi Romani longè a domo bellare. But propior and proximus admit ſomtimes an Accuſative; as proximus Pompeium ſedebam. Cic.

An Accuſative.

NOuns of Meaſure are put after Adjectives of like ſignification in the Accuſative, and ſomtimes in the Ablative; as Turris alta centum pedes. Arbor lata tres digitos. Liber craſſus tres pollices, or tribus pollicibus. Somtimes in the Genitive; as Areas latas pedum denûm facito.

All words expreſſing part or parts of a thing, may be put in the Accuſative, or ſomtimes in the Ablative; as Saucius frontem or fronte. Excepto quòd non ſimul eſſes cætera latus. Hor. Nuda pedem. Ov. Os humeroſque deo ſimilis. Virg. Somtimes in the Genitive: as Dubius mentis.

An Ablative.

ADjectives of the Comparative degree engliſht with this ſign then or by, as alſo Dignus, Indignus, Præditus, Contentus, and theſe words of Price, Carus, vilis, require an Ablative; as Frigidior glacie. Multo doctior. Uno pede altior. Dignus honore. Virtute præditus. Sorte ſua contentus. Aſſe charum.

But of Comparatives, plus, amplius, and minus, may govern a Genitive, alſo a Nomnative, or an Accuſative; as Plus quinquaginta hominum. Amplius duorum millium. Ne plus tertia pars eximatur mellis. Varro. Paulo plus quingentos paſſus. Ut ex ſua cujuſque parte ne minus dimidium ad fratrem perveniret. Cic. Verr. 4. And Dignus, Indignus, have ſomtimes a Genitive after them; as Militia eſt operis altera digna tui. Indignus avorum. Virg.

Adjectives betokening Plenty or Want, will have an Ablative, and ſomtimes a Genitive; as Vacuus ira, or iræ. Nulla Epiſtola inanis re aliqua. Ditiſſimus agri. Stultorum plena ſunt omnia. Integer vitæ, ſceleriſque purus. Expers omnium. Vobis immunibus hujus eſſe mali dabitur.

Words alſo betokening the cauſe, or form, or manner of a thing, are put after Adjectives in the Ablative Caſe; as Pallidus ira. Trepidus morte futura. Nomine Grammaticus, re Barbarus.

Of

Of Pronouns.

PRonouns differ not in Conſtruction from Nouns, except that Poſſeſſives, Meus, tuus, ſuus, noſter, veſter, by a certain manner of ſpeech, are ſomtimes joyn'd to a Subſtantive, which governs thir Primitive underſtood with a Noun or Participle in a Genitive Caſe; as Dico mea unius opera rempublicam eſſe liberatam, Cic. for Mei unius opera. In like manner Noſtra, duorum, trium, paucorum, omnium virtute, for noſtrum duorum, &c. Meum ſolius peccatum, Cic. Ex tuo ipſius animo, For Tui ipſius. Ex ſua cujuſque parte, Id. Verr. 2. Ne tua quidem recentia proximi Prætoris veſtigia perſequi poterat. Cic. verr. 4. Si meas preſentis preces non putas profuiſſe, id. Pro Planc. Noſtros vidiſti flentis ocellos. Ovid.

Alſo a Relative, as qui or is, ſomtimes anſwers to an Antecedent Noun or Pronoun Primitive underſtood in the Poſſeſſive; as Omnes laudare fortunas meas qui filium haberem tali ingenio præditum. Terent.

Conſtruction of Verbs.

VErbs for the moſt part govern either one caſe after them, or more then one in a different manner of Conſtruction.

Of the Verb Subſtantive Sum, and ſuch like, with a Nominative, and other oblique Caſes.

VErbs that ſignifie Being, as Sum, exiſto, fio; and certain Paſſives, as dicor, vocor, ſalutor, appellor, habeor, exiſtimor, videor; alſo Verbs of motion or reſt, as incedo, diſcedo, ſedeo, with ſuch like, will have a Nominative Caſe after them, as they have before them, becauſe both Caſes belong to the ſame perſon or thing, and the latter is rather in appoſition with the former, then govern'd by the Verb; as Temperantia eſt virtus. Horatius ſalutatur Poeta. Aſt ego quæ divum incedo regina.

And if eſt be an Imperſonal, it may ſomtimes govern a Genitive, as Uſus Poetæ, ut moris eſt, licentia. Phædrus l. 4. Negavit moris eſſe Græcorum ut &c. Cic. Verr. 2.

But if the following Noun be of another perſon, or not directly ſpoken of the former, both after Sum and all his Compounds, except poſſum, it ſhall be put in the Dative; as Eſt mihi domi pater. Multa petentibus deſunt multa.

And if a thing be ſpoken of, relating to the perſon, it may be alſo in the Dative; as Sum tibi præſidio. Hæc res eſt mihi voluptati. Quorum alteri Capitoni cognomen fuit. Cic. Paſtori nomen Fauſtulo fuiſſe ferunt. Liv.

Of Verbs Tranſitives with an Accuſative, and the Exceptions therto belonging.

VErbs Active or Deponent, call'd Tranſitive, becauſe thir action paſſeth forth on ſom perſon or thing, will have an Accuſative after them of the perſon or thing to whom the action is don; as Amo te. Vitium fuge. Deum venerare. Uſus promptos facit. Juvat me. Oportet te.

Alſo Verbs call'd Neuters, may have an Accuſative of thir own ſignification; as Duram ſervit ſervitutem. Longam ire viam. Endymionis ſomnum dormis. Paſtillos Ruſillus olet. Nec vox hominem ſonat. Cum Glaucum ſaltaſſet. Paterc. Agit letum convivam. Horat. Hoc me latet.

But theſe Verbs, though Tranſitive, Miſereor and Miſereſco, paſs into a Genitive; as Miſerere mei. Somtimes into a Dative: Huic miſereor. Sen. Dilige bonos, miſereſce malis. Boet.

Reminiſcor, Obliviſcor, Recordor, and Memini, ſomtimes alſo require a Genitive; as Data fidei reminiſcitur. Memini tui. Obliviſcor carminis. Somtime retain the Accuſative; as Recordor pueritiam. Omnia quæ curant ſenes meminerunt. Plaut.

Theſe Imperſonals alſo, intereſt and refert, ſignifying to concern, require a Genitive, except in theſe Ablatives Feminine, Mea, tua, ſua, noſtra, veſtra, cuja. And the meaſure of concernment is often added in theſe Genitives, magni, parvi, tanti, quanti, with thir Compounds; as Intereſt omnium rectè agere. Tua refert teipſum noſſe. Veſtra parvi intereſt.

But Verbs of Profiting or Diſprofiting, Believing, Pleaſing, Obeying, Oppoſing, or being angry with, paſs into a Dative; as non potes mihi commodare nec incommodare. Placeo omnibus. Crede mihi. Nimium ne crede colori. Pareo parentibus. Tibi repugno. Adoleſcenti nihil eſt quod ſuccenſeat. But of the firſt and third ſort, Juvo, adjuvo, lædo, offendo, retain an Accuſative.

Laſtly, theſe Tranſitives, fungor, fruor, utor, potior, and Verbs betokening want, paſs direct into an Ablative, Fungitur officio. Aliena frui inſania, Utere ſorte tua. But fungor, fruor, utor, had antiently an Accuſative. Verbs of want, and potior, may have alſo a Genitive. Pecuniæ indiget. Quaſi tu hujus indigeas patris. Potior Urbe, or Urbis.

Somtimes a phraſe of the ſame ſignification with a ſingle Verb, may have the Caſe of the Verb after it; as id operam do, that is to ſay, id ago. Idne eſtis authores mihi? for id ſuadetis. Quid me vobis tactio eſt? for tangitis. Plaut. Quid tibi hanc curatio eſt rem? Id.

The Accuſative with a Genitive.

Hitherto of Tranſitives governing thir Accuſative, or other Caſe, in ſingle and direct Conſtruction: Now of ſuch as may have after them more Caſes then one in Conſtruction direct and oblique, that is to ſay, with an Accuſative, a Genitive, Dative, other Accuſative, or Ablative.

Verbs of eſteeming, buying or ſelling, beſides thir Accuſative, will have a Genitive betokening the value of price, flocci, nihili, pili, hujus, and the like after Verbs of eſteeming: Tanti, quanti, pluris, minoris, and ſuch like, put without a Subſtantive, after Verbs of buying or ſelling; as Non hujus te æſtimo. Ego illum flocci pendo. Æqui boni hoc facio or conſulo. Quanti mercatus es hunc equum? Pluris quam vellem.

But the word of Value is ſomtimes in the Ablative; as Parvi or parvo æſtimas probitatem. And the word of Price moſt uſually; as Teruncio eum non emerim. And particularly in theſe Adjectives, Vili, paulo, minimo, magno, nimio, plurimo, dimidio, duplo, put without a Subſtantive, as Vili vendo triticum. Redimite captum quàm queas minimo. And ſomtimes minore for minoris. Nam a Cælio propinqui minore centeſſimis nummum movere non poſſunt. Cic. Att. l. 1. But Verbs Neuter or Paſſive have only the oblique Caſes after them; as Tanti eris aliis, quanti tibi fueris. Pudor parvi penditur. Which is alſo to be obſerv'd in the following Rules.

And this Neuter Valeo governeth the word of value in the Accuſative; as Denarii dicti quod denos æris valebant. Varr.

Verbs of admoniſhing, accuſing, condemning, acquitting, will have, beſides thir Accuſative, a Genitive of the Crime, or Penaltie, or Thing; as Admonuit me errati. Accuſas me furti? Vatem ſceleris damnat. Furem dupli condemnavit. And ſomtimes an Ablative with a Prepoſition, or without; as Condemnabo eodem ego te crimine. Accuſas furti, an ſtupri, an utroque? De repetundis accuſavit, or damnavit. Cic.

Alſo theſe Imperſonals, penitet, tædet, miſeret, miſereſcit, pudet, piget, to thir Accuſative will have a Genitive, either of the perſon, or of the thing; as Noſtri noſmet penitet. Urbis me tædet. Miſeret me tui. Pudet me negligentiæ.

An Accuſative with a Dative.

Verbs of giving or reſtoring, promiſing or paying, commanding or ſhewing, truſting or threatning, add to thir Accuſative a Dative of the perſon; as Fortuna multis nimium dedit. Hæc tibi promitto. Æs alienum mihi numeravit. Frumentum imperat civitatibus. Quid & cui dicas, videto. Hoc tibi ſuadeo. Tibi or ad te ſcribo. Pecuniam omnem tibi credo. Utrique mortem minatus eſt.

To theſe add Verbs Active compounded with theſe Prepoſitions, præ, ad, ab, con, de, ex, ante, ſub, poſt, ob, in and inter; as Præcipio hoc tibi. Admovit urbi exercitum. Collegæ ſuo imperium abrogavit. Sic parvis componere magna ſolebam.

Neuters have a Dative only; as Meis majoribus virtute præluxi. But ſome compounded with præ and ante may have an Accuſative; as Præſtat ingenio alius alium. Multos anteit ſapientia. Others with a Prepoſition; as Quæ ad ventris victum conducunt. In hæc ſtudia incumbite. Cic.

Alſo all Verbs Active, betokning acquiſition, likening or relation, commonly engliſht with to or for, have to thir Accuſative a Dative of the perſon; as Magnam laudem ſibi peperit. Huic habeo non tibi. Se illis æquarunt. Expedi mihi hoc negotium: but mihi, tibi, ſibi, ſomtimes are added for Elegance, the ſenſe not requiring; as Suo hunc ſibi jugulat gladio. Terent. Neuters a Dative only; as Non omnibus dormio. Libet mihi. Tibi licet.

Somtimes a Verb Tranſitive will have to his Accuſative a double Dative, one of the perſon, another of the thing;

as Do tibi veſtem pignori. Verto hoc tibi vitio. Hoc tu tibi laudi ducis.

A double Accuſative.

VErbs of asking, teaching, arraying, and concealing, will have two Accuſatives, one of the perſon, another of the thing; as Rogo te pecuniam. Doceo te literas. Quod te jamdudum hortor. Induit ſe calceos. Hoc me celabas.

And being Paſſives, they retain one Accuſative of the thing, as Sumtumque recingitur anguem. Ovid. Met. 4. Induitur togam. Mart.

But Verbs of arraying ſomtimes change the one Acuſative into an Ablative or Dative; as Induo te tunica, or tibi tunicam. Inſtravit equum penula, or equo penulam.

An Accuſative with an Ablative.

VErbs Tranſitive may have to thir Accuſative an ablative of the inſtrument or cauſe, matter, or manner of doing; and Neuters the Ablative only; as Ferit eum gladio. Taceo metu. Malis gaudet alienis. Summa eloquentia cauſam egit. Capitolium ſaxo quadrato ſubſtructum eſt. Tuo conſilio nitor. Veſcor pane. Affluis opibus. Amore abundas. Somtimes with a Prepoſition of the manner; as Summa cum humanitate me tractavit.

Verbs of endowing, imparting, depriving, diſcharging, filling, emptying, and the like, will have an Ablative, and ſomtimes a Genitive; as Dono te hoc annulo. Plurima ſalute te impertit. Aliquem familiarem ſuo ſermone participavit. Paternum ſervum ſui participavit conſilii. Interdico tibi aqua & igni. Libero te hoc metu. Implentur veteris Bacchi.

Alſo Verbs of comparing or exceeding, will have an Ablative of the exceſs; as Præfero hunc multis gradibus. Magno intervallo eum ſuperat.

After all manner of Verbs, the word ſignifying any part of a thing, may be put in the Genitive, Accuſative, or Ablative; as Abſurdè facis qui angas te animi. Pendet animi. Diſcrucior animi. Deſipit mentis. Candet dentes. Rubet capillos. Ægrotat animo, magis quàm corpore.

Nouns of Time and Place after Verbs.

NOuns betokening part of time, be put after Verbs in the Ablative, and ſomtimes in the Accuſative; as Nocte vigilas, luce dormis. Nullam partem noctis requieſcit. Cic. Abhinc triennium ex Andro commigravit. Ter. Reſpondit triduo illum, ad ſummum quatriduo periturum. Cic. Or if continuance of time, in the Accuſative, ſomtimes in the Ablative; as Sexaginta annos natus. Hyemem totam ſtertis. Imperium deponere maluerunt, quam id tenere punctum temporis contra Religionem. Cic. Imperavit triennio, & decem menſibus. Suet. Somtimes with a Prepoſition; as Ferè in diebus paucis, quibus hæc acta ſunt. Ter. Rarely with a Genitive; as Temporis anguſti manſit concordia diſcors. Lucan.

Alſo Nouns betokening ſpace between places are put in the Accuſative, and ſomtimes in the Ablative; as Pedem hinc ne diſceſſeris. Abeſt ab Urbe quingentis millibus paſſuum. Terra marique gentibus imperavit.

Nouns that ſignify Place, and alſo proper Names of greater places, as Countries, be put after Verbs of moving or remaining, with a Prepoſition, ſignifying to, from, in, or by, in ſuch caſe as the Prepoſition requireth; as Proficiſcor ab Urbe. Vivit in Anglia. Veni per Galliam in Italiam.

But if it be the proper name of a leſſer Place, as of a City, Town, or leſſer Iſland, or any of theſe four, Humus, Domus, Militia, Bellum, with theſe ſigns, on, in, or at before them, being of the firſt or ſecond Declenſion, and ſingular number, they ſhall be put in the Genitive; if of the third Declenſion, or plural Number, or this word rus, in the Dative or Ablative; as Vixit Romæ, Londini. Ea habitabat Rhodi. Conon plurimum Cypri vixit. Cor. Nep. Procumbit humi bos. Domi bellique ſimul viximus. Militavit Carthagini or Carthagine. Studuit Athenis. Ruri or rure educatus eſt.

If the Verb of moving be to a place, it ſhall be put in the Accuſative; as Eo Romam, Domum, Rus. If from a place, in the Ablative; as Diſceſſit Londino. Abiit Domo. Rure eſt Reverſus.

Somtimes with a Prepoſition; as A Brundiſio profectus eſt. Cic. Manil. Ut ab Athenis in Bœotiam irem. Sulpit. apud Cic. Fam. l. 4. Cum te profectum ab domo ſcirem. Liv. l. 8.

Conſtruction of Paſſives.

A Verb Paſſive will have after it an Ablative of the doer, with the prepoſition a or ab before it, ſomtimes without, and more often a Dative: as Virgilius legitur a me. Fortes creantur fortibus. Hor. Tibi fama petatur. And Neutropaſſives, as Vapulo, veneo, liceo, exulo, fio, may have the ſame Conſtruction; as Ab hoſte venire.

Somtimes an Accuſative of the thing is found after a Paſſive; as Coronari Olympia. Hor. Epiſt. 1. Cyclopa movetur. Hor. for ſaltat or egit. Purgor bilem. Id.

Conſtruction of Gerunds and Supines.

GErunds and Supines will have ſuch caſes as the Verb from whence they com; as Otium ſcribendi literas. Eo auditum Poetas. Ad conſulendum tibi.

A Gerund in di is commonly govern'd both of Subſtantives and Adjectives in manner of a Genitive; as Cauſa videndi. Amor habendi. Cupidus viſendi. Certus eundi. And ſomtimes governeth a Genitive Plural; as illorum videndi gratia. Ter.

Gerunds in do are us'd after Verbs in manner of an Ablative, according to former Rules, with or without a Prepoſition; as Defeſſus ſum ambulando. A diſcendo facile deterretur. Cæſar dando, ſublevando, ignoſcendo, gloriam adeptus eſt. In apparando conſumunt diem.

A Gerund in dum is us'd in manner of an Accuſative after Prepoſitions governing that caſe; as Ad capiendum hoſtes. Ante domandum ingentes tollent animos. Virg. Ob redimendum captivos. Inter cœnandum.

Gerunds in ſignification are ofttimes us'd as Participles in dus; Tuorum conſiliorum reprimendorum cauſa. Cic. Orationem Latinam legendis noſtris efficies pleniorem. Cic. Ad accuſandos homines præmio ducitur.

A Gerund in dum join'd with the Imperſonal eſt, and implying ſome neceſſity or duty to do a thing, may have both the Active and Paſſive Conſtruction of the Verb from whence it is deriv'd; as Utendum eſt ætate. Ov. Pacem Trojano a rege petendum. Virg. Iterandum eadem iſta mihi. Cic. Serviendum eſt mihi amicis. Plura dixi quam dicendum fuit. Cic. pro Seſt.

Conſtruction of Verb with Verb.

WHen two Verbs com together without a Nominative Caſe between them, the latter ſhall be in the Infinitive Mood; as Cupio diſcere. Or in the firſt Supine after Verbs of moving; as Eo cubitum, ſpectatum. Or in the latter with an Adjective; as Turpe eſt dictu. Facile factu, opus ſcitu.

But if a Caſe com between, not govern'd of the former Verb, it ſhall always be an Accuſative before the Infinitive Mood; as Te rediiſſe incolumem gaudeo. Malo me divitem eſſe, quam haberi.

And this Infinitive eſſe, will have always after it an Accuſative, or the ſame Caſe which the former Verb governs; as Expedit bonos eſſe vobis. Quo mihi commiſſo, non licet eſſe piam. But this Accuſative agreeth with another underſtood before the Infinitive; as Expedit vobis vos eſſe bonos. Natura beatis omnibus eſſe dedit. Nobis non licet eſſe tam diſertis. The ſame Conſtruction may be us'd after other Infinitives Neuter or Paſſive like to eſſe in ſignification; as Maximo tibi poſtea & civi, & duci evadere contigit. Val. Max. l. 6.

Somtimes a Noun Adjective or Subſtantive governs an Infinitive; as audax omnia perpeti. Dignus amari. Conſilium ceperunt ex oppido profugere. Cæſ. Minari diviſoribus ratio non erat. Cic. verr. 1.

Somtimes the Infinitive is put abſolute for the Preterimperfect or Preterperfect Tenſe; as Ego illud ſedulo negare factum. Ter. Galba autem multas ſimilitudines afferre. Cic. Ille contra hæc omnia ruere, agere vitam. Ter.

Conſtruction of Participles.

PArticiples govern ſuch Caſes as the Verb from whence they com, according to thir Active or Paſſive ſignification; as Fruiturus amicis. Nunquam audita mihi. Diligendus ab omnibus. Sate ſanguine divûm. Telamone creatus. Corpore mortali cretus. Lucret. Nate deâ. Edite regibus. Lævo ſuſpenſi loculos tabulaſque lacerto. Hor. Cenſus equeſtrem ſummam. Id. Abeundum eſt mihi. Venus orta mari. Exoſus Bella. Virg. Exoſus diis. Gell. Arma Peroſus. Ovid. But Pertaſus hath an Acuſative otherwiſe then the Verb; as Pertaſus Ignaviam. Semet ipſe pertaſus. Suet. To theſe add participal Adjectives ending in bilis of the Paſſive Sigfication, and requiring like caſe after them; as Nulli penetrabilis aſtro lucus erat.

Participles chang'd into Adjectives have thir Conſtruction by the Rules of Adjectives; as Appetens vini. Fugitans litium. Fidens animi.

An

An Ablative put abſolute.

TWo Nouns together, or a Noun and Pronoun with a Participle, expreſt or underſtood, put abſolutely, that is to ſay, neither governing nor governed of a Verb, ſhall be put in the Ablative; as Authore Senatu bellum geritur. Me duce vinces. Cæſare veniente hoſtes fugerunt. Sublato clamore prælium committitur.

Conſtruction of Adverbs.

EN and ecce will have a Nominative, or an Accuſative, and ſomtimes with a Dative; as En Priamus. Ecce tibi ſtatus noſter. En habitum. Ecce autem alterum.

Adverbs of quantity, time, and place require a Genitive; as Satis loquentiæ, ſapientiæ parum ſatis. Alſo compounded with a Verb; as Is rerum ſuarum ſatagit. Tunc temporis ubique gentium. Eo impudentiæ proceſſit. Quoad ejus fieri poterit.

To theſe add Ergo ſignifying the cauſe; as Illius ergo. Virg. Virtutis ergo. Fugæ atque formidinis ergo non abiturus. Liv.

Others will have ſuch caſe as the Nouns from whence they come; as Minime gentium. Optime omnium. Venit obviam illi. Canit ſimiliter huic. Albanum, ſive Falernum te magis oppoſitis delectat. Hor.

Adverbs are join'd in a Sentence to ſeveral Moods of Verbs.

Of Time, Vbi, poſtquam, cum or quum, to an Indicative or Subjunctive; as Hæc ubi dicta dedit. Vbi nos laverimus. Poſtquam exceſſit ex Ephebis. Cum faciam vitula. Virg. Cum canerem reges. Id.

Donec while, to an Indicative. Donec eris felix. Donec until, to an Indicative or Subjunctive; Cogere donec oves juſſit. Virg. Donec ea aqua decocta ſit. Colum.

Dum while, to an Indicative. Dum apperatur Virgo. Dum until, to an Indicative or Subjunctive; as Dum redeo. Tertia dum Latio regnantem viderit æſtas. Dum for dummodo ſo as, or ſo that, to a Subjunctive; Dum proſim tibi.

Quoad while, to an Indicative. Quoad expectas contubernalem. Quoad until to a Subjunctive. Omnia integra ſervabo, quoad exercitus huc mittatur.

Simulac, ſimulatque to an Indicative or Subjunctive; as Simulac belli patiens erat, ſimulatque adoleverit ætas.

Vt as, to the ſame Moods. Vt ſalutabis, ita reſalutaberis. Vt ſementem feceris, ita & metes. Hor. Vt ſo ſoon as, to an Indicative only: as Vt ventum eſt in Vrbem.

Quaſi, tanquam, perinde, ac ſi, to a Subjunctive only; as Quaſi non norimus nos inter nos. Tanquam feceris ipſe aliquid.

Ne of forbidding, to an Imperative or Subjunctive; as Ne ſævi. Ne metuas.

Certain Adverbs of quantity, quality, or cauſe; as Quam, quoties, cur, quare, &c. Thence alſo qui, quis, quantus, qualis, and the like, coming in a ſentence after the principal Verb, govern the Verb following in a Subjunctive; as Videte quam valde malitia ſua confidat. Cic. Quid eſt cur tu in iſto loco ſedeas? Cic. pro Cluent. Subſideo mihi diligentiam comparavi quæ quanta ſit intelligi non poteſt, niſi, &c. Cic. pro Quint. Nam quid hoc iniquius dici poteſt. Quam me qui caput alterius fortunaſq; defendam, Priore loco diſcere. Ibid. Nullum eſt Officium tam ſanctum atq; ſolenne, quod non avaritia violare ſoleat. Ibid. Non me fallit, ſi conſulamini quid ſitis reſponſuri. Ibid. Dici vix poteſt quam multa ſint quæ reſpondeatis ante fieri oportere. Ibid. Docui quo die hunc ſibi promiſiſſe dicat, eo die ne Romæ quidem eum fuiſſe. Ibid. Conturbatus diſcedit neq; mirum cui hæc optio tam miſera daretur. Ibid. Narrat quo in loco viderit Quintium. Ibid. Recte majores eum qui ſocium fefelliſſet in virorum bonorum numero non putarunt haberi oportere. Cic. pro Roſc. Am. Quæ concurſatio percontantium quid Prætor edixiſſet, ubi cænaret, quid enuntiaſſet. Cic. Agrar. 1.

Of Conjunctions.

COnjunctions Copulative and Disjunctive, and theſe four, Quam, niſi, præterquam, an, couple like caſes; as Socrates docuit Xenophontem & Platonem. Aut dies eſt, aut nox. Neſcio albus an ater ſit. Eſt minor natu quàm tu. Nemini placet præterquam ſibi.

Except when ſom particular conſtruction requireth otherwiſe; as Studui Romæ & Athenis. Emi fundum centum nummis & pluris. Accuſas furti, an ſtupri, an utroque?

They alſo couple for the moſt part like Moods and Tenſes, as Recto ſtat corpore, deſpicitque terras. But not always like Tenſes; as Niſi me lactaſſes, & vana ſpe produceres. Et habetur, & referetur tibi a me gratia.

Of other Conjunctions, ſom govern an Indicative, ſom a Subjunctive, according to thir ſeveral Significations.

Etſi, tametſi, etiamſi, quanquam an Indicative; quamvis and licet moſt commonly a Subjunctive; as Etſi nihil novi afferebatur. Quanquam animus meminiſſe horret. Quamvis Elyſios miretur Græcia campos. Ipſe licet venias.

Ni, niſi, ſi, ſiquidem, quod quia poſtquam, poſteaquam, antequam, priuſquam an Indicative or Subjunctive; as Niſi vi mavis eripi. Ni faciat. Caſtigo te, non quòd odeo habeam, ſed quòd amem. Antequam dicam. Si for quamvis a Subjunctive only. Redeam? Non ſi me obſecret.

Si alſo conditional may ſomtimes govern both Verbs of the ſentence in a Subjunctive; as Reſpiraro ſi te videro. Cic. ad Attic.

Quando, quandoquidem, quoniam an Indicative; as Dicite quandoquidem in molli conſedimus herba. Quoniam convenimus ambo.

Ne, an, num, of doubting, a Subjunctive; as Nihil refert, feceriſne, an perſuaſeris. Viſam num redierit.

Interrogatives alſo of diſdain or reproach underſtood, govern a Subjunctive; as tantum dem, quantum ille popoſcerit? Cic. verr. 4. Sylvam tu Scantiam vendas? Cic. Agrar. Hunc tu non ames? Cic. ad Attic. Furem aliquem aut rapacem accuſaris? Vitanda ſemper erit omnis avaritiæ ſuſpicio. Cic. ver. 4. Somtimes an Infinitive; as Mene incepto deſiſtere victam? Virg.

Ut that, leſt not, or although, a Subjunctive; as Te oro, ut redeat jam in viam. Metuo ut ſubſtet hoſpes. Ut omnia contingant quæ volo.

Of Prepoſitions.

OF Prepoſitions, ſom will have an Accuſative after them, ſom an Ablative, ſom both, according to thir different ſignification.

An Accuſative theſe following, Ad, apud, ante, adverſus adverſum, cis citra, circum circa, circiter, contra, erga, extra, inter, intra, infra, juxta, ob, ponè, per, propè, propter, poſt, penes, præter, ſecundum, ſupra, ſecùs, trans, ultra, uſque, verſus; But verſus is moſt commonly ſet after the caſe it governs, as Londinum verſus.

And for an Accuſative after ad, a Dative ſomtimes is uſ'd in Poets; as It clamor cœlo. Virg. Cœlo ſi gloria tollit Æneadum. Sil. for ad cœlum.

An Ablative theſe, A, ab, abs, abſque, cum, coram, de, e, ex, pro, præ, palam, ſine, tenus, which laſt is alſo put after his Caſe, being moſt uſually a Genitive, if it be plural; as Capulo tenus. Aurium tenus.

Theſe, both Caſes, In, ſub, ſuper, ſubter, clam, procul.

In, ſignifying to, towards, into, or againſt, requires an Accuſative; as Piſces emptos obolo in cœnam ſeni. Animus in Teucros benignus. Verſa eſt in cineres Troja. In te committere tantum quid Troes potuere? Laſtly, when it ſignifies future time, or for; as Bellum in trigeſimum diem indixerunt. Deſignati conſules in annum ſequentem. Alii pretia faciunt in ſingula capita canum. Var. Otherwiſe in will have an Ablative; as In Urbe. In Terris.

Sub, when it ſignifies to, or in time, about, or a little before, requires an Accuſative; as Sub umbram properemus. Sub id tempus. Sub noctem. Otherwiſe an Ablative. Sub pedibus. Sub umbra.

Super ſignifying beyond, or preſent time, an Accuſative; as Super Garamantas & Indos. Super cœnam. Suet. at ſupper time. Of or concerning, an Ablative; as Multa ſuper Priamo rogitans. Super hac re.

Super, over or upon, may have either caſe; as Super ripas Tiberis effuſus. Sæva ſedens ſuper arma. Fronde ſuper viridi.

So alſo may ſubter; as pugnatum eſt ſuper ſubterque terras. Subter denſa teſtudine. Virg. Clam patrem or patre. Procul muros. Liv. Patria procul.

Prepoſitions in compoſition govern the ſame caſes as before in appoſition. Adibo hominem. Detrudunt naves ſcopulo. And the Prepoſition is ſomtimes repeated; as Detrahere de tua fama nunquam cogitavi. And ſomtimes underſtood, governeth his uſual caſe; as Habeo te loco parentis. Apparuit humana ſpecie. Cumis erant oriundi. Liv. Liberis parentibus oriundus. Colum. Mutat quadrata rotundis. Hor. Pridie Compitalia. Pridie nonas or calendas. Poſtridie Idus. Poſtridie ludos. Before which Accuſatives ante or poſt is to be underſtood, Filii id ætatis. Cic. Hoc noctis. Liv. Underſtand Secundum. Or refer to part of time. Omnia Mercurio ſimilis. Virg. Underſtand per.

Of Interjections.

CErtain Interjections have ſeveral Caſes after them. O, a Nominative, Accuſative or Vocative; as O feſtus dies hominis. O ego lævus. Hor. O fortunatos. O formoſe puer.

Others a Nominative, or an Accuſative; as Heu priſca fides! Heu ſtirpem inviſam! Proh ſancte Jupiter! Proh deum atque hominum fidem! Hem tibi Davum!

Yea, though the Interjection be underſtood; as Me miſerum! Me cœcum, qui hæc ante non viderim!

TAmetſi vereor, ſi in defendendo Populo Anglicano tam ſim profuſus verborum, vacuus rerum, quàm eſt pleriſque viſus in defenſione regiâ Salmaſius, ne verboſiſſimi ſimul & ineptiſſimi defenſoris nomen meritus eſſe videar; tamen cùm in mediocri quavis materia tractandâ nemo ſibi adeò properandum eſſe exiſtimet, quin exordio ſaltem aliquo pro dignitate ſuſcepti à ſe operis uti ſoleat, id ego in re omnium ferè maxima dicenda ſi non omittam, neque nimis aſtringam, ſpero equidem, duas propemodùm res, quas magnopere vellem, aſſecuturum me eſſe; alteram, et cauſæ huic nobiliſſimæ, & ſeculorum omnium memoriâ digniſſimæ nulla ex parte, quantum in me eſt, deſim; alteram, ut reprehenſam in adverſario futilitatem & redundantiam, devitaſſe tamen ipſe nihilo minus judicer. Dicam enim res neque parvas neque vulgares; regem potentiſſimum, oppreſſis legibus, religione afflictâ, pro libidine regnantem, tandem à ſuo populo, qui ſervitutem longam ſervierat, bello victum; inde in cuſtodiam traditum; & cùm nullam omnino meliùs de ſe ſperandi materiam vel dictis vel factis præberet, à ſummo demùm regni Concilio capite damnatum; & pro ipſis Regiæ foribus ſecuri percuſſum. Quæ enim ullius regis alto ſolio ſedentis majeſtas unquam tanta eluxit, quanta tum Populi Anglicani effulgebat, cum excuſſâ illâ veteri ſuperſtitione, quæ diu invaluerat, ipſum regem, ſeu potiùs de rege hoſtem, qui ſolus mortalium impunitatem ſibi divino jure vendicabat, ſuis legibus irretitum judicio perfundere, & quo is quemcunque alium ſupplicio affeciſſet, eodem ſontem ipſum afficere non vereretur? Dicam enim res neque parvas neque vulgares; regem potentiſſimum, oppreſſis legibus, religione afflictâ, pro libidine regnantem, tandem à ſuo populo, qui ſervitutem longam ſervierat, bello victum; inde in cuſtodiam traditum; & cùm nullam omnino meliùs de ſe ſperandi materiam vel dictis vel factis præberet, à ſummo demùm regni Concilio capite damnatum; & pro ipſis Regiæ foribus ſecuri percuſſum. Dicam etiam, quod ad levandos magna ſuperſtitione hominum animos multum contulerit, quo jure, præſertim apud nos, judicatum hoc atque peractum ſit; meóſque cives fortiſſimos & integerrimos, déque univerſis orbis terrarum civibus ac populis egregiè meritos ab improbiſſimis maledicorum, ſive noſtratium, ſive exterorum calumniis, tum imprimis ab hujus inaniſſimi Sophiſtæ maledictis, qui pro duce & coryphæo cæterorum ſe gerit, facilè defendam. Quæ enim ullius regis alto ſolio ſedentis majeſtas unquam tanta eluxit, quanta tum Populi Anglicani effulgebat, cum excuſſâ illâ veteri ſuperſtitione, quæ diu invaluerat, ipſum regem, ſeu potiùs de rege hoſtem, qui ſolus mortalium impunitatem ſibi divino jure vendicabat, ſuis legibus irretitum judicio perfundere, & quo is quemcunque alium ſupplicio affeciſſet, eodem ſontem ipſum afficere non vereretur? At quid ego hæc tanquam populi facta prædico? quæ ipſa per ſe penè vocem edunt, & præſentem ubique teſtantur Deum. Qui, quoties ſuæ ſapientiſſimæ menti complacitum eſt, ſuperbos & effrænatos reges, ſupra humanum modum ſeſe attollentes, ſolet deturbare, & totâ ſæpe cum domo funditus evertit. Illius nos manifeſto numine ad ſalutem & libertatem propè amiſſam ſubitò erecti, illum ducem ſecuti, & impreſſa paſſim divina veſtigia venerantes, viam haud obſcuram, ſed illuſtrem, illius auſpiciis commonſtratam & patefactam ingreſſi ſumus. Hæc ego omnia dignè ſatis explicare, & quod omnes fortaſſe gentes legant atque ætates, monumentis tradere, ſi diligentiâ ſolùm meâ, cujuſmodicunque eſt, meis tantùm viribus ſperem me poſſe, fruſtra ſim. Quæ enim Oratio tam auguſta atque magnifica, quod tam excellens ingenium huic oneri ſubeundo par eſſe queat, ut cùm illuſtrium virorum aut civitatum res geſtas vix reperiatur tot ſeculis qui luculentè poſſit ſcribere, opinetur quiſquam hæc, non hominum, ſed omnipotentis planè Dei glorioſè & mirabiliter facta ullis ſe verbis aut ſtylo aſſequi poſſe? Quod quidem munus ut ſuſciperem, tametſi ſummi in republica noſtrá viri ſuâ authoritate perfecerunt, mihíque hoc negotium datum eſſe voluerunt, ut quæ illi, Deo ductore, magnâ cum gloria geſſere, ea, quod certè proximum eſt, contra invidiam & obtrectationem, quas in res ferrum & apparatus belli nihil poteſt, alio genere armorum defenderem; quorum ego quidem judicium magno mihi ornamento eſſe exiſtimo, me ſcilicet eorum ſuffragiis eum eſſe præ cæteris, qui hanc patriæ meæ fortiſſimis liberatoribus haud pœnitendam operam navarem, quin & ipſe ab ineunte adoleſcentiâ iis eram ſtudiis incenſus, quæ me ad optima quæque ſi minùs facienda, at certè laudanda incitatum ferebant. His tamen diffiſus adminiculis ad divinam opem recurro: Deúmque opt. max. donorum omnium largitorem invoco, ut quàm proſperè quámque piè noſtri illi ad libertatem clariſſimi duces regios faſtus, & dominatum impotentem acie fregerunt, dein memorabili tandem ſupplicio extinxerunt, quámque facili negotio nuper unus de multis ipſum regem veluti ab inferis reſurgentem, ínque illo libro poſt mortem edito novis argutiis, & verborum lenociniis populo ſe venditantem redarguit atque ſummovit, tam ego feliciter támque verè declamatoris hujus exotici petulantiam & mendacia refellam atque diſcutiam. Qui alienigena cùm ſit, & quamvis id millies neget, Grammaticus, non eâ ſtipe contentus quam hoc nomine meretur, magnus ardelio eſſe maluit; non reipublicæ ſolùm immiſcere ſe auſus, ſed alienæ: cum neque modeſtiam, neque judicium, neque aliud quicquam afferat, quod oporteret ſanè tantum arbitrum, præter arrogantiam & Grammaticam. Et ſanè hæc quæ jam Latinè utcunque ſcripſit, ſi inter Anglos, & noſtro Sermone protuliſſet, vix eſſet, credo, qui de reſponſo laborandum eſſe judicaret; ſed partim trita, & refutationibus jam crebris exploſa negligeret, partim tyrannica & fœda, viliſſimo quovis mancipio vix ferenda, quamvis alioqui regias ſecutus ipſe partes, averſaretur. Nunc cùm inter exteros, & noſtrarum rerum penitùs ignaros grandi paginâ turgeſcat, ſunt illi quidem qui res noſtras perperàm intelligunt, edocendi; hic ſuo more ( quandoquidem tanta maledicendi aliis libidine fertur ) ſuo inquam more ac modo erit tractandus. Quod ſiquis miretùr fortè, cur ergò tam diu intactum & ovantem, noſtróque omnium ſilentio inflatum volitare paſſi ſimus, de aliis ſanè neſcio, de me audacter poſſum dicere, non mihi verba aut argumenta, quibus cauſam tuerer tam bonam, diu quærenda aut inveſtiganda fuiſſe, ſi otium & valetudinem ( quæ quidem ſcribendi laborem ferre poſſit ) nactus eſſem. Quâ cum adhuc etiam tenui admodum utar, carptim hæc cogor, & interciſis penè ſingulis horis vix attingere, quæ continenti ſtylo atque ſtudio perſequi debuiſſem. Unde hoc ſi minùs dabitur, cives meos præſtantiſſimos, patriæ conſervatores digno laudum præconio celebrare, quorum immortalia facinora jam toto orbe claruerunt, defendere tamen, & ab hujus importuni literatoris inſolentiâ, & profeſſoriæ Linguæ intemperiis vindicare haud mihi difficile futurum ſpero. Peſſimè enim vel naturâ vel legibus comparatum foret ſi arguta ſervitus, libertas muta eſſet; & haberent tyranni qui pro ſe dicerent, non haberent qui tyrannos debellare poſſunt: Miſerum eſſet, ſi hæc ipſa ratio, quo utimur Dei munere, non multo plura ad homines conſervandos, liberandos, & quantum natura fert, inter ſe æquandos, quàm ad opprimendos & ſub unius imperio malè perdendos argumenta ſuppeditaret. Cauſam itaque pulcherrimam hac certâ fiduciâ læti aggrediamur; illinc fraudem, fallaciam, ignorantiam, atque barbariem; hinc lucem, veritatem, rationem, & ſeculorum omnium optimorum ſtudia, atque doctrinam nobiſcum ſtare.

Agè nunc jam, ſatis præfati, quoniam cum criticis res eſt, tam culti voluminis titulum imprimis videamus quid aït, Defenſio Regia pro Carolo I. ad Carolum II. Magnum ſanè præſtas, O quiſquis es! patrem defendis ad filium; mirum ni cauſam obtineas. Verùm ego te falſo aliàs ſub nomine, nunc ſub nullo latitantem, Salmaſi, ad alia voco ſubſellia, ad alios judices, ubi tu illud euge & ſophôs, quod in palæſtra tuâ literaria captare miſerè ſoles, fortaſſe non audies. Sed cur ad regem filium defenſio hæc regia? Non opus eſt tortore, confitentem habemus reum. Sumptibus inquit Regiis: O te venalem oratorem & ſumptuoſum! Siccine defenſionem pro Carolo Patre, tuâ ſententiâ, rege optimo, ad Carolum Filium Regem pauperrimum noluiſti niſi ſumptibus regiis? Sed veterator etiam haud irridiculus eſſe voluiſti, qui regiam defenſionem dixeris; non enim ampliùs tua quam vendidiſti, ſed legitimè jam regia defenſio eſt; centenis nimirum Jacobæis emta, ingenti pretio ab egentiſſimo Rege. Non enim ignota nota loquimur; novimus qui illos aureos domum attulit tuam, qui crumenam illam teſſellis vitreis variatam, novimus qui te avaras manus porrigentem vidit, in ſpeciem quidem ut Sacellanum Regis miſſum cum munere, re verâ ut ipſum munus amplectere; & unâ tantùm mercede acceptâ totum penè regis ærarium exinanires. Sed eccum ipſum, crepant fores, prodit hiſtrio in proſcenium.

Date operam & cum ſilentio animadvertite,
Ut pernoſcatis quid ſibi Eunuchus velit.

Nam quicquideſt, præter ſolitum cothurnatus incedit. Horribilis nuper nuntius aures noſtras atroci vulnere, ſed magis mentes perculit, de parricidio apud Anglos in perſonâ regis ſacrilegorum hominum nefariâ conſpiratione admiſſo. Profectò nuntius iſte horribilis aut gladium multo longiorem eo quem ſtrinxit Petrus habuerit oportet, aut aures iſtæ auritiſſimæ fuerint, quas tam longinquo vulnere perculerit: nam aures non ſtolidas ne offendiſſe quidem potuit. Ecqua enim vobis fit injuria, ecquis veſtrûm læditur, ſi nos hoſtes & perduelles noſtros, ſive plebeïos, ſive nobiles, ſive reges morte multamus? At iſta mitte, Salmaſi, quæ ad te nihil attinent: ego enim de te etiam horribilem habeo quem apportem nuntium; quíque omnium Grammaticorum & Criticorum aures, modò teretes habent & doctas, atrociori vulnere ſi non perculerit, mirabor; de parricidio apud Hollandos in perſona Ariſtarchi, nefariâ Salmaſii audaciâ admiſſo: te magnum ſcilicet Criticum ſumptibus regiis conductum, ut defenſionem Regiam ſcriberes, non ſolùm putidiſſimo exordio, præficarum funebribus nugis & næniis ſimillimo nullius, non fatui, mentem miſeratione permoviſſe, ſed primâ ſtatim clauſulâ riſum penè legentibus multiplici barbariſmo concitâſſe. Quid enim, quæſo, eſt parricidium in perſona Regis admittere? quid in perſona Regis? Quæ unquam latinitas ſic locuta eſt? niſi aliquem nobis forte Pſeudophilippum narras, qui perſonam Regis indutus, neſcio quid parricidii apud Anglos patraverit; quod verbum verius opinione tua ex ore tibi excidiſſe puto. Tyrannus enim, quaſi hiſtrionalis quidam Rex, larva tantùm & perſona Regis, non verus rex eſt. Cæterùm ob hujuſmodi noxas Gallicolatinas, quibus paſſim ſcates, non tam mihi, neque enim eſt otium, quàm ipſis tuis Grammatiſtis pœnas dabis; quibus ego te deridendum & vapulandum propino. Hoc multo atrocius; quod à ſummis magiſtratibus noſtris de rege ſtatutum eſt, id ſacrilegorum hominum nefariâ conſpiratione admiſſum aïs. Túne furcifer potentiſſimi nuper regni, nunc reipub. eo potentioris acta & conſulta ſic nominas? quorum de factis ne Rex quidem ullus ut quicquam gravius pronunciaret, aut ſcriptum ederet, adduci adhuc potuit. Meritò itaque ampliſſimi Ordines Hollandiæ, liberatorum olim patriæ vera progenies, defenſionem hanc tyrannicam, populorum omnium libertati peſtilentiſſimam edicto ſuo tenebris damnârunt; cujus & ipſum authorem omnis libera Civitas ſuis prohibere finibus, aut ejicere deberet: eáque præcipuè quæ tam ingratum támque tetrum reipub. hoſtem ſuo ſtipendio alit; cujus ille reipub. haud ſecùs atque noſtræ, fundamenta ipſa atque cauſas oppugnat; necnon utramque unâ & eâdem operâ labefactare & ſubruere conatur; præſtantiſſimóſque illic Libertatis Vindices noſtrorum ſub nomine maledictis proſcindit. Reputate jam vobiſcum Illuſtriſſimi Fœderatorum Ordines, & cum animis veſtris cogitate, quis hunc regiæ poteſtatis aſſertorem ad ſcribendum impulerit, quis nuper apud vos regiè ſe gerere incœperit, quæ conſilia, qui conatus, quæ turbæ denique per Hollandiam ſecutæ ſint, quæ nunc eſſent, quàm vobis parata ſervitus, novúſque dominus erat, atque illa veſtra tot annorum armis atque laboribus vindicata libertas, quàm propè extincta apud vos nunc foret, niſi opportuniſſimâ nuper temerarii juvenis morte reſpirâſſet. Sed pergit iſte noſter ampullari, & mirabiles tragœdias fingere, Quoſcunque infandus hic parricidialis nimirum barbariſmi Salmaſiani rumor attigit, haud ſecùs ac ſi fulmine afflati eſſent, derepente his arrectaque horrore coma & vox faucibus hæſit. Quod nunc primitùs auditum diſcant Phyſici, comas fulmine arrectas. Verùm quis hoc neſcit, viles & imbelles animos, magni cujuſpiam facinoris vel rumore obſtupeſcere; quódque priùs fuerunt, tum ſe maximè ſtipites indicare. Alii lacrymas non tenuerunt, mulierculæ credo aulicæ, aut ſiqui his molliores; inter quos & ipſe Salmaſius novâ quâdam metamorphôſi Salmacis factus eſt; & fonte hoc ſuo lacrymarum fictitio, & nocte parato viriles animos emollire conatur. Moneo itaque, & cavere jubeo

———— infamis ne quem malè fortibus undis
Salmacis enervet, — ne vir cùm venerit, exeat indè
Semivir, & tactis ſubitò molleſcat in undis.

Fortiùs verò inquit animati (nam fortes puto & animoſos ne nominare quidem niſi putidè poteſt) tantâ indignationis flammâ exarſerunt, ut vix ſe caperent. Furioſos illos non flocci facimus; verâ fortitudine ſuíque compote iſtos minaces pellere, & in fugam vertere conſuevimus. Nemo certè non diras imprecatus eſt tanti ſceleris authoribus. Vox tamen, ut tu modò aïebas, fauſibus hæſit; atque hæſiſſet utinam in hunc uſque diem, ſi de noſtris duntaxat perfugis hoc vis intelligi, quod nos etiam pro comperto habemus, nihil illis frequentius in ore eſſe, quàm diras & imprecationes omnibus bonis abominandas quidem, non tamen metuendas. De aliis credibile vix eſt, cum ſupplicii de rege ſumti fama illuc perveniſſet, repertum in libero præſertim populo fuiſſe ullum, tam ad ſervitutem natum, qui nos dicto læderet, aut factum noſtrum crimini daret; immo potius omnes bonos omnia bona dixiſſe; quinetiam Deo gratias egiſſe, qui exemplum juſtitiæ tam illuſtre & excelſum ediderit, quódque cæteris regibus tam ſalutari documento eſſe poſſit. Iſtos itaque feros ac ferreos cædem, neſcio cujus miſerabilem, ac mirabilem plorantes, cum ſuo tinnulo oratore, poſt regium in orbe nomen natum notúmque, frigidiſſimo, etiam atque etiam plorare jubemus. At quis interim è ludo ferè puer, aut è cœnobio quovis fraterculus caſum hunc regis non multo diſertiùs, immo Latiniùs hoc oratore regio declamitâſſet? Verùm ego ineptior ſim, ſi infantiam hujus & deliramenta hunc in modum toto volumine accuratè perſequar; quod tamen libens facerem (quoniam ſuperbiâ & faſtidio, ut ferunt, ſupra modum turget) ni mole tantùm libri inconcinnâ atque inconditâ ſe protegeret, & veluti miles ille Terentianus poſt principia lateret: callido ſanè conſilio, ut defeſſus ſingula notando etiam acerrimus quiſque, tædio priùs conficeretur, quàm omnia redargueret. Nunc ejus quoddam ſpecimen dare hac veluti proluſione duntaxat volui; & cordatis lectoribus à principio ſtatim deguſtandum hominem præbere, ut in hac paginæ unius promulſide experiamur quàm lautè nos & luculenter cæteris ferculis excepturus ſit; quantas ineptias atque infantias toto opere congeſſerit, qui tam denſas, ubi minimè decuit, in ipſa fronte collocavit. Exinde multa garrientem, & ſcombris concionantem facilè prætereo; ad noſtras autem res quod attinet, haud dubitamus quin ea, quæ authoritate Parlamenti ſcripta publicè & declarata ſunt, apud omnes bonos & prudentes exteros plus ponderis habitura ſint, quàm unius impudentiſſimi homuncionis calumniæ, & mendacia; qui ab exulibus noſtris, patriæ hoſtibus, prætio conductus, quolibet eorum dictante quibus operam ſuam locaverat, aut rumuſculum ſpargente, falſiſſima quæque corradere, & in chartam conjicere non dubitavit. Utque planè intelligant omnes quàm non illi religio ſit quidlibet ſcribere, verum an falſum, pium & impium, haud alius mihi teſtis adhibendus erit, quàm ipſe Salmaſius. Scribit is in Apparatu contra primatum Papæ, maximas eſſe cauſas cur Eccleſia redire ab epiſcopatu debeat ad Apoſtolicam Presbyterorum inſtitutionem; longè majus ex epiſcopatu introductum in eccleſiam eſſe malum, quàm illa ſchiſmata quæ priùs metuebantur: Peſtem illam quæ ex eo eccleſias invaſit, totum eccleſiæ corpus miſerabili tyrannide peſſundediſſe; immo ipſos reges ac principes ſub jugum miſiſſe; Majoram in eccleſiam utilitatem redundaturam Hierarchiâ totâ extinctâ, quàm ſolo capite Papâ, p. 169. Poſſe epiſcopatum cum Papatu tolli cum ſummo bono eccleſiæ; ſublato epiſcopatu ruere ipſum Papatum, ſuper illo utpote fundatum, p. 171. Cur removeri debeat, in illis regnis quæ jam Papatui renunciârunt proprias habere cauſas. Cur ibi epiſcopatus retineatur ſe non videre; non integram videri reformationem quæ hac in parte imperfecta ſit; nihil afferri poſſe rationis aut cauſæ probabilis cur ſublato Papatu retineri debeat aut poſſit epiſcopatus, p. 197. Hæc & multò plura cùm ante annos quatuor ſcripſerit, tantâ nunc vanitate & impudentiâ eſt, ut Parlamentum Angliæ graviter incuſare hoc loco audeat, quòd epiſcopatum non ſolùm ſenatu ejiciendum, ſed etiam penitùs abjiciendum cenſuerint. Quid? quòd ipſum etiam epiſcopatum ſuadet atque defendit, iiſdem uſus argumentis & rationibus, quas libro illo priore magno impetu confutaverat; neceſſarios nempe fuiſſe epiſcopos, & omnino retinendos, ne mille peſtiferæ ſectæ & hæreſes in Anglia pullularent. O vafrum & verſipellem! adeóne te etiam in ſacris non puduit deſultorem agere, propè dixeram, eccleſiam prodere; cujus tu ideò ſanctiſſima inſtituta tanto ſtrepitu aſſeruiſſe videris, ut quoties tibi commodum eſſet, eo majore cum infamia ea ipſa ludificari atque ſubvertere poſſes. Neminem hoc latet, cum regni Ordines, Eccleſiæ noſtræ, ad exemplum cæterarum, reformandæ ſtudio flagrantes, epiſcopatum funditùs tollere ſtatuiſſent, primò regem interceſſiſſe, dein bellum nobis eâ potiſſimùm cauſâ intuliſſe; quòd ipſi tandem in perniciem vertit. I nunc & te defenſorem regium eſſe gloriare, qui ut regem gnaviter defendas, ſuſceptam à temetipſo eccleſiæ cauſam nunc palàm prodis atque oppugnas: cujus graviſſima quidem cenſurâ eſſes notandus. De forma autem reipub. noſtræ, quoniam tu Profeſſor triobolaris & extraneus remotis capſulis atque ſcriniis tuis nugarum refertiſſimis, quas meliùs in ordinem redigere poteras, in aliena repub. ſatagere & odioſus eſſe mavis, ſic breviter tibi, vel cuivis potiùs te prudentiori reſpondeo; eam formam eſſe quam noſtra tempora atque diſſidia ferunt; non qualis optanda eſſet, ſed qualem obſtinata improborum civium diſcordia eſſe patitur. Quæ autem Reſpub. factionibus laborat, atque armis ſe tuetur, ſi ſanæ & integræ tantùm partis rationem habet, cæteros ſive plebeios ſive optimates præterit aut excludit, ſatis profectò æqua eſt; quamvìs regem & proceres, ſuis ipſa malis edocta, ampliùs nolit. Concilium autem illud ſupremum quòd inſectaris, atque etiam Concilii Præſidem, næ tu ridiculus es; Concilium enim illud, quod ſomnias, non eſt ſupremum, ſed Parlamenti authoritate ad certum duntaxat tempus conſtitutum, quadraginta virorum ex ſuo ferè numero, quorum quilibet cæterorum ſuffragiis præſes eſſe poteſt. Semper autem hoc uſitatiſſimum fuit, ut Parlamentum, qui noſter Senatus eſt, delectos ex ſuorum numero pauciores, quoties viſum erat, conſtituerit: iis unum in locum ubivis conveniendi, & veluti minoris cujuſdam habendi Senatûs poteſtas delata eſt. Iiſdem res ſæpe graviſſimæ, quo celeriùs & majori cum ſilentio tranſigerentur, commiſſæ atque creditæ; Claſſis, exercitus, ærarii cura aut procuratio, quævis denique pacis aut belli munia. Hoc ſive concilium nominetur, ſive quid aliud, verbo fortè novum, re antiquum eſt; & ſine quo nulla omninò Reſpub. rectè adminiſtrari poteſt. De regis autem ſupplicio, & rerum apud nos converſione mitte vociferari, mitte virus illud tuum acerbitatis evomere; donec iſta quâ lege, quo jure, quo judicio facta ſint, te licèt repugnante, ſingulis capitibus oſtendam, & pedem conferam. Si tamen inſtas quo jure, quâ lege, eâ, inquam, lege quam Deus ipſe & natura ſanxit, ut omnia quæ Reipub. ſalutaria eſſent, legitima & juſta haberentur. Sic olim ſapientes tui ſimilibus reſponderunt. Leges per tot annos ratas refixiſſe nos criminaris; bonáſne an malas non dicis, nec ſi diceres audiendus eſſes, nam noſtræ leges Ole quid ad te? Utinam plures refixiſſent tum leges tum leguleios; rectiùs ſanè & rei Chriſtianæ & populo conſuluiſſent. Frendes quòd hac, Manii, terra filii, vix domi nobiles, vix ſuis noti licere ſibi crediderint. Meminiſſes quæ te non ſolùm libri ſacri, ſed etiam Lyricus doceat.

Sic etiam habeto; eorum quos tu vix nobiles eſſe aïs, alios nulli veſtrarum partium vel generis nobilitate cedere; alios ex ſe natos per induſtriam atque virtutem ad veram nobilitatem iter affectare, & cum nobiliſſimis quibuſque poſſe conferri; ſe autem malle filios terra dici, modò ſuæ, & domi ſtrenuè facere, quam ſine terrâ & lare fumos vendendo, quod tu facis, homo nihili & ſtramineus eques, in aliena terra dominorum nutu & ſtipendio famem tolerare: ab iſta, mihi crede, peregrinatione ad agnatos potiùs & gentiles deducendus, niſi hoc unum ſaperes, quòd frivolas quaſdam prælectiones & nugamenta ſcis tantâ mercede apud exteros effutire. Reprehendis quòd magiſtratus noſtri colluviem omnium Sectarum recipiant; quid ni recipiant? quos eccleſiæ eſt è coetu fidelium ejicere, non magiſtratuum è civitate pellere; ſiquidem in leges civiles non peccant. Primò homines ut tutò ac liberè ſine vi atque injuriis vitam agerent, convenere in civitatem; ut ſanctè & religioſè, in Eccleſiam; illa leges, hæc diſciplinam habet ſuam, planè diverſam: Hinc toto orbe Chriſtiano per tot annos bellum ex bello feritur, quòd Magiſtratus & Eccleſia inter ter ſe officia confundunt. Quapropter & Papiſticam minimè toleramus; neque enim eam tam eſſe religionem intelligimus, quàm obtentu religionis tyrannidem pontificiam civilis potentiæ ſpoliis ornatam, quæ contra ipſum Chriſti inſtitutum ad ſe rapuit. Independentes, quales à te ſolo finguntur, nulli apud nos unquam viſi; præter eos duntaxat qui cùm claſſes & ſynodos ſupra Eccleſiam quamque ſingularem eſſe non agnoſcant, eas omnes velut Hierarchiæ particulas quaſdam, aut certè truncum ipſum, eradicandas eſſe tecum ſentiunt. Hinc nomen Independentium apud Vulgus obtinuit. Quod reſtat video te id agere, ut regum omnium & Monarcharum non invidiam ſolùm, ſed etiam bellum atrociſſimum in nos concites. Olim Rex Mithridates, quamvìs cauſâ diſſimili, omnes reges in Romanos concitabat, eadem propè calumniatus; Romanis conſilium eſſe, omnia regna ſubvertere, iis nulla humana neque divina obſtare, à principio nihil niſi partum armis habuiſſe, latrones, regnorum maximè hoſtes. Hæc Mithridates regi Arſaci: Te verò in iſta tua exedra infantiſſimè rhetoricantem quæ fiducia provexit, ut ad bellum hortando, & licèt nolis videri, claſſicum canendo, ullum vel inter pueros regem commovere te poſſe animum induceres, iſto præſertim ore tam exili & rancidulo, ut ne mures quidem Homericos, te buccinatore, bellum unquam ranunculis illaturos fuiſſe credam? Tantum abeſt ut metuam quid tu belli nobis aut periculi, homo ignaviſſime, apud exteros reges iſtâ tua rabidâ & inſulſâ ſimul facundiâ conflare poſſis: qui ad illos, acſi regum capita quaſi pilas habeamus, de coronis quaſi trocho ludamus, ſceptra imperialia non plures faciamus quàm bacula morionum capitata, luſoriè ſanè nos defers. At tu interea, ſtultiſſimum caput, morionis ipſe baculo digniſſimus es, qui reges ac principes tam puerilibus argumentis ad bellum ſuaderi putes. Omnes deinde populos inclamas, dicto audientes tuo, ſat ſcio, minimè futuros. Hibernorum etiam conſceleratam illam ac barbaram colluviem regiis partibus in auxilium vocas. Quod unicum indicio eſſe poteſt quàm ſceleſtus ſis & væcors, quàm omnes penè mortales impietate, audaciâ, & furore ſuperes, qui devotæ gentis fidem atque opem implorare non dubitas, cujus ab impiâ ſocietate tot civium innocentiſſimorum ſanguine perfuſâ etiam rex ipſe aut abhorruit ſemper, aut abhorrere ſe ſimulavit. Et quam ille perfidiam, quam ille crudelitatem occultare, quantum potuit, atque ab ſe longè amovere ſummo ſtudio contendit, eam tu, bipedum nequiſſime, quo minùs ultrò atque palam ſuſcipias, neque Deum neque homines vereris. Agedum; Hibernis igitur fautoribus ac ſociis ad defenſionem regis jam te accinge. Caves imprimis quod cauto mehercule opus erat, nequis te Tullio fortaſſe aut Demoſtheni omnem eloquentiæ laudem præreptum ire ſuſpicaretur; & prædicis, oratorio more non tibi agendum videri. Næ tu haud ſtultè ſapis; id quod non potes, non videtur tibi eſſe agendum; oratoriè autem ut tu ageres quis, qui te ſatìs novit, unquam exſpectavit? qui nihil elaboratè, nihil diſtinctè, nihil quod ſapiat, in lucem emittere aut ſoles aut potes; ſed veluti Criſpinus alter, aut Tzetzes ille græculus, modò ut multum ſcribas, quàm rectè non laboras; neque ſi labores, valeas. Agetur, inquis, hæc cauſa toto orbe audiente, & quaſi ad judicandum ſedente. Id adeò nobis pergratum eſt, ut adverſarium non cerebroſum & imperitum, qualis tu es, ſed cordatum & intelligentem dari jam nobis optemus. Perorans planè tragicus es, immo Ajax ipſe Lorarius: Horum ego injuſtitiam, impietatem, perfidiam, crudelitatem, proclamabo cœlo & terræ, ipſóſque authores convictos poſteris tradam, reóſque peragam. O Floſculos! Túne igitur ſine ſale, ſine genio proclamator & rabula, bonis authoribus divexandis tantùm aut tranſcribendis natus, quicquam de tuo quod vivat producere te putas poſſe? quem unà cum ſcriptis tuis futiliſſimis abreptum ætas, mihi crede, proxima oblivioni mandabit. Niſi ſi defenſio hæc regia ſuo fortaſſe reſponſo aliquid debitura eſt, ſi neglecta jam pridem & conſopita, in manus iterum ſumatur. Idque ego ab Illuſtriſſimis Hollandiæ Ordinibus peterem, ut eam è fiſco protinus dimiſſam, neque enim Theſaurus eſt, pervagari, quò velit, ſinant. Si enim quâ vanitate, inſcitiâ, falſitate referta ſit, planum omnibus fecero, quò latiùs excurrit, eo arctiùs, meâ quidem ſententiâ, ſupprimitur. Jam nos quemadmodum reos peragat, videamus.

CAP. I.

QUoniam tibi vano homini & ventoſo multum hinc forſitan ſuperbiæ, Salmaſi, multum ſpiritûs acceſſit, magnæ ſcilicet Britanniæ regem fidei defenſorem eſſe, te verò regis, ego quidem & illum regi titulum, & hunc tibi jure pari ac merito concedam: Cum ſanè rex fidem, tu regem ſic defenderis, ut cauſam uterque ſuam evertiſſe potiùs videatur. Quod cum paſſim infrà, tum hoc primo capite oſtendam. Dixeras tu quidem præfationis paginâ duodecimâ, Ornari pigmentis rhetoricis tam bonam & juſtam cauſam non debere: Nam ſimpliciter rem, ut geſta eſt, narrare, regem defendere eſt. Quando igitur toto hoc capite in quo narrationem illam ſimplicem futuram pollicitus eras, neque rem ſimpliciter, ut geſta eſt, narras, neque non pigmentis, quantum in eo genere conſequi potes rhetoricis ornas, profectò vel tuo judicio ſi ſtandum eſſet, cauſa regia neque bona neque juſta erit. Quanquam hoc cave tibi ſumas quod dat nemo, poſſe te quicquam rhetoricè narrare; qui neque oratoris, neque hiſtorici, immò ne cauſſidici quidem partes narrando ſuſtinere potes; ſed quaſi circulator quiſpiam, arte circumforaneâ, magnam de te in procemio, velut in poſterum diem, exſpectationem concitabas; non tam ut rem promiſſam tum demùm narrares, quàm ut pigmenta illa miſera, & ampullas fuco refertas lectoribus quàm plurimis divenderes. Nam de facto dicturus tot novitatum monſtris te circundari ac terreri ſentis, ut quid primum exequaris, quid deinde, quid poſtremò, neſcias. Hoccine eſt ſimpliciter narrare? Dicam quod res eſt, tot tuorum ipſe mendaciorum monſtris, primùm terreri te ſentis, deinde tot nugis, tot ineptiis leviſſimum illud caput non circundari ſolùm, ſed circumagi, ut quid primum, quid deinde, quid poſtremò dicendum ullo tempore ſit, non modò nunc neſcias, ſed nunquam antea non neſciveris. Inter difficultates quæ occurrunt ad exprimendam tam incredibilis flagitii immanitatem hoc unum facile dictu ſuppetit, quod iterum iterúmque repeti debet, nempe ſolem ipſum atrocius factum nunquam adſpexiſſe alterum. Multa ſol aſpexit, bone magiſter, quæ Bernardus non vidit. Solem autem iterum atque iterum repetas licebit, id tu quidem prudenter feceris, quod non noſtra flagitia, ſed defenſionis tuæ frigus vehementiſſimè poſtulabit. Regum, inquis, origo cum ſole novo cœpit. Dii te, Damaſippe, deæque ſolſtitio donent, quo te calfacias, qui ne pedem ſine ſole; nequis fortaſſe te umbraticum doctorem eſſe dicat. At hercle etiam in tenebris es, qui jus patrium à regio non diſtinguis: Et cùm reges Patriæ Patres nominaveris, eâ ſtatim metaphorâ perſuaſiſſe credis, ut quicquid de patre non negaverim, id continuò de rege verum eſſe concedam. Pater & rex diverſiſſima ſunt. Pater nos genuit; at non rex nos, ſed nos regem creavimus. Patrem natura dedit populo, regem ipſe populus dedit ſibi; non ergò propter regem populus, ſed propter populum rex eſt; ferimus patrem, moroſum etiam & durum, ferimus & regem; ſed ne patrem quidem ferimus tyrannum. Pater ſi filium interficit, capite pœnas dabit: Cur non item rex eâdem juſtiſſimâ lege tenebitur, ſi populum, id eſt filios ſuos, perdiderit, præſertim cum pater, ut ne pater ſit, efficere non poſſit, rex facilè poſſit, ut neque pater ſit neque rex. Quod ſi de facti qualitate, quod ais, indè eſtimandum eſt, tibi dico, peregrine, & rebus noſtris alieniſſime, teſtis oculatus & indigena tibi dico; nos regem neque bonum, neque juſtum, neque clementem, neque religioſum, neque pium, neque pacificum, ſed hoſtem prope decennalem; nec parentem patriæ, ſed vaſtatorem de medio ſuſtuliſſe. Solet hoc fieri, ſateris, inficias enim ire non audes, ſed non à reformatis, regi reformato. Siquidem reformatus is dici poteſt, qui ſcriptis ad Papam literis, Sanctiſſimum appellaverat Patrem, qui Papiſtis æquior ſemper quàm Orthodoxis fuit. Talis cùm fuerit, ne ſuæ quidem familiæ primus à reformatis eſt de medio ſublatus. Quid? ejus avia Maria nonne à reformatis exuto regno ſolum vertere coacta eſt, ſupplicio demùm capitis affecta, ne Scotis quidem reformatis ægrè ferentibus? Immo ſi operam contuliſſe dicam, haud mentiar. In tantâ autem regum reformatorum paucitate, nihil hujuſmodi accidiſſe, ut eorum aliquis morte plecteretur, non eſt quod miremur. Licere autem regem nequam, ſive tyrannum regno pellere, vel ſupplicio quovis, prout meritus erit, punire (etiam ſummorum ſententiâ Theologorum, qui ipſi reformandæ eccleſiæ authores fuere) aude tu modò negare. Concedis quàm plurimos reges non ſiccâ morte periiſſe, hunc gladio, illum veneno, alium ſqualore carceris, aut laqueo. Omnium tamen hoc tibi miſerrimum videtur, & monſtri quiddam ſimile, regem in judicium adduci, cauſam capitis dicere coactum, condemnatum, ſecuri percuſſum. Dic mihi, homo inſipientiſſime, annon humanius, annon æquius, annon ad leges omnium civitatum accomodatius eſt, cujuſcunque criminis reum in judicio ſiſtere, ſuî defendendi copiam facere, lege condemnatum ad mortem haud immeritam ducere, ità ut damnato vel pœnitendi, vel ſe colligendi ſpatium detur, quàm ſtatim ut prehenſus eſt, indictâ cauſa pecudis in modum mactare? Quotuſquiſque eſt reorum qui ſi optio detur, non illo potiùs quàm hoc modo puniri ſe maluerit? Quæ ratio igitur animadvertendi in civem moderatior eſt habita, cur non eadem in regem quoque moderatior, & vel ipſi regi acceptior fuiſſe exiſtimanda eſt? Tu ſecretò, & ſine arbitris extinctum regem malebas, vel ut exempli tam boni ſalubritate omnis memoria careret, vel ut facti tam præclari conſcientia defugiſſe lucem, aut leges atque ipſam juſtitiam minimè ſibi amicam habuiſſe videretur. Exaggeras deinde rem, quòd neque per tumultum aut factionem optimatium, aut rebellium furorem, ſive militum ſive populi; non odio, non metu, non ſtudio dominandi, non cæco animi impetu, ſed conſilio & ratione meditatum diu facinus peregerint. O meritò quidem te ex juriſconſulto Grammaticum! qui ab accidentibus cauſæ, ut loquuntur, quæ per ſe nihil valent, vituperationes inſtituis, cum nondum docueris illud facinus in vitio an in laude ponendum ſit? Jam vide quàm in te facilè incurram. Si pulchrum & decorum fuit, eò magis laudandi quod nullis affectibus occupati, ſolius honeſtatis causâ fecerint; ſi arduum & grave, quòd non cæco impetu, ſed conſilio & ratione. Quanquam ego hæc divino potiùs inſtinctu geſta eſſe crediderim; quoties memoriâ repeto; quàm inopinato animorum ardore, quanto conſenſu totius exercitus, cui magna pars populi ſe adjunxerat, ab omnibus penè regni provinciis unâ voce regem ipſum ſuorum omnium malorum authorem ad ſupplicium depoſcebat. Quicquid erat, ſive magiſtratum ſive populum ſpectes, nulli unquam excelſiore animo, &, quod etiam adverſarii fatentur, ſedatiore, tam egregium facinus & vel heroïcis ætatibus dignum aggreſſi ſunt: Quo non leges tantùm & judicia, dehinc mortalibus ex æquo reſtituta, ſed ipſam juſtitiam nobilitarunt, ſéque ipsâ illuſtriorem dehinc, ſéque ipsâ majorem poſt hoc inſigne judicium reddidere. Jam tertiam prope hujus capitis paginam exantlavimus, nec tamen illa ſimplex narratio, quam promiſit, uſquam apparet. Queritur nos docere, quoties rex moleſtè & odiosè regnat, impunè poſſe regno exui: Ab hac, inquit, doctrina inducti, ſi mille rebus meliorem regem habuiſſent, non ei vitam conſervâſſent. Spectate hominis acumen; nam iſtuc aveo ex te ſcire, quo pacto hoc ſequitur, niſi tu nobis conceſſeris, noſtro rege mille rebus meliorem moleſtè & odiosè regnare; unde in eum deductus es locum, ut hunc quem defendis, iis regibus qui moleſtè & odiosè regnant mille rebus deteriorem facias; id eſt tyrannorum omnium fortaſſe immaniſſimum. Macti eſtote reges tam ſtrenuo defenſore. Nunc narrare incipit. Torſerunt eum variis crucibus. Dic quibus. De carcere in carcerem traduxerunt. Nec injuriâ, quippe ex tyranno hoſtem bello captum. Cuſtodiis ſapè mutatis: Ne ipſæ mutarent fidem. Libertatis interdum ſpe oſtensâ, interdum & reſtitutionis per pactionem. Vide quàm non antea meditatum nobis fuerit, quàm non tempora & modos diu captavimus regis abdicandi. Quas res ab eo tum propemodùm victore multo antè poſtulavimus, quæ niſi concederentur, nulla libertas, nulla ſalus populo ſperanda erat, eaſdem à captivo ſuppliciter, haud ſemel, immò ter & amplius petivimus; toties repulſam accepimus. Cum nulla de rege ſpes reliqua eſſet, fit Parlamenti conſultum illud nobile, nequa deinceps ad regem poſtulata mitterentur; non ex quo is tyrannus eſſe, ſed ex quo inſanabilis eſſe coepit. Poſtea tamen quidam ex Senatorum numero nova ſibi conſilia capientes, & idoneum tempus nacti, conditiones iterum regi ferendas decernunt; pari ſanè ſcelere atq; dementiâ ac Romanus olim Senatus, reclamante Marco Tullio & cum eo bonis omnibus, legatos decrevit ad Antonium: pari etiam eventu, niſi Deo immortali viſum aliter fuiſſet, illos in ſervitutem tradere, nos in libertatem vindicare. Nam cùm rex nihilo plus quàm antea conceſſiſſet, quod ad firmam pacem & compoſitionem reverâ ſpectaret, illi tamen ſatisfactum ſibi à Rege eſſe ſtatuunt. Pars itaque ſanior, cùm ſe rémque publicam prodi videret, fidem fortiſſimi, & ſemper reipub. fidiſſimi exercitûs implorat. In quo mihi quidem hoc ſolum occurrit quod nolim dicere, noſtras legiones rectiora ſenſiſſe quàm patres conſcriptos: Et ſalutem reipub. armis attuliſſe, quam illi ſuis ſuffragiis propè damnaverant. Multa deinde flebiliter narrat, verùm tam inſcitè, ut luctum emendicare, non commovere videatur. Dolet, quód eo modo, quo nullus unquam, rex ſupplicium capitis paſſus ſit : Cùm ſæpius affirmaverit, nullum unquam regem ſupplicium capitis omnino eſſe paſſum. Túne, fatue, modum cum modo conferre ſoles, ubi factum cum facto quod conferas non habes? Supplicium, inquit, capitis paſſus eſt, ut latro, ut ſicarius, ut parricida, ut proditor, ut tyrannus. Hoccine eſt regem defendere, an ſententiam de rege ferre, eâ ſanè quæ à nobis lata eſt, multò ſeveriorem? Quis te tam ſubitò pellexit ut nobiſcum pronuntiares? Queritur perſonatos carnifices regi caput amputâſſe. Quid hoc homine facias? queſtus eſt ſuprà de parricidio in perſona regis admiſſo, nunc in perſona carnificis admiſſum queritur. Quid reliqua percurram, partim falſiſſima, partim frivola de pugnis & calcibus militum gregariorum, & licentiâ ſpectandi cadaveris quatuor ſolidis taxatâ, quæ frigidiſſimi literatoris inſcitiam & puſillitatem animi clamitant; legentem certè neminem pilo triſtiorem reddere poſſunt: Satius mehercule fuiſſet Carolo filio, quemvis ex eo balatronum grege conduxiſſe, qui ad coronam in triviis elegidia cantant, quàm oratorem hunc, luctificabilem dicam, an perridiculum deplorando patris infortunio adhibuiſſe; tam inſipidum & inſulſum, ut ne ex lacrymis quidem ejus mica ſalis exiguiſſima poſſit exprimi. Narrare jam deſiit; & quid deinde agat, dictu ſanè difficile eſt; adeò lutulentus & enormis fluit; nunc fremit, nunc oſcitat, nullum quidlibet garriendi modum ſibi ſtatuit, vel decies eadem repetendi, quæ ne ſemel quidem dicta non ſordeſcerent. Et certè neſcio, an blateronis cujuſpiam extemporales quælibet nugæ, quas ille uno pede ſtans verſiculis fortè effuderit, non digniores multo ſint quæ chartâ illinantur; adeò indigniſſimas eſſe reor quibus ſeriò reſpondeatur. Prætereo quòd regem religionis protectorem laudat, qui eccleſiæ bellum intulit, ut epiſcopos religionis hoſtes & tyrannos in eccleſia retineret. Puritatem autem religionis quî potuit is conſervare, ab impuriſſimis epiſcoporum traditionibus & cæremoniis ipſe ſub jugum miſſus? Sectarum verò, quibus tu ſacrilegos ſuos cœtus tenendi licentiam aïs dari, quam ipſa Hollandia non dat, errores velim enumeres: Interim nemo te magis ſacrilegus, qui perpetuò maledicendi peſſimam omnium licentiam tibi ſumis. Non poterant gravius rempubl. lædere quàm ejus dominum tollendo. Diſce verna, diſce maſtigia, niſi dominum tollis, tollis rempublicam: Privata res eſt, non publica quæ dominum habet. At paſtores facinus eorum abominantes cum ſumma injuſtitiâ perſequuntur. Paſtores illos nequis fortè neſciat quales ſint, breviter dicam; iidem ſunt qui regi reſiſtendum armis eſſe, & verbo & ſcriptis docuerunt; qui omnes tanquam Merozum indeſinenter execrari non deſtiterunt, quotquot huic bello aut arma, aut pecuniam, aut vires non ſuppeditâſſent; quod illi non contra regem, ſed contra tyrannum Saule quovis aut Achabo, immo Nerone ipſo Neroniorem ſuſceptum eſſe in concionibus ſacris vaticinabantur. Sublatis epiſcopis & ſacerdotibus quos Plurialiſtarum & non reſidentium nomine inſectari vehementiſſimè ſolebant, in eorum ampliſſima ſacerdotia, hic bina, ille trina, quàm ocyſſimè irruebant: Unde ſuos greges quàm turpiter negligant paſtores iſti meritò egregii nemo non videt. Nullus pudor, nulla numinis reverentia dementes cupiditate & furiatos cohibere potuit, donec peſſimo eccleſiæ publico eâdem ipſi infamiâ flagrarent, quam paulò antè ſacerdotibus inuſſerant. Nunc quòd avaritia eorum nondum ſatiata eſt, quòd, inquies ambitione animus turbas concire, pacem odiſſe conſuevit, in Magiſtratus qui nunc ſunt, id quod priùs in regem fecerant, ſeditioſè concionari non deſinunt; regem ſcilicet pium crudeliter ſublatum; quem modò ipſi diris omnibus devotum, omni authoritate regiâ ſpoliandum, & bello ſacro perſequendum, in manus Parlamento, quaſi divinitùs, tradiderant; ſectas ſcilicet non exſtirpari, quod certè à magiſtratibus poſtulare perabſurdum eſt, qui avaritiam & ambitionem, quæ duæ in eccleſia hæreſes pernicioſiſſimæ ſunt, ex ipſorum ordine paſtorum ac tribu, nullo adhuc modo aut ratione exſtirpare valuerunt. Quas illi ſectas apud nos inſectantur, obſcuras eſſe ſcio, quas ipſi ſequuntur, famoſas, & eccleſiæ Dei longè pericoloſiores; quarum principes Simon ille Magus & Diotrephes fuere. Hos tamen, nequiſſimi cùm ſint, adeò non perſequimur, ut factioſis, & res novas quotidie molientibus nimiùm indulgeamus. Offendit jam te Gallum & errabundum, quod Angli ſuis moloſſis, quæ tua canina facundia eſt, ferociores, nullam legitimi ſucceſſoris & heredis regni, nullam natu minimi, nullam reginæ Bohemiæ rationem habuerint. Tute reſpondebis tibi, non ego. Ubi reipub. forma mutatur ex monarchicâ in aliam, non datur ſucceſſio inter differentis regiminis curatores.

Apparat. de primatu. Minima, inquis, regni unius pars hæc omnia per tria regna effecit: & digni quidem, ſi hoc verum eſſet, quibus in cæteros imperium ſit, viris in fœminas. Iſti ſunt qui regimen regni antiquum in alium qui à pluribus tyrannis teneatur, mutare præſumpſerunt; rectè quidem illi & feliciter, quos tu reprehendere non potes, quin ſimul fœdiſſimè barbarus & ſolœcus ſis, non moribus ſolùm, ſed ſyntaxi etiam, grammaticorum opprobrium. Angli maculam hanc nunquam deleverint. Immò tu, licèt omnium literatorum litura ipſe ſis, & verè macula, Anglorum tamen famam & ſempiternam gloriam nunquam valueris commaculare. Qui tantâ animi magnitudine, quantâ omni memoriâ vix audita eſt, non hoſtes tantùm armatos, ſed hoſtiles intùs, id eſt ſuperſtitioſas vulgi opiniones eluctati atque ſupergreſſi, Liberatorum cognomen poſthac per omnes gentes in commune ſibi pepererunt: populariter id auſi, quod apud alias nationes heroïcæ tantùm virtutis eſſe exiſtimatur. Reformati & antiqui chriſtiani quid hac in parte fecerint, aut facturi eſſent, tum reſpondebimus, cùm de jure tecum ſuo loco agetur; ne tuo vitio laboremus, qui gerrones omnes & Battos loquacitate vincis. Quæris quid ſis in noſtra causâ Jeſuitis reſponſurus. Tuas res age transfuga, pudeat te facinorum tuorum, quando eccleſiam tuî pudet; qui primatum Papæ, & epiſcopos tam jactanter modò & ferociter adortus, nunc epiſcoporum aſſecla factus es. Fateris aliquos reformatorum, quos non nominas (ego tamen nominabo, quoniam tu eos Jeſuitis longè pejores eſſe aïs, Lutherum nempe, Zuinglium, Calvinum, Bucerum, Paræum cum aliis multis) docuiſſe, amovendum eſſe tyrannum: Quis autem ſit tyrannus ad judicium ſapientium & doctorum ſe retuliſſe? Iſti vero qui? an ſapientes, an docti, an virtute nobiles, an nobilitate illuſtres. Liceat, quæſo, populo, qui ſervitutis jugum in cervicibus grave ſentit, tam ſapienti eſſe, tam docto, támque nobili, ut ſciat quid tyranno ſuo faciendum ſit, etiamſi neque exteros, neque grammaticos ſciſcitatum mittat. Tyrannum autem fuiſſe hunc non Angliæ ſolùm & Scotiæ Parlamenta cùm verbis tum factis diſertiſſimis declaraverunt, ſed totus ferè utriuſque regni populus aſſentitus eſt; donec epiſcoporum technis & fraudibus in duas poſtea factiones diſceſſit. Quid ſi Deus, quemadmodum eos qui lucis evangelicæ participes fiant, ità eos qui decreta ejus in reges hujus mundi potentiſſimos exequantur, non multos ſapientes aut doctos, non multos potentes, non multos nobiles eſſe voluit? Ut per eos qui non ſunt aboleret eos qui ſunt; ut ne glorietur caro coram eo. Tu quis es qui oblatras? An doctus? Qui ſpicilegia, qui lexica & gloſſaria ad ſenectutem uſque triviſſe potiùs videris, quàm authores bonos cum judicio aut fructu perlegiſſe? Unde nîl præter codices, & varias lectiones, & luxatum & mendoſum, crepas; doctrinæ ſolidioris ne guttulam quidem hauſiſſe te oſtendis. An tu ſapiens? Qui de minutiis minutiſſimis rixari & mendicorum bella gerere ſoles, qui nunc aſtronomis, nunc medicis in ſua arte credendis imperitus ipſe & rudis convitia dicis; qui, ſiquis tibi voculæ unius aut literulæ in exemplari quovis abs te reſtitutæ gloriolam præripere conaretur, igni & aquâ, ſi poſſes, illi interdiceres? Et tamen ſtomacharis, & tamen ringeris, quòd omnes te Grammaticum appellant. Hamondum nuper regis hujus Sacellanum imprimis dilectiſſimum in libro quodam nugatorio nebulonem palàm appellas, quòd is te grammaticum appellaviſſet: Idem, credo, eſſes ipſi regi convitium facturus, & defenſionem hanc totam retractaturus, ſi Sacellani ſui de te judicium approbâſſe audiviſſes. Jam vide quàm te Anglorum unus, quos tu fanaticos, indoctos, obſcuros, improbos vocitare audes, contemnam & ludibrio habeam (nam nationem ipſam Anglicanam de te quicquam publicè cogitare curculiunculo, indigniſſimum eſſet) qui ſursùm, deorsùm, quoquoversùm verſatus & volutatus, nihil niſi grammaticus es: Immo ac ſi deo cuilibet votum ipſo Mida ſtultius nuncupâſſes, quicquid attrectas, niſi cùm ſolœciſmos facis, Grammatica eſt. Quiſquis igitur de fæce illa plebis, quam tu exagitas (illos enim verè optimates noſtros, quorum ſapientiam, virtutem, & nobilitatem facta inclyta ſatis teſtantur, non ſic dehoneſtabo, ut te illis, aut tibi illos componere velim) quiſquis, inquam, de fæce illa plebis hoc tantummodò ſibi perſuaſerit, non eſſe ſe regibus natum, ſed deo & patriæ, multò ſanè te doctior, multò ſapientior, multo probior, & ad omnem vitam utilior exiſtimandus erit. Nam doctus ille ſine literis, tu literatus ſine doctrina; qui tot linguas calles, tot volumina percurris, tot ſcribis, & tamen pecus es.

CAP. II.

QUod argumentum pro ſe indubitatum eſſe, ſuperiore capite perorans dixerat Salmaſius, rem ità ſe habere ut creditur, cùm omnes unanimiter idem de eâ ſentiant; quod tamen is de facto falſiſſimè affirmabat, id ego nunc, de jure regio diſceptaturus, potero in ipſum veriſſimè affirmare. Cùm enim regem definiat, cujus ſuprema eſt in regno poteſtas, nulli alii niſi deo obnoxia, cui quod libet licet, qui legibus ſolutus eſt, ſiquidem id definiri dicendum eſt, quod infinitum in terris ponitur, evincam ego contrà, non meis tantùm, ſed vel ipſius teſtimoniis, & rationibus, nullam gentem aut populum, qui quidem ullo numero ſit, nam omnem penetrare barbariem neceſſe non eſt; nullam, inquam, gentem iſtiuſmodi jura aut poteſtatem regi conceſſiſſe, ut legibus ſolutus eſſet, ut quod libet liceret, ut omnes judicaret, à nemine judicaretur; nec verò ullum cujuſcunque gentis tam ſervili ingenio exſtitiſſe puto, præter unum Salmaſium, qui tyrannorum immania quæque flagitia regum jura eſſe aſſeverârit. Eorum plerique apud nos, qui regi maximè favebant, ab hac tam turpi ſententiâ ſemper abhorruere, quinetiam ipſe, nondum pretio corruptus, his de rebus longè aliter ſenſiſſe aliis jampridem ſcriptis facilè deprehenditur. Adeò ut hæc non ab homine libero in libera civitate, nedùm in Repub. nobiliſſimâ, & Batavorum Academiâ celeberrimâ, ſed in ergaſtulo quovis aut cataſtâ, tam ſervili vernilitate ſcripta eſſe videantur. Etenim, ſi quicquid regi libet, id jure regio licitum erit, quod teterrimus ille Antoninus Caracalla ab Juliâ novercâ per inceſtum edoctus non ſtatim auſus eſt credere, nemo profectò eſt aut unquam fuit, qui tyrannus dici debeat. Cùm enim divina omnia atque humana jura violavit, nihilo tamen minùs rex, jure regio inſons erit. Quid enim peccavit homo æquiſſimus? Jure ſuo uſus eſt in ſuos. Nihil rex tam horrendum, tam crudele, támque furioſum committere in ſuos poteſt, quod præter jus regium fieri quiſpiam poſſit queri aut expoſtulare. Hoc tu jus regium à jure gentium, vel potiùs naturali originem habere ſtatuis, bellua? Quid enim hominem te dicam, qui in omne hominum genus, adeò iniquus & inhumanus es? quíque omnem gentem humanam deo ſimillimam ſic deprimere atque projicere conaris, ut quos nunc ſuperſtitio, nunc ſcelus aut ignavia quorundam, aut denique perfidia tam feros atque immites dominos gentibus impoſuit, eos à natura matre mitiſſimâ comparatos atque impoſitos eſſe doceas? Quâ tu nefariâ doctrinâ multo jam ferociores factos, non ſolùm ad proterendos omnes mortales, & poſthac miſeriorem in modum conculcandos immittis, ſed jure naturali, jure regio, ipſis etiam populi legibus in populum armare, quo nihil ſimul ſtultius & ſceleratius eſſe poteſt, contendis. Dignus profectò qui contra atque olim Dionyſius ex grammatico tyrannus ipſe ſis; non quo tibi in alium quemvis detur illa regia licentia malè faciendi, ſed illa altera malè pereundi: Quâ ſolâ, ut incluſus ille Capreis Tiberius, à temetipſo perditus quotidie te ſentias perire. Verùm jus illud regium paulò accuratiùs quale ſit conſideremus. Sic Oriens totus, inquis, judicavit ſic Occidens. Non reponam tibi quod Ariſtoteles & Marcus Cicero, authores, ſi qui alii, cordatiſſimi, ille in Politicis, hic in oratione de Provinciis ſcripſit, Gentes Aſiaticas facilè ſervitutem pati, Judæos autem & Syros ſervituti natos fuiſſe. Fateor paucos ferè libertatem velle, aut eâ poſſe uti, ſolos nempe ſapientes, & magnanimos; pars longè maxima juſtos dominos mavult, ſed tamen juſtos; injuſtos & intolerabiles ferendi neque Deus unquam univerſò generi humano tam infenſus fuit, neque ullus unquam populus tam ab omni ſpe & conſilio derelictus, ut neceſſitatem hanc atque legem omnium duriſſimam in ſe atque in ſuos liberos ultro ſtatueret. Profers imprimis verba regis in Eccleſiaſte ſapientiâ clari. Nos itaque ad legem Dei provocamus, de rege poſteriùs videbimus; cujus exinde ſententiam rectiùs intelligemus. Audiatur ipſe Deus, Deut. 17. Cùm ingreſſus fueris in terram, quam Jehova Deus dat tibi, & dices ſtatuam ſuper me Regem ſicut omnes gentes quæ ſunt circa me: Quod ego omnes velim etiam atque etiam animadvertant, teſte hìc ipſo Deo, penes populos omnes ac nationes arbitrium ſemper fuiſſe, vel eâ, quæ placeret, formâ reipub. utendi, vel hanc in aliam mutandi: De Hebræis diſertè hoc dicit Deus, de reliquis haud abnuit: deinde formam reipub. monarchiâ perfectiorem, ut ſunt res humanæ, ſuíque populi magis ex uſu deo viſam eſſe: Cum hanc ipſe formam inſtituerit; monarchiam non niſi ſerò petentibus, bus, ídque ægrè concederet. Sin regem planè vellent, ut oſtenderet Deus id ſe liberum Populo reliquiſſe, ab uno an à pluribus reſpub. adminiſtraretur, modò juſtè, regi etiam futuro leges conſtituit, quibus cautum erat, ut ne multiplicet ſibi equos, ne uxores, ne divitias; ut intelligeret nihil ſibi in alios licere, qui nihil de ſe ſtatuere extra legem potuit. Juſſus itaque eſt omnia legis illius præcepta, etiam ſuâ manu perſcribere; perſcripta obſervare; ne efferatur animus ejus præ fratribus ſuis. Ex quo perſpicuum eſt, regem æquè ac populum iſtis legibus aſtrictum fuiſſe. In hanc ferme ſententiam ſcripſit Joſephus, legum ſuæ gentis interpres idoneus, in ſuâ repub. verſatiſſimus, mille aliis tenebrionibus Rabbinis anteponendus. Antiquat. lib. 4. Αριστοκρατία μὲν οὖν κράτιστον, &c. Optimum eſt, inquit, optimatum regimen; nec vos alium reipub. ſtatum requiratis; ſatis enim eſt Deum habere præſidem. Attamen ſi tanta vos regis cupido ceperit, plus legibus & Deo tribuat is quàm ſuæ ſapientiæ; prohibeatur autem, ſi potentior fieri ſtudet, quam rebus veſtris expedit. Hæc & plura Joſephus in iſtum Deuteronomii locum. Alter Philo Judæus, gravis authòr, Joſephi coætaneus, legis Moſaïcæ ſtudioſiſſimus, in quam univerſam diffuſâ commentatione ſcripſit, cum in libro de creatione Principis hoc caput legis interpretatur, non alio pacto regem legibus ſolvit, atque hoſtis quilibet ſolutus legibus dici poſſit, τοὺς ἐπὶ λύμῃ καὶ ζημίᾳ τῶν ὑπηκόων, &c. qui, inquit, ad perniciem & detrimentum populi magnam ſibi acquirunt potentiam, non reges ſed hoſtes appellandi ſunt; ea facientes, quæ hoſtes nullâ pace reconciliandi faciunt; nam qui per ſpeciem gubernandi faciunt injuriam, apertis hoſtibus pejores ſunt; hos enim facile eſt propulſare, illorum autem malitia haud facile detegitur. Detecti igitur quid obſtat quo minùs hoſtium loco habendi ſint? Sic libro ſecundo Allegoriarum Legis, rex & tyrannus contraria ſunt; & deinde rex non imperat tantùm, ſed paret. Vera ſunt iſta, dicet aliquis; regem oportet quidem leges, ut qui maximè, obſervare; verùm ſi ſecùs fecerit, quâ lege puniendus? eâdem, inquam, lege quâ cæteri; exceptiones enim nullas reperio. Sed nec de Sacerdotibus, ſed nec de infimis quidem magiſtratibus puniendis lex ulla ſcribitur; qui omnes, cùm de iis puniendis nulla lex ſcripta ſit, pari certè jure & ratione poſſent impunitatem ſcelerum omnium ſibi vendicare; quam tamen neque eorum quiſquam vendicavit, neque ullum iis arbitror idcirco eſſe daturum. Hactenus ex ipſa Dei lege didicimus regem legibus obtemperare debuiſſe; nec ſe præ cæteris efferre, qui etiam fratres ejus ſunt. Nunc an quid aliud Eccleſiaſtes moneat videamus. Cap. 8. ver. 1, &c. Mandatum regis obſerva; vel propter juramentum Dei, ne perturbatè à facie ejus abito, ne perſiſtito in re malâ, nam quicquid volet faciet. Ubi verbum regis, ibi dominatio, & quis dicat ei quid facis? Satis conſtat Eccleſiaſten hoc in loco non ſynedrio magno, non ſenatui, ſed privato cuique præcepta dare. Jubet mandata ſua obſervare, vel propter juramentum Dei; at quis jurat regi, niſi rex viciſſim in leges divinas atque patrias juratus ſit? Sic Reubenitæ & Gaditæ obedientiam ſuam Jehoſuæ pollicentur, Joſ. 1. Ut dicto audientes Moſi fuimus, ità erimus tibi, modò ut Deus tecum ſit, quemadmodum fuit cum Moſe. Conditionem vides expreſſam; Alioquin ipſum audi Eccleſiaſten, cap. 9. Verba ſapientum ſubmiſſâ potiùs audienda eſſe, quam clamorem dominantis inter ſtolidos. Quid porrò monet? Ne perſiſtito in re malâ, nam quicquid volet faciet, in malos nimirum faciet authoritate legum armatus, nam leniter aut ſeverè agere, prout volet, poteſt. Nihil hìc tyrannicum ſonat, nihil quod vir bonus extimeſcat. Ubi verbum regis ibi dominatio, & quis dicat ei quid facis? Et tamen legimus qui regi dixerit non ſolùm quid feciſti, ſed etiam ſtultè feciſti, 1 Sam. 13. At Samuel extraordinarius. Tuum tibi regero, licèt infrà dictum pag. 49. quid, inquis, extraordinarium in Saule & Davide? itidem ego, quid, inquam, in Samuele? Propheta fuit: ſunt & illi hodie, qui ejus exemplo faciunt; ex voluntate enim Dei vel expreſſâ vel tacitâ agunt: quod etiam ipſe infrà concedis, pag. 50. Prudenter igitur Eccleſiaſtes hoc in loco monet privatos, ne cum rege contendant: nam etiam cum divite, cum potenti quovis, ut plurimùm, damnoſa contentio eſt. Quid ergò? an optimates, an omnes reliqui magiſtratus, an populus univerſus quoties delirare libet regi, ne hiſcere quidem audebunt? an ſtolido, impio, furenti, bonis omnibus perniciem machinanti non obſtabunt, non obviam ibunt, ne divina omnia atque humana pervertere occupet, ne rapinis, ne incendiis, ne cædibus per omnes regni fines graſſetur ita legibus ſolutus, ut quod libet liceat? O de Cappadocis eques cataſtis! quem omnis libera natio (ſi unquam poſt hoc in natione libera pedem ponere audebis) aut in ultimas terras veluti portentum exportandum ejicere, aut ſervitutis candidatum dedere in piſtrinum debebit, eâ lege atque omine, ut ſi te inde exemerit, ipſa ſub aliquo tyranno, eóque ſtultiſſimo, pro te molat.. Quid enim poterit dici, aut ab aliis dictum peti tam truculentum, aut ridiculum, quod in te non cadat? Perge modò: Iſraëlitæ regem à Deo petentes eodem jure ſe ab eo gubernari velle dixerunt, quo omnes aliæ nationes, quæ hoc regimine uterentur. At Orientis reges ſummo jure, & poteſtatē non circumſcriptâ regnabant, teſte Virgilio.

> —— Regem non ſic Ægyptus & ingens
> Lydia, nec populi Parthorum, & Medus Hydaſpes
> Obſervant.——

Primùm quid noſtrâ refert qualem ſibi regem Iſraëlitæ voluerint, præſertim Deo irato, non ſolùm quòd regem vellent ad exemplum gentium, & non ſuæ legis, ſed planè quòd vellent regem? Deinde regem injuſtum, aut legibus ſolutum petiviſſe credibile non eſt, qui Samuëlis filios legibus obſtrictos ferre non potuerunt, & ab eorum tantùm avaritia ad regem confugerunt. Poſtremò quod ex Virgilio recitas, non probat reges Orientis abſolutâ poteſtate regnâſſe; Apes enim illæ Virgilianæ, quæ vel Ægyptiis & Medis obſervantiores regum ſunt, teſte tamen eodem Poëta —— Magnis agitant ſub legibus ævum. —— Non ergò ſub regibus omni lege ſolutis. At vide quàm tibi minimè velim malè; cum plerique te nebulonem eſſe judicent, oſtendam te perſonam tantùm nebulonis mutuam ſumpſiſſe. In Apparatu ad primatum Papæ doctores quoſdam Tridentinos exemplo Apium uſos aïs, ut monarchiam Papæ probarent: ab his tu pari malitiâ hoc mutuum cepiſti. Quod illis itaque reſpondiſti cùm probus eſſes, jam factus nebulo tute reſpondebis tibi, tuáque tibi manu perſonam nebulonis detrahes. Apium reſpub. eſt; atque ità Phyſici appellant: Regem habent, ſed innocuum; ductor eſt potiùs quàm tyrannus, non verberat, non vellicat, non necat apes ſubditas. Minimè igitur mirum, ſi ità obſervant. Iſtas mehercule apes mala ave tibi tactio erat; Tridentinæ enim licèt ſint, fucum te eſſe indicant. Ariſtoteles autem, rerum politicarum ſcriptor diligentiſſimus, monarchiæ genus Aſiaticæ, quod & barbaricum vocat, κατὰ νόμον, id eſt, ſecundùm legem fuiſſe affirmat. Pol. 3. immo cum monarchiæ quinque ſpecies enumeret, quatuor ſecundùm legem, & ſuffragante populo fuiſſe ſcribit, tyrannicas autem, quòd iis tanta poteſtas, volente licèt populo, data erat; regnùm verò Laconicum maximè regnum videri, quòd non omnia penès regem erant. Quinta, quam is παμβασιλειαν vocat, & ad quam ſolam id refert quod tu regum omnium jus eſſe ſcribis, ut ad libitum regnent, ubinam gentium, aut quo tempore unquam obtinuerit non dicit: nec aliam ob cauſſam feciſſe mentionem ejus videtur, quàm ut abſurdam, injuſtam, & maximè tyrannicam eſſe demonſtraret. Samuelem aïs, cùm eos ab eligendo rege deterreret, jus illis regium expoſuiſſe. Unde hauſtum, à lege Dei? at illa lex jus regium, ut vidimus, longe aliud exhibuit: an ab ipſo Deo per Samuelem loquente? at improbavit, vituperavit, vitio dedit: non igitur jus regium divinitùs datum, ſed morem regnandi praviſſimum, ſuperbiâ regum & dominandi libidine arreptum expoſuit propheta; nec quid debebant reges, ſed quid volebant facere; rationem enim regis populo indicavit, ſicut antea rationem ſacerdotum Eliadarum eodem verbo (quod tu p. 33. Hebraïco etiam ſolœciſmo משפת vocas) ſuprà indicaverat. C. 2. ratio ſacerdotum iſtorum cum populo hæc erat, v. 13. impia videlicet, odioſa, & tyrannica: ratio itaque illa nequaquam jus erat ſed injuria. Sic etiam patres antiqui hunc locum expoſuerunt; unus mihi erit multorum inſtar, Sulpitius Severus, Hieronymi æqualis, eíque charus, & Auguſtini judicio vir doctrinâ & ſapientiâ pollens. Is in hiſtoria ſacra Samuelem aït dominationem regiam, & ſuperba imperia populo exponere. Sanè jus regium non eſt dominatio & ſuperbia; ſed jus atque imperium regium, teſte Salluſtio, conſervandæ libertatis atque augendæ reipub. cauſſâ datum, in ſuperbiam dominationémque ſe convertit. Idem Theologi omnes Orthodoxi, idem juriſconſulti, idem rabbini plerique, ut ex Sichardo didiciſſe potuiſti, de explicatione hujus loci ſentiunt; ne Rabbinorum enim quiſquam jus regis abſolutum iſto loco tractari dixit. Ipſe infrà cap. 5. pag. 106. non Alexandrinum Clementem ſolùm, ſed omnes hic quereris errare, te unum ex omnibus rem acu tetigiſſe: Jam verò cujus vel impudentiæ eſt vel ſocordiæ, contra tra omnes, præſertim orthodoxos, mores regum ab ipſo Deo damnatiſſimos in jus regium convertere; & honeſtâ juris præſcriptione defendere: cum jus tamen illud in rapinis, injuriis, violentiis, contumeliis ſæpiùs conſiſtere fatearis. An quiſquam ſic ſui juris unquam fuit, ut rapere, agere, proſternere, permiſcere omnia ſibi liceret? an Latini, quod affirmas, hæc ſuo jure ab aliquo fieri unquam dixerunt? Dixerat apud Salluſtium C. Memmius tribunus Plebis, in ſuperbiam & impunita flagitia nobilitatis invectus, impune qualibet facere, id eſt, regem eſſe; Arriſit hoc tibi, & ſtatim in lucro ponis, nequicquam ſanè, ſi paulùm evigilaveris. An jus hic regium aſſeruit? annon plebis ignaviam potiùs increpuit, quæ nobiles impunè dominari ſineret, eóſque mores regios jam rurſus pateretur, quos jure ſuo majores illorum cum rege ipſo finibus expulerant. Marcum Tullium ſaltem conſuluiſſes; is te & Salluſtium, & Samuelem etiam rectiùs interpretari docuiſſet. Qui pro C. Rabirio nemo, inquit, noſtrûm ignorat conſuetudinem regiam; regum ſunt hæc imperia, animadverte & dicto pare; aliáque hujuſmodi ex Poëtis ibidem recitat, quæ non jus, ſed conſuetudinem regiam vocat, eáque legere & ſpectare nos aït debere, non ut delectemur ſolùm, ſed ut cavere etiam & effugere diſcamus. Vides quàm te malè multaverit Salluſtius, quem tyrannis inimiciſſimum, juris tyrannici patronum attuliſſe te putabas. Nutare, mihi crede, & ſuum ſibi occaſum accelerare jus regium videtur, dum ruentis in modum tenuiſſima quæque ſic arripit, ſéque ſuſtinere iis teſtibus atque exemplis conatur, quæ tardiùs fortaſſe alioqui ruiturum vehementiùs proturbant. Summum, inquis, jus ſumma injuria eſt, id in regibus maximè locum habet qui cùm ſummo jure utuntur, ea faciunt in quibus Samuel dicit jus regis eſſe poſitum. Miſerum jus; quod tu jam ad extrema perductus, niſi per ſummam injuriam defendere ulteriùs non potes! Summum jus id dicitur, cùm quis formulas legum ſectatur, ſingulis penè literis immoratur, æquitatem non ſervat; aut ſcriptum jus callidè nimis & malitioſè interpretatur, ex quo illud proverbium Cicero ortum eſſe aït. Cùm autem jus omne de fonte juſtitiæ manare certum ſit, impius ſis neceſſe eſt, qui regem injuſtum eſſe, iniquum, violentum, raptorem eſſe, & quales eſſe ſolebant qui peſſimi erant, jus regis eſſe dicis, ídque prophetam populo inſinuâſſe. Quod enim jus ſummum aut remiſſum, ſcriptum aut non ſcriptum ad maleficia perpetranda eſſe poteſt? Id ne tibi de aliis concedere, de rege pernegare in mentem veniat, habeo quem tibi opponam, & puto regem, qui iſtiuſmodi jus regium & ſibi & Deo inviſum eſſe profitetur: Pſal. 94. an conſociaretur tibi ſolium ærumnarum, formantis moleſtiam per ſtatutum. Noli igitur Deo hanc atrociſſimam injuriam facere, quaſi is regum pravitates & nefaria facinora jus eſſe regium doceret, qui etiam hoc nomine ſocietatem cum improbis regibus ſe deteſtari docet, quòd moleſtiam & ærumnas omnes populo juris regii titulo creare ſoleant. Noli Prophetam Dei falſò inſimulare; quem, tu dum juris regii iſto loco doctorem habere putas, non verum nobis affers Samuelem; ſed, ut venefica illa, inanem umbram evocas; quamvis & illum ab inferis Samuelem non adeò mendacem fuiſſe credam, quin illud quod tu jus regium vocas, impotentiam potiùs tyrannicam dicturus fuiſſet. Jus datum ſceleri legimus, túque licentia jure conceſſa reges minùs bonos uti conſueviſſe aïs. At jus hoc ad perniciem humani generis abs te introductum non eſſe à Deo datum probavimus; reſtat ut ſit à Diabolo; quod infrà clariùs liquebit. Hac, inquis, licentia dat poſſe, ſi velis; & authorem hujus juris habere Ciceronem præ te fers. Nunquam ægrè facio ut teſtimonia tua recitem, tuis enim ipſe teſtibus conficere te ſoles. Audi igitur verba Ciceronis in quartâ Philipp. Qua cauſa juſtior eſt belli gerendi, quàm ſervitutis depulſio? in qua etiamſi non ſit moleſtus dominus, tamen eſt miſerrimum poſſe ſi velit, poſſe vi ſcilicet; nam de jure ſi loqueretur, repugnantia diceret, & ex juſta belli cauſa injuſtam faceret. Non eſt igitur jus regium quod tu deſcribis, ſed injuria, ſed vis, & violentia regum. Tranſis ab regia licentiâ ad privatam: licet privato mentiri, licet ingrato eſſe. Licet & regibus; quid inde efficis? licebit ergò regibus impunè rapere, occidere, ſtuprare? Quid intereſt ad injuriæ gravitatem rex an latro, an aliunde hoſtis populum occidat, diripiat, in ſervitutem agat? eodem certè jure, & hunc & illum humanæ ſocietatis inimicum, & peſtem propulſare, atque ulciſci debemus; immo regem eò juſtius quòd is tot beneficiis & honoribus noſtris auctus commiſſam ſibi ſub juramento publicam ſalutem prodat. Concedis poſtremò leges dari à Moſe, ſecundùm quas rex ille quandoque eligendus imperare debebat, quamvis diverſas ab illo jure quod Samuel propoſuit.

propoſuit. Quod cum aſſertione tua dupliciter pugnat; cùm enim regem legibus omnino ſolutum poſueris, nunc obſtrictum dicis: dein jus juri contrarium ponis Moſis & Samuëlis, quod eſt abſurdum. At ſervi, inquit Propheta, vos eritis regi. Ut ſervos fuiſſe non abnuerim, non jure tamen regio ſervi fuerunt, ſed regum fortaſſe plurimorum uſurpatione & injuſtitiâ. Illam enim petitionem obſtinatam non jure regio, ſed ſuo merito in pænam illis ceſſuram Propheta præmonuit. At verò ſi regi legibus ſoluto quicquid libet licuerit, profectò rex longè plus quàm dominus erit, populus infra omnium ſervorum infimos plus quàm infimus. Servus enim vel alienigena legem Dei vindicem injurioſum in dominum habebat; populus univerſus, libera nimirum gens. vindicem in terris neminem, nullam legem habebit, quò læſus, afflictus & ſpoliatus confugiat: à ſervitute regum Ægyptiorum ideo liberatus, ut uni ex fratribus ſuis duriore ſi libeat ſervitute opprimendus traderetur. Quod cum neque divinæ legi nec rationi conſentaneum ſit, dubium nemini eſſe poteſt, quin Propheta mores enarraverit, non jus regum; neque mores prorſus regum omnium, ſed plurimorum. Deſcendis ad rabbinos, duoſque adducis eâdem, quâ priùs, infelicitate: nam caput illud de rege in quo R. Joſes jus regium aiebat contineri, Deuteronomii eſſe, non Samuëlis manifeſtum eſt. Samuëlis enim ad terrorem duntaxat populo injiciendum pertinere rectiſſimè quidem & contra te dixit R. Judas. Pernicioſum enim eſt id jus nominari atque doceri quod injuſtitia planè eſt, niſi abuſivè forſitan jus nominetur. Quo etiam pertinet verſus 18. Et exclamabitis die illa propter regem veſtrum, ſed non exaudiet vos Jehovah; obſtinatos nimirum iſta pœna manebat, qui regem nolente Deo dari ſibi voluerunt. Quanquam iſta verba non prohibent, quo minus & vota & quidvis aliud tentare potuerint. Si enim clamare ad Deum contra regem populo licebat, licebat procul dubio omnem etiam aliam inire rationem honeſtam ſeſe a tyrannide expediendi. Quis enim quovis malò cum premitur, ſic ad Deum clamat ut cætera omnia quæ officii ſunt ſui negligat, ad otioſas tantùm preces devolutus? Verum utcunque ſit, quid hoc ad jus regium, quid ad jus noſtrum? qui regem nec invito Deo unquam petivimus, nec ipſo dante accepimus, ſed jure gentium uſi, nec jubente Deo nec vetante, noſtris legibus conſtituimus. Quæ cùm ità ſe habeant, non video quamobrem nobis laudi atque virtuti tribuendum non ſit, regem abjeciſſe; quandoquidem Iſraëlitis crimini eſt datum regem petiſſe. Quod etiam res ipſa comprobavit; nos enim qui regem, cùm haberemus, deprecati ſumus, tandem exauditos Deus liberavit; illos, qui cùm non haberent, à Deo efflagitabant, ſervire juſſit; donec Babylone redeuntes ad priſtinum reipub. ſtatum reverſi ſunt. Ludum Talmudicum deinde aperis; quin & hoc ſiniſtro augurio tentatum. Dum enim regem non judicari cupis oſtendere, oſtendis ex Codice Sanhedrim regem nec judicari nec judicare; quod cum petitione iſtius populi pugnat, qui ideo regem petebant, ut judicaret: id fruſtrà reſarcire ſtudes; intelligi nempe id de regibus Poſt-babylonicis debere. At ecce tibi Maimonides, qui hanc inter reges Iſraëlitas & Judæos differentiam ponit: Davidis enim poſteros judicare & judicari; Iſraëliticis neutrum concedit. Occurris tibi, tecum enim litigas, aut cum Rabbinis tuis; meam rem agis. Hoc primis in regibus locum non habuiſſe, quia dictum eſt V. 17. vos eritis ei ſervi: conſuetudine ſcilicet, non jure; aut ſi jure, pœnas petendi regis, quamvìs non ſub hoc fortè vel ſub illo, at ſub pleriſque luebant, quod nos non attingit. Tibi verò adverſario opus non eſt, adeò ſemper tibi adverſaris. Narras enim pro me, ut primò Ariſtobulus, pòſt Jannæus cognomento Alexander, jus illud regium, non à ſynedrio juris cuſtode, & interprete acceperint, ſed paulatim ſibi aſſumpſerint, & ſenatu renitente uſurpaverint: quorum in gratiam bella illa fabula de primoribus ſynedrii à Gabriele exanimatis adinventa eſt, júſque hoc magnificum, quo niti maximè videris, regem ſcilicet non judicari, ex illa fabula pluſquam anili, utpote rabbinicâ, conflatum eſſe fateris. Reges autem Hebræorum judicari poſſe, atque etiam ad verbera damnari fuſè docet Sichardus ex libris Rabbinicis, cui tu hæc omnia debes, & tamen obſtrepere non erubeſcis. Quin immo legimus ipſum Saulem cum filio Jonathane ſortis judicium atque etiam capitale ſubiiſſe, ſuóque ipſum edicto paruiſſe. Uzzias quoque à ſacerdotibus templo deturbatus, lepræ judicio, tanquam unus è populo, ſe ſubmiſit, réxque eſſe deſiit. Quid ſi templo excedere, quid ſi magiſtratu abire, & ſeorſim habitare noluiſſet, jus illud regium legibus ſolutum ſibi aſſeruiſſet, an paſſuros fuiſſe cenſes Judæos, & ſacerdotes templum contaminari, leges violari, populum univerſum contagione periclitari? In leproſum ergò regem vigebunt leges, in tyrannum nihil poterunt? Ecquis tam demens, aut ſtultus eſt, ut exiſtimet, cùm rex morboſus nè populum contagione lædat, cautum atque proviſum legibus ſit, ſi rex impius, iniquus, crudelis populum diripiat, excruciet, occidat, rempub. funditùs evertat, nullum his malis longè gravioribus remedium legibus repertum eſſe? Verùm exemplum ullius regis afferri non poteſt, qui judicium capitis ſubierit in jus vocatus. Ad illud Sichardus haud abſurdè reſpondet, perinde eſſe, ac ſi quis ad hunc modum diſſereret. Cæſar nunquam citatus eſt coram Electore; ergò ſi Palatinus diem Cæſari dixerit, non tenetur Cæſar in judicio reſpondere. Cùm tamen doceat Bulla aurea Carolum quartum ſe & ſucceſſores ſuos huic cognitioni ſubjeciſſe. Quid in corrupto populi ſtatu regibus adeò indultum fuiſſe miramur, ubi tot privati aut opibus ſuis aut gratiâ impunitatem vel graviſſimorum ſcelerum aſſequuntur? Illud autem ἀνυπεύθυνον, id eſt, à nemine pendere, nulli mortalium rationem reddere, quod tu regiæ Majeſtatis maximè proprium eſſe ais, Ariſtoteles Polit. 4. c. 10. maximè tyrannicum, & in libera natione minimè ferendum eſſe affirmat. Tu vero Antonium tyrannum immaniſſimum, Romanæ reipub. everſorem, idoneum ſanè authorem producis, non eſſe juſtum repoſci à Rege factorum ſuorum rationem; & tamen Herodem cædis reum ad cauſam dicendam in Parthos proficiſcens accerſivit ad ſe Antonius: & animadverſurus etiam in regem fuiſſe creditur, niſi rex eum auro corrupiſſet. Ita ab eodem fonte profluxit regiæ poteſtatis Antoniana aſſertio, & tua regia defenſio. At non ſine ratione, inquis, nam reges ab alio non habent quod regnant, ſed ſoli deo acceptum referunt. Dic ſodes quinam? Nam iſtiuſmodi reges exſtitiſſe unquam, nego. Primus enim Saul, niſi populus refragante etiam deo regem voluiſſet, nunquam rex fuiſſet; & quamvis rex renuntiatus eſſet Miſpæ, vixit tamen penè privatus, armentum patris ſecutus; donec Gilgale rex à populo ſecundùm creatus eſt. Quid David? quamvis unctus à Deo, nonne iterum unctus eſt ab Judæis Chebrone, deinde ab omnibus Hebræis, pacto tamen prius fœdere? 2 Sam. 5. 1 Chron. 11. fœdus autem obligat reges, & intra certos fines continet. Sedit Salomon, inquis, ſuper ſolium Domini & cunctis placuit, 1 Paralip. 29. ergo & placuiſſe populo aliquid erat. Conſtituit Jehoiadas regem Joaſum, fœdus tamen eodem tempore pepigit inter regem & populum. 2 Reg. 11. Hos reges, necnon & reliquos Davidis poſteros & à deo & à populo conſtitutos fateor; cæteros omnes, ubicunque gentium, à populo tantùm conſtitutos eſſe affirmo; tu oſtende conſtitutos eſſe a deo; niſi eâ ſolum ratione quâ omnia cùm maxima tùm minima à deo fieri & conſtitui dicuntur. Solium itaque Davidis peculiari quodam jure ſolium Jehovæ dicitur; ſolium aliorum regum non alio, atque cætera omnia, Jehovæ ſunt. Quod tu ex eodem capite didiciſſe potuiſti, v. 11, 12. tua ſunt omnia in cælo & in terra, tuum eſt, Jehova, regnum; Divitiæ & gloria à facie tua ſunt, vis & potentia, &c. Diciturque hoc toties, non ut intumeſcant reges, ſed ut moneantur, quamvis deos ſe eſſe putent, deum tamen ſupra ſe eſſe, cui debent omnia. Unde illa Eſſenorum & Poetarum doctrina, reges non ſine deo, & ab Jove eſſe facile intelligitur; omnes enim homines à deo itidem ſumus, deique genus. Jus igitur hoc univerſum dei, non tollit jus populi; quo minùs omnes cæteri reges, non à deo nominati, regnum ſuum ſoli populo acceptum referant; cui propterea rationem reddere tenentur. Quod, quanquam Vulgus aſſentari regibus ſolet, ipſi tamen reges ſive boni, ut Homericus ille Sarpedon, ſive mali, ut illi apud Lyricum tyranni, agnoſcunt.

Glauce cur nos maximo honore afficimur
In Lycia, omnes autem nos tanquam deos intuentur.

Ipſe ſibi reſpondet; quia virtute cæteris prælucemus: Quare fortiter pugnemus, inquit, ne Lycii nobis ignaviam objiciant: Quâ voce & honores regios à populo acceptos, & bellicæ adminiſtrationis rationem populo reddendam eſſe innuit. Mali autem reges, ut metum populo incutiant, deum imperii regii authorem palàm prædicant: Tacitis autem votis nullum numen præter Fortunam venerantur. Juxta illud Horatii:

Te Dacus aſper, te profugi Scythæ,
Regúmque matres barbarorum, &
Purpurei metuunt tyranni;
Injurioſo ne pede proruas
Stantem columnam, neu populus frequens
Ad arma ceſſantes, ad arma
Concitet, imperiúmque frangat.

Si ergò reges hodie per deum regnant, etiam populi per deum in libertatem ſe vindicant, quandoquidem omnia à deo & per deum fiunt. Utrumque etiam æquè teſtatur Scriptura, & reges per eum regnare, & per eum ſolio dejici; cùm tamen id utrumque longè ſæpius à populo fieri perſpiciamus, quàm à deo. Jus itaque populi pariter ac regis, quicquid eſt, à deo eſt. Populus ubicunque ſine deo manifeſto regem creavit, poteſt eodem jure ſuo regem rejicere. Tyrannum ſanè tollere quàm conſtituere divinius eſt; plúſque dei cernitur in populo quoties injuſtum abdicat regem, quàm in rege qui innocentem opprimit populum. Immo reges noxios deo authore judicat populus: Hoc enim ipſo honore dilectos ſuos decoravit deus, Pſal. 149. ut Chriſtum regem ſuum laudibus celebrantes gentium reges, quales ſub evangelio ſunt omnes tyranni, vinculis coërcerent, inque eos jus ſcriptum exercerent, qui jure omni ſcripto atque legibus ſolutos ſe eſſe gloriantur. Ne quis tam ſtolidè, ne quis tam impiè credat tanti eſſe apud deum reges, ferè mortalium ignaviſſimos, ut eorum nutu orbis terrarum totus pendeat & gubernetur; eorum ut gratiâ, præque illis, divinum, ut ita dicam, hominum genus eodem quo bruta & viliſſima quæque animalia loco atque numero habendum ſit. Agè nunc, ne nihil enim agas, M. Aurelium, quaſi tyrannis faventem, in medium profers; at ſatius tibi fuit Marcum Aurelium non attigiſſe. Ille an deum de principibus ſolum judicare dixerit neſcio. Xiphilinus certè quem citas de αὐταρχία loquitur; περὶ αὐταρχίας ὁ θεὸς μόνος κρίνειν δύναται. Ἀυταρχίαν autem monarchiæ ſynonymum illic eſſe non aſſentior; eóque minùs quo ſæpius præcedentia lego; nam quî cohæreat, aut quid ſibi velit aliena illa ſententia ſubito inſititia, qui legerit miretur; præſertim cùm Marcus Aurelius Imperatorum optimus, non aliter cum populo egerit, ut Capitolinus tradit, quàm eſt actum ſub civitate liberâ; jus autem populi quin ſupremum tunc fuerit nemo dubitat. Idem Thraſeam, Helvidium, Catonem, Dionem, Brutum tyrannicidas omnes, aut iſtam gloriam æmulantes coluiſſe, ſibique reipublicæ formam propoſuiſſe in qua æquis legibus, pariſque jure omnia adminiſtrarentur, in primo libro de vita ſua profitetur: In quarto, non ſe, ſed legem, dominum eſſe. Agnovit etiam omnia Senatûs populíque eſſe: Nos, inquit, adeò nihil proprium habemus, ut in veſtris ædibus habitemus. Hæc Xiphilinus. Tantum abfuit ut quicquam jure regio ſibi arrogaret. Moriens, filium ſuum regnaturum eâ lege Romanis commendavit, ſi dignus eſſet: Jus itaque illud regnandi abſolutum atque fictitium, tanquam à deo per manus traditum, illam denique αὐταρχίαν, præ ſe non tulit. Plena tamen omnia Græcorum & Latinorum monumenta eſſe aïs: At nuſquam viſa; plena Judæorum, & tamen addis Judæos in pleriſque regiæ poteſtati minùs æquos fuiſſe: Immò Græcos & Latinos multo minùs Tyrannis equos & reperiſti & reperies; multo minus Judæos, ſi liber ille Samuelis in quo is 1 Sam. 10. jus regni deſcripſerat, exſtaret; quem librum Doctores Hebræorum à regibus diſcerptum aut combuſtum eſſe tradiderunt, quo impuniùs tyrannidem in ſuos exercerent. Circumſpice jam numquid captare poſſis: Occurrit tibi rex David poſtremò torquendus, Pſal. 17. à facie tuâ judicium meum prodeat: Ergo, inquit Barnachmoni, nullus judicat regem niſi deus. Et tamen ſimilius veri videtur, Davidem hæc ſcripſiſſe, cùm à Saule vexatus, ne Jonathanis quidem judicium, quamvìs jam tum unctus à deo, detrectabat; ſi eſt in me iniquitas, tu me affice morte, inquit, 1 Sam. 20. deinde ut quivis alius ab hominibus falsò accuſatus, ad judicium dei provocat; id ſequentia declarant, tui oculi vident quæ recta ſunt, cùm exploraveris cor meum, &c. Quid hoc ad judicium regium, aut forenſe? Sanè jus regium illi maximè labefactant atque deſtruunt, qui fundamentis tam fallacibus niti, atque exædificari produnt. En tritum illud tandem, & aulicorum noſtratium argumentum palmarium. Tibi ſoli peccavi, Pſal. 51. 6. quaſi verò rex David in moerore & lacrymis poenitentiam agens, ſordidatus & ſqualidus in terra jacens, miſericordiam à deo ſuppliciter petens, quicquam de jure regio cogitaverit hæc loquutus; cùm ſe vix jure mancipii dignum eſſe arbitraretur. An omnem dei populum, fratres ſuos uſque adeò præ ſe contempſit, ut cædibus, adulteriis, rapinis peccare in eos non ſe poſſe cenſeret? Abſit à rege tam ſancto tanta ſuperbia, támque fœda ignoratio vel ſui vel proximi. Tibi igitur ſoli peccavi procul dubio intelligendum eſt, tibi præcipuè. Utcunque ſit, profectò verba pſallentis, & ſententiæ affectibus plenæ haudquaquam ſunt ad jus explicandum accommodatæ, aut eò trahendæ. At non eſt in jus vocatus, nec coram ſynedrio cauſam capitis dixit. Eſto; quî enim potuit id reſciri, quod adeò ſine arbitris, & ſecretò peractum fuit, ut per aliquot fortaſſe annos (cujuſmodi aulæ arcana ſunt) vix unus aut alter conſcius fuiſſe videatur? 2 Sam. 12. Tu hoc clàm feciſti. Deinde quid ſi in privatis etiam puniendis ceſſaret ſynedrium? Advocatum vellicas quòd Iſraëlitas tyrannum petîſſe arguerat. An de fumo inquis in flammam ire præcipites maluerunt, id eſt ſævitiam peſſimorum tyrannorum experiri potiùs quàm judices malos pati quibus jam aſſueverant. Illic Hebræos maluiſſe aïs tyrannos quàm judices, hìc judices maluiſſe quàm tyrannos; & nihil minùs quàm tyrannum voluiſſe. De tuo igitur reſpondebit tibi Advocatus, juxta enim te omnis rex jure regio tyrannus eſt. Quod ſequitur bene habet, authoritatem in populo maximam tunc fuiſſe, quòd judices repudiârunt, regem optârunt. Memineris, cùm hoc ego à te repoſcam. Negas deum iratum Iſraëlitis regem tanquam tyrannum aut pœnam attribuiſſe, ſed ut rem ſalutarem & bonam. Quod tamen facilè refellitur. Cur enim exclamarent propter regem illum quem elegerant, niſi quòd res mala erat imperium regium; non quidem per ſe, ſed quòd plerunque, ſicut Propheta hic monet, in ſuperbiam & dominationem ſe convertit? Si adhuc non ſatisfacio, agnoſce jam tua, ſyngrapham agnoſce tuam & erubeſce. Apparat. ad primatum, *Iratus deus regem illis dedit offenſus eorum peccatis, quòd deum habere regem renuiſſent. Quid hoc homine levius, quid inſanius? Quis huic in re minimâ fidem habeat, qui tantis in rebus quid aſſerat, & mox neget, nihil penſi habet? Affirmas p. 29. regem legibus ſolutum eſſe apud omnes Gentes, ſic Oriens judicavit, ſic Occidens. At p. 43. omnes reges Orientis κατὰ νόμον, & legitimos fuiſſe; immò Ægypti reges in maximis minimíſque rebus legibus obſtrictos, cùm initio capitis hoc te probaturum pollicitus ſis, omnes reges ſolutos legibus eſſe, leges dare, non accipere. Equidem non iraſcor tibi; aut enim inſanis, aut ſtas à nobis. Hoc certè oppugnare eſt, non defendere, hoc regem eſt ludos facere. Sin minùs, Catullianum profectò illud in te aptiſſimè quadrat, ſed inverſum; nam quantò quis unquam optimus poëta fuit, tantò tu peſſimus omnium patronus. Certè niſi ſtupor ille quo Advocatum eſſe demerſum aïs, te potiùs obcæcavit, jam tute obbrutuiſſe te ſenties. Nunc omnibus quoque gentium regibus leges datas fuiſſe fateris; non tamen ut iis tenerentur, judiciorum metu & pœna capitis. Quod nequedum ex ſcripturâ, neque ex ullo authore fide digno oſtendiſti. Tu igitur paucis accipe: leges civiles iis dare qui legibus non tenentur, ſtultum & ridiculum eſt; omnes alios punire, uni duntaxat omnium ſcelerum impunitatem dare, cùm lex neminem excipiat, iniquiſſimum eſt. Quæ duo in ſapientes legum latores minimè cadunt, multò minùs in deum. Ut omnes autem videant te nullo modo ex Hebræorum ſcriptis id probare, quod probandum hoc capite ſuſceperas, eſſe ex magiſtris tuâ ſponte confiteris, qui negant alium ſuis majoribus regem agnoſcendum fuiſſe præter Deum, datum autem in pœnam fuiſſe. Quorum ego in ſententiam pedibus eo. Non decet enim, neque dignum eſt regem eſſe, niſi qui cæteris omnibus longè antecellit; ubi multi ſunt æquales, ut ſunt in omni civitate plurimi, imperium ex æquo atque per vices dandum eſſe arbitror: æquali, aut plerunque deteriori, ac ſæpiſſime ſtulto ſervire omnes, quis non indigniſſimum putet? Nec ad commendationem regalis imperii plus facit, quòd Chriſtus à regibus originem duxit, quàm facit ad peſſimorum regum commendationem, Chriſtum eos habuiſſe nepotem. Rex eſt Meſſias: agnoſcimus, gaudemus, & quàm citiſſimè veniat oramus; dignus enim eſt, nec ei quiſquam ſimilis aut ſecundus; interim regia gubernatio commiſſa indignis & immerentibus, ut plerumque fieri ſolet, plus mali quàm boni attuliſſe humano generi rectè exiſtimatur. Nec continuò ſequitur omnes reges tyrannos eſſe. Verùm ita eſto: do tibi hoc, nè me nimis tenacem putes; utere tu jam dato. Hæc duo ſequuntur, inquis, Deus ipſe rex fuerit tyrannorum dicendus, & quidem tyrannus ipſe maximus. Horum alterum ſi non ſequitur, ſequitur profectò illud quod toto libro tuo ſemper ferè ſequitur, te non ſcripturæ ſolùm, ſed tibimet perpetuò contradicere, ut qui proxima periodo ſuprà dixeras, unum Deum regem eſſe omnium rerum, quas & ipſe creavit. Creavit autem & tyrannos & Dæmonas; eorum itaque rex vel tuâ ipſius ſententiâ. In alterum deſpuimus, & blaſphemum illud tibi os obturatum volumus, qui Deum affirmes tyrannum eſſe maximum, ſi tyrannorum, quod ipſe ſæpius dicis, Rex & Dominus dicatur. Sed nec rem regiam multò plus adjuvas, dum oſtendis, Moſen etiam cum ſumma poteſtate regem fuiſſe. Nam fuerit ſanè, vel quivis alius, dummodò is ſit qui res noſtras, quemadmodum Moſes, ad Deum referre poſſit. Exod. 18. 19. Verùm neque Moſi, quamquam is Dei quaſi ſodalis fuit, licuit in Dei populo quicquid libuit facere. Quid enim ille? Venit ad me hic populus, inquit, ad conſulendum Deum; non ergo ad mandata Moſis accipienda. Tum ſuſcipit Jethro, eſto tu pro hoc populo erga deum, & commonefacias eos de legibus dei. Et Moſes, Deut. 4. 5. docui vos ſtatuta & judicia, quemadmodum præcepit mihi Deus. Unde fidelis dicitur in totâ domo dei. Num. 12. Rex itaque Jehova tum populi fuit; Moſes veluti interpres tantùm Jehovæ regis. Impium igitur & ſacrilegium te eſſe oportet, qui ſummam hanc poteſtatem à Deo ad hominem injuſſus auſis transferre, quam ipſe Moſes non ſummam ſed vicariam tantùm & intermediam ſub præſenti numine obtinuit. Accedit etiam cumulus ad improbitatem tuam, quòd Moſen hic ſummâ poteſtate regem fuiſſe dicas; cùm in apparatu ad primatum, p. 230. Eum in commune cum LXX ſenioribus populum rexiſſe, & primum populi non dominum fuiſſe dixeris. Si igitur rex fuit, ut erat certè, & regum optimus, ídque ſicut ipſe aïs, cum poteſtate planè ſummâ & regia, nec tamen dominus, neque ſolus populum regebat, vel te authore, neceſſariò ſequitur reges, quamvis ſummâ poteſtate præditos, jure tamen regio atque ſummo, non eſſe dominos, neque ſolos populum regere debere; quantò minùs ad libitum ſuum? Jam verò quâ impudentiâ Dei mandatum ementiris, de rege ſtatim atque ingreſſi eſſent terram ſanctam ſibi conſtituendo. Deut. 17. ſupprimis enim veteratoriè quod præcedit, ſi dixeris, ſtatuam ſuper me regem; túque memento quid à te jam repoſcam; cùm dixeris p. 42. liberrimâ tunc poteſtate populus erat præditus. Nunc iterum fanaticus an profanus eſſe velis, ipſe videris. Deus, inquis, cùm tanto ante determinaverit regium regimen inſtituendum tanquam optimum populi illius regendi ſtatum, quomodo hæc conciliabuntur? Propheta repugnavit, Deus ſic egit cum propheta, ut quaſi nollet. Videt ſe illaqueatum, videt ſe impeditum: Jam attendite quanta cum malitiâ adverſùs prophetam, impietate adverſùs Deum, expedire ſe quærat: cogitandum in his eſt, inquit, Samuelem eſſe cujus filii populum tunc judicabant, eos populus repudiabat ob corrupta judicia; Samuel igitur noluit filios ſuos à populo rejici; Deus ut gratificaretur propheta ſuo, innuit non valdè ſibi placere, quod populus deſideraret. Dic uno verbo improbe, quod per ambages dicis; Samuel populo fucum fecit, Samueli Deus. Non advocatus ergò, ſed tu ceritus ille & lymphaticus es, qui modò ut regem honores, nîl Deum revereris. Iſne tibi Samuel videtur, qui ſaluti aut charitati patriæ filiorum avaritiam & ambitionem præpoſuerit, qui populo recta & ſalutaria petenti, tam callido conſilio, támque vafro illuſerit, falſo pro veris docuerit? Iſne tibi Deus, qui in re tam turpi cuivis gratificaretur, aut cum populo ſimulatè ageret? Aut ergò jus regium non erat quod Propheta populo expoſuit, aut jus illud, teſte Deo & prophetâ, malum, moleſtum, violentum, inutile, ſumptuoſum reipub. erat; aut denique, quod nefas eſt dicere, & Deus & Propheta populo verba dare voluerunt. Paſſim enim teſtatur Deus valdè ſibi diſplicuiſſe quòd regem petîſſent. Ver. 7. Non te ſed me ſpreverunt, ne regnem ſuper ipſos, ſecundùm illa facta quibus dereliquerunt me & co- luerunt deos alienos: acſi ſpecies quædam idololatriæ videretur regem petere, qui adorari ſe, & honores propè divinos tribui ſibi poſtulat. Sanè qui ſupra omnes leges terrenum ſibi dominum imponit, propè eſt ut ſibi Deum ſtatuat alienum; Deum utique haud ſæpe rationabilem, ſed profligatâ ſæpiùs ratione brutum, & belluinum. Sic 1 Sam. 10, 19. Vos ſpreviſtis Deum veſtrum qui ipſe ſervat vos ab omnibus malis, & anguſtiis veſtris, cùm dixiſtis ei, regem præpones nobis. & cap. 12.12. Vos regem petîſtis, cùm Jehova ſit rex veſter. & ver. 17, Videte malum veſtrum magnum eſſe coram Jehova petendo vobis regem. Et conemptim Hoſea de rege, 13.10, 11. Ubi rex tuus, ubinam eſt? ſervet te jam in civitatibus tuis. Ubi vindices tui? quoniam dixiſti, da mihi regem & proceres: dedi tibi regem in ira mea. Hinc Gideon ille Heros rege major, Non dominabor in vos, neque filius meus in vos dominabitur, ſed dominabitur in vos Jehova, Jud. 8. planè ac ſi ſimul docuiſſet, non hominis eſſe dominari in homines, ſed ſolius Dei. Hinc Hebræorum rempublicam, in qua Deus principatum ſolus tenuit, θεοκρατίαν vocat Joſephus contra Apionem Grammaticum Ægyptium & maledicum tui ſimilem. Populus denique reſipiſcens apud Iſaiam 26. 13. calamitoſum hoc ſibi fuiſſe queritur, quòd alios præter Deum Dominos habuerat. Indicio ſunt hæc omnia regem irato Deo Iſraëlitis fuiſſe datum. In hiſtoria tyranni Abimelechi quis eſt cui non riſum moveas? de quo dicitur, cum is partim ſaxo à muliere, partim armigeri gladio interfectus fuerit, reddidit Deus malum Abimelechi. Hac, inquis, hiſtoria potentiſſimè adſtruit Deum ſolum regum judicem eſſe & vindicem: immo tyrannorum, nebulonum, nothorum, ſi hoc valebit: quicunque per fas aut nefas tyrannidem occupaverit, is jus regium ſtatim in populum adeptus erit, pœnas effugit, confeſtim arma magiſtratui de manibus fluent, muſſare deinceps populus non audebit. Verúm quid ſi magnus aliquis latro hoc modo in bello periiſſet, an Deus ergo ſolus latronum vindex? Quid ſi carnificis manu lege damnatus, an ideo minus illi Deus malum reddidiſſet? Ne judices quidem eorum unquam legiſti lege poſtulatos; tamen in optimatum ſtatu vel principem, ſi quid committat, poſſe ac debere judicari, ultrò fateris pag. 47. cur non item tyrannus in regno? quia Deus reddidit malum Abimelechi. Ac reddidit quoque mulier illa, reddidit etiam armiger, in quos ille ambos jus regium habere præ ſe tulit. Quid ſi reddidiſſet magiſtratus, annon is idcircò Dei gladium gerit, ut malum malis reddat? Ab hoc potentiſſimo de morte Abimelechi argumento ad verborum contumelias more ſuo ſe convertit; nil niſi cœnum & lutum ore funditat; cum eorum quæ promiſit ſe probaturum, nihil vel ex ſacris libris, vel ex rabbinicis probaverit. Nam neque regem legibus ſolutum eſſe, nec cur puniri, ſi delinquat ſolus mortalium non debeat, quicquam oſtendit. Immo ſuis ipſe teſtibus ſe induit, & ſententiam ſuæ contrariam eſſe veriorem ſuomet ipſe opere demonſtrat. Cúmque argumentis parùm proficiat, criminationibus atrociſſimis omnium in nos odium excitare conatur, quaſi rege optimo & innocentiſſimo crudeliter ſublato. An Solomon, inquit, melior rex Carolo primo fuit? Sunt, ut verum fatear, qui patrem ejus Jacobum cum Solomone comparare non dubitârunt, & natalibus quidem anteferre. Solomon Davidis filius; is primò Saulis muſicus erat; Jacobus Darlii comitis filius, qui Davidem muſicum, reginæ uxoris thalamos nocte ingreſſum, cum oſtio peſſulum obdidiſſe deprehendit, haud multò pòſt interfecit, ut narrat Buchananus. Natalibus ergo illuſtrior Jacobus, & ſecundus Solomon ſæpe dictus, quamvis Davidis muſici filius an fuerit, dubium ſit. At Carolum conferre cum Solomone quî tibi in mentem venire potuerit non video. Quem enim tu Carolum tot laudibus tollis, ejus pervicaciam, avaritiam, crudelitatem, & ſævum in omnes pios atque bonos dominatum, ejus bella, incendia, rapinas, & miſerorum civium cædes innumeras, dum hæc ſcribo, Carolus ipſe filius in illa publicæ pœnitentiæ ſedeculâ apud Scotos coram populo confitetur atque deplorat: immò tuum illud regium jus ejurat. Verùm ſi parallelis tantopere delectaris, Carolum cum Solomone conferamus. Solomon à meritiſſimo fratris ſupplicio regnum auſpicatus eſt: Carolus à patris funere; non dico à nece, quamvis indicia veneni omnia in corpore patris mortui conſpecta ſint; iſta enim ſuſpicio in Bucchingamio conſtitit; quem tamen Carolus, & regis interfectorem & ſui patris, non ſolùm in comitiis omni culpa exemit, ſed ne omninò res ea Senatus cognitioni ſubjiceretur, comitia diſſolvit. Solomon graviſſimis tributis populum preſſit: at ille in templum Dei, & ædificia publica impendit, Carolus in luxum. Solomon à plurimis uxoribus ad Idolorum cultum pellectus eſt, hic ab unâ. Pellectus in fraudem Solomon, pellexiſſe alios non legitur; hic alios, non ſolum uberrimis corruptæ Eccleſiæ præmiis pellexit, ſed etiam edictis & canonibus eccleſiaſticis coëgit, ut inviſa reformatis omnibus altaria ſtatuerent, & pictos in pariete crucifixos altaribus imminentes adorarent. At non eſt ideo Solomon à populo capitis damnatus. Nec inde, inquam, ſequitur damnari à populo non debuiſſe; multa enim incidere potuerunt, cur id tum expedire populo non videretur. Populus certè quid ſui juris eſſet haud multò pòſt & verbis & factis patefecit: cùm Solomonis filium decem tribus expulerunt; & niſi maturè ſe in fugam conjeciſſet, etiam lapidibus regem tantummodò minacem obruituros fuiſſe credibile eſt,

CAP. III.

CUm ſatis jam diſputatum atque concluſum ſit, reges Moſaicos ex præſcripto Dei omnibus obſtrictos legibus pariter cum populo fuiſſe, nullas legum exceptiones perſcriptas inveniri, ut reges quod vellent impunè poſſent, aut ut à populo puniri ne poſſint, Deum proinde vindictam de his tribunali ſuo reſervaſſe falſiſſimum eſſe, ſine authore, ſine ratione dictum; videamus an id ſuadeat Evangelium, quod diſſuaſit lex, non imperavit: videamus an Evangelium, divinum illud libertatis præconium, nos in ſervitutem addicat regibus & tyrannis, quorum ab impotenti imperiò etiam ſervitutis cujuſdam magiſtra lex vetus populum Dei liberavit. Primum argumentum ducis à perſonâ Chriſti, quem quis neſcit non privati ſolùm, ſed etiam ſervi perſonam ideo ſumpſiſſe, ut nos liberi eſſemus. Neque hoc de interna tantùm libertate intelligendum eſt, non de civili; quàm enim aliena ſunt iſta quæ Maria, mater Chriſti, ejus in adventu cecinit, ſuperbos diſſipavit cogitatione cordis ipſorum, detraxit dynaſtas è thronis, humiles evexit, ſi adventus ejus tyrannos potius in ſolio ſtabiliret Chriſtianos omnes eorum ſæviſſimo imperio ſubjiceret. Ipſe ſub tyrannis naſcendo, ſerviendo, patiendo, omnem honeſtam libertatem nobis acquiſivit: ut poſſe ſervitutem, ſi neceſſe eſt, æquo animo pati, ſic poſſe ad libertatem honeſtè aſpirare non abſtulit Chriſtus, ſed majorem in modum dedit. Hinc Paulus, 1 Cor. 7. non de evangelica ſolùm, ſed de civili libertate ſic ſtatuit. Servus vocatus es? ne ſit tibi curæ; ſin autem potes liber fieri, potiùs utere; pretio empti eſtis, ne eſtote ſervi hominum. Fruſtra igitur ab exemplo Chriſti ad ſervitutem nos hortaris, qui ſuæ ſervitutis pretio libertatem nobis etiam civilem confirmavit. Et formam quidem ſervi noſtrâ vice ſuſcepit, animum vero liberatoris nunquam non retinuit: unde jus regium quid ſit, longè aliter docuiſſe oſtendam, atque tu doces; qui non regii, ſed tyrannici juris, idque in republicâ novus profeſſor, ſi qua gens tyrannum ſive hæreditarium, ſive adventitium, ſive fortuitum ſortita erit, eam non ſolùm neceſſitate, ſed etiam religione ſervam eſſe ſtatuis. Tuis autem, ut ſoleo, in te utar teſtimoniis. Interrogavit Petrum Chriſtus, cùm ab eo coactores quidam Galilæi didrachma exigebant, Mat. 17. à quibus acciperent reges terræ tributa ſive cenſum, à filiis ſuis, an ab alienis? reſpondet ei Petrus, ab alienis. Ergo, inquit Chriſtus, liberi ſunt filii; ſed ne offendamus illos, da iis pro me & pro te. Variè hic locus interpretes exercet, cuinam perſolverentur hæc didrachma, alii ſacerdotibus in ſanctuarium, alii Cæſari: ego quidem Herodi perſoluta, interverſo Sanctuarii reditu, ſentio fuiſſe. Varia enim ab Herode & filiis ejus exacta tributa, ab Agrippa tandem remiſſa narrat Joſephus. Hoc autem tributum per ſe exiguum, multis aliis adjunctum, grave erat: gravia autem fuerint oportet de quibus hic Chriſtus loquitur, alioqui, in republica etiam, pauperes capite cenſi fuerunt. Hinc itaque Chriſtus Herodis injuſtitiam arguendi, cujus ſub ditione erat, occaſionem cepit. Qui, cum cæteri reges terræ (ſiquidem patriæ parentes dici ſe cupiant) non filiis, id eſt civibus ſuis, ſed alienis, bello nempe ſubactis, graviora tributa imperare ſoleant, hic contra non alienos, ſed filios opprimeret. Utcunque ſit, ſive filios hìc, cives regum proprios, ſive filios Dei, id eſt fideles & in univerſum chriſtianos intelligi concedas, ut intelligit Auguſtinus, certiſſimum eſt, ſi filius fuit Petrus, & proinde liber, nos etiam authore Chriſto liberos eſſe; vel ut cives, vel ut chriſtianos: non eſſe ergo juris regii à filiis & liberis tributa graviora exigere. Teſtatur enim Chriſtus perſolviſſe ſe, non quod deberet, ſed ne illos offendendo qui exigebant, negotium ſibi privatus exhiberet : Cum officium ac munus longiſſimè diverſum in illo vitæ ſuæ curriculo explendum ſibi eſſet. Dum igitur negat Chriſtus jus regium eſſe, graviora vectigalia liberis imponere, certè ſpoliare, diripere, occidere, excruciare proprios cives, & præſertim Chriſtianos, jus eſſe regium multo evidentiùs negat. Hunc in modum de jure regio cum & aliàs diſputaſſe videatur, venire in ſuſpicionem quibuſdam cœpit, non ſe tyrannorum licentiam pro jure regio habere. Non enim de nihilo erat quòd Phariſæi interrogatione hujuſmodi animum ejus tentarent, quòd de jure regio percontaturi, eum neminem curare, non reſpicere perſonam hominum dixerint ; neque de nihilo, quòd is propoſita ſibi iſtiuſmodi quæſtione iraſceretur, Mat. 22. An te quiſpiam ſi inſidiosè aggredi; ſi loquentem captare vellet, ſi elicere ex te quod fraudi futurum tibi ſit, de jure regio ſub rege interrogaret? An tu cuipiam de iſtoc interroganti iraſcerere? Non opinor. Vel hinc ergo perſpicias, non id eum de jure regio ſenſiſſe quod regibus gratum erat. Idem ex reſponſo ejus apertiſſimè colligitur, quo ille percontatores amandare à ſe potiùs quàm docere videtur. Poſcit numiſma censûs ; cujus, inquit, imago iſta eſt? Cæſaris. Reddite ergo Cæſari quæ ſunt Cæſaris, quæ dei ſunt deo. Immo quæ populi ſunt populo reddenda eſſe quis neſcit? Reddite omnibus quod debetis, inquit Paulus, Rom. 13. non ergo Cæſari omnia. Libertas noſtra non Cæſaris, verùm ab ipſo Deo natale nobis donum eſt ; eam Cæſari cuivis reddere, quam ab eo non accepimus, turpiſſimum eſſet, & humana origine indigniſſimum. Si enim os hominis, & vultum aſpiciens interrogaret quiſquam, cujus iſta imago eſſet, annon facile quivis reſponderet dei eſſe? Cum igitur dei ſimus, id eſt verè liberi, ob eámque cauſam ſoli deo reddendi, profectò Cæſari nos, id eſt homini, & præſertim injuſto, improbo, tyranno in ſervitutem tradere, ſine piaculo, & quidem maximo ſacrilegio non poſſumus. Interim quæ Cæſaris ſint, quæ dei, in medio relinquit. Quòd ſi idem erat hoc numiſma quod didrachmum illud deo pendi ſolitum, ut certè poſtea ſub Veſpaſiano fuit, tum ſanè controverſiam non minuit Chriſtus, ſed implicavit: Cum impoſſibile ſit deo & Cæſari idem ſimul reddere. At enim oſtendit quæ Cæſaris eſſent; numiſma nempe illud Cæſaris imagine ſignatum. Quid igitur inde lucraris præter denarium vel Cæſari vel tibi? Aut enim Cæſari Chriſtus præter denarium illud nihil dedit, cætera omnia nobis aſſeruit, aut ſi quicquid pecuniæ Cæſaris nomine inſcriptum eſſet, id Cæſari dedit, contrarius jam ſibi, noſtra ferè omnia Cæſari dabit, qui duo modò didrachma regibus non ſe ex debito perſolvere, & ſuo & Petri nomine profeſſus eſt. Ratio denique infirma eſt qua niteris ; non enim principis effigiem habet moneta ut principis eſſe, ſed ut probam ſe eſſe moneat ; útque ſe principis nomine inſignitam ne quis audeat adulterare. Sin autem ad jus regium inſcriptio tantum valeret, reges profectò noſtras omnium facultates, uti eſſent ſuæ, ſola nominis inſcriptione ſtatim perficerent ; aut ſi noſtra omnia jam ſua ſunt, quod tuum dogma eſt, non idcirco Cæſari numiſma illud reddendum erat, quia Cæſaris nomen aut imaginem prætulit, ſed quia Cæſaris jam antea jure erat, nulla licet imagine ſignatum. Ex quo manifeſtum eſt, Chriſtum hoc in loco non tam nos officii noſtri erga reges aut Cæſares ita perplexè atque ambiguè admonere voluiſſe, quàm Phariſæos hypocritas improbitatis & malitiæ arguere. Quid? Rursùs cum ei nuntiarent Phariſæi, Herodem ejus vitæ inſidias parare, an humile aut demiſſum ab eo reſponſum tyranno reddendum tulerunt? Immo ite, inquit, & dicite vulpi illi ; innuens reges non jure regio ſed vulpino civibus ſuis inſidiari. Atqui ſub tyranno ſupplicium mortis ſubire ſuſtinuit. Enimverò quî potuit niſi ſub tyranno? Supplicium ſub tyranno paſſus eſt ; ergo ad injuſtiſſima quævis juris regii teſtis & aſſertor: Egregius tu quidem officiorum ratiocinator es. Verùm Chriſtus quamvis noſtri liberandi, non ſub jugum mittendi cauſâ ſervum ſe fecerit, tamen ad hunc modum ſe geſſit; nec juri quicquam regio præter æquum & bonum conceſſit. Nunc ad præcepta ejus hac de re aliquando veniamus. Zebedæi filios maximam in regno Chriſti, quod mox in terris futur[illegible] ſomniabant, dignitatem affectantes, ſic Chriſtus corripuit, ut omnes ſimul Chriſtianos commonefaceret quale jus magiſtratûs & imperii civilis apud eos conſtitui voluerit. Scitis, inquit, principes gentium in eas dominari, & magnates authoritatem exercere in eas, verùm non ita erit inter vos. Sed quicunque volet inter vos magnus fieri, eſto veſter miniſter ; & quicunque volet inter vos primus eſſe, eſto veſter ſervus. Hæc tu niſi mente captus tecum facere crediſſes? hiſne te argumentis vincere, ut reges noſtros rerum dominos exiſtimemus? Tales in bello hoſtes nobis contingant, qui in caſtra hoſtium (quanquam & armatos vincere ſat ſcimus) uti tu ſoles, cæci atque inermes tanquam in ſuos incidant: Ita ſemper quod tibi maximè adverſatur, id demens veluti firmiſſimum cauſæ tuæ ſubſidium comparare conſueviſti. Petebant Iſraëlitæ regem, ut habebant omnes iſta gentes: Diſſuaſit deus multis verbis, quæ Chriſtus hic ſummatim complexus eſt, ſcitis principes gentium in eas dominari: Petentibus tamen iis dedit regem Deus, quamvis iratus: Chriſtus, ne peteret omnino Chriſtianus populus, more gentium dominaturum, adhibitâ cautione antevertit; inter vos non ita erit. Quid hoc clariùs dici potuit? Non erit inter vos iſta regum ſuperba dominatio, tametſi ſpecioſo titulo Euergetæ & benefici vocentur; ſed qui magnus inter vos fieri vult, quis autem principe major, eſto veſter miniſter: Et qui primus ſive princeps (Luc. 22.) eſto veſter ſervus. Non erravit itaque Advocatus ille quem inſectaris, ſed authorem habuit Chriſtum, ſi regem Chriſtianum populi miniſtrum eſſe dixit, uti eſt certè omnis bonus magiſtratus. Rex autem inter Chriſtianos aut omninò non erit, aut erit ſervus omnium; ſi planè vult eſſe dominus, eſſe ſimul Chriſtianus non poteſt. Quin & Moſes, legis quodammodo ſervilis inſtitutor, non populo ſuperbè dominabatur, ſed onus ipſe populi ferebat; ferebat in ſinu Populum, ut nutricius lactentem. Num. 11. nutritius autem ſervus eſt. Plato non dominos ſed ſervatores & adjutores populi appellandos eſſe magiſtratus docuit; Populum non ſervos, ſed altores magiſtratuum, ut qui alimenta & ſtipendia magiſtratibus etiam regibus præbeant. Eoſdem Ariſtoteles cuſtodes & miniſtros legum vocat, Plato & miniſtros & ſervos. Miniſtros dei Apoſtolus quidem appellat, quod tamen nequaquam obſtat quò minùs ſint & legum & populi; tam leges enim quàm magiſtratus propter populum ſunt. Et tamen hanc tu Fanaticorum Angliæ Moloſſorum opinionem eſſe clamitas. Moloſſos eſſe Anglos certè non putarem, niſi quòd tu illos, hybrida, latratu tàm degeneri oblatras; Lupi, ſi diis placet, Sancti Dominus: Lupus nimirum ſanctus queritur Moloſſos eſſe fanaticos. Germanus olim, cujus ille Lupus Trecaſſinus collega fuit, inceſto apud nos regi Vortigerno authoritate ſuâ regnum abrogavit. Sanctus itaque Lupus talem te Lupi non ſancti, ſed famelici, cujuſpiam & latrunculi dominum, illo apud Martialem viperarum domino viliorem, aſpernatur: qui & latrantem ipſe domi, ut ferunt, Lyciſcam habes, quæ tibi miſerè dominatur; cujus partim impulſu etiam ſcripſiſſe hæc diceris; unde mirum non eſt velle te regiam dominationem aliis obtrudere, qui fœmineum ipſe domi dominatum ferre tam ſerviliter aſſueviſti. Sis itaque Lupi Dominus, ſit Lupa tuî domina, ſis Lupus ipſe, ſis Lycanthropus, moloſſis mehercule Anglicanis ludibrium debes. Verùm lupos venari nunc non eſt otium; ſylvis itaque egreſſi, in viam regiam redeamus. Qui contra omnem in eccleſia primatum nuper ſcripſiſti, nunc Petrum Apoſtolicæ coronæ principem appellas. Quis tibi authoritate tam fluxâ homunculo fidem habeat? Quid Petrus? Subjecti eſtote omni humanæ ordinationi propter dominum, ſive regi ut ſupereminenti, ſive præſidibus, ut qui per eum mittantur, ad ultionem quidem facinoroſorum, laudem verò benefacientium; quoniam ita eſt voluntas dei. Scripſit hæc Petrus non ſolùm privatis, ſed etiam advenis per minorem ferè Aſiam diſperſis, atque diſpalatis; qui in iis ubi degebant locis nullius juris præterquam hoſpitalis capaces erant. An tu incolas, liberos, nobiles, indigenarum conventus, comitia, parlamenta idem in ſua patria, quod ſparſos & peregrinos in aliena decere putas? An idem privatos decere in ſua, quod ſenatores & magiſtratus, ſine quibus ne reges quidem eſſe poſſunt? Fac tamen indigenas fuiſſe, fac non privatos, ſed Senatum ipſum Romanum, cui hæc ſcripta ſunt. Quid inde aſſequeris? Cùm nullum præceptum cui ratio aliqua adjuncta eſt, quenquam ultra illam præcepti rationem obligare aut ſoleat aut poſſit. Eſtote ſubjecti, ὑποτάγητε, id eſt, ſi vim verbi ſpectes, ſubordinati, ſeu legitimè ſubjecti, ἡ γὰρ τάξις νόμος, inquit Ariſtoteles, lex eſt ordo. Subjecti eſtote propter dominum. Quamobrem? Quia cùm rex, tum præſes conſtituitur à deo ad ultionem facinoroſorum, laudem benefacientium. Quoniam ita voluntas eſt dei. Videlicet ut talibus obſequamur, quales hic deſcribuntur; de aliis nullum hic verbum. Vides quam optimè hujus præcepti conſtet ratio; addit. v. 16. ut liberi, non ergo ut mancipia. Quid ſi verſâ vice ad crucem & perniciem bonorum, ad impunitatem & laudem & præmia facinoroſorum regnent? An in perpetuum ſubjecti erimus non privati ſolùm, ſed primores, ſed magiſtratus omnes, ipſe denique Senatus? Annon humana ordinatio dicitur? Cur ergò poteſtas humana, ad conſtituendum quod hominibus bonum & ſalubre eſt, valebit ad tollendum quod iiſdem malum & exitioſum eſt, non valebit? Atqui rex ille cui ſubjecti eſſe jubentur, erat Romæ eâ tempeſtate Nero tyrannus; ergo tyrannis etiam ſubjecti eſſe debemus. At inquam, & dubium hoc eſt, Nero an Claudius tunc temporis rerum potiretur, & illi qui ſubjecti eſſe jubentur, advenæ, diſperſi, privati, non conſules, non prætores, non Senatus Romanus erant. Nunc Paulum adeamus (quoniam tu quod nobis de regibus licere non vis, id tibi de Apoſtolis licere autumas, ut principatum Petro modò des, modò eripias) Paulus hæc ad Romanos, c. 13. Omnis anima poteſtatibus ſupereminentibus ſubjecta eſto, non eſt enim poteſtas niſi à deo, quæ autem ſunt poteſtates à deo ſunt ordinatæ: Romanis hæc ſcribit, non, ut Petrus, advenis, diſperſis, ſed privatis tamen potiſſimùm & plebeiis; ita etiam ſcribit, ut totam reipub. adminiſtrandæ rationem, originem, finem luculentiſſimè doceat. Quo magis obedientiæ quoque noſtræ vera ac diſtincta ratio, ab omni ſervitute disjuncta eluceret. Omnis anima, hoc eſt quiſque homo ſubjectus eſto. Quid ſibi Apoſtolus proponat hoc capite ſatis explanavit Chryſoſtomus, ποιεῖ τοῦτο δεικνὺς, &c. facit hoc, inquit, ut oſtendat Chriſtum leges ſuas non ad hoc induxiſſe ut communem politiam everteret, ſed ut in melius ſtatueret. Non ergo ut Neronem, aut tyrannum quemvis alium ſupra omnem legem & pœnam conſtituendo, crudeliſſimum unius imperium in omnes mortales conſtabiliret. Utque ſimul doceret ſuperflua & inutilia bella non eſſe ſuſcipienda, non ergo bella damnat contra tyrannum, hoſtem patriæ inteſtinum, atque adeo periculoſiſſimum ſuſcepta. Pervulgatus tunc erat hominum ſermo traducens apoſtolos tanquam ſeditioſos, & novatores quaſi omnia ad evertendum leges communes & facerent & dicerent; his nunc ora obſtruit. Non ergo tyrannorum defenſiones conſcripſerunt apoſtoli, quod tu facis, ſed ea fecerunt, ea docuerunt, quæ ſuſpecta omnibus tyrannis defenſione apud illos potiùs, & interpretatione quadam egebant. Propoſitum Apoſtolo quid fuerit ex Chryſoſtomo vidimus; nunc verba ſcrutemur. Omnis anima poteſtatibus ſupereminentibus ſubjecta eſto, quæ tamen iſtæ ſint non ſtatuit: Non enim jura atque inſtituta omnium nationum abolere, unius libidini omnia permittere in animo erat. Certè optimus quiſque imperator authoritatem legum & Senatûs authoritate ſuâ longè ſuperiorem ſemper agnovit. Idem apud omnes nationes non barbaras jus ſemper ſanctiſſimum fuit. Unde Pindarus apud Herodotum, νόμον πάντων βασιλέα, legem omnium regem eſſe dixit; Orpheus in hymnis non mortalium ſolum, ſed immortalium etiam regem appellat.

Reddit rationem. Αὐτὸς γὰρ μοῦνος ζώων οἴηκα κρατύνει. Lex enim ſola viventium gubernaculum tenet. Plato in legibus τὸ κρατοῦν ἐν τῇ πόλει, id quod in civitate plurimum debet poſſe, legem eſſe aït. In epiſtolis eam maximè rempub. laudat, ubi lex, & domina & rex hominum, non homines tyranni legum ſunt. Eadem Ariſtotelis ſententia in Politicis, eadem Ciceronis in legibus, ita leges præeſſe magiſtratibus, ut magiſtratus præſunt populo. Cùm itaque ſapientiſſimorum virorum judicio, prudentiſſimarum civitatum inſtitutis lex ſemper poteſtas ſumma atque ſuprema habita ſit, nec evangelii doctrina cum ratione aut cum jure gentium pugnet, is utique poteſtatibus ſupereminentibus veriſſimè ſubjectus erit, qui legibus & magiſtratibus juxta leges Rempub. gubernantibus ex animo paret. Non ergo ſolùm populo ſubjectionem hanc, ſed regibus etiam præcipit; qui ſupra leges nequaquam ſunt. Non eſt enim poteſtas niſi à deo; id eſt nulla reipub. forma, nulla homines regendi legitima ratio. Antiquiſſimæ etiam leges ad authorem deum olim referebantur; eſt enim lex, ut Cicero in Philip. 12. nihil aliud niſi recta & à numine deorum tracta ratio, imperans honeſta, prohibens contraria. A deo igitur eſt magiſtratuum inſtitutio, ut eorum adminiſtratione gens humana ſub legibus viveret: hanc autem vel illam adminiſtrationis formam, hos vel illos magiſtratus eligendi optio procul dubio penes liberas hominum nationes ſemper fuit. Hinc Petrus & regem & præſides ἀνθρωπίνην κτίσιν, humanam creationem vocat; & Hoſea, c. 8. Conſtituunt reges, at non ex me; præficiunt principes quos non agnoſco. In iſtâ enim ſolâ Hebræorum repub. ubi deum variis modis conſulere poterant, de regis nominatione ad deum referri ex lege oportebat: Cæteræ gentes mandatum à deo nullum iſtiuſmodi accepimus. Aliquando aut ipſa regiminis forma, ſi vitioſa ſit, aut illi qui poteſtatem obtinent, & ab hominibus, & à diabolo ſunt. Luc. 4. Tibi dabo poteſtatem hanc omnem, nam mihi tradita eſt, & cui volo do illam. Hinc princeps hujus mundi dicitur, & Apocalyp. 13. dedit Beſtiæ Draco potentiam ſuam, & thronum ſuum, & poteſtatem magnam. Propterea neceſſe eſt hîc intelligi non poteſtates quaſcunque, ſed legitimas, prout etiam infra deſcribuntur; neceſſe eſt intelligi poteſtates ipſas, non ſemper eos qui imperium obtinent. Hinc dilucidè Chryſoſtomus, Quid aïs? inquit, omnis ergo princeps à Deo conſtitutus eſt? non dico: non enim de quovis principe, ſed de ipſa re loquitur Apoſtolus; non dicit, non eſt princeps niſi à Deo, ſed non eſt poteſtas. Hæc Chryſoſtomus. Quæ autem poteſtates ſunt, à Deo ſunt ordinatæ. Legitimas ergo vult hîc intelligi Apoſtolus; malum enim & vitium, cùm ataxía ſit, non eſt ut poſſit ordinari, & eſſe ſimul vitioſum. Hoc enim duo ſimul contraria ponit, taxin & ataxían. Quæ autem ſunt, ita interpretaris ac ſi diceretur, quæ nunc ſunt; quo faciliùs probare poſſis etiam Neroni, qui ut opinaris, tunc imperavit, Romanos obtemperare debuiſſe; noſtrâ ſanè bonâ veniâ: quàm enim voles de Anglicanâ repub. male ſentias, in eâ tamen Anglos acquieſcere debere, quoniam nunc eſt, & à Deo ordinatur, ut Neronis olim imperium, neceſſe habebis concedere. Neque enim Nero minùs quàm Tiberius artibus matris imperium nihil ad ſe pertinens occupaverat, ne legitimè partum fuiſſe reſpondeas. Quo ſceleratior & doctrinæ retractator ipſe tuæ, Romanos poteſtati quæ tunc fuit ſubjectos eſſe vis, Anglos poteſtati quæ nunc eſt, ſubjectos eſſe non vis. Verùm nullæ in hoc orbe terrarum res duæ magis è regione adverſæ ſibi ſunt, quàm tu nequiſſimus nequiſſimo ſemper ferè adverſus es tibi. Quid autem facies miſer? acumine hoc tuo regem adoleſcentem planè perdidiſti; ab ipſa enim tua ſententiâ extorquebo ut fatearis, hanc poteſtatem in Anglia, quæ nunc eſt, à Deo ordinatam eſſe; atque omnes proinde Anglos intra ejuſdem reipublicæ fines eidem poteſtati ſubjectos eſſe debere. Attendite igitur Critici, & manus abſtinete, Salmaſii nova hæc emendatio eſt, in epiſtola ad Romanos; non quæ ſunt poteſtates, ſed quæ nunc exiſtunt reddi debere adinvenit; ut Neroni tyranno tunc ſcilicet imperanti ſubjectos eſſe omnes oportuiſſe demonſtraret. At, ô bone, ληκύθιον ἀπώλεσας: ut regem modò, ita nunc interpretamentum hoc tam bellum perdidiſti. Quam tu epiſtolam ſub Nerone ſcriptam eſſe aïs, ſub Claudio ſcripta eſt principe ſimplici, & non malo: hoc viri docti certiſſimis argumentis compertum habent; quinquennium etiam Neronis laudatiſſimum fuit, unde argumentum hoc toties inculcatum, quod multis in ore eſt, multis impoſuit, tyranno parendum eſſe, eo quòd Paulus hortatus eſt Romanos ut Neroni eſſent ſubjecti, callidum indocti cujuſpiam commentum eſſe reperitur. Qui obſiſtit poteſtati, ſcilicet legitimæ, Dei ordinationi obſiſtit. Aſtringit etiam reges præceptum hoc, qui legibus & Senatui obſiſtunt. At verò qui poteſtati vitioſæ, aut poteſtatis non vitioſæ corruptori & everſori obſiſtit, an is Dei ordinationi obſiſtit? ſanus, credo, non dixeris. Tollit omnem dubitationem ſequens verſiculus, de legitima tantùm poteſtate Apoſtolum hic loqui. Definiendo enim explicat, nequis errare, & opiniones hinc ſtolidas occupari poſſit, qui ſint magiſtratus poteſtatis hujus miniſtri, & quam ob cauſam ſubjectos eſſe nos hortetur; Magiſtratus non ſunt timori bonis operibus, ſed malis, boni à poteſtate hac laudem adipiſcentur; Magiſtratus miniſter eſt Dei noſtro bono datus; non fruſtra gladium gerit, vindex ad iram ei qui malum facit. Quis negat, quis recuſat, niſi improbus, quin hujuſmodi poteſtati aut poteſtatis adminiſtro libens ſe ſubjiciat? non ſolùm ad vitandam iram & offenſionem, aut pœnæ metu, ſed etiam propter conſcientiam. Sine magiſtratibus enim, & civili gubernatione, nulla reſpublica, nulla ſocietas humana, nulla vita eſſe poteſt. Quæ autem poteſtas, qui magiſtratus contraria his facit, neque illa neque hic à Deo propriè ordinatus eſt. Unde neque tali vel poteſtati, vel magiſtratui ſubjectio debetur aut præcipitur, neque nos prudenter obſiſtere prohibemur: non enim poteſtati, non magiſtratui obſiſtemus, qui hic optimè depingitur, ſed prædoni, ſed tyranno, ſed hoſti; qui ſi magiſtratus tamen dicendus erit, eò duntaxat quòd habet poteſtatem, quòd ad pœnam noſtram ordinari à Deo videri poteſt, etiam Diabolus hoc modo magiſtratus erit. Sanè unius rei una vera definitio eſt: ſi ergò Paulus hîc magiſtratum definit, quod quidem accuratè facit, eadem definitione, iiſdem verbis tyrannum, rem maximè contrariam, definire non potuit. Unde quem ipſe magiſtratum definivit atque deſcripſit, ei duntaxat ſubjectos nos eſſe voluiſſe, non ejus contrario tyranno certiſſime colligitur. Propter hoc tributa ſolvitis; rationem adjungit ad præceptum; unde Chryſoſtomus, Cur, inquit, vectigalia regi damus? Annon tanquam nobis proſpicienti, curæ ac tuitionis mercedem ſolventes? atqui nihil illi ſolviſſemus, niſi ab initio utilem nobis talem eſſe præfecturam cognoviſſemus. Quapropter illud repetam quod ſupra dixi; quandoquidem ſubjectio hæc non ſimpliciter, ſed cum adjunctâ ratione à nobis requiritur, illa profectò ratio quæ adjungitur, ſubjectionis noſtræ vera norma erit: Cum iſta ratione non ſubjecti, rebelles; ſine iſta ratione ſubjecti, ſervi erimus & ſocordes. At Angli, inquis, nihil minùs quàm liberi, quia mali, quia flagitioſi. Nolo ego Gallorum vitia commemorare, quamvis ſub regibus ſint; neque Anglorum nimis excuſare; dico tamen illa eſſe flagitia, quæ ſub regibus tanquam in Ægypto didicerunt; neque dum in deſerto, licet Dei ſub imperio, dediſcere ſtatim potuerunt. Spes eſt tamen de pleriſque bona, ut ne ſanctiſſimos hic optimóſque viros & veritatis ſtudioſiſſimos collaudare incipiam; quorum apud nos non minorem credo eſſe numerum, quàm ubi tu maximum eſſe exiſtimas. At jugum Anglis durum imponitur. Quid ſi illis, qui jugum cæteris civibus imponere ſtudebant? Quid ſi ſuo deinde merito ſubactis? nam cæteri puto non moleſtè ferunt, exhauſto civilibus bellis ærario, ſumptibus propriis ſuam ſe tolerare libertatem. Relabitur jam ad Rabbinos nugivendos. Regem legibus aſtrictum eſſe negat, ex iis tamen probat læſæ majeſtatis reum eſſe poſſe, ſi jus ſuum patiatur imminui: aſtrictus itaque & non aſtrictus, reus & non reus rex erit: adeò frequenter enim ſolet repugnare ſibi, ut ipſa Repugnantia huic homini germana atque gemella eſſe videatur. Atqui Deus, inquis, multa regna Nebuchadnezzari in ſervitutem dedit. Fateor at certum tempus dediſſe, Jer. 27. 7. Anglos in ſervitutem Carolo Stuarto ad ſemihorulam dediſſe oſtende; permiſiſſe non negaverim, dediſſe nunquam audivi. Aut ſi Deus in ſervitutem dat populum, quoties tyrannus plus populo poteſt, cur non idem liberare dicendus erit, quoties plus poteſt populus tyranno? An is Deo tyrannidem ſuam, nos Deo libertatem noſtram acceptam non feremus? Non eſt malum in civitate quod Deus non immittat, Amos 3. famem, peſtilentiam, ſeditionem, hoſtem; ecquodnam horum civitas ab ſe non totis viribus amolietur? faciet profectò, ſi poſſit, quamvis ab ipſo Deo immiſſa hæc eſſe ſciat; niſi è cœlo ipſe ſecùs juſſerit. Cur non tyrannos pariter amovebit, ſi plus polleat; an ejus unius impotentiam ad commune malum eſſe magis à Deo credemus, quàm potentiam totius civitatis ad commune bonum? Abſit à civitatibus, abſit ab omni cœtu hominum ingeniorum doctrinæ tam ſtupidæ, támque peſtiferæ labes, quæ vitam omnem civilem funditus delet, gentem humanam univerſam propter unum atque alterum tyrannum, ad quadrupedum propè conditionem detrudit: cum illi ſupra omnem legem excelſi par in utrunque genus & pecudum & hominum jus atque imperium obtinebunt. Mitto jam ſtulta illa dilemmata, in quibus ut te jactes, neſcio quem fingis, poteſtatem illam ſupereminentem de populo velle intelligere; tametſi affirmare non dubito omnem magiſtratus authoritatem à populo proficiſci. Hinc Cicero pro Flacco, Illi noſtri ſapientiſſimi, & ſanctiſſimi majores, quæ ſciſceret plebs, quæ populus juberet, juberi vetaríque voluerunt. Hinc Lucius Craſſus Orator eximius, & Senatûs eo tempore princeps, cujus tum cauſam agebat ad populum. Nolite, inquit, ſinere nos cuiquam ſervire niſi vobis univerſis, quibus & poſſumus & debemus. Quamvis enim Senatus Populum regeret, populus tamen illam moderandi & regendi ſui poteſtatem ſenatui tradiderat. Unde majeſtatem, populo Romano frequentiùs quàm regibus olim attributam legimus. Idem Marcus Tullius pro Plancio. Eſt enim conditio liberorum populorum, præcipuéque hujus principis populi & omnium gentium domini, poſſe ſuffragiis vel dare vel detrahere quod velit cuique, noſtrum eſt ferre modicè populi voluntates: honores ſi magni non putemus, non ſervire populo; ſin eos expetamus, non defatigari ſupplicando. Egóne ut regem populi ſervum dicere metuam, cùm Senatus Romanus tot regum dominus ſervum ſe populi profeſſus ſit? Vera ſunt hæc, inquies, in populari ſtatu; nondum enim lex regia poteſtatem populi in Auguſtum, & ſucceſſores ejus tranſtulerat. Hem tibi ergò Tiberium illum quem tu tyrannum plus vice ſimplici fuiſſe aïs, ut revera fuit, is tamen dominus, etiam poſt legem illam regiam, appellatus à quodam, ut tradit Suetonius, denunciavit ne ſe ampliùs contumeliæ causâ nominaret. Audíſne? tyrannus iſte dominus dici contumeliæ ſibi duxit. Idem in Senatu, Dixi & nunc, & ſæpe aliàs, patres Conſcripti, bonum & ſalutarem principem, quem vos tanta & tam libera poteſtate inſtruxiſtis, Senatui ſervire debere, & univerſis civibus ſæpe, & plerunque etiam ſingulis; neque id dixiſſe me pœnitet; & bonos & æquos & faventes vos ha- bui Dominos, & adhuc habeo. Nec ſimulata hæc ab eo ſi dixeris, ut erat ſimulandi callidiſſimus, quicquam proficies; quis enim id videri ſe cupit, quod eſſe non debet? Hinc ille mos non Neroni ſolùm, quod ſcribit Tacitus, ſed cæteris etiam imperatoribus fuit, populum in Circo adorandi. De quo Claudianus, VI. Conſ. Honorii.

Qua adoratione quid aliud Imperatores Romani, niſi univerſam plebem, etiam poſt legem regiam, ſuos eſſe dominos fatebantur? Atque illud eſt quod initio ſtatim ſuſpicatus ſum, te gloſſariis pervolutandis, & tricis quibuſdam laborioſis magnificé divulgandis operam potiùs dediſſe, quàm bonis authoribus attentè & ſtudioſè perlegendis; qui veterum ſcriptorum ſapientia ne leviter quidem imbutus, rem præſtantiſſimorum opinionibus Philoſophorum, & prudentiſſimorum in republica principum dictis celebratiſſimam, novam eſſe prorſus & Enthuſiaſtarum tantummodò deliriis ſomniatam cenſes. Rogas, Cum reges Apoſtolus nominat, an de populo eos intelligemus. Pro regibus quidem orandum eſſe Paulus docet, 1 Tim. 2. 2. at prius pro populo orandum eſſe docuerat, v. 1. Sunt tamen & de regibus, & de populo nonnulli pro quibus orare etiam vetamur. Pro quo non orem, eúmne ex lege non puniam? quid vetat? Atqui cum hæc ſcriberet Paulus, imperabant vel peſſimi; hoc etiam falſum eſt, ſcriptam enim ſub Claudio & hanc Epiſtolam fuiſſe certiſſimis argumentis evincit Ludovicus Capellus. Si quid enim afferunt, quod Scriptura non exhibuit, eorum authoritatem, quantacunque ſit, meritò repudiamus. Quod autem ex Irenæo profers, reges Dei juſſu conſtitui aptos his qui in illo tempore ab iis reguntur, cum Scripturâ pugnat evidentiſſimè. Cum enim judices ad regendum populum ſuum aptiores regibus eſſe palàm ſignificâſſet Deus, id tamen totum voluntati atque arbitrio populi permiſit, ut aptiorem ſibi ſub optimatibus formam reipub. deteriore ſub regibus, ſi vellent, permutarent. Legimus etiam ſæpe regem malum bono populo datum, & contra, regem bonum populo malo. Virorum itaque ſapientiſſimorum eſt perſpicere quid populo aptiſſimum & utiliſſimum ſit: conſtat enim neque omni populo, neque eidem ſemper eundem reipub. ſtatum convenire, ſed vel hunc vel illum, prout civium virtus & induſtria nunc augeſcit, nunc minuitur. Qui tamen poteſtatem adimit populo eligendi ſibi quam velit reipub. formam, adimit profectò id in quo civilis libertas tota fere conſiſtit. Citas deinde Juſtinum Martyrem Antoninis imperatorum optimis obſequium deferentem; quis non iis tam egregiis & moderatis non detuliſſet? At quantò, inquis, nos hodie pejores Chriſtiani? Tulerunt illi principem diverſæ religionis. Privati ſcilicet, & viribus longè inferiores. Nunc ſanè pontificii regem non ferrent reformatum, nec reformati Pontificium. Facis tu quidem prudenter, ut oſtendas te nec pontificium eſſe, nec reformatum; facis etiam liberaliter; ultrò enim largiris quod nunc non petivimus, omnes hodie Chriſtianos in hoc planè conſentire, quod tu ſolus inſigni audaciâ atque ſcelere oppugnas, Patrum etiam quos laudas diſſimillimus; illi enim pro Chriſtianis ad profanos reges defenſiones conſcribebant, tu pro rege pontificio atque deterrimo contra Chriſtianos & Reformatos. Multa deinde ex Athenagora, multa ex Tertulliano futiliter depromis, quæ ab ipſis Apoſtolis multò clariùs & explanatiùs dicta jam ſunt. Tertullianus autem longiſſimè à te diſſentit, qui regem vis eſſe dominum: Quod tu aut neſciviſti, aut nequiter diſſimulâſti. Is enim Chriſtianus ad Imperatorem Ethnicum in Apologetico auſus eſt ſcribere non oportere imperatorem appellari Dominum. Auguſtus, inquit, imperii formator ne dominum quidem dici ſe volebat, hoc enim Dei eſt Cognomen: Dicam planè imperatorem dominum, ſed quando non cogor ut dominum dei vice dicam: Cæterùm liber ſum illi, Dominus meus deus unus eſt, &c. Et ibidem qui pater patriæ eſt, quomodo dominus eſt? Gratulare nunc tibi de Tertulliano, quem ſanè præſtabat miſſum feciſſe. At parricidas appellat qui Domitianum interfecerunt. Rectè appellat; uxoris enim & famulorum inſidiis, à Parthenio, & Stephano interceptarum pecuniarum reo eſt interfectus. Quod ſi Senatus Populúſque Romanus hoſtem judicatum, ut Neronem priùs judicabant, & ad ſupplicium quærebant, more majorum puniviſſent, eos parricidas appellaturum fuiſſe cenſes? Immo ſi appellâſſet, dignus ipſe ſupplicio fuiſſet; uti tu furcâ jam dignus es. Origeni reſponſum idem quadrabit quod Irenæo. Athanaſius reges terræ ad humana tribunalia vocare nefarium eſſe dicit. Quis hoc dixit Athanaſio? Verbum enim dei nullum hic audio. Credam itaq; ego imperatoribus potiùs & regibus de ſe falſum hoc eſſe fatentibus, quàm Athanaſio. Adfers deinde Ambroſium ex proconſule & catechumeno epiſcopum, verba illa Davidis, tibi ſoli peccavi, imperitè, ne dicam aſſentatoriè interpretantem. Volebat is omnes alios imperatori ſubjectos eſſe, ut imperatorem ipſe ſubjiceret ſibi. Quàm enim ſuperbè & faſtu plùs quàm pontificio Theodoſium imperatorem Mediolani tractaverit, cædis Theſſalonicenſis reum ipſe judicaverit, ingreſſu eccleſiæ prohibuerit, quàm ſe deinde novitium & rudem evangelicæ doctrinæ oſtenderit, omnibus notum eſt. Imperatorem ad pedes ejus provolutum excedere ſalutatorio juſſit; ſacris tandem reſtitutum, & poſtquam obtuliſſet, altari adſtantem his vocibus extra cancellos exegit: O imperator, interiora loca tantùm ſacerdotibus ſunt attributa, quæ cæteris contingere non licet. Doctórne hic Evangelii, an Judaïcorum pontifex rituum fuit? Hic tamen (quæ omnium ferè eccleſiaſticorum artes ſunt) imperatorem cæteris dominum impoſuit, ut imperatoris ipſe dominus eſſet. His itaque verbis Theodoſium tanquam ſibi ſubjectum repulit; Coæqualium hominum es imperator & conſervorum; unus enim omnium dominus rex & Creator. Bellè profectò; quam veritatem calliditas & aſſentatio epiſcoporum obſcuravit, eam iracundia unius, & ut molliùs dicam, zelus ineruditus protulit in lucem. Ambroſii imperitiæ tuam ſubjungis ignorantiam aut hæreſin, qui diſertè negas ſub veteri fœdere remiſſionem peccatorum per ſanguinem Chriſti locum tunc habuiſſe, cum David deo confitebatur ei ſoli ſe peccaviſſe. p. 68. Orthodoxi, non niſi per ſanguinem agni mactati ab initio mundi, peccata unquam remiſſa fuiſſe credunt; te novum hæreticum cujuſnam diſcipulus ſis neſcio; certè ſummi Theologi diſcipulus ille quem exagitas, à vero non aberravit, cum dixit potuiſſe quemvis è populo pari jure cum Davide deum his verbis inclamâſſe, tibi ſoli peccavi. Auguſtinum deinde oſtentas, Clericos Hipponenſes neſcio quos producis; nam Auguſtini quæ ſunt abs te allata nobis non obſunt. Quidni enim fateamur cùm propheta Daniële, deum tempora mutare, regna dare, & regna auferre, per homines tamen. Si regnum deus ſolus Carolo dedit, idem Carolo abſtulit, optimatibus & Populo dedit. Si eâ de causâ præſtandam Carolo obedientiam fuiſſe dicis, eandem nunc magiſtratibus noſtris præſtandam eſſe dicas neceſſe eſt. Nam deum & noſtris etiam magiſtratibus eandem dediſſe poteſtatem quam dat malis regibus ad caſtiganda populi peccata ipſe concedis ; noſtros itaque à deo pariter conſtitutos removere à magiſtratu nemo vel tuo judicio niſi deus poteſt. Atque ita, uti ſoles, tuum tibi ipſe mucronem in temet vertis, tuus tibi ipſe ſicarius es ; neque injuriâ, cum eò improbitatis & impudentiæ proceſſeris, eò ſtuporis & inſaniæ, ut quos digito violandos non eſſe tot argumentis probas, eoſdem omnium ſuorum bello perſequendos eſſe idem affirmes. Iſmaëlem Godoliæ Præfecti interfectorem ab Hieronymo parricidam eſſe nominatum aïs, & meritò ; præſidem enim Judææ, virum bonum, ſine ulla cauſa interemit. Idem Hieronymus in Eccleſiaſten, præceptum illud Solomonis Os regis obſerva, cum præcepto Pauli concordare dixit ; & laudandus quidem, quod locum iſtum cæteris ſui temporis moderatiùs expoſuit. Ad inferiora tempora poſt Auguſtinum non deſcendes, ut doctorum ſententiam exquiras. Ut omnes tamen intelligant faciliùs mentiri te poſſe quàm tacere, ſi quos adhuc haberes tuæ ſententiæ fautores, poſt unam ſtatim periodum non temperas tibi quò minùs ad Hiſpalenſem Iſidorum, Gregorium Turonenſem, Ottonem Frinſingenſem etiam in mediam barbariem deſcendas. Quorum authoritas quàm nullius apud nos pretii ſit ſi modò ſciviſſes, non huc eorum obſcurum teſtimonium per mendacium adduxiſſes. Vultis ſcire cur ad hæc tempora deſcendere non audet, cur abdit ſe, cur ſubitò evaneſcit ? Dicam : Quot ſunt Eccleſiæ reformatæ præſtantiſſimi doctores, tot videt acerrimos ſibi adverſarios fore. Faciat modò periculum, ſentiet quàm facilè reluctantem, omnes in unum vires conferentem, Lutheris, Zuingliis, Calvinis, Buceris, Martyribus, Paræis in aciem eductis fundam atque obruam. Leidenſes etiam tuos tibi opponam, quorum Academia, quorum reſpub. florentiſſima, libertatis olim domicilium, iſti denique literarum humaniorum fontes atque rivi, ſervilem illam æruginem tuam & innatam barbariem eluere non potuerunt. Qui cum Theologum Orthodoxum habeas neminem tibi faventem, quem tuo commodo nominare poſſis, omnium præſidio reformatorum nudatus confugere ad Sorbonam non erubeſcis : Quod tu Collegium doctrinæ pontificiæ addictiſſimum nullius apud Orthodoxos authoritatis eſſe non ignoras. Sorbonæ igitur abſorbendum tam ſceleratum tyrannidis propugnatorem tradimus ; tam vile mancipium, noſtrum eſſe nolumus ; qui populum univerſum regi ignaviſſimo parem eſſe negat. Fruſtra id in papam deonerare atque transferre contendis, quod omnes liberæ nationes, omnis religio, omnes Orthodoxi ſibi ſumunt, in ſe ſuſcipiunt. Papa quidem cum epiſcopis ſuis, dum tenuis, & nullarum virium erat tuæ hujus fœdiſſimæ doctrinæ author primus extitit : Iis demùm artibus magnas opes, magnamque potentiam paulatim adeptus, tyrannorum ipſe maximus evaſit. Quos tamen omnes ſibi firmiſſimè devinxit, cum populis, quorum animos jamdiu ſuperſtitione oppreſſos tenuerat, ſuaderet, non poſſe regibus quamlibet peſſimis, niſi ſe fidelitatis ſacramentum ſolvente, imperium abrogari. Verùm tu ſcriptores Orthodoxos devitas, & quæ communis & notiſſima ipſorum ſententia eſt, eam à Papa introductam eſſe cauſatus, veritatem in invidiam rapere conaris. Quod niſi aſtutè faceres, appareret te neque Papanum eſſe neque reformatum, ſed neſcio quem ſemibarbarum Edomæum Herodianum, qui tyrannum quemque immaniſſimum tanquam Meſſiam cœlo demiſſum colas atque adores. Demonſtrâſſe te hoc dicis ex doctrina patrum primorum quatuor ſæculorum, quæ ſola Evangelica & Chriſtiana cenſeri debet. Periit huic homini pudor ; quàm multa ſunt ab illis dicta atque ſcripta, quæ Chriſtus & Apoſtoli neque docuerunt neque approbârunt ? Quàm multa in quibus reformati omnes à patribus diſſentiunt ? Quid autem ex patribus demonſtraviſti ? Reges etiam malos à deo conſtitui. Fac eſſe conſtitutos, ut omnia etiam mala quodammodo à deo conſtituuntur : Eos proinde deum ſolum habere judicem, ſupra leges eſſe, nullâ lege ſcriptâ, non ſcriptâ, naturali, neque divinâ poſſe reos fieri à ſubditis, neque apud ſubditos ſuos. Quare ? Certè nulla lex vetat, nulla reges excipit : Ratio, & jus, & fas omne animadverti in omnes qui peccant indiſcriminatim jubet. Neque tu legem ullam ſcriptam, non ſcriptam, naturalem aut divinam protuliſti quæ vetaret. Cur ergò non in reges quoque animadvertendum ? Quia ſunt etiam mali à Deo conſtituti. Nebulonem te magis an bardum & caudicem eſſe dicam ? Nequiſſimus ſis oportet qui doctrinam pernicioſiſſimam in vulgus diſſeminare audeas, ſtupidiſſimus qui ratione tam ſtolidâ maximè nitaris. Dixit deus, Iſaiæ 54. Ego creavi interfectorem ad perdendum ; ergo interfector ſupra leges eſt ; excute hæc, & pervolve quantum voles, parem utrobique conſequentiam invenies. Nam & Papa etiam eodem modo quo tyrannus à deo eſt conſtitutus, & eccleſiæ in pœnam datus, quod ſupra ex ſcriptis etiam, tuis oſtendimus ; tamen quia in faſtigium poteſtatis non ferendum tyrannidi non abſimilis primatum ſuum evexit, cùm eum, tum epiſcopos meliori jure tollendos eſſe affirmas quàm fuere conſtituti. Wal. Meſ. p. 412. Papam & Epiſcopos quamvis ab irato deo conſtitutos ex eccleſiâ tollendos eſſe aïs, quia ſunt tyranni; tyrannos ex repub. tollendos eſſe negas quia ſunt ab irato deo conſtituti. Ineptè prorſus & abſurdè: Cum enim Papa ipſam conſcientiam, quæ ſola regnum ejus eſt, invito quoquam lædere non poſſit, eum qui revera tyrannus eſſe non poteſt, quaſi tyrannum graviſſimum tollendum eſſe clamas; tyrannum autem verum qui vitam & facultates noſtras omnes in poteſtate ſua habet, & ſine quo papa in eccleſiâ tyrannus eſſe nequit, eum in repub. omnino ferendum eſſe contendis. Hæc tua ſibi invicem collata tam imperitum te támque puerilem ſive falſi ſive veri argutatorem produnt, ut levitas tua, inſcitia, temeritas, incogitantia neminem poſthac latere queat. At ratio ſubeſt altera, rerum vices inverſæ viderentur, quippe in melius; actum enim eſſet de rebus humanis, ſi quæ res peſſimo loco ſunt, in eodem ſemper ſtarent: in melius inquam; authoritas enim regia ad populum rediret, ab cujus voluntate atque ſuffragiis profecta primò, atque in unum ex ſuo numero derivata erat: poteſtas ab eo qui injuriam intulit, ad eum qui injuriam eſt paſſus æquiſſimâ lege tranſiret; cùm tertius nemo inter homines idoneus eſſe poſſit, alienigenam enim judicare quis ferret? Omnes æquè homines legibus tenerentur, quo nihil juſtius eſſe poteſt: Deus mortalis nemo eſſet; quem qui inter homines conſtituit, non minùs in rempub. ſceleſtus eſt, quàm in Eccleſiam. Tuis iterum in te armis utar. Maximam hæreſin eſſe aïs, quâ creditur unum hominem in loco Chriſti ſedere: Duæ hæ notæ Antichriſtum ſignant, infallibilitas in ſpiritualibus, & omnipotentia in temporalibus, Apparat. ad Primat. pag. 171. An Reges infallibiles? Cur ergo omnipotentes? Aut ſi hoc ſunt, cur minùs exitiales rebus civilibus quàm Papa ſpiritualibus? An verò deus res civiles prorſus non curat? Si non curat, certè nos curare non prohibet; ſi curat, eandem in republicâ reformationem atque in Eccleſia vult fieri; præſertim ſi infallibilitatem & omnipotentiam attributam homini eaſdem malorum omnium utrinque cauſas eſſe exploratum ſit. Non enim in negotiis civilibus eam patientiam præcepit, ut ſæviſſimum quemlibet tyrannum reſpublica ferret, Eccleſia non ferret; immò contrarium potiùs præcepit: Et Eccleſiæ quidem nulla arma præter patientiam, innocentiam, preces, & diſciplinam evangelicam reliquit; reipublicæ & magiſtratibus ſimul omnibus non patientiam, ſed leges & gladium, injuriarum & violentiæ vindicem, in manus tradidit. Unde hujus hominis perverſum & præpoſterum ingenium aut mirari ſubit aut ridere; qui in Eccleſiâ, Helvidius eſt & Thraſeas & planè tyrannicida; in republicâ, commune omnium tyrannorum mancipium & ſatelles. Cujus ſententia ſi locum habeat, non nos ſolùm rebellavimus, qui regem, ſed reformati etiam omnes qui Papam dominum invitis regibus rejecerunt. Jam diu autem eſt quòd ſuis ipſe telis conciſus jacet. Sic enim homo eſt, modò manus adverſarii ne deſit, ipſe in ſe tela abundè ſuppeditat: Nec quiſquam ad refutandum ſe, aut irridendum commodiores anſas miniſtrat. Deſeſſus etiam cædendo citiùs quis abſcedat, quàm hic terga præbendo?

CAP. IV.

MAgnam à regibus iniiſſe te gratiam, omnes principes & terrarum dominos demeruiſſe defenſione hac regiâ te fortè putas, Salmaſi, cùm illi, ſi bona ſua, rémque ſuam ex veritate potiùs quàm ex adulationibus tuis vellent æſtimare, neminem te pejus odiſſe, neminem à ſe longiùs abigere atque arcere debeant. Dum enim regiam poteſtatem ſupra leges in immenſum extollis, admones eâdem operâ omnes ferè populos ſervitutis ſuæ nec opinatæ; eóque vehementiùs impellis ut veternum illum, quo ſe eſſe liberos inaniter ſomniabant, repentè excutiant; moniti abs te quod non putabant, ſervos ſe eſſe regum. Eóque minùs tolerandum ſibi eſſe regium imperium exiſtimabunt, quò magis tu iis perſuaſum reddideris tam infinitam poteſtatem non ſuâ patientiâ creviſſe, ſed ab initio talem atque tantam ipſo jure regio natam fuiſſe. Ita te tuámque hanc defenſionem, ſive populo perſuaſeris, ſive non perſuaſeris, omnibus poſthac regibus funeſtam, exitialem, & execrabilem fore neceſſe erit. Si enim populo perſuaſeris, ſuaſeris, jus regium omnipotens eſſe, regnum amplius non feret; ſi non perſuaſeris, non feret reges, dominationem tam injuſtam pro jure uſurpantes. Me ſi audiant, quibus integrum hoc eſt, ſéque circumſcribi legibus patiantur, pro incerto, imbecillo, violento imperio quod nunc habent, curarum atque formidinum pleno, firmiſſimum, pacatiſſimum ac diuturnum ſibi conſervabunt. Conſilium hoc ſibi, ſuíſque regnis adeò ſalutiferum ſi propter authorem contempſerint, ſciant non tam eſſe meum, quàm regis olim ſapientiſſimi. Lycurgus enim Spartanorum rex, antiquâ regum ſtirpe oriundus, cùm propinquos videret ſuos Argis & Meſſenæ rerum potitos, regnum quemque ſuum in tyrannidem convertiſſe, ſibique pariter ſuíſque civitatibus exitio fuiſſe, ut patriæ ſimul ſaluti conſuleret, & dignitatem in familia ſua regiam quàm diutiſſimè conſervaret, conſortem imperii ſenatum, & Ephororum poteſtatem in ipſum regem quaſi cenſoriam, firmamentum regno ſuo induxit. Quo facto regnum ſuis nepotibus firmiſſimum in multa ſecula tranſmiſit. Sive, ut alii volunt, Theopompi, qui centum ampliùs annis poſt Lycurgum Lacedæmone regnabat, ea moderatio fuit, ut popularem Ephororum poteſtatem ſuperiorem quàm ſuam conſtitueret, eóque facto gloriatus eſt, ſtabiliviſſe ſe regnum, multoque majus ac diuturnius filiis reliquiſſe; exemplum profectò haud ignobile hodierni reges ad imitandum habuerint, eundem etiam conſilii tutiſſimi authorem egregium. Majorem enim legibus dominum ut perferrent homines hominem omnes unum, nulla lex unquam ſanxit; ne potuit quidem ſancire. Quæ enim lex leges omnes evertit, ipſa lex eſſe non poteſt. Cùm itaque everſorem te, & parricidam legum omnium rejiciant ab ſe leges, exemplis redintegrare certamen, hoc capite, conaris. Faciamus itaque periculum in exemplis: Sæpe enim, quod leges tacent, & tacendo tantùm innuunt, id exempla evidentiùs docent. Ab Judæis auſpicabimur voluntatis divinæ conſultiſſimis; poſtea ad Chriſtianos tecum deſcendemus. Initium autem altiùs petitum ab eo tempore faciemus, quo Iſraëlitæ regibus quocunque modo ſubjecti, jugum illud ſervile cervicibus dejecerunt. Rex Moabitarum Eglon Iſraëlitas bello ſubegerat; ſedem imperii inter ipſos Hierichunte poſuerat: Numinis contemptor non erat, factâ enim dei mentione, è ſolio ſurrexit: Servierant Iſraëlitæ Egloni annos duodeviginti; non ut hoſti, ſed ut ſuo regi munus miſerant. Hunc tamen dum publicè munerantur ut regem ſuum, interficiunt per inſidias ut hoſtem. Verùm Ehudes qui interfecit, dei monitu id feciſſe creditur. Quid factum hujuſmodi commendare magis potuit? Ad honeſta enim quæque & laudabilia hortari ſolet Deus, non ad injuſta, infida, truculenta. Expreſſum autem dei mandatum habuiſſe nuſquam legimus, clamârunt filii Iſraëlis ad Jehovam; clamavimus & nos: Excitavit iis Jehova ſervatorem; excitavit & nobis. Ille ex vicino domeſticus, ex hoſte rex factus erat; noſter ex rege hoſtis; non ergò rex erat; nam neque civis ullo modo eſſe poteſt, qui reipublicæ eſt hoſtis; neque conſul habebatur Antonius, neque Nero imperator, ex quo uterque hoſtis à Senatu eſt judicatus. Quod Cicero quartâ Philippicâ de Antonio clariſſimè docet: Si Conſul Antonius, Brutus hoſtis; ſi conſervator Reipublicæ Brutus, hoſtis Antonius. Quis illum conſulem niſi latrones putant? Pari ego jure, quis tyrannum, inquam, regem niſi hoſtes patriæ putant? Fuerit itaque Eglon externus, fuerit Noſter domeſticus nécne, quandoquidem uterque hoſtis, & tyrannus, parùm refert. Si illum Ehudes jure trucidavit, nos noſtrum ſupplicio jure affecimus. Quin & heros ille Sampſon, incuſantibus etiam popularibus ſuis (Jud. 15.) An neſciebas Philiſthæos dominium habere in nos? Suis tamen dominis bellum ſolus intulit, neque unum ſed multos ſimul patriæ ſuæ tyrannos ſive dei, ſive propriæ virtutis inſtinctu occidit; conceptis priùs ad deum precibus ut auxilio ſibi eſſet. Non impium ergò ſed pium Sampſoni viſum eſt, dominos, patriæ tyrannos occidere; cum tamen pars major civium ſervitutem non detrectaret. At David, rex & propheta, noluit Saulem interimere unctum dei. Non quicquid noluit David, continuò nos obligat ut nolimus; noluit David privatus; id ſtatim nolle ſynedrium, Parlamentum, totum populum neceſſe eſt? Noluit inimicum dolo occidere, nolet ergò Magiſtratus noxium lege punire? Noluit regem occidere, timebit ergò Senatus tyrannum plectere? Religio erat illi unctum dei interficere, an ergò religio erit populo unctum ſuum capitis damnare? Præſertim qui unctionem illam vel ſacram vel civilem totus cruore civium delibutus tam longâ hoſtilitate aboleverat? Equidem reges, vel quos deus per prophetas unxit, vel quos ad certum opus, ſicuti olim Cyrum, nominatim deſtinavit, Iſa. 44. unctos domini agnoſco; cæteros vel populi, vel militum, vel factionis tantummodò ſuæ unctos eſſe arbitror. Verùm ut concedam tibi omnes reges eſſe unctos Domini; eſſe tamen idcirco ſupra leges, non eſſe ob ſcelera quæcunque puniendos, nunquam evinces. Quid enim? & ſibi & privatis quibuſdam interdixit David, ne extenderent manus ſuas in unctum domini. At regibus interdixit ipſe Dominus, Pſal. 105. ne attingerent unctos ſuos, id eſt populum ſuum. Unctionem ſui populi prætulit unctioni, ſiqua erat, regum. An ergò fideles punire, ſi quid contra leges commiſerint, non licebit? Unctum domini ſacerdotem Abiatharem prope erat ut rex Solomon morte multaret; neque illi, quòd unctus domini eſſet, pepercit, ſed quòd patris fuerat amicus. Si ergò ſummum ſacerdotem, ſummum eundem in pleriſque magiſtratum, unctio illa domini & ſacra & civilis eximere ſupplicio non potuit, cur unctio tantùm civilis tyrannum eximeret? At Saul quoque tyrannus erat, & morte dignus; eſto: non inde enim ſequetur, dignum, aut idoneum fuiſſe Davidem qui ſine populi authoritate, aut magiſtratuum juſſu Saulem regem quocunque in loco interficeret. Itáne verò Saul tyrannus erat? Utinam diceres; quinimmo dicis; cùm tamen ſuprà dixeris, cap. 2. pag. 32. Tyrannum non fuiſſe, ſed bonum & electum. Ecquid cauſæ eſt nunc cur in foro quadruplator aut falſarius quiſpiam ſtigmate notetur, tu eâdem careas ignominiæ notâ? cùm meliori profectò fide ſycophantari ſoleant illi, quàm tu ſcribere, & res vel maximi momenti tractare. Saul igitur, ſi id ex uſu eſt tuo, bonus erat rex, ſin id minùs tibi expedit, repentè non rex bonus, ſed tyrannus erit; quod certè mirum non eſt; dum enim potentiæ tyrannicæ tam impudenter lenocinaris, quid aliud facis quàm ex bonis regibus tyrannos omnes. At verò David quamvis regem ſocerum multis de cauſis, quæ ad nos nihil attinent, interimere nollet, ſui tamen tuendi cauſâ copias comparare, Saulis urbes vel occupare vel inſidere non dubitavit; & Cheilam oppidum contra Saulem etiam præſidio tenuiſſet, niſi oppidanos erga ſe malè animatos cognoviſſet. Quid ſi Saul urbe obſeſſâ, ſcalis muro admotis, primus aſcendere voluiſſet, an cenſes Davidem arma protinus abjecturum, ſuos omnes uncto hoſti proditurum fuiſſe? non exiſtimo. Quidni enim feciſſet quod nos fecimus, qui rationum ſuarum neceſſitate coactus, Philiſthæis patriæ hoſtibus operam prolixè ſuam pollicitus, id fecit contra Saulem quod nos in noſtrum tyrannum credo nunquam feciſſemus. Pudet me, & jam diu pertæſum eſt mendaciorum tuorum; Inimicis potiùs parcendum quàm amicis, Anglorum eſſe dogma fingis; ſéque regi ſuo parcere non debuiſſe, quia amicus erat. Quis unquam hoc priùs audivit, quàm à te confictum eſſet, hominum mendaciſſime? Verùm ignoſcimus: deerat nempe huic capiti præſtantiſſimum illud & tritiſſimum orationis tuæ pigmentum, jam quintò, & ante finem libri decies ex loculis tuis & myrotheciis expromendum, moloſſis ſuis ferociores. Non tam Angli ſuis moloſſis ferociores ſunt, quàm tu cane quovis rabido jejunior, qui ad illam, quam toties evomuiſti, cramben duris ilibus identidem redire ſuſtines. David denique Amalechitam interfici juſſit, Saulis, ut ſimulavit ipſe, interſectorem; nulla hic neque facti neque perſonarum ſimilitudo. Quòd niſi David ad Philiſthæos defeciſſe, & pars eorum exercitûs fuiſſe viſus, eò diligentiùs omnem à ſe ſuſpicionem maturandæ regi necis amovere ſtuduit, non erat, meo quidem judicio, cur virum illum tam malè exciperet, qui moribundum jam regem & ægrè morientem opportuno vulnere ſe confeciſſe nunciavit. Quod idem factum in Domitiano, qui Epaphroditum ſimiliter capite damnavit, eò quòd Neronem in adipiſcenda morte adjuviſſet, ab omnibus reprehenditur. Novâ deinde audaciâ quem tyrannum modò dixeras, & malo ſpiritu agitatum, hunc non jam ſatis habes unctum Domini, ſed Chriſtum Domini vocare; adeò tibi vile Chriſti nomen videtur, ut illo tam ſancto nomine vel Dæmoniacum tyrannum impertire non metuas. Venio nunc ad exemplum illud, in quo qui jus populi jure regis antiquius eſſe non videt, cæcus ſit oportet. Mortuo Solomone populus de conſtituendo ejus [illegible]o Sechemi comitia habebat; profectus eſt eò Roboamus candidatus, ne regnum tanquam hæreditatem adire, ne populum liberum tanquam paternos boves poſſidere videretur; proponit populus conditiones regni futuri; ad deliberandum rex triduum ſibi dari poſtulat; conſulit ſeniores; nihil illi de jure regio, ſed ut populum obſequio & pollicitationibus conciliet ſibi ſuadet, penès quem erat, vel illum creare regem vel præterire. Conſulit deinde æquales ſuos, ſecum à pueris educatos; illi Salmaſiano quodam œſtro perciti, nil præter jus regium intonare, ſcuticas & ſcorpiones ut minitetur hortari. Horum ex conſilio ſilio reſpondit Roboamus populo. Videns itaque totus Iſraël regem non auſcultâſſe ſibi, ſuam protinus libertatem & populare jus liberis palàm vocibus teſtatur, Quæ nobis portio cum Davide? ad tentoria tua Iſraël; jam ipſe videris de domo tui David. Miſſum deinde à rege Adoramum lapidibus obruerunt; exemplum fortaſſe aliquod etiam in regem edituri, niſi maxima celeritate ſe in fugam contuliſſet. Parat ingentem exercitum, quo in ſuam ditionem Iſraëlitas redigeret: prohibet Deus; ne aſcendite, inquit, ne pugnate contra fratres veſtros, filios Iſraëlis, nam à me facta eſt res iſta. Adverte jam animum; populus antea regem volebat, diſplicuit id Deo; eorum tamen juri noluit intercedere: nunc Populus Roboamum non vult regem, id Deus non ſolùm penès populum eſſe ſinit, ſed regem eo nomine bella moventem vetat ac reprimit: nec ideo rebelles, ſed nihilo minùs fratres eos qui deſciverant appellandos eſſe docet. Collige te nunc jam; ſunt omnes, inquis, reges à Deo, ergo populus vel tyrannis reſiſtere non debet. Viciſſim ego, ſunt, inquam, populi conventus, comitia, ſtudia, ſuffragia, plebiſcita pariter à Deo, teſte hîc ipſo; ergò & rex itidem reſiſtere non debet populo, authore etiam eodem Deo. Quàm enim certum eſt, eſſe hodie reges à Deo, quámque hoc valet ad imperandam populo obedientiam, tam eſt certum eſſe à Deo etiam hodie libera populi concilia, tamq; hoc valet vel ad cogendos in ordinem reges, vel ad rejiciendos; neque magis propterea bellum populo inferre debebunt, quàm debuit Roboamus. Quæris cur ergò non defecerint Iſraëlitæ à Solomone? Quis præter te tam ſtulta interrogaret, cum defeciſſe conſtat impunè à tyranno? In vitia quædam lapſus eſt Solomon; non idcirco ſtatim tyrannus: ſua vitia magnis virtutibus, magnis de repub. meritis compenſabat: fac tyrannum fuiſſe; ſæpe eſt ut populus nolit tyrannum tollere, ſæpe eſt ut non poſſit: ſatis eſt ſuſtuliſſe cum potuerit. At factum Jeroboami ſemper improbatum fuit & Apoſtaſia ejus deteſtata, ſucceſſores ejus pro rebellibus ſemper habiti. Apoſtaſiam ejus non à Roboamo, ſed à vero cultu Dei reprehenſam ſæpiùs lego; & ſucceſſores quidem ejus ſæpe reprobos, rebelles nuſquam dictos memini. Si quid fiat, inquis, juri & legibus contrarium, ex eo jus fieri non poteſt. Quid quæſo tum fiet juri regio? Sic tuus ipſe perpetuò refutator es. Quotidie, inquis, adulteria, homicidia, furta impunè committuntur. An neſcis nunc te tibi reſpondere quærenti cur toties tyrannis impunè fuerit? Rebelles fuerunt iſti reges, propheta tamen populum ab eorum ſubjectione non abducebant. Cur ergò, ſceleſte, & pſeudopropheta, populum Anglicanum à ſuis magiſtratibus, tuo ſint licèt judicio rebelles, abducere conaris? Allegat, inquis, Anglicani latrocinii factio, ſe ad id ſcelus, quod tam nefariè ſuſcepit, neſcio quâ voce cœlitùs miſſâ impulſos fuiſſe. Primùm delirâſſe te cùm hæc ſcriberes planè video, neque mentis neque latinitatis compotem ſatis fuiſſe: deinde Anglos hoc unquam allegâſſe, de innumeris mendaciis & figmentis tuis eſt unum. Sed pergo exemplis tecum agere; Libna Urbs validiſſima ab Joramo rege defecit, quia dereliquerat Deum; defecit ergò rex, non urbs illa, neque defectione iſta notatur; ſed ſi adjectam rationem ſpectes, approbari potiùs videtur. In exemplum trahi non debent hujuſmodi defectiones. Cur ergò tantâ vaniloquentiâ pollicitus es, exemplis te nobiſcum toto hoc capite decertaturum, cum exempla ipſe nulla præter meras negationes, quarum nulla vis eſt ad probandum, afferre poſſis: nos quæ certa & ſolida attulimus, negas in exemplum trahi debere? Quis te hoc modo diſputantem non explodat? Provocâſti nos exemplis; exempla protulimus; quid tu ad hæc? tergiverſaris, & diverticula quæris; progredior itaque. Jehu regem à Propheta juſſus occidit, etiam Achaziam ſuum regem legitimum occidendum curavit. Si noluiſſet Deus tyrannum interimi à cive, ſi impium hoc, ſi mali exempli fuiſſet, cur juſſit fieri? ſi juſſit, certè licitum, laudabile, præclarum fuit. Non tamen tyrannum perimi, quia Deus juſſit, idcirco bonum erat & licitum, ſed quia bonum & licitum erat, idcirco Deus juſſit. Jam ſeptem annos regnantem Athaliam Jehoiada ſacerdos regno pellere & trucidare non eſt veritus. At regnum, inquis, non ſibi debitum ſumpſerat. Annon Tiberius multò poſtea imperium ad ſe nihil pertinens? illi tamen, & id genus tyrannis aliis, ex doctrina Chriſti obediendum eſſe ſuprà affirmabas; ridiculum planè eſſet, ſi poteſtatem regiam non ritè adeptum interficere liceret, peſſimè gerentem non liceret. At per leges regnare non potuit utpote fœmina, conſtitues autem ſuper te regem, non reginam. Hoc ſi ſic abibit, conſtitues, inquam, ſuper te regem, non tyrannum. Pares ergo jam ſumus. Amaziam regem ignavum & idololatram non conjurati quidam, ſed principes & populus, quod veriſimilius eſt, morte affecerunt: nam fugientem Hieroſolymis, & adjutum à nemine, Lachiſum uſque perſecuti ſunt.

Hoc conſilium iniiſſe dicuntur ex quo is Deum deſeruerat, neque ullam ab Azaria filio de morte patris quæſtionem habitam fuiſſe legimus. Multùm rurſus nugaris ex Rabbinis, ut regem Judaïcum ſupra ſynedrium conſtituas; ipſa regis verba Zedechiæ non attendis. Jer. 38. Non is eſt rex qui poſſit contra vos quicquam. Sic principes alloquitur; faſſus ſe planè ſuo ſenatu inferiorem; Fortaſſe, inquis, nihil negare illis auſus metu ſeditionis. At tuum illud fortaſſe quanti quæſo eſt, cujus aſſeveratio firmiſſima non eſt pili? quid enim te levius, quid inconſtantius, quid inſtabilius? quoties te varium & verſicolorem, quoties tibimet diſcordem, diſſidentem à temetipſo, & diſcrepantem offendimus? Rurſus comparationes inſtituis Caroli cum bonis Judææ regibus. Davidem imprimis quaſi contemnendum aliquem nominas; Sume tibi Davidem, inquis, adulterii ſimul & homicidii reum; nihil tale in Carolo. Solomon ejus filius qui ſapiens audiit vulgo. Quis non indignetur maximorum & ſanctiſſimorum virorum nomina ab impuriſſimo nebulone & vappâ hunc in modum jactari? Túne Carolum cum Dávide, regem & prophetam religioſiſſimum cum ſuperſtitioſo & Chriſtianæ doctrinæ vix initiato, ſapientiſſimum cum ſtolido, fortiſſimum cum imbelli, juſtiſſimum cum iniquiſſimo conferre ſuſtinuiſti? Caſtimoniam tu ejus & continentiam laudes, quem cum Duce Bucchingamio flagitiis omnibus coopertum novimus? Secretiora ejus & receſſus perſcrutari quid attinet, qui in Theatro medias mulieres petulantur amplecti, & ſuaviari, qui virginum & matronarum papillas, ne dicam cætera, pertractare in propatulo conſueverat? Te porrò moneo Pſeudoplutarche, ut iſtiuſmodi parallelis ineptiſſimis dehinc ſuperſedeas, ne ego, quæ tacerem alioqui libens de Carolo, neceſſe habeam enuntiare. Contra tyrannos quid tentatum à Populo aut peractum fuerit, & quo jure, per ea tempora quibus ipſe Deus Hebræorum rempub. ſuo nutu ac verbo quaſi præſens regebat, hactenus liquet. Quæ ſequuntur ætates non nos ſua authoritate ducunt, ſed ad majorum ſuorum normam & rationem omnia dirigentes, imitatione ſua noſtram tantummodò confirmant. Cum itaque Deus poſt captivitatem Babylonicam nullum iis de repub. mandatum dediſſet novum, quamvis regia ſoboles extincta non eſſet, ad antiquam & Moſaicam reipub. formam reverterunt. Antiocho Syriæ regi, cui erant vectigales, ejuſque præſidibus, quòd is vetita imperaret, per Maccabæos pontifices reſtiterunt; ſeque armis in libertatem vindicarunt; digniſſimo deinde cuique principatum dederunt: donec Hyrcanus Simonis Judæ Maccabæi fratris filius, expilato Davidis ſepulcro, militem externum alere, & regiam quandam poteſtatem adjicere ſacerdotio cœpit; unde filius ejus Ariſtobulus diadema ſibi primus impoſuit. Nihil in eum populus quamvis tyrannum movit aut molitus eſt; neque mirum, annum tantummodò regnantem. Ipſe etiam morbo graviſſimo correptus, & ſuorum facinorum pœnitentia ductus mortem ſibi optare non deſtitit, donec inter ea vota expiravit. Ejus frater Alexander proximus regnabat. Contra hunc aïs neminem inſurrexiſſe, tyrannus cum eſſet. O te ſecurè mendacem! ſi periiſſet Joſephus, reſtaret tantum Joſippus tuus, ex quo phariſæorum quædam nullius uſus apophthegmata depromis. Res itaque ſic ſe habet; Alexander, cùm & domi & militiæ rempub. malè adminiſtraret, quamvis magna Piſidarum & Cilicum manu conductitia ſe tutaretur, populum tamen cohibere non potúit, quin ipſum etiam ſacrificantem, utpote indignum eo munere, thyrſis palmeis & citreis penè obrueret; exinde per ſexennium gentis ferè totius gravi bello petitus eſt; in quo Judæorum multa millia cùm occidiſſet, & pacis tandem cupidus interrogaret eos quid vellent à ſe fieri, reſponderunt uno ore omnes, ut moreretur; vix etiam mortuo ſe veniam daturos. Hanc hiſtoriam tibi incommodiſſimam, quoquo modo avertere ut poſſes, fraudi tuæ turpiſſimæ phariſaïcas quaſdam ſententiolas obtendiſti; cùm exemplum hoc aut omnino prætermiſiſſe, aut rem, ſicuti geſta erat, fideliter narraſſe debuiſſes, niſi veterator & lucifugus mendaciis longè plùs quàm cauſæ confideres. Quinetiam Phariſæi illi octingenti, quos in Crucem tolli juſſit, ex eorum numero erant, qui contra ipſum arma ceperant: quíque omnes cùm cæteris unâ voce teſtati ſunt, ſe regem morte affecturos fuiſſe, ſi bello victus in ſuam poteſtatem veniſſet. Poſt maritum Alexandrum Alexandra regnum capeſſit; ut olim Athalia, non legitimè, nam regnare fœminam leges non ſinebant, quod ipſe modò faſſus es, ſed partim vi, extraneorum enim exercitum ducebat; partim gratiâ, nam Phariſæos, qui apud vulgus plurimum poterant, ſibi conciliaverat hac lege, ut nomen imperii penès illam, imperium ipſum penès illos foret. Haud aliter atque apud nos nuper Scoti Presbyteri nomen Regis Carolo conceſſerunt, eâ mercede ut regnum ſibi reſervare poſſent. Poſt Alexandræ obitum Hyrcanus & Ariſtobulus ejus filii de regno contendunt; hic viribus & induſtriâ potior fratrem natu majorem regno pellit. Pompeio deinde in Syriam à Mithridatico bello divertente, Judæi nactos ſe jam æquiſſimum libertatis ſuæ arbitrum Pompeium rati, legationem pro ſe mittunt; fratribus utriſque regibus renunciant; ad ſervitutem ſe ab iis adductos queruntur; Pompeius Ariſtobulum regno privavit; Hyrcano pontificatum reliquit & principatum more patrio legitimum; exinde Pontifex & Ethnarcha dictus eſt. Iterum ſub Archelao Herodis filio Judæi, miſſis ad Auguſtum Cæſarem quinquaginta legatis, & Herodem mortuum & Archelaum graviter accuſârunt; regnum huic pro ſua virili parte abrogârunt, Cæſarem orant ut Populum Judaïcum ſine regibus eſſe permitteret. Quorum Cæſar precibus aliquantum permotus, non regem eum, ſed Ethnarcam duntaxat conſtituit. Ejus anno decimo rurſus eum Populus per legatos ad Cæſarem tyrannidis accuſat; quibus Cæſar benignè auditis Romam accerſitum, & judicio damnatum Viennam in exilium miſit. Jam mihi velim reſpondeas; qui ſuos reges accuſatos, qui damnatos, qui punitos volebant, annon ipſi, ſi poteſtas facta, ſi optio data ſibi eſſet, annon ipſi, inquam, judicio damnâſſent, ipſi ſupplicio affeciſſent? Jam in Romanos præſides avarè & crudeliter provinciam adminiſtrantes, populum & primores etiam ſæpiùs arma ſumpſiſſe non negas; cauſas more tuo ſtultiſſimas affingis, nondum jugo erant aſſueti; ſub Alexandro ſcilicet, Herode, ejúſque filiis. At C. Cæſari, & Petronio bellum inferre noluerunt. Prudenter illi quidem, non poterant. Vis ipſorum audire verba, πολεμεῖν μὲν ȣ̓ βȣλόμενοι διὰ τὸ μηδ' ἂν δύνασθαι. Quod ipſi fatentur imbecillitatis eſſe ſuæ, hoc tu hypocrita ad religionem refers: Magno dein molimine prorſus nihil agis, dum ex patribus probas, quod & antea tamen pari oſcitatione feceras, pro regibus orandum eſſe. Nam pro bonis quis negat? pro malis quoad ſpes eſt; pro latronibus etiam & pro hoſtibus; non ut agros depopulentur, aut nos occiſione occidant, ſed ut reſipiſcant. Oramus pro utriſque; illos tamen legibus, hos armis vindicare quis vetat? Liturgias Ægyptiacas nîl moror; ſacerdos autem ille qui orabat, uti aïs, ut Commodus patri ſuccederet, meo quidem judicio non orabat, ſed Romano imperio peſſima imprecatus eſt. Fidem, aïs, fregiſſe nos, de authoritate & majeſtate regis conſervanda ſolenni conventione non ſemel interpoſita. Expecto te fuſiùs iſta de re infrà, illic te rurſus conveniam. Redis ad patrum commentationes, de quibus hoc ſummatim accipe; Quicquid illi dixerint, neque ex libris ſacris aut ratione aliqua ſatis idonea confirmaverint perinde mihi erit, ac ſi quis alius è vulgo dixiſſet. Primum adfers Tertullianum, ſcriptorem haud orthodoxum, multis erroribus notatum, ut ſi tecum ſentiret, pro nihilo tamen hoc eſſet. Quid autem ille? damnat tumultus, damnat rebelliones; damnamus & nos, neque hinc ſtatim de jure omni populorum, de privilegiis, & Senatuſconſultis, de poteſtate magiſtratuum omnium cæterorum præterquam unius regis, præjudicatum eſſe volumus: loquuntur iſti de ſeditionibus temere conflatis, & multitudinis inſaniâ, non de magiſtratibus, non de Senatu, aut Parlamento ad legitima arma populum contra tyrannos convocante. Unde Ambroſius quem citas, Non repugnare, flere, gemere, hæc ſunt munimenta Sacerdotis, & quis eſt qui poteſt vel unus vel inter paucos dicere Imperatori, Lex tua mihi non probatur? non permittitur hoc dicere Sacerdotibus, permittetur Laïcis? Vides jam planè de quibus hic loquatur, de Sacerdotibus, de Laïcis privatis, non de Magiſtratibus: vides quàm infirma tamen & præpoſtera ratione uſus, diſſenſioni inter Laïcos & Sacerdotes, de legibus etiam civilibus, poſtmodùm futuræ facem prætulit. Sed quoniam primorum Chriſtianorum exemplis urgeri nos maximè, & redargui putas, quòd illi omnibus modis vexati bellum in Cæſares non moverent, oſtendam primò non potuiſſe, deinde quoties poterant moviſſe, poſtremò etiamſi, cum poſſent, non moviſſent, non eſſe tamen cæteroqui dignos quorum ex vitâ & moribus, tantis in rebus, exempla ſumamus. Primùm ignorare hoc nemo poteſt, ex quo Romana reſpublica nulla fuit, omnes imperii vires rerúmque ſummam ad unum Cæſarem rediiſſe; omnes legiones ſub uno Cæſare ſtipendia meruiſſe: adeò ut Senatus ad unum omnis, totus ordo Equeſter, plebs univerſa, ſi novis rebus ſtuduiſſet, poterant ſe quidem internecioni objeciſſe, ad libertatem tamen recuperandam nihil prorſus effeciſſent; nam imperatorem ſi forte ſuſtuliſſent, imperium tamen manſiſſet. Jam verò Chriſtiani, innumeri licet, at ſparſi, inermes, plebeii & plerunque infimi, quid potuerunt? quantam eorum multitudinem una legio in officio facile continuiſſet? Quod magni ſæpe duces cum interitu ſuo & veteranorum exercituum deletione incaſſum tentarunt, iſti è plebecula fere homuli poſſe ſe ad exitum perducere ſperarent? cum annis à Chriſto nato prope trecentis, ante Conſtantinum plus minus viginti, imperante Diocletiano, ſola Thebæa legio Chriſtiana eſſet; eóque ipſo nomine à reliquo exercitu in Gallia ad Octodurum oppidum cæſa eſt. Cum Caſſio, cum Albino, cum Nigro non conjurârunt: idne illis gratiæ vult apponi Tertullianus, quòd ſanguinem pro infidelibus non profuderunt? Conſtat igitur Chriſtianos ab imperatorum imperio liberare ſe non potuiſſe: cum aliis conjurare non Chriſtianis nequaquam ſibi expediviſſe, quamdiu imperatores Ethnici regnabant. Bellum autem tyrannis poſtea intuliſſe Chriſtianos aut armis ſe defendiſſe, aut tyrannorum facta nefaria ſæpe ultos eſſe nunc oſtendam. Primus omnium Conſtantinus jam Chriſtianus conſortem imperii Licinium Orientalibus Chriſtianis gravem bello ſuſtulit; quo facto illud ſimul declaravit, poſſe a magiſtratu in magiſtratum animadverti; cùm is Licinium pari jure ſecum regnantem ſubditorum ejus cauſâ ſupplicio affecerit, nec Deo ſoli pœnam reliquerit: poterat enim Licinius Conſtantinum, ſi Conſtantinus populum ſibi attributum iis modis oppreſſiſſet, eodem ſupplicio affeciſſe. Poſtquam igitur à Deo ad homines redacta res eſt, quod Licinio Conſtantinus erat, cur non idem Carolo Senatus? Conſtantinum enim milites, Senatum jura conſtituerunt regibus parem, immo ſuperiorem. Conſtantio imperatori Ariano Byzantini, quoad poterant, armis reſtiterunt; miſſum cum militibus Hermogenem, ad pellendum eccleſiâ Paulum orthodoxum epiſcopum, facto impetu repulerunt, & incenſis ædibus, quo ſe receperat, ſemiuſtum & laniatum interfecerunt. Conſtans fratri Conſtantio bellum minatur, ni Paulo & Athanaſio epiſcopis ſedes ſuas reſtituat; vidéſne ut iſtos ſanctiſſimos patres, de epiſcopatu cùm agitur, bellum fraternum in regem ſuum concitare non puduit? Haud multò pòſt Chriſtiani milites, qui tunc temporis quos volebant imperatores creabant, Conſtantem Conſtantini filium diſſolutè & ſuperbè regnantem interfecerunt, tranſlato ad Magnentium imperio. Quid? qui Julianum nondum apoſtatam, ſed pium & ſtrenuum, invito Conſtantio imperatore ſuo imperatorem ſalutârunt, annon ex illis Chriſtianis fuerunt, quos tu exemplo nobis proponis? Quod factum Conſtantius cum ſuis literis ad populum recitatis acriter prohiberet, clamarunt omnes, feciſſe ſe ut Provincialis, & miles, & reipublicæ authoritas decreverat. Iidem bellum Conſtantio indixerunt, & quantum in ſe erat, imperio ac vita ſpoliarunt. Quid Antiocheni, homines apprimè Chriſtiani? orarunt credo pro Juliano jam Apoſtatâ, quem palàm adire, & convitiis proſcindere ſolebant, cujus barbam illudentes promiſſam, funes ex ea conficere jubebant. Cujus morte audita, ſupplicationes, epulas, & lætitiam publicè indixerunt, ejus pro vita & incolumitate preces fudiſſe cenſes? Quid? quòd eundem etiam à Chriſtiano commilitone interfectum eſſe ferunt. Sozomenus certè ſcriptor eccleſiaſticus non negat; immo, ſiquis ita feciſſet, laudat. οὐ γὰρ ἀπεικὸς τινα τῶν τότε στρατευομένων, &c. Non eſt mirum, inquit, aliquem ex militibus hoc ſecum cogitaſſe; non Græcos ſolum, ſed omnes homines ad hanc uſque ætatem tyrannicidas laudare ſolitos eſſe, qui pro omnium libertate mortem oppetere non dubitant; nec temere quis hunc militem reprehendat, dei & religionis cauſâ tam ſtrenuum? Hæc Sozomenus ejuſdem ætatis ſcriptor, vir bonus & ſanctus; ex quo quid reliqui eâ tempeſtate viri boni hac de re ſenſerint, facilè perſpicimus. Ipſe Ambroſius ab imperatore Valentiniano minore juſſus urbe Mediolano excedere, parere noluit, ſed circumſeptus armato populo ſe atque baſilicam ſuam contra regios præfectos armis defendit; & ſummæ poteſtati reſiſtere, contra quam docuit ipſe, eſt auſus. Conſtantinopoli haud ſemel propter exilium Chryſoſtomi contra Arcadium imperatorem ſeditio maxima commota eſt. In tyrannos igitur quid antiqui Chriſtiani fecerint, non milites ſolùm, ſed populus, ſed ipſi patres, vel reſiſtendo, vel gerendo bellum, vel concitando, uſque ad Auguſtini tempora, quoniam tibi ulteriùs progredi non libet, breviter expoſui. Valentinianum enim Placidiæ filium interfectum à Maximo patricio, ob ſtuprum uxori ejus illatum, taceo: Avitum etiam imperatorem dimiſſis militibus ſuis luxuriâ diffluentem à Senatu Romano confeſtim exutum imperio non memoro; quia annos aliquot poſt Auguſtini obitum iſta acciderunt. Verùm dono tibi hoc omne, tu nihil horum expoſuiſſe me finge, paruerint per omnia ſuis regibus veteres Chriſtiani, quicquam contra tyrannos ne fecerint, aut feciſſe voluerint, non eſſe tamen eos quorum authoritate niti debeamus, aut à quibus exempla petere ſalutariter poſſimus, quod ſupereſt, nunc docebo. Jam diu antè Conſtantinum populus chriſtianus multum de primæva illa ſanctimonia & ſinceritate cùm doctrinæ tum morum deperdiderat. Poſtquam immenſis opibus ditata ab eo eccleſia, honores, dominatum, & potentiam civilem adamare cœpit, ſtatim omnia in præceps ruere. Primò luxus & ſegnities, errorum deinde omnium & vitiorum caterva, veluti ſolutis aliunde carceribus, in eccleſiam immigravit; hinc invidentia, odium, diſcordia paſſim redundabat; tandem haud mitius inter ſe chariſſimo religionis vinculo fratres quàm hoſtes acerrimi diſſidebant; nullus pudor, nulla officii ratio reſtabat; milites, & copiarum præfecti, quoties ipſis viſum erat, nunc imperatores novos creabant, nunc bonos pariter ac malos necabant. Quid Vetranniones & Maximos, quid Eugenios à militibus ad imperium ſubito evectos, quid Gratianum optimum principem, quid Valentinianum minorem non peſſimum, occiſos ab iis commemorem? Militum hæc quidem facinora & caſtrenſium, ſed tamen Chriſtianorum illius ætatis, quam tu maximè evangelicam & imitandam eſſe aïs. Jam ergò de eccleſiaſticis pauca accipe: paſtores & Epiſcopi, & nonnunquam illi, quos admiramur, patres, ſui quiſque gregis ductores, de epiſcopatu non ſecus quàm de tyrannide certabant: nunc per urbem, nunc in ipſa eccleſia, ad ipſum altare ſacerdotes, & Laïci promiſcuè digladiabantur; cædes faciebant, ſtrages utrinque magnas nonnunquam ediderunt. Damaſi & Urſicini, qui cum Ambroſio floruerunt, potes meminiſſe. Longum eſſet Byzantinos, Antiochenos, & Alexandrinos illos tumultus, ſub Cyrillo præſertim, quem tu laudas obedientiæ prædicatorem, duce ac patre; occiſo pæne à monachis, in ullo urbico prælio, Oreſte Theodoſii præfecto. Jam tua quis vel impudentia vel ſupinitate non obſtupeſcat? Uſque ad Auguſtinum, inquis, & infra ejus ætatem, nulla cujuſquam privati aut præfecti, aut plurium conjuratorum extat in hiſtoriis mentio, qui regem ſuum necaverint, aut contra eum armis pugnarint: nominavi ego ex hiſtoriis notiſſimis & privatos, & proceres, qui non malos tantùm, ſed, vel optimos reges ſuâ manu trucidaverint; totos chriſtianorum exercitus, multos cum iis epiſcopos, qui contra ſuos imperatores pugnaverint. Adſers patres, obedientiam erga regem, multis verbis aut ſuadentes aut oſtentantes; adfero ego partim eoſdem, partim alios patres haud paucioribus factis obedientiam, etiam licitis in rebus, detrectantes, armis ſe contra imperatorem defendentes, alios præſidibus ejus vim & vulnera inferentes, alios, epiſcopatûs competitores, civilibus præliis inter ſe dimicantes; ſcilicet de epiſcopatu chriſtianos cum chriſtianis, cives cum civibus confligere fas erat, de libertate, de liberis & conjugibus, de vita, cum tyranno, nefas. Quem non pœniteat hujuſmodi patrum? Auguſtinum inducis de poteſtate domini in ſervos, & regis in ſubditos idem pronunciantem; reſpondeo, iſta ſi dicat Auguſtinus, ea dicere quæ neque Chriſtus neque ejus Apoſtoli unquam dixerunt; cùm eorum tamen ſolâ authoritate rem alioqui apertiſſimè falſam commendare videatur. Quæ ſuperſunt hujus capitis tres vel quatuor paginæ, aut mera eſſe mendacia, aut oſcitationes identidem repetitas, ex iis quæ à nobis reſponſa jam ſunt, per ſe quiſque deprehendet. Nam ad Papam quod attinet, in quem multa gratis peroras, facilè te patior ad ravim uſque declamitare. Quod tamen ad captandos rerum imperitos tam prolixè adſtruis, regibus ſive juſtis ſive tyrannis ſubjectum fuiſſe omnem chriſtianum, donec poteſtas papæ regali major agnoſci cœpta eſt, & ſubjectos ſacramento fidelitatis liberavit, id eſſe falſiſſimum plurimis exemplis & uſque ad Auguſtinum, & infra ejus ætatem prolatis demonſtravimus. Sed neque illud quod poſtremò dicis, Zachariam pontificem Gallos juramento fidelitatis abſolviſſe, multò verius eſſe videtur. Negat Franciſcus Hotomanus, & Gallus, & juriſconſultus, & vir doctiſſimus in Francogallia ſua, cap. 13. abdicatum authoritate Papæ Chilpericum, aut regnum Pipino delatum; ſed in magno gentis concilio pro ſua priſtina authoritate tranſactum fuiſſe id omne negotium, ex annalibus Francorum vetuſtiſſimis probat. Solvi deinde illo ſacramento Gallos omnino opus fuiſſe, negant ipſa Gallorum monumenta, negat ipſe papa Zacharias. Monumentis enim Francorum traditur, teſte non ſolùm Hotomano, ſed Girardo hiſtoriarum illius gentis notiſſimo ſcriptore, veteres Francos ut eligendi, ſic abdicandi, ſi videretur, ſuos reges jus ſibi omne antiquitus reſervaſſe; neque aliud ſacramentum regibus, quos creabant, dicere conſueviſſe, quàm ſe illis hoc pacto fidem & officium præſtituros, ſi viciſſim illi quod eodem tempore jurati etiam ſpondent, præſtiterint. Si ergò Reges rempublicam ſibi commiſſam malè gerendo, fidem jusjurandi fregerint priores, nil opus eſt Papâ, ipſi ſua perfidia populum ſacramento ſolverunt. Papa denique Zacharias, quam tu authoritatem ſibi aïs arrogâſſe, eam in epiſtolâ illâ ad Francos ab te citatâ ipſe ſibi derogavit, populo attribuit. Nam ſi princeps populo, cujus beneficio regnum poſſidet, obnoxius eſt, ſi plebs regem conſtituit, & deſtituere poteſt, quæ ipſius verba ſunt Papæ, veriſimile non eſt voluiſſe Francos de antiquo jure ſuo, ullo poſtmodùm jurejurando, præjudicium facere; aut unquam ita ſeſe obſtrinxiſſe, quin ſemper ſibi liceret quod majoribus ſuis licuit, reges bonos quidem colere, malos amovere; nec eam præſtare fidem tyrannis, quam bonis regibus ſeſe dare arbitrati ſunt. Tali obſtrictum juramento populum, vel tyrannus ex rege factus, vel ignaviâ corruptus, ſuo ipſe perjurio ſolvit, ſolvit ipſa juſtitia, ſolvit naturæ lex ipſa: Unde pontifex quod ſolveret, etiam ipſius pontificis judicio nihil prorſus erat.

CAP. V.

QUanquam in ea ſum opinione, Salmaſi, ſempérque fui, legem dei cum lege naturæ optimè conſentire, adeóque, ſi ſatis oſtendi quid divina lege ſit de regibus ſtatutum, quid à populo dei factum & Judaïco & Chriſtiano, oſtendiſſe me eodem tempore eadémque operâ quid legi naturali maximè conſentaneum ſit; tamen quia confutari nos lege naturæ validiſſimè nunc poſſe arbitraris, quod ſupervacuum eſſe modò exiſtimabam, id nunc ultrò neceſſarium fatebor; ut contra te hoc capite planum faciam, nihil congruentius naturæ etiam legibus eſſe, quàm tyrannos plecti. Id niſi evincam, non recuſo quin dei quoque legibus puniri non poſſe, è veſtigio tibi concedam. Non eſt conſilium de natura jam, déque origine civilis vitæ longam orationem contexere; iſtud enim argumentum viri diſertiſſimi cùm Græci tum Latini copioſè pertractarunt; ipſe & brevitati, quantum licet, ſtudeo, & huic rei do operam ut non tam ego, qui labori huic parſiſſem libens, ſed tute redarguas, téque ſubvertas. Ab eo igitur quod ipſe ponis, incipiam, & diſputationis hujus futuræ fundamenta jaciam. Lex, inquis, naturæ eſt ratio omnium hominum mentibus inſita, bonum reſpiciens univerſorum populorum, quatenus homines inter ſe ſocietate gaudent. Bonum illud commune non poteſt procurare, niſi etiam, ut ſunt quos regi neceſſe eſt, diſponat quoque qui regere debeant. Ne ſcilicet ut quiſque fortior eſt, debiliorem opprimat; atque ita quos mutua ſalus ac defenſio unum in locum congregaverat, vis atque injuria diſtrahat, & ad vitam agreſtem redire cogat. Eſtne hoc quod volebas, etſi verboſiús? Et ipſorum itaque numero qui in unum convenère, deligi aïs oportuiſſe quoſdam ſapientia aut fortitudine cæteris præſtantes, qui vel vi vel perſuadendo malè morigeros in officio continerent, ſæpe unum id præſtare potuiſſe, cujus excellens ſit virtus & prudentia; interdum plures, qui mutuis conſiliis id faciant. Cæterùm cum unus omnia providere & adminiſtrare non poſſit, neceſſe eſt ut conſilia cum pluribus participet, & in ſocietatem regiminis alios admittat. Ita ſive ad unum revocetur imperium, ſive ad univerſum redeat populum, quia nec omnes ſimul rempub. gubernare poſſunt, nec unus omnia, ideo revera penes plures ſemper regimen conſiſtit. Et infra. Ipſa autem regendi ratio ſive per plures, ſive per pauciores, ſive per unum diſpenſetur, æquè naturalis eſt, cum ex naturæ ejuſdem principiis deſcendat, quæ non patitur ita unius ſingularitatem gubernare, ut non alios ſocios imperandi habeat. Hæc cum ex Ariſtotelis tertio Politicorum decerpſiſſe potueram, malui abs te decerpta tranſcribere, quæ tu Ariſtoteli, ut ignem Jovi Prometheus, ad everſionem monarcharum, & perniciem ipſius tuam ſurripuiſti. Jam enim prolatam à temetipſo naturæ legem excute quantum voles; nullum juri regio, prout tu jus illud explicas, in natura locum, nullum ejus veſtigium prorſus invenies. Lex, inquis, natura cum diſponeret qui regere alios deberent, univerſorum populorum bonum reſpexit. Non igitur unius, non monarchæ. Eſt itaque rex propter populum: Populus ergò rege potior & ſuperior; ſuperior cum ſit & potior populus, nullum jus regis exiſtere poteſt, quo populum is affligat, aut in ſervitute habeat, inferior ſuperiorem. Jus malè faciendi cum ſit regi nullum, manet jus populi naturâ ſupremum; ut quo jure homines conſilia & vires mutuæ defenſionis gratia, ante reges creatos, primò conſociavere, quo jure ad communem omnium ſalutem, pacem, libertatem conſervandam unum vel plures cæteris præfecerunt, eodem jure quos propter virtutem & prudentiam cæteris præpoſuerant, poſſent eoſdem aut quoſcunque alios rempub. malè gerentes, propter ignaviam, ſtultitiam, improbitatem, perfidiam vel coercere vel abdicare : Cum natura non unius vel paucorum imperium, ſed univerſorum ſalutem reſpexerit ſemper & reſpiciat. Jam verò populus quoſnam delegit ? Sapientiâ inquis aut fortitudine cæteris præſtantes, nempe qui natura maximè regno idonei viſi ſunt, cujus excellens virtus, & prudentia præſtare id muneris potuit. Jus igitur ſucceſſionis naturâ nullum, nullus naturâ rex, niſi qui ſapientiâ & fortitudine cæteris omnibus præcellit. Cæteri vel vi, vel factione contra naturam reges ſunt, cum ſervi potiùs eſſe deberent. Dat enim natura ſapientiſſimo cuique in minùs ſapientes imperium, non viro malo in bonos, non ſtolido in ſapientes : His igitur imperium qui abrogant, omnino convenienter naturæ faciunt. Cui fini ſapientiſſimum quemque natura conſtituat regem ex temetipſo audi ; ut vel naturæ vel legibus malè morigeros in officio contineat. Continere autem in officio poteſtne is alios, officium qui negligit, aut neſcit, aut pervertit ipſe ſuum ? Cedò jam quodvis naturæ præceptum quo jubeamur inſtituta naturæ ſapientiſſima in rebuſpublicis & civilibus non obſervare, non curare, pro nihilo habere, cum ipſa in rebus naturalibus & inanimatis ne ſuo fine fruſtretur, ſæpiſſimè res magnas atque miras efficere ſoleat. Oſtende ullam vel naturæ vel naturalis juſtitiæ regulam, quâ oporteat reos minores puniri, reges & malorum omnium principes impunitos eſſe, immò inter maxima flagitia coli, adorari, & deo proximos haberi. Concedis ipſam regendi rationem, ſive per plures, ſive per pauciores, ſive per unum diſpenſetur, æquè naturalem eſſe. Non eſt ergò rex vel optimatibus vel populi magiſtratibus naturâ ſanctior, quos cùm puniri poſſe ac debere, ſi peccant, ſuprà ſis largitus, idem de regibus, eidem fini ac bono conſtitutis fateare neceſſe eſt. Non enim patitur natura, inquis, ita unius ſingularitatem gubernare, ut non alios ſocios imperandi habeat. Minimè ergò patitur monarcham, minimè unum ita imperare, ut cæteros omnes ſui unius imperii ſervos habeat. Socios autem imperandi qui tribuis regi, penès quos ſemper regimen conſiſtat, das eidem collegas, & æquales ; addis qui punire, addis qui abdicare poſſint. Ita, uti ſemper facis, dum poteſtatem regiam, non jam exauges, ſed tantummodò naturâ conſtituis, aboles : Adeò ut nihil putem inauſpicatius accidere regibus potuiſſe, quàm te defenſorem. O infelicem ac miſerum, quæ te mentis caligo in hanc impulit fraudem, ut latentem antehac diu, & quaſi perſonatam improbitatem atque inſcitiam tuam nunc tanto conatu inſciens nudares ipſe, & omnibus patefaceres : Tuoquemet opprobrio operam ipſe tuam locares, tuo ipſe ludibrio tam gnaviter inſervires ? Quæ te ira numinis quáſve pœnas luentem, in lucem & ora hominum evocavit, ut tanto apparatu cauſam teterrimam impudentiſſimè ſimul & ſtolidiſſimè defenderes, atque ita defendendo invitus, perque inſcitiam proderes ? Quis te pejùs perditum vellet, quis miſeriorem, cui jam ſola imprudentia, ſola vecordia ſaluti eſſe poteſt ne ſis miſerrimus, ſi tyrannos quorum cauſam ſuſcepiſti, imperita ac ſtulta defenſione tanto magis inviſos ac deteſtabiles omnibus, contra quam ſperabas, reddideris, quanto iis majorem malefaciendi & impunè dominandi licentiam de induſtriâ attribueris ; eoque plures eorundem hoſtes inconſultò excitaveris ? Sed redeo ad tua tecum diſſidia. Cum tantum in te ſcelus admiſeris, ut tyrannidem naturâ fundare ſtudeas, præ cæteris gubernandi rationibus monarchiam primò laudandam tibi eſſe vidiſti ; id, uti ſoles, incœptare ſine repugnantia nequis. Cum enim modò dixeras, ipſam regendi rationem ſive per plures ſive per pauciores ſive per unum æque naturalem eſſe, ſtatim eam quæ per unum exercetur ex his tribus magis naturalem eſſe aïs, immò qui etiam recens dixeras, non patitur natura unius ſingularitatem gubernantis. Jam tyrannorum necem objice cui voles, qui & monarchas omnes, & monarchiam ipſam tua fatuitate jugulâſti. Verùm quæ ſit melior adminiſtrandi rempub. ratio, per unum an per plures, non eſt nunc diſſerendi locus. Et monarchiam quidem multi celebres viri laudarunt, ſi tamen is qui ſolus regnat, vir omnium optimus, & regno digniſſimus ſit ; id niſi contingat, nihil monarchia procliviùs in eam tyrannidem, quæ peſſima eſt, labitur. Jam quòd ad unius exemplar dei expreſſam eſſe dicis, quis potentiam divinæ ſimilem in terris obtinere dignus eſt, niſi qui cæterorum omnium longè præſtantiſſimus, etiam bonitate ac ſapientia eſt deo ſimillimus ; is autem ſolus, meâ quidem ſententiâ, expectatus ille dei filius eſt. Quòd regnum in familiam rurſus contrudis, ut patrifamilias regem aſſimiles, pater certè ſuæ familiæ regnum meretur, quam omnem vel generavit, vel alit : In rege nihil eſt hujuſmodi, ſed planè contrà ſunt omnia. Animalia deinde nobis gregalia, imprimis aves, & in iis apes, ſiquidem te Phyſiologo aves iſtæ ſunt, imitandas proponis. Apes regem habent. Tridentinæ ſcilicet, annon meminiſti? Cæterarum te teſte reſpub. eſt. Verùm tu deſine de apibus fatuari, muſarum ſunt, oderunt te ſcarabæum, & ut vides, redarguunt. Coturnices ſub Ortygometra. Iſtos onocrotalis tuis tende laqueos; nos tam ſtolido aucupio non capimur. Atqui jam tua res agitur, non noſtra, Gallus gallinaceus, inquis, tam maribus quàm fœminis imperitat. Qui pote hoc fieri? Cum tu ipſe Gallus, &, ut ferunt, vel nimiùm gallinaceus, non tuæ gallinæ, ſed illa tibi imperitet, & in te regnum exerceat: Si gallinaceus ergò plurium fœminarum rex eſt, tu gallinæ mancipium tuæ, non gallinaceum te, ſed ſtercorarium quendam eſſe Gallum oportet. Pro libris certè nemo te majora edit ſterquilinia, & gallicinio tuo ſtercoreo omnes obtundis; hoc unicum galli gallinacei habes. Jam ego multa hordei grana daturum me tibi promitto, ſi totum hoc vertendo ſterquilinium tuum, vel unam mihi gemmam oſtenderis. Sed quid ego tibi hordeum? qui non hordeum, ut Æſopicus ille, ſimplex & frugi gallus, ſed aurum, ut Plautinus ille nequam, ſcalpturiendo quæſiſti; quamvis exitu adhuc diſpari; tu enim centum Jacobæos aureos inde reperiſti, cum Euclionis ſuſte potiùs, quo miſellus ille Plautinus, obtruncari dignior ſis. Sed pergendum eſt. Eadem utilitatis & incolumitatis omnium ratio naturalis poſtulat, ut qui ſemel ad gubernandum conſtitutus eſt, conſervetur. Quis negat, quatenus ejus conſervatio cum incolumitate omnium conſiſtit? Ad perniciem autem omnium conſervari unum, quis non videt alieniſſimum à natura eſſe? At malum etiam regem conſervari, immo peſſimum omnino vis, eò quod non tantum mali civitati procurat malè gubernando, quantum creatur cladium ex ſeditionibus quæ ad eum tollendum ſuſcitantur. Quid hoc ad jus regum naturale? An, ſi natura me monet, ut latronibus diripiendum me permittam, ut captum me totis facultatibus redimam potiùs, quàm ut dimicare de vitâ cogar, latronum tu inde jus naturale conſtitues? Suadet natura populo, ut tyrannorum violentiæ nonnunquam cedat, cedat temporibus; tu iſtâ populi neceſſitate ac patientiâ jus etiam naturale tyrannorum fundabis? Quod illa jus populo ſui conſervandi cauſâ dedit, tu illam tyranno perdendi populi cauſâ jus idem dediſſe affirmabis? Docet natura ex duobus malis, eligendum eſſe minus; & quandiu neceſſe eſt, tolerandum; an tu hinc tyranno, utpote minori fortaſſe interdum malo, jus impunè malefaciendi exoriri naturale ſtatues? Recordare ſaltem ea quæ jampridem ipſe de Epiſcopis contra Loiolitam ſcripſiſti, à me ſuprà tertio capite recitata, his planè contraria; Illic ſeditiones, diſſentiones, diſcordias optimatium & populi, longè levius eſſe malum affirmas, quàm ſub uno monarcha tyranno certam miſeriam ac perniciem. Et vera tu quidem affirmabas; nondum enim inſaniebas, nondum Carolinis Jacobæis delinitus & deauratus in morbum regium incideras. Dicerem fortaſſe, niſi is eſſes qui es, pudeat te tandem prævaricationis tuæ turpiſſimæ; tibi verò dirumpi facilius eſt quàm erubeſcere, qui ut rem faceres, pudorem jam diu amiſiſti. Annon ipſe memineras Romanos florentiſſimam & glorioſiſſimam Rempub. poſt exactos reges habuiſſe? Potuit fieri ut Batavorum oblivirſcerere? Quorum reſpub. Hiſpaniarum rege pulſo poſt bella diutina, feliciter tamen geſta, libertatem fortiter & glorioſè conſequuta eſt, téque grammaticaſtrum Equitem ſtipendio alit ſuo, non ut juventus Batavica te prævaricatore & ſophiſtâ tam nihil ſapere diſcat, ut ad ſervitutem Hiſpanicam redire mallet, quàm paternæ libertatis ac gloriæ hæres eſſe; iſtam doctrinæ peſtem ad Riphæos ultimos, & glacialem oceanum, quo te in malam rem abire par eſt, tecum auferas licebit: Exemplo denique ſunt Angli, qui Carolum tyrannum bello captum, & inſanabilem obtruncârunt. At inſulam beatam ſub regibus, & luxu affluentem diſcordiis deformârunt. Immo luxu penè perditam quo tolerantior ſervitutis eſſet, extinctis deinde legibus, & mancipatâ religione, ſervientem liberârunt. En autem Epicteti cum Simplicio editorem, ſtoïcum graviſſimum, cui luxu affluens inſula beata eſſe videtur! Ex porticu Zenonis nunquam tale, ſat ſcio, documentum prodiit. Quid refert? An te doctore quicquid libet regibus licebit, tibi ipſi non licebit Lupi domino ex Lupanari tuo, tanquam ex novo quodam lyceo quamcunque libet emittere philoſophiam? Sed reſume nunc quam ſuſcepiſti perſonam. Nunquam ſub ullo rege tantum cruoris hauſtum eſt, tot familiæ deſolatæ: Hoc totum Carolo imputandum eſt, non Anglis; qui exercitum Hibernicorum priùs in nos paraverat, omnes Hibernos conjurare contra Anglos ſuo ipſe diplomate juſſerat; per illos ducena circiter millia Anglorum una in provinciâ Ultoniâ occiderat; de reliquis nihil dico: Binos exercitus in exitium Parlamenti Anglicani urbiſque Londini ſollicitaverat; multa alia hoſtiliter ter fecerat, priuſquam à populo aut magiſtratibus tuendæ Reipub. cauſâ vel unus miles conſcriptus eſſet. Quæ doctrina, quæ lex, quæ unquam religio ſic homines inſtituit, ut otio conſulendum, ut pecuniæ, ut ſanguini, ut vitæ potiùs parcendum eſſe ducerent, quàm hoſti obviam eundum? Nam externo an inteſtino, quid intereſt? Cum interitus reipub. ſive ab hoc, ſive ab illo funeſtus æquè, & acerbus impendeat. Vidit totus Iſrael non poſſe ſe ſine multo ſanguine levitæ uxorem ſtupro enectam ulciſci; an igitur quieſcendum ſibi eſſe duxit, an bello civili quamvis truculentiſſimo ſuperſedendum, an unam igitur mulierculam mori inultam eſt paſſus? Certè ſi natura nos docet quamvis peſſimi regis dominatum potiùs pati, quàm in recuperanda libertate, plurimorum civium ſalutem in diſcrimen adducere, doceret eadem non regem ſolùm perferre, quem tamen ſolum perferendum eſſe contendis, ſed optimatium, ſed paucorum quoque potentiam; latronum etiam nonnunquam & ſervorum rebellantium multitudinem. Non Fulvius aut Rupilius bellum ſervile poſt cæſos exercitus prætorios, non Craſſus in Spartacum poſt deleta conſularium caſtra, non Pompeius ad piraticum bellum exiiſſet. Romani vel ſervis, vel piratis, ne tot civium ſanguis effunderetur, hortante ſcilicet naturâ, ſuccubuiſſent. Hunc itaque ſenſum, aut hujuſmodi ullum gentibus impreſſiſſe naturam nuſquam oſtendis: Et tamen non deſinis malè ominari, & vindictam divinam, quam in te augurem tuique ſimiles avertat Deus, nobis denuntiare; qui nomine tantum regem, re hoſtem acerbiſſimum debito ſupplicio ulti ſumus; & innumerabilem bonorum civium cædem authoris pœna expiavimus. Nunc magis naturalem eſſe monarchiam ex eo probari aïs, quod plures nationes & nunc & olim regium ſtatum receperint, quàm optimatem & popularem. Reſpondeo primùm neque deo neque naturâ ſuadente id factum eſſe; deus niſi invitus, populum ſuum ſub regio imperio eſſe noluit; natura quid ſuadeat & recta ratio, non ex pluribus, ſed ex prudentiſſimis nationibus optimè perſpicitur. Græci, Romani, Itali, Carthaginienſes, multique alii ſuopte ingenio vel optimatium vel populi imperium regio prætulerunt; atque hæ quidem nationes cæterarum omnium inſtar ſunt. Hinc Sulpitius Severus, regium nomen cunctis ferè liberis gentibus ſemper inviſum fuiſſe tradit. Verùm iſta non jam huc pertinent, nec quæ ſequuntur multa, inani futilitate à te ſæpiùs repetita: Ad illud feſtino, ut quod rationibus firmavi, id exemplis nunc oſtendam, eſſe vel maximè ſecundùm naturam, tyrannos quoquo modo puniri; id omnes gentes, magiſtra ipſa natura, ſæpiùs feciſſe; ex quo impudentia tua prædicanda, & turpiſſima mentiendi licentia omnibus innoteſcere dehinc poterit. Primos omnium inducis Ægyptios; & certè quis te per omnia Ægyptizare non videat? Apud hos inquis nuſquam mentio extat ullius regis à populo per ſeditiones occiſi, nullum bellum illatum, aut quicquam factum à populo quo è ſolio dejiceretur. Quid ergo Oſiris rex Ægyptiorum fortaſſe primus? Annon à fratre Typhone, & viginti quinque aliis conjuratis interemptus eſt? Quos & magna pars populi ſecuta magnum cum Iſide & Oro, regis conjuge, & filio prælium commiſit? Prætereo Seſoſtrin à fratre per inſidias penè oppreſſum; Chemmin etiam & Cephrenem, quibus populus meritò infenſus, quos vivos non poterat, mortuos ſe diſcerpturum minatus eſt. Qui reges optimos obtruncare ſunt auſi, eóſne putas naturæ lumine, aut religione aliquâ retentos, à peſſimis regibus manus abſtinuiſſe? Qui reges mortuos, & tum demùm innocuos, ſepulcro eruituros ſe minitabantur, ubi etiam pauperculi cujuſque corpus inviolatum eſſe ſolet, vivóſne illi & nocentiſſimos propter naturæ legem punire, ſi modò viribus valerent, vererentur? Affirmares hæc, ſcio, quamlibet abſurda; at enim ego ne affirmare audeas elinguem te reddam. Scito igitur multis ante Cephrenem ſeculis regnâſſe apud Ægyptios Ammoſin, & tyrannum, ut qui maximè, fuiſſe; eum Ægyptii æquo animo pertulerunt. Lætaris; hoc enim eſt quod vis. At reliqua audi vir optime & veraciſſime, Diodori enim verba ſunt quæ recito, μέχρι μὲν τινὸς ἐκαρτέρουν οὐ δυνάμενοι, &c. tolerabant aliquandiu oppreſſi, quia reſiſtere potentioribus nullo modo poterant. Quamprimùm verò Actiſanes Æthiopum rex bellum gerere cum eo cœpit, nacti occaſionem plerique defecerunt, eóque facilè ſubacto, Ægyptus regno Æthiopum acceſſit. Vides hìc Ægyptios, quamprimùm poterant, arma contra tyrannum tuliſſe, copias cum externo rege conjunxiſſe, ut regem ſuum ejúſque poſteros regno privarent, bonum & moderatum regem, qualis erat Actiſanes, maluiſſe externum, quàm tyrannum domeſticum. Iidem Ægyptii conſenſu omnium maximo Aprien tyrannum ſuum, conductitiis copiis præſidentem, duce Amaſi prælio victum ſtrangularunt; Amaſi viro nobili regnum dederunt. Hoc etiam adverte; Amaſis captum regem ad tempus in ipſa regia honeſtè aſſervabat: incuſante demùm populo, injuſtè eum facere qui ſuum & ipſorum hoſtem aleret, tradidit populo regem; qui eum prædicto ſupplicio affecit. Hæc Herodotus & Diodorus. Quid amplius tibi quæris? Ecquem tyrannum cenſes non maluiſſe vitam ſecuri quàm laqueo finire? Poſtea ſub Perſarum imperium redacti Ægyptii fideles, inquis, exſtitere, quod falſiſſimum eſt; in fide enim Perſarum nunquam permanſere, ſed, quarto poſt anno quàm ſubacti à Cambyſe fuerant, rebellarunt. Domiti deinde à Xerxe, haud multò pòſt ab ejus filio Artaxerxe defecerunt, regem Inarum quendam ſibi adſciverunt. Quo occiſo iterum fidem mutant, & conſtituto rege Tacho Artaxerxi Mnemoni bellum indicunt. Sed neque ſuo regi fidelicres, ablatum patri regnum filio Nectanebo tradunt: donec tandem ab Artaxerxe Ocho in ditionem Perſarum rediguntur. Sub Macedonum etiam imperio, quantum in ſe erat, tyrannos coercendos eſſe factis indicarunt; ſtatuas & imagines Ptolemæi Phyſconis dejecerunt, ipſum mercenario exercitu præpollentem interficere nequiverunt. Alexander ejus filius ob cædem matris concurſu populi in exilium agitur: filium item ejus Alexandrum inſolentiùs dominantem Alexandrinus populus vi abreptum ex regia in gymnaſio publico interfecit: Ptolemæum denique Auleten ob multa flagitia regno expulit. Hæc tam nota cùm non poſſit neſcire vir doctus, non debuerit qui hæc docere profiteatur, qui fidem tantis in rebus haberi ſibi poſtulet, quis non pudendum & indigniſſimum eſſe dicat, hunc, vel tam rudem & indoctum tanta cum infamia bonarum literarum pro doctiſſimo circumſerre ſe tumidum, & ſtipendia regum & civitatum ambire, vel tam improbum & mendacem, non inſigni aliquâ ignominiâ notatum, ex omnium communitate & conſortio tum doctorum tum bonorum exterminari? Poſtquam Ægyptum luſtravimus, ad Æthiopes jam proximos viſamus. Regem à Deo electum, ut credunt, quaſi Deum quendam adorant: quoties tamen eum Sacerdotes damnant, ipſe mortem ſibi conſciſcit. Sic enim, Diodoro teſte, omnes alios maleficos puniunt; non ipſi morte afficiunt, ſed ipſos reos lictore miſſo mori jubent. Ad Aſſyrios deinde & Medos & Perſas regum obſervantiſſimos accedis: jus illic regium ſumma cum licentia quidlibet faciendi conjunctum fuiſſe contra omnium Hiſtoricorum fidem affirmas. Narrat imprimis Daniel ut regem Nebuchadnezzarem plus nimio ſuperbientem homines a ſe depulerint, & ad beſtias ablegaverint. Jus eorum non regium, ſed Medorum & Perſarum id eſt populi jus appellatur; quod cùm irrevocabile eſſet, reges etiam obligavit. Darius itaque Medus eripere manibus ſatraparum Danielem, quanquam id maximè agebat, non potuit. Populi, inquis, nefas eſſe tum credebant regem repudiare quòd illo jure abuteretur. Inter ipſa tamen hæc verba adeò miſerè obtorpes, ut dum iſtorum populorum obedientiam & modeſtiam laudas, ereptum Sardanapalo regnum ab Arbace tuâ ſponte commemores. Eripuit autem is non ſolus, ſed partim à Sacerdotibus juris peritiſſimis, partim à populo adjutus, atque hoc præſertim nomine eripuit, quòd is jure regio, non ad crudelitatem, ſed ad luxuriam tantummodò & mollitiem abuteretur. Percurre Herodotum, Cteſiam, Diodorum, intelliges omninò contrà eſſe quàm dicis, à Subditis ut plurimùm ea regna deſtructa fuiſſe, non ab externis: Aſſyrios reges à Medis, Medos à Perſis, utriſque tum Subditis, ſublatos fuiſſe. Cyrum ipſe rebellâſſe, & arreptas tyrannides in diverſis imperii locis fateris. Hoccine eſt jus regium apud Medos & Perſas, & obſervantiam eorum in reges, quod inſtituiſti, aſſerere? Quæ te Anticyra tam delirum ſanare poteſt? Perſarum reges quali jure regnârint ex Herodoto, inquis, liquet. Cambyſes, cùm ſororem in matrimonio habere cuperet, judices regios conſulit, delectos ex populo viros, legum interpretes, ad quos omnia referri ſolebant. Quid illi? negant ſe invenire legem quæ jubeat fratrem ſecum in matrimonium ſororem jungere; aliam tamen inveniſſe, quà liceat Perſarum regi facere quæ libeat. Primùm ſi rex omnia pro ſuo jure poterat, quid alio legum interprete quàm ipſo rege opus erat? ſupervacanei iſti judices ubivis potiùs quàm in regia manſiſſent. Deinde ſi Regi Perſarum quidvis licuit, incredibile eſt id adeò neſciviſſe Cambyſem dominationis cupidiſſimum, ut quid licitum eſſet, judices illos percontaretur. Quid ergo? vel gratificari volentes regi, ut fateris ipſe, vel à tyranno ſibi metuentes, ut aït Herodotus, facilem quandam ſe reperiſſe legem ſimulant, palpum regi obtrudentes: quod in judicibus & legum peritis hac etiam ætate novum non eſt. At verò Artabanus Perſa dixit ad Themiſtoclem, nullam legem apud Perſas eſſe meliorem illâ quâ ſancitum fuerat, regem eſſe honorandum & adorandum. Præclarum tu quidem legem de adoratione regum introducis etiam à patribus antiquis damnatam; præclarum etiam legis commendatorem Artabanum, qui ipſe haud multo poſtea ſua manu Xerxem regem ſuum trucidavit. Probos regum defenſores regicidas nobis adfers: ſuſpicor te regibus inſidias quaſdam moliri. Claudianum citas poëtam, Perſarum obedientiæ teſtem. At ego te ad res eorum geſtas & annales revoco, defectionibus Perſarum, Medorum, Bactrianorum, Babyloniorum, etiam cædibus regum refertiſſimos. Proximus tibi author eſt Otanes Perſa, ipſa etiam Smerdis interfector ſui regis, qui cum odio poteſtatis regiæ, injurias & facinora regum exponat, violationes legum, cædes indemnatorum, ſtupra, adulteria, hoc tu jus regium vis appellari, & Samuelis iterum calumniandi in mentem tibi venit. De Homero qui reges eſſe ab Jove cecinit, ſupra reſpondi: Philippo regi jus regium interpretanti tam credam quàm Carolo. Ex Diotogenis deinde Pythagoréi fragmento quædam producis, at quali is de rege dicat taces. Accipe igitur quo ille uſus eſt exordio; ad quod referri quæ ſequuntur cuncta debent. βασιλεὺς κ' εἴη ὁ δικαιότατος, &c. Rex ille fuerit, qui juſtiſſimus eſt, juſtiſſimus autem, qui maximè legitimus, nam ſine juſticia nullus rex eſſe poterit, neque juſtitia ſine lege. Hæc cum jure tuo regio è regione pugnant. Eadem abs te recitatus Ecphantas philoſophatur. δεῖ δὲ καὶ τ εἰς αὐτὰν καταστάντα, &c. oportet qui regnum ſuſcipit puriſſimum & luciſſimum naturâ eſſe: & infra ὁ κατ' ἀρετὰν ἐξάρχων, &c. ille qui imperat ſecundùm virtutem, nominatur rex, & eſt. Quem tu igitur regem vocas, Pythagoreorum judicio rex non eſt. Jam tu viciſſim Platonem audi in Epiſtola octava ἀρχὴ γιγνέσθω ὑπεύθυνος βασιλική, &c. Sit regia poteſtas reddendæ rationi obnoxia; leges dominentur & aliis civibus & ipſis etiam regibus, ſi quid præter leges fecerint. Addo Ariſtotelem, Polit. 3. ἐν μὲν τοι ὁμοίοις καὶ ἴσοις οὔτε συμφέρον ἐστὶν, &c. inter ſimiles & æquales neque utile eſt neque juſtum, eſſe unum omnium dominum, neque ubi leges non ſunt, neque ut ipſe lex ſit, neque ubi ſunt leges; neque bonum bonorum, neque non bonum non bonorum dominum eſſe. Et lib. quinto, Quem populus non vult, ſtatim is non rex, ſed tyrannus eſt, c. 10. Hem tibi etiam Xenophontem in Hierone ἀντὶ τοῦ τιμωρεῖν αἱ πόλεις αὐτοῖς, &c. tantum abeſt ut tyrannorum necem civitates ulciſcantur, ut magnis honoribus afficiant eum, qui tyrannum interfecerit, imagines etiam tyrannicidarum in templis ſtatuunt. Teſtem occulatum adjiciam Marcum Tullium pro Milone. Græci homines deorum honores tribuunt iis viris qui tyrannos necaverunt: quæ ego vidi Athenis, quæ aliis in urbibus Græciæ, quas res divinas talibus inſtutas viris, quos cantus, quæ carmina? prope ad immortalitatem, & religionem, & memoriam conſecrantur. Polybius denique author graviſſimus, Hiſtoriarum ſexto, τότε δὲ ταῖς ἐπιθυμίαις ἑπόμενοι, &c. cum principes, inquit, cupiditatibus obſequi cœperunt, tum de regno facta eſt tyrannis, & conſpiratio in caput dominantium inibatur; cujus quidem authores erant non deterrimi civium, ſed generoſiſſimi quique & maximi animi. Longè plura cùm mihi ſuppeterent, hæc pauca delibavi: obruor enim copiâ. A philoſophis ad Poëtas jam provocas, eò te libentiſſimè ſequimur. Poteſtatem nullis legibus, nullis judiciis obnoxium in Græcia reges obtinuiſſe vel unus, inquis, Æſchylus poteſt docere; qui in tragœdia, Supplices, Regem Argivorum ἄκριτον πρύτανιν vocat, non judicabilem rectorem. Verùm tu ſcito, præcipitem enim te & nullius judicii eſſe, quocunque te vertis, eò magis perſpicio, ſcito, inquam, non quid Poëta, ſed quis apud Poëtam quídque dicat, ſpectandum eſſe: variæ enim perſonæ inducuntur, nunc bonæ, nunc malæ, nunc ſapientes, nunc ſimplices, non ſemper quid Poëtæ videatur, ſed quid cuique maximè conveniat loquentes. Danai filiæ quinquaginta ex Ægypto profugæ ad Argivorum regem ſupplices pervenerant; orant utì ſe contra vim Ægyptiorum claſſe inſequentium defendat; reſpondet rex non poſſe ſe, niſi rem priùs cum populo communicet.

Ἀςῶν δὲ πᾶσι τοῖσδε κοινώσας πέρι.

Mulieres peregrinæ & ſupplices incerta populi ſuffragia veritæ, regem denuò blandiùs compellant.

Σύ τοι πόλις, σὺ δὲ τὸ δήμιον,
Πρύτανις ἄκριτος ὤν.

Tu inſtar urbis es & populi, Prætor injudicatus.

Rurſus rex. Εἶπον δὲ καὶ πρὶν, οὐκ ἄνευ δήμου τάδε
Πράξαιμ' ἂν οὐδέπερ κρατῶν ——

Dixi antea, non ſine populo hæc faciam,
Ne ſi poſſem quidem.

De re itaque tota ad populum reſert,

Ἐγὼ δὲ λαοὺς συγκαλῶν ἐγχωρίους
Πείσω τὸ κοινόν.

Populus itaque decernit opem Danai filiabus ferendam; unde illa ſenis Danai lætantis:

Θαρσεῖτε παῖδες, εὖ τὰ τῶν ἐγχωρίων
Δήμου δέδοκται παντελῆ ψηφίσματα.

Bono eſtote animo filiæ, benè decreverunt
Indigenarum, in conventu populari, perfectiſſima ſuffragia.

Hæc niſi protuliſſem, quàm temere ſtatuiſſet ſciolus iſte de jure regio apud Græcos ex ore mulierum, & peregrinarum, & ſupplicum; cùm & ipſe rex, & ipſa res geſta longè aliud nos doceat. Idem etiam docet Euripidis Oreſtes, qui, mortuo patre, Argivorum ipſe rex, ob cædem matris à populo in judicium vocatus, ipſe cauſam dixit, & ſuffragiis populi capite damnatus eſt. Athenis regiam poteſtatem legibus obnoxiam fuiſſe teſtatur idem Euripides etiam in Supplicibus, ubi hæc Theſeus Athenarum Rex ——

οὐ γὰρ ἄρχεται
Ἑνὸς πρὸς ἀνδρὸς, ἀλλ' ἐλευθέρα πόλις,
Δῆμος δ' ἀνάσσει ——

non regitur
Ab uno viro, ſed eſt libera hæc civitas,
Populus autem regnat ——

Sic ejus filius Demophoon Rex item Athenienſium apud eundem Poëtam in Heraclidis.

Οὐ γὰρ τυραννίδ' ὥστε βαρβάρων ἔχω,
Ἀλλ' ἢν δίκαια δρῶ, δίκαια πείσομαι.

Non enim iis tyrannicè tanquam barbaris impero,
Sed ſi facio juſta quæ ſunt, juſta mihi rependuntur.

Non aliud thebis jus regium antiquitùs fuiſſe teſtatur Sophocles in Oedipo tyranno, unde & Tireſias & Creon Oedipo ferociter reſponſant, ille, οὐ γάρ τι σοὶ ζῶ δοῦλος.

Hic, Κἀμοὶ πόλεως μέτεστι τῆσδ' οὐ σοὶ μόνῳ.

Eſt & mihi jus in hac civitate non tibi ſolùm.

Et Æmon Creonti in Antigone.

πόλις γὰρ οὐκ ἔσθ', ἥτις ἀνδρὸς ἔσθ' ἑνός.

Non eſt civitas, quæ unius eſt viri.

Jam verò Lacedemoniorum reges in judicium ſæpe adductos, & interdum morte multatos nemo ignorat. Atque hæc quidem antiquum in Græcia jus regium quale fuerit ſatis declarant. Ad Romanos veniamus. Tu ad illud imprimis recurris non Salluſtianum, ſed C. Memmii apud Salluſtium, impune quidvis facere: cui ſuprà reſponſum eſt. Salluſtius ipſe diſertis verbis author eſt, Romanos imperium legitimum, nomen imperii regium habuiſſe; quod cum ſe in dominationem convertit, ut nôſti, expulerunt. Sic M. Tullius in Piſonem, ego Conſulem eſſe putem, qui Senatum eſſe in repub. non putavit? & ſine eo conſilio conſulem numerem, ſine quo Romæ ne reges quidem eſſe potuerunt? Audin' regem Romæ ſine Senatu nihil fuiſſe? At Romulus, ut libitum Romanis imperitaverat, ut aït Tacitus. Nondum enim fundata legibus, colluvies potiùs convenarum quam reſpub. erat: omnes olim mortales ſine legibus vivebant, cum reſpublicæ nondum eſſent. Poſt Romulum autem, authore Livio, etſi regem omnes volebant, libertatis dulcedine nondum expertâ: Populo tamen ſumma poteſtas permiſſa eſt, ut non plus darent juris quam detinerent; jus illud à Cæſaribus vi ademptum fuiſſe idem aït. Servius Tullius dolo primùm quaſi Tarquinii Priſci vicarius regnabat; poſtea verò ad populum ipſe retulit, vellent juberéntne ſe regnare; tandem ut aït Tacitus, ſanctor legum fuit queis etiam reges obtemperarent. Feciſſetne hancce ſibi & poſteris injuriam, ſi ſupra leges priùs fuiſſe jus regium ſenſiſſet? Ultimus illorum regum Tarquinius ſuperbus morem de omnibus Senatum conſulendi primus ſolvit; ob hæc & alia flagitia populus L. Tarquinio Regi imperium abrogavit; exulémque eſſe cum conjuge ac liberis juſſit. Hæc fere ex Livio & Cicerone; quibus alios juris regii apud Romanos haud tu interpretes attuleris meliores. Ad dictaturam quod attinet, temporaria tantùm fuit, nunquam adhibita niſi difficillimis reipub. temporibus, & intra ſex menſes deponenda. Jus autem imperatorum quod vocas, non jus illud, ſed vis planè erat; imperium nullo jure præterquàm armis partum. At Tacitus, inquis, qui ſub imperio unius floruit, ita ſcripſit: Principi ſummum rerum arbitrium dii dederunt, ſubditis obſequii gloria relicta eſt. Nec dicis quo loco; tibi conſcius nimirum inſigniter lectoribus impoſuiſſe; quod mihi quidem ſtatim ſuboluit, quamvis locum illum non ſtatim reperi. Non enim Taciti hæc verba ſunt, ſcriptoris boni, & tyrannis adverſiſſimi, ſed apud Tacitum M. Terentii cujuſdam equitis Romani, qui capitis reus, inter alia quæ metu mortis ab eo dicta ſunt, ſic Tiberium adulatur, annalium ſexto: Tibi ſummum rerum judicium dii dederunt, nobis obſequii gloria relicta eſt. Hanc tu quaſi Taciti ſententiam profers, qui ſententias tibi commodas non ex piſtrina ſolùm aut tonſtrina, ſed ex ipſa carnificinâ oblatas non reſpueres: ita omnia vel oſtentationis cauſâ, vel imbecillitatis conſcientiâ undecunque corradis. Tacitum ipſum ſi legere maluiſſes, quàm alicubi decerptum negligentiùs tranſcribere, docuiſſet te is, jus illud imperatorum unde ortum ſit. Poſt Actiacam victoriam, verſo civitatis ſtatu, nihil uſquam priſci aut integri moris; omnes exutâ æqualitate juſſa principis aſpectare; docuiſſet idem annalium tertio, unde tuum omne jus regium; Poſtquam exui æqualitas, & pro modeſtia ac pudore ambitio & vis incedebat, provenere dominationes, multoſque apud populos æternùm manſere. Idem ex Dione poteras didiciſſe, ſi innata levitas & inconſtantia tua quicquam te altiùs percipere pateretur. Narrat enim is l. 53. abs te citato, ut partim armis, partim dolo & ſimulatione Octaviani Cæſaris effectum ſit, ut imperatores legibus ſoluti eſſent; dum enim pro concione pollicetur ſe principatu abiturum, legibus & imperiis etiam aliorum obtemperaturum, per cauſam belli in provinciis ſuis gerendi, retentis apud ſe ſemper legionibus, dum ſimulatè renuit imperium, ſenſim invaſit. Non eſt hoc legibus rite ſolutum eſſe, ſed legum vincula, quod gladiator ille Spartacus potuit, vi ſolvere; nomen deinde principis aut imperatoris & αὐτοκράτωρ ſibi arrogare, quaſi Deus aut naturæ lex omnes & homines & leges illi ſubjeciſſet. Vis altiùs paulo juris Cæſarei originem cognoſcere? Marcus Antonius, juſſu Cæſaris, qui armis in rempublicam nefariè ſumptis tum plurimum poterat, Conſul factus, cùm Lupercalia Romæ celebrarentur, ex compoſito, ut videbatur, diadema capiti Cæſaris cum gemitu & plangore populi impoſuit: Aſcribi deinde juſſit in faſtis ad Lupercalia, C. Cæſari Antonium Conſulem, juſſu populi, regnum detuliſſe. Quâ de re Cicero in ſecunda Philippica; Ideóne L. Tarquinius exactus, Spurius Caſſius, Sp. Melius, M. Manlius necati, ut multis poſt ſeculis à M. Antonio, quod fas non eſt, rex Romæ conſtitueretur? Tu verò omni malo cruciatu atque infamia ſempiternâ etiam ipſo Antonio dignior es; Quanquam tu hinc noli ſuperbire, non enim te hominem deſpicatiſſimum, ullâ re aliâ quàm ſcelere cum Antonio conferendum putem, qui in hiſce tuis Lupercalibus nefandis non uni tantùm, ſed omnibus tyrannis diadema cunctis legibus ſolutum, nullâ ſolvendum imponere ſtuduiſti. Certè ſi ipſorum Cæſarum oraculo credendum eſt, ſic enim appellant Chriſtiani imperatores Theodoſius & Valens edictum ſuum, cod. l. 1. tit. 14. de authoritate juris, imperatorum pendet authoritas. Majeſtas ergo regnantis, vel ipſorum Cæſarum ſive judicio ſive oraculo, ſubmittenda legibus eſt, de quibus pendet. Hinc adultâ jam poteſtate imperatoriâ ad Trajanum Plinius in Panegyrico; diverſa ſunt naturâ, dominatio, & principatus. Trajanus regnum ipſum arcet ac ſummovet, ſedémque obtinet principis, ne ſit domino locus. Et infra, omnia quæ de aliis principibus à me dicta ſunt, eò pertinent ut oſtendam, quàm longa conſuetudine corruptos, depravatóſque mores principatus parens noſter reformet, & corrigat. Quod depravatos principatûs mores Plinius, id téne pudet jus regium perpetuò vocitare? Verum hactenùs de jure regio apud Romanos breviter. Quid illi in tyrannos ſuos, ſive reges, ſive Imperatores fecerint, vulgo notum eſt. Tarquinium expulerunt. Sed quomodo, inquis, expulerunt, an in jus vocarunt? Nequaquam; Portas venienti clauſerunt. Ridiculum caput, quid ni clauderent advolanti cum parte copiarum? quid refert exulare juſſus fuerit an mori, modò pœnas dediſſe conſtat? Ca. Cæſarem tyrannum excellentiſſimi ejus ætatis viri in Senatu interfecerunt; id factum M. Tullius & ipſe vir optimus, & pater patriæ publicè dictus, miris laudibus, cum alibi paſſim, tum in ſecunda Philippica celebravit. Pauca recitabo. Omnes boni quantum in ipſis fuit, Cæſarem occiderunt; aliis conſilium, aliis animus, aliis occaſio defuit, voluntas nemini. Et infrà. Quæ enim res unquam, proh ſancte Jupiter! non modò in hac urbe, ſed in omnibus terris eſt geſta major, quæ glorioſior, quæ commendatior hominum memoria ſempiterna? In hujus me conſilii ſocietatem, tanquam in equum Trojanum, includi cum principibus non recuſo. Illud Senecæ tragici & ad Græcos referri poteſt, & ad Romanos:

——Victima haud ulla amplior
Poteſt, magiſque opima mactari Jovi
Quam rex iniquus ———

Nam ſi ad Herculem ſpectes, cujus hæc ſententia inducitur, quid ſenſerint illa ætate Græcorum ſummi viri oſtendit: Si ad poetam, qui ſub Nerone floruit (& ſenſum fere ſuum poetæ perſonis optimis affingere ſolent) ſignificabat, & quid ipſe, & quid omnes viri boni, ætate etiam Neronis, faciendum tyranno cenſuerint; quámque pium, quámque diis gratum eſſe duxerint tyrannicidium. Sic optimi quique Romanorum, quantum in ſe erat, Domitianum occiderunt. Palàm hoc profitetur Plinius ſecundus in illo ad Trajanum imperatorem Panegyrico. Juvabat illidere ſolo ſuperbiſſimos vultus, inſtare ferro, ſævire ſecuribus, ut ſi ſingulos ictus ſanguis dolórque ſequeretur: Nemo tam temperans gaudii, quin inſtar ultionis videretur cernere laceros artus, truncata membra, poſtremò truces horrendaſque imagines abjectas excoctaſque flammis. Et deinde, non ſatis amant bonos principes, qui malos ſatis non oderint. Tum inter flagitia Domitiani ponit, quòd is Epaphroditum Neronis utcunque interfectorem trucidaverit. An excidit dolori noſtro modò vindicatus Nero, permitteret credo famam vitamque ejus carpi, qui mortem ulciſcebatur? Planè quaſi ſceleri proximum eſſe judicaret, non interfeciſſe Neronem, ſcelus graviſſimum vindicaſſe interfectum. Ex his manifeſtum eſt, Romanorum præſtantiſſimos quoſque viros non ſolum tyrannos quoquo modo, quoties poterant, occidiſſe, ſed factum illud, ut Græci olim, in maxima laude poſuiſſe: Vivum enim tyrannum quoties judicare non poterant viribus inferiores, mortuum tamen & judicabant, & lege Valeriâ damnabant. Valerius enim Publicola Junii Bruti collega cum videret non poſſe ſtipatos ſuis militibus tyrannos ad judicium perduci, legem tulit qua indemnatum quovis modo occidere liceret; deinde facti rationem reddere. Hinc C. Caligulam, quem Caſſius ferro, omnes votis interfecerunt, Valerius Aſiaticus, vir conſularis cum non adeſſet, ad milites tamen ob necem ejus tumultuantes exclamat, utinam ego interfeciſſem; Senatus eodem tempore abolendam Cæſarum memoriam, ac diruenda templa cenſuit; tantum abfuit ut Caſſio iraſceretur; Claudium à militibus imperatorem mox ſalutatum vetant per tribunum plebis principatum capeſſere; vis autem militum vicit. Neronem Senatus hoſtem judicavit, &, ut puniretur more majorum, quærebat; id genus pœnæ erat, ut nudi cervix insereretur furcæ, corpus virgis ad necem cæderetur. Vide quanto mitiùs & moderatiùs Angli cum tyranno egerint ſuo, qui multorum judicio plus ipſo Nerone ſanguinis fundendi author fuerat. Sic Domitianum mortuum Senatus damnavit; quod potuit, imagines ejus coràm detrahi, & ſolo affligi juſſit. Commodus à ſuis interfectus, non vindicatus à Senatu aut Populo, ſed hoſtis judicatus eſt, qui etiam cadaver ejus ad ſupplicium quærebant. Ea de re Senatuſconſultum extat apud Lampridium; Hoſti patriæ honores detrahantur, Parricida trahatur, in ſpoliario lanietur, hoſtis deorum, carnifex Senatus unco trahatur, &c. Iidem Didium Julianum imperatorem frequentiſſimo Senatu capitis damnarunt; & miſſo Tribuno, occidi in Palatio juſſerunt. Idem Maximino imperium abrogarunt, hoſtémque judicarunt. Juvat ipſum Senatuſconſultum ex Capitolino recitare. Conſul retulit; Patres Conſcripti, de Maximinis quid placet? Reſponſum eſt, hoſtes, hoſtes, qui eos occiderit pramium merebitur. Vis ſcire populus Romanus & provinciæ Maximino imperatori an Senatui paruerint? Audi eundem Capitolinum. Literas mittit Senatus ad omnes provincias, ut communi ſaluti, libertatíque ſubveniant; quæ auditæ ſunt ab omnibus. Ubique amici, adminiſtratores, duces, tribuni, milites Maximini interfecti ſunt: Paucæ civitates fidem hoſti publico ſervaverunt. Eadem tradit Herodianus. Quid plura de Romanis? Jam apud finitimas nationes quale jus regum illâ ætate fuerit videamus. Apud Gallos rex eorum Ambiorix ſua ejuſmodi eſſe imperia fatetur, ut non minus haberet in ſe juris multitudo, quàm ipſe in multitudinem. Judicabatur ergo non minùs quam judicabat. Rex item Vercingetorix proditionis inſimulatus eſt à ſuis; tradit hæc Cæſar bellum Gallicum ſcribens. Nec Germanorum regibus infinita aut libera poteſtas erat, de minoribus rebus principes conſultant, de majoribus omnes. Rex aut princeps auditur authoritate ſuadendi magis quàm jubendi poteſtate; ſi diſplicuit ſententia, fremitu aſpernantur. Hæc Tacitus. Tu vero quod inauditum prorſus eſſe modò exclamabas, nunc ſæpius factum concedis, quinquaginta nimirum Scotorum reges aut expulſos aut incarceratos, aut necatos, quoſdam etiam in publico capitali ſupplicio affectos. Quod in ipſa Britanniâ factitatum eſt, cur tu, tyrannorum veſpillo, infandum, inauditum eſſe tantâ ejulatione vociferaris? Pergis Judæorum & Chriſtianorum erga tyrannos ſuos religionem extollere, & mendacia ex mendaciis ſerere, quæ jam toties refutavimus. Modò Aſſyriorum & Perſarum obedientiam latè prædicabas, nunc eorum rebelliones enumeras; & quos nunquam rebellaſſe paulò ante dixeras, nunc cur iidem toties rebellaverint multas cauſas affers. Ad narrationem deinde ſumpti de rege ſupplicii tandiu intermiſſam revertis, ut, ſi tunc forte ſatis ſedulò ineptus & ridiculus non eras, nunc eſſes. Per aula ſua membra ductum narras. Quid per aulæ membra intelligas ſcire geſtio. Romanorum calamitates ex regno in rempub. verſo recenſes, in quo te tibimet turpiſſimè mentiri ſuprà oſtendimus. Qui ad Loiolitam, ſeditiones tantùm ſub optimatibus & populo, certam ſub tyranno perniciem eſſe demonſtrabas, nunc, hominum vaniſſime & corruptiſſime, ob reges olim ejectos ſeditionum illa mala tanquam ſupplicia illos hauſiſſe audes dicere? Scilicet quia centum Jacobæis donavit te poſtea rex Carolus, idcirco reges expulſos luent Romani. At malè ceſſit Julii Cæſaris interfectoribus. Sanè ſi cui unquam tyranno, huic parcitum vellem; quamvis enim regnum in repub. violentiùs invadebat, erat tamen regno fortaſſe digniſſimus: Nec ideo quenquàm magis putem interfecti Cæſaris pœnas pependiſſe, quàm deleti Catilinæ Caium Antonium Ciceronis collegam: Quo poſtea de aliis criminibus damnato, ut inquit Cicero pro Flacco, ſepulchrum Catilinæ floribus ornatum eſt. Fautores enim Catilinæ tunc exultabant, juſta Catilinæ tum facta eſſe dictitabant, ad invidiam cæteris conflandam, qui Catilinam ſuſtulerant. Hæ ſunt improborum artes, quibus viros præſtantiſſimos à ſupplicio tyrannorum, & puniendis etiam ſæpè facinoroſiſſimis deterreant. Dicerem ego contrà, quod facile eſſet, quoties bene ceſſit, & proſperè tyrannorum interfectoribus, ſi quid certi de eventu rerum colligere quis poſſet. Objectas, quòd regem hæreditarium Angli non illo affecerint ſupplicio, quo tyranni ſolent mactari, ſed eo quo latrones & proditionis rei. Primùm hæreditas ad maleficiorum impunitatem quid conferat neſcio: Conferre quicquam ut credat ſapiens fieri vix poteſt. Quod tu deinde ad immanitatem reſers, in eo lenitas potiùs Anglorum, & moderatio prædicanda erat; qui, cùm tyrannum eſſe, omnes in patriam impietates, latrocinia, proditiones, perduelliones in ſe complectatur, ſatis habebant ſupplicium haud gravius de tyranno ſumere, quàm de ſimplici latrone quovis, aut proditore vulgari ſumere ſolebant. Speras exorituros eſſe aliquos Harmodios & Thraſybulos, qui, noſtrorum cæde, tyranni manibus parentent. At tu citius animum deſpondebis, & vitam te dignam, omnibus bonis execrandus, antè ſuſpendio finieris, quàm Harmodios Harmodiorum ſanguine litantes tyranno videas. Tibi enim illud accidere veriſimillimum eſt, déque te tam ſcelerato quis augurari rectiùs poſſit: Alterum eſt impoſſibile. Tyrannorum triginta mentionem facis qui ſub Gallieno rebellarunt. Quid ſi tyrannus tyrannum oppugnat, an omnes ergo qui oppugnant tyrannum, aut tollunt, tyranni erunt ipſi? Haud tu id perſuaſeris, mancipium equeſtre; neque is qui author tibi eſt, Trebellius Pollio, hiſtoricorum propè ignobiliſſimus. Si qui hoſtes, inquis, à Senatu judicati ſunt, factio id fecit, non jus. Nobis in memoriam revocas quid fecit Imperatores; factio nempe, & vis, & ut planiùs dicam, furor Antonii, non jus fecit, ut contra Senatum populúmque Romanum ipſi priùs rebellarent. Dedit, inquis, pœnas Galba qui contra Neronem inſurrexit. Dic etiam quas pœnas dedit Veſpaſianus, qui contra Vitellium. Tantum, inquis, abſuit Carolus à Nerone, quantum iſti laniones Anglicani à Senatoribus illius temporis Romanis. Triſurciſer, à quo laudari vituperium eſt, vituperari laus magna: Paucis modò periodis interpoſitis hac ipſa de re ſcribens, Senatum ſub imperatoribus togatorum mancipiorum conſeſſum fuiſſe aïebas, nunc eundem Senatum aïs conſeſſum regum fuiſſe: Hoc ſi ita eſt, quid obſtat quin reges, te authore, togata mancipia ſint? Beatos hoc laudatore reges! Quo inter homines nihil nequius, inter quadrupedes nihil amentius: Niſi ſi hoc illi peculiare dicam eſſe, quòd nemo literatiùs rudit. Senatum Angliæ Neroni vis eſſe ſimiliorem quàm Senatui Romano: Cogit me cacoëthes hoc tuum ineptiſſimas conglutinandi ſimilitudines, ut corrigam te; & quàm ſimilis Neroni fuerit Carolus, oſtendam. Nero, inquis, matrem ſuam ferro necavit, Carolus & patrem & regem veneno; nam, ut alia omittam indicia, qui Ducem veneficii reum legibus eripuit, fieri non potuit quin ipſe reus quoque fuerit. Nero multa millia Chriſtianorum occidit, Carolus multo plura. Non defuerunt, teſte Suetonio, qui Neronem mortuum laudarent, qui deſiderarent, qui per longum tempus, vernis æſtiviſque floribus tumulum ejus ornarent, ejus inimicis omnia mala ominarentur: Non deſunt qui Carolum eâdem inſaniâ deſiderent, & ſummis laudibus extollant, quorum tu, patibularis eques, chorum ducis. Milites Angli moloſſis ſuis ferociores, novum & inauditum tribunal inſtituerunt. En acutiſſimum Salmaſii ſive ſymbolum ſive adagium, jam ſexies inculcatum, Moloſſis ſuis ferociores; adeſte rhetores, vóſque ludimagiſtri, delibate, ſi ſapitis, floſculum hunc elegantiſſimum, qui tam Salmaſio in deliciis eſt; codicillis veſtris & capſulis mandate copioſiſſimi hominis pigmentum, ne intereat. Adeóne etiam verba tua conſumpſit rabies, ut cuculi in modum eadem identidem occinere cogaris? Quid hoc monſtri eſſe dicam? Rabies, ut fabulantur, vertit Hecubam in canem, te Sancti Lupi dominum vertit in cuculum. Jam novas exordiris repugnantias: Supra p. 113. affirmaveras Principem legibus ſolutum eſſe, non cogentibus ſolùm, ſed dirigentibus, nullas eſſe omninò quibus teneatur; nunc dicturum te aïs infrà de regum differentia quatenus poteſtate alii minore alii majore in regnando fuerunt. Vis probare, reges non potuiſſe judicari, nec damnari à ſubjectis ſuis argumento, ut ipſe aïs, firmiſſimo, revera ſtolidiſſimo; nihil, inquis, aliud inter judices & reges diſcrimen fuit: Atqui Judæi judicum tædio odióque adducti reges poſtulabant. An quia judices illos magiſtratum malè gerentes judicare & damnare poterant, ideóne putas tædio odióque eorum adductos poſtulâſſe reges quos jura omnia violantes punire, aut in ordinem cogere non poterant? Quis, excepto te uno, tam fatuè ratiocinari ſolet? Aliud igitur quiddam erat cur regem peterent, quàm ut haberent dominum legibus ſuperiorem; de quo nunc divinare nihil attinet: Quicquid erat, haud prudenti conſilio factum & Deus & Propheta ejus teſtatus eſt. Iterum Rabbinis tuis, ex quibus probâſſe te ſuprà aſſerebas regem Judæorum non judicari, nunc litem acerrimam intendis, quòd regem & judicari & verberari poſſe tradiderint: Quod idem planè eſt acſi faterere ementitum te tunc eſſe, quod ex Rabbinis probâſſe dixeras. Eo demùm deſcendis ut de numero equilium Solomonis, quot is equorum præſepia habuerit, oblitus regiæ defenſionis, controverſias putidulas concites. Tandem ab agaſone ad equitem redis aretalogum & tautologum, vel potiùs ad id monſtri quod priùs eras, cuculum rabioſum. Quereris enim poſtremis hiſce ſeculis diſciplinæ vigorem laxatum, regulam corruptam; quòd uni ſcilicet tyranno cunctis legibus ſoluto diſciplinam omnem laxare, mores omnium corrumpere impunè non liceat. Hanc doctrinam Bruniſtas inter reformatos introduxiſſe aïs. Ita Lutherus, Calvinus, Zuinglius, Bucerus, & Orthodoxorum quotquot celeberrimi Theologi fuere, tuo judicio Bruniſtæ ſunt. Quo æquiore animo tua maledicta perferunt Angli, cùm in Eccleſiæ doctores præſtantiſſimos, totámque adeò Eccleſiam reformatam, iiſdem propè contumeliis debacchari te audiant.

CAP. VI.

POſt legem Dei & naturæ agitatam abs te fruſtrà, & peſſimè tractatam, unde nihil præter ignorantiæ ſimul & improbitatis ignominiam retuliſti, quid deindè, in hac cauſa regiâ, præter nugas agere poſſis, non video. Cùm autem omnibus & bonis & doctis viris, huic etiam cauſæ nobiliſſimæ abunde me ſatisfeciſſe ſperem, etiamſi hoc loco finem reſpondendi facerem, tamen ne interea videar aliis varietatem potiùs & acumen tuum, quàm immodicam loquacitatem defugiſſe, quo voles uſque progrediar: Eâ tamen brevitate, ut facilè appareat, me iis omnibus perfunctum, ſi minùs quæ dignitas, at ſaltem quæ neceſſitas cauſæ requirebat, nunc hominum quorumvis expectationi, vel etiam curioſitati morem gerere. Hinc alius, inquis, & major argumentorum mihi ſurget ordo. An major eo argumentorum ordine quem lex Dei & Naturæ ſuppeditabat? Fer opem, Lucina, parturit Mons Salmaſius; non de nihilo nupſit uxori; fœtum aliquem ingentem exſpectate mortales. Si is qui rex eſt ac dicitur, poſtulari poſſet apud aliam poteſtatem, eam omnino regia majorem eſſe oporteret, qua autem major ſtatuetur, hanc verè regiam dici & eſſe neceſſe eſſet. Sic enim definienda poteſtas regia: Qua ſumma eſt in repub. & ſingularis, & ſupra quam nulla alia agnoſcitur. O murem verè montanum, & ridiculum! Succurrite grammatici grammatico laboranti; actum eſt non de lege Dei aut naturæ, ſed de gloſſario. Quid ſi ſic reſponderem tibi? Cedant nomina rebus, non eſt noſtrûm nomini cavere, qui rem ſuſtulimus; curent & alii quibus cordi ſunt reges; nos noſtrâ utimur libertate: Reſponſum ſanè haud iniquum auferres. Verùm ut me per omnia ex æquo & bono tecum agere intelligas, non ex mea ſolùm, ſed ex optimorum olim & prudentiſſimorum virorum ſententiâ reſpondebo, qui & nomen & poteſtatem regiam cum poteſtate legum & populi majore, poſſe optimè conſiſtere judicârunt. Lycurgus imprimis, vir ſapientiâ clariſſimus, cùm vellet maximè poteſtati regiæ conſulere, ut author eſt Plato, nullam aliam ejus conſervandæ rationem invenire potuit, quàm ut Senatûs & Ephororum, id eſt, populi poteſtatem regiâ majorem in ſuâ patriâ conſtitueret. Idem ſenſit Theſeus Euripidéus, qui cum Athenarum rex eſſet, populo tamen Athenienſi in libertatem cum magna ſua gloria vindicato, & poteſtatem popularem extulit ſupra regiam, & regnum nihilo ſecius in illa civitate ſuis poſteris reliquit. Unde Euripides in Supplicibus ita loquentem inducit.

Δῆμον καθέστησ' αὐτὸν εἰς μοναρχίαν
'ἐλευθερώσας τήνδ' ἰσόψηφον πόλιν.

Populum conſtitui ipſum in Monarchiam,
Liberans hanc Urbem æquale jus ſuffragii habentem.

Et rurſus ad præconem Thebanum.

Πρῶτον μὲν ἤρξω τοῦ λόγου ψευδῶς ξένε
Ζητῶν τύραννον ἐνθάδ'· οὐ γὰρ ἄρχεται
Ἑνὸς πρὸς ἀνδρὸς, ἀλλ' ἐλευθέρα πόλις,
Δῆμος δ' ἀνάσσει.

Primùm incepiſti orationem falsò hoſpes,
Quærens tyrannum hic, non enim regitur
Ab uno viro, ſed eſt libera hæc civitas,
Populus autem regnat———

Hæc ille; cùm tamen rex in illa civitate & eſſet & dictus eſſet. Teſtis eſt etiam divinus Plato in epiſtola octava, Induxit Lycurgus Senatum & Ephororum poteſtatem, τῆς βασιλικῆς ἀρχῆς σωτήριον, poteſtati regiæ maximè ſalutarem, quæ hac ratione per tot ſecula magna cum laude conſervata eſt; poſtquam lex domina, rex facta eſt hominum. Lex autem rex eſſe non poteſt, niſi ſit qui in regem quoque, ſi uſus venerit, lege poſſit agere. Sic temperatam poteſtatem regiam Sicilienſibus commendat, ἐλευθερία γιγνέσθω μετὰ βασιλικῆς ἀρχῆς, &c. ſit libertas cum regia poteſtate; ſit regia poteſtas ὑπεύθυνος reddenda rationi obnoxi[illegible] dominetur lex etiam regibus ſiquid præter legem fecerint. Ariſtoteles denique politicorum Tertio, In repub. Spartanorum videtur, inquit, regnum eſſe maximè, eorum regnorum quæ ſunt ſecundum legem: Omnes autem regni ſpecies ſecundùm legem fuiſſe aït, præter unam quam vocat παμβασιλείαν, neque talem uſquam extitiſſe meminit. Tale itaque regnum maximè omnium propriè & dici & eſſe regnum ſenſit Ariſtoteles, quale apud Spartanos fuit; talem proinde regem non minùs propriè & dici & eſſe regem, ubi tamen populus ſupra regem erat, negare non potuit. Cùm tot tantique authores & nomen & rem regiam ſuâ fide ſalvam regi præſtiterint, etiam ubi populus penes ſe ſummam poteſtatem, tametſi exercere non ſolet, tamen, quoties opus eſt, obtinet, noli tam anguſto animo ſummæ rerum Grammaticalium, hoc eſt vocabulorum, ſic timere, ut potiùs quàm gloſſarii tui ratio turbetur, aut detrimenti quid capiat, prodere libertatem omnium, & rempub. velis. Scito etiam dehinc, nomina rebus ſervire, non res nominibus; ita plus ſapies, nec in infinitum, quod metuis, ibis. Fruſtra ergo Seneca tria illa genera ſtatuum ita deſcribit. Fruſtretur Seneca, nos liberiſſimus; & niſi fallor, non ii ſumus quos Flores Senecæ in ſervitutem reducant. Seneca autem, ſi ſummam in uno poteſtatem eſſe dicit, populi tamen eam dicit eſſe, commiſſam videlicet regi ad ſalutem omnium, non ad perniciem; nec mancipio, ſed uſu duntaxat à populo datam. Non jam ergo per deum reges regnant, ſed per populum. Quaſi verò deus non ita regat populum, ut cui deus vult, regnum tradat populus; cum in ipſis inſtitutionibus Imperator Juſtinianus palàm agnoſcat, exinde Cæſares regnaſſe, ex quo lege regiâ populus iis & in eos omne imperium ſuum, & poteſtatem conceſſit. Sed quouſque iſta recoquemus? Quæ jam toties refutavimus. Rursùs, quod ingenium tuum importunum & agreſte, mores odioſiſſimos indicat, in noſtra repub. quæ ad te nihil pertinet, alienigena & peregrinus curioſum te infers. Accede igitur, ut te tanto ardelione dignum eſt, cum inſigni ſolœciſmo. Quicquid, inquis, illi perditi homines dicunt, ad populum decipiendum pertinent. * O ſcelerate! hoccine erat, quòd diminutus capite Grammaticus in noſtram rempub. te ingerere cupiebas, ut ſolœciſmis nos tuis & barbariſmis oppleres? Verùm tu dic populum quo modo decepimus? Forma regiminis quam introduxere non popularis eſt, ſed militaris. Iſta ſcilicet grex ille perfugarum mercedulâ conductum juſſi te ſcribere: Non tibi igitur, qui ea blatis, quorum nihil intelligis, ſed iis qui te pretio conduxerunt reſpondebitur. Quis ordinem procerum è Parlamento ejecit? An Populus? Immo populus; eoque facto ſervitutis jugum à cervicibus ſuis haud ferendum dejecit. Ipſi milites, à quibus hoc factum dicis, non exteri, ſed cives, & magna pars populi fuere; idque cætero fere conſentiente populo & cupiente, nec ſine Parlamenti etiam authoritate fecerunt. An populus, inquis, plebeium ordinem domus inferioris mutilavit, aliis fugando, &c. Populus inquam; quod enim Senatûs pars potior, id eſt ſanior, fecit, in quo vera populi poteſtas reſidebat, quid ni id populum feciſſe dicam? Quid ſi ſervire, quid ſi vænum rempub. dare, in Senatu plures maluerint, annon id impedire, & libertatem retinere, ſi in manu eſt ſuâ, paucioribus licebit? At duces hoc fecerunt cum militibus ſuis. Habenda igitur gratia eſt ducibus, quòd operarios & tabernarios Londinenſes (qui paulo antè, veluti fæx illa Clodiana, ipſam curiam obſederant) ferocientes repulerint, reipub. non defuerint. Tunc idcirco jus Parlamenti primarium ac proprium, ut libertati imprimis populi ſive pace ſive bello proſpiciat, militarem dominationem appellabis? Verùm hoc à perduellibus dici, qui tibi iſta dictarunt, non eſt mirum; ſic enim perditiſſima olim Antoniorum factio Senatum Romanum contra hoſtes patriæ ad ſaga euntem, Caſtra Pompeii appellare ſolebat. Jam verò fortiſſimo noſtri exercitus ductori Cromuello, quòd is amicorum læto agmine ſtipatus, non ſine favore populi ſecundo, votis etiam bonorum omnium proſequentibus in bellum Hibernicum Deo gratiſſimum proficiſceretur, invidiſſe tuos gaudeo; auditis enim poſtea tot ejus victoriis, jam arbitror eos livore contabuiſſe. Multa prætereo quæ de Romanis militibus prolixè nugaris: quod ſequitur à veritate remotiſſimum eſſe quis non videt? Populi, inquis, poteſtas eſſe deſinit ubi regis eſſe incipit. Quo tandem jure? cum ſatis conſtet, omnes fere ubique gentium reges ſub certis conditionibus traditum ſibi regnum à populo accipere: quibus ſi rex non ſteterit, cur illa poteſtas, quæ fiduciaria tantùm fuit, ad populum redire non debeat, tam à rege quàm a conſule, vel ab alio quovis magiſtratu, tu velim doceas: nam quòd ſalutem reipub. id aïs poſtulare, ineptias dicis, cum ſalutis ratio eadem omninò ſit, ſive à rege, ſive ab optimatibus, ſive à triumviris imperio ſibi tradito perperàm utentibus poteſtas illa ad populum revertatur, poſſe autem à magiſtratibus quibuſcunque præterquam à rege ſolo ad populum reverti ipſe concedis. Sanè ſi neque regi, neque ullis magiſtratibus imperium in ſe populus mentis compos dederit, niſi tantummodò communis omnium ſalutis cauſâ, nihil poteſt obſtare quo minùs ob cauſas planè contrarias ne interitus omnium ſequatur, haud ſecus regi quàm aliis magiſtratibus, quod dedit imperium adimere poſſit: quid quòd uni etiam faciliùs quàm pluribus ademerit? & poteſtatem in ſe pluſquam fiduciariam cuiquam mortalium tradere ſummæ eſſet inſaniæ: neque credibile eſt ullum ab orbe terrarum condito populum, qui quidem ſuæ ſpontis eſſet, adeò miſerè deſipuiſſe, [illegible] vel omnem prorſus poteſtatem ab ſe alienaret, aut ſuis magiſtratibus concreditam ſine cauſis graviſſimis ad ſe revocaret. Quod ſi diſcordiæ, ſi bella inteſtina inde oriantur, regium certè jus nullum inde oritur illius poteſtatis per vim retinendæ quam populus ſuam ſibi vendicat. Ex quo efficitur, quod ad prudentiam populi, non ad jus regis referendum eſt, quodque nos non negamus, rectorem non facilè mutandum eſſe: nunquam ergo aut nulla prorſus de cauſa, nullo modo ſequitur: neque tu adhuc quicquam allegaſti, neque jus ullum regis expromſiſti, quo minùs liceat conſentienti populo, regem haud idoneum regno privare; ſiquidem id, quod etiam in Gallia tua ſæpiùs factum eſt, ſine tumultu ac civili bello fieri poſſit. Cum itaque ſalus populi ſuprema lex ſit, non ſalus tyranni, ac proinde populo in tyrannum, non tyranno in populum prodeſſe debeat, tu, qui tam ſanctam legem, tam auguſtam tuis præſtigiis pervertere es auſus, qui legem inter homines ſupremam, & populo maximè ſalutarem ad tyrannorum duntaxat impunitatem valere voluiſti, tu inquam ſcito, quandoquidem Angli Enthuſiaſtæ, & Enthei, & vates toties tibi ſumus, me vate ſcito, Deum tibi atque homines tanti piaculi ultores imminere: quanquam univerſum genus humanum ſubjicere tyrannis, id eſt, quantum in te fuit, ad beſtias damnare, hoc ipſum ſcelus tam immane ſua partim in te ultio eſt, ſuis de furiis quocunque ſugis terrarum atque oberras, vel citiùs vel ſeriùs inſequetur; & pejore etiam eâ, quam nunc inſanis, inſania agitabit. Venio nunc ad alterum argumentum tuum, prioris haud diſſimile; ſi populo reſumere liceret poteſtatem ſuam, nihil tum eſſet diſcriminis inter popularem & regalem ſtatum, niſi quòd in hoc ſinguli rectòres conſtituuntur, in illo plures, quid ſi nihil aliud intereſſet, nunquid inde reſpub. detrimenti caperet? Ecce autem aliæ differentiæ à temet ipſo allatæ, temporis nimirum & ſucceſſionis; cum populares magiſtratus annui fere ſint, reges, niſi quid committant, perpetui; & in eadem plerunque familia. Differant ergo inter ſe aut non differant, de iſtis enim minutiis nihil laboro, in hoc certè conveniunt, quod utrobique populus quoties id intereſt reipub. poteſt quam alteri poteſtatem ſalutis publicæ cauſâ tradiderat, eam ad ſe rurſus nec injuriâ eandem ob cauſam revocare. At lege regia Romæ ſic appellata, de quâ in Inſtitutis, populus Romanus principi & in eum omne imperium ſuum, & poteſtatem conceſſit. Nempe vi Cæſarum coactus, qui honeſto legis titulo ſuam tantummodò violentiam ſanxerunt; de quo ſupra, id quod ipſi juriſconſulti in hunc locum non diſſimulant. Quod igitur legitimè, & volente populo conceſſum non eſt, id revocabile quin ſit non dubitamus. Veruntamen rationi maximè conſentaneum eſt, populum Romanum non aliam poteſtatem tranſtuliſſe in principem, atque priùs conceſſerat ſuis magiſtratibus; id eſt imperium legitimum & revocabile, non tyrannicum & abſurdum; quocirca & conſularem, & tribunitiam poteſtatem Cæſares recepere; dictatoriam nemo poſt Julium; populum in Circo adorare etiam ſolebant, ut ex Tacito & Claudiano ſupra meminimus. Verùm ut multi olim privati ſe in ſervitutem alteri vendiderunt, ſic poteſt populus univerſus. O equitem ergaſtularium & mangonem, patriæ etiam tuæ æternum opprobrium! quem ſervitutis tam fœdum procuratorem ac lenonem publicum etiam ſervitia infima cujuſvis catastæ abhorrere atque conſpuere deberent! Sanè ſi populus hunc in modum ſe regibus mancipaſſet, poſſent & reges eundem populum alteri cuivis domino mancipare, aut pretio addicere; & tamen conſtat regem ne patrimonium quidem coronæ poſſe alienare. Qui igitur coronæ, quod aïunt, & patrimonii regii uſumfructum ſolùm à populo conceſſum habet, is populi ipſius manceps erit? Non ſi pertuſis auribus utriſque perforatus eques, non ſi gypſatis pedibus curſitares, tam eſſes omnium ſervorum viliſſimus, quam nunc es, hujus tam pudendæ author ſententiæ. Perge pœnas tuorum ſcelerum invitus, quod nunc facis, de temetipſo ſumere. Multa poſtremò de jure belli balbutis, quæ hic locum non habent; nam neque Carolus nos bello vicit, & majores ejus, etſi maximè viciſſent, iſti tamen juri ſæpius renunciaverant; nec verò tam unquam victi fuimus, ut nos in eorum nomen, illi in noſtras leges non viciſſim jurarent; quas cum Carolus inſigniter violaſſet, vel olim victorem, vel nunc regem perjurum priùs ab ipſo laceſſiti armis debellavimus: ex tua autem ſententia quod armis quæritur, tranſit in ejus dominium qui acquiſivit. Sis itaque deinceps hac in parte quàm voles verboſus, ſis quod in Solino dudùm fuiſti, exercitator Plinianus, blateronum omnium verboſiſſimus, quicquid exinde argutaris, quicquid turbas, quicquid rabbinicaris, quicquid rauces ad finem uſque hujus capitis, id totum non jam pro rege devicto, ſed pro nobis divinâ ope victoribus contra regem deſudare te ſcias.

CAP. VII.

PRopter duo incommoda ſanè maxima, & pro tuo pondere graviſſima, poteſtatem populi eſſe regia majorem proximo capite negaſti: quippe, ſi concederes, quærendum regi aliud nomen eſſet, tranſlato in populum regis vocabulo; & partitiones quædam politicæ conturbarentur: quorum alterum vocabularii diſpendium foret, alterum, tuorum crux politicorum. Ad ea ſic à nobis reſponſum eſt, ut primum ſalutis & libertatis noſtræ, deinde etiam nomenclaturæ tuæ & politices habita nonnulla ratio eſſet. Nunc aliis rationibus evincendum eſſe aïs, regem à ſibi ſubjectis judicari non poſſe, quarum hæc erit maximè potens & valida, quòd rex parem in ſuo regno non habeat. Quid aïs? non habet rex in ſuo regno parem? quid ergo illi regis Franciæ duodecim vetuſtiſſimi Pares; an fabulæ ſunt & nugæ? an fruſtra & ad ludibrium ſic nominati? Cave iſtam viris Galliæ Principibus contumeliam dixeris. Quòd niſi revera ſint regis pares, ut nominantur, vide ne in Franciæ regno potiùs quàm in noſtra repub. quod unicum tuâ intereſt, gloſſario illudatur. Age verò, fac planum, non eſſe regi in regno ſuo parem. Quia, inquis, populus Romanus poſt reges exactos, duos conſtituit Conſules, non unum; ut ſi unus peccaret, coerceri à collega poſſet. Vix fingi quicquam potuit ineptius: cur igitur unus duntaxat Conſulum faſces apud ſe habuit, non uterque, ſi ad alterutrum coercendum alter datus erat? quid ſi etiam uterque contra rempub. conjuraſſet, an meliore loco res fuiſſet, quàm ſi collegam alteri nullum dediſſent? Conſtat autem & ambos Conſules & Magiſtratus omnes obtemperare Senatui ſemper debuiſſe, quoties id è repub. eſſe, patribus & plebi viſum eſt. Illuſtri exemplo eſſe poterunt Decemviri; qui cùm poteſtate conſulari, & ſumma præditi eſſent, eos tamen omnes ſimul, etiam renitentes, patrum authoritas in ordinem coëgit; Conſules etiam nonnullos, antequam magiſtratum depoſuerant, hoſtes judicatos & contra eos ſumpta arma eſſe legimus: hoſtilia enim facientem, eſſe conſulem nemo putabat. Sic bellum contra Antonium Conſulem Senatus authoritate eſt geſtum: in quo victus pœnas capitis dediſſet, niſi Octavianus Cæſar regnum affectans evertendæ reipub. conſilium cum eo iniiſſet. Jam quòd hoc primum eſſe aïs Majeſtatis regalis, ut imperium penes unicum ſit, haud minùs lubricum eſt, & à te quidem ipſo ſtatim refellitur: Judices, enim Hebræorum & ſinguli, & toto vitæ ſpatio imperium obtinebant; Scriptura quoque reges eos vocat; & tamen à Synedrio magno judicabantur.

dicabantur. Ita fit, dum dixiſſe omnia vis videri, ut nihil ſere niſi pugnantia loquaris. Quæro deinde qualem tu ſormam regiminis eſſe dicas, cùm Romanum imperium duo ſimul treſve imperatores habuerunt; an imperatores tibi, id eſt reges, an optimates, an triumviri videntur fuiſſe? An vero dices Romanum imperium ſub Antonino & Vero, ſub Diocleſiano & Maximiano, ſub Conſtantino & Licinio, non unum imperium fuiſſe? Jam iſta tua ſtatuum tria genera tuiſmet ipſius argutiis periclitantur, ſi reges iſti non fuere: ſi fuere, non eſt ergo proprium imperii regii, ut penes unicum ſit. Alter, inquis, horum ſi delinquat, poteſt alter de eo referre ad populum vel ad ſenatum, ut accuſetur & condemnetur. Annon ergo judicat vel populus vel Senatus ad quos alter illi refert? Si quid igitur ipſe tribuis tibi, collegâ opus non erat ad judicandum collegam. Heu te defenſorem, niſi execrabilis potius eſſes, planè miſerandum! undiquaque ictibus adeò opportunum, ut ſi forte per luſum deſtinare quis vellet, quovis te loco punctim ferire, vix eſſe credo ubi temerè poſſit aberrare. Ridiculum eſſe ſtatuis, regem in ſe judices dare velle à quibus capite damnaretur. Atqui ego non ridiculum, ſed optimum tibi oppono imperatorem Traianum; qui præfectum prætorio Saburanum, cum ei inſigne poteſtatis, uti mos erat, pugionem daret, crebrò ſic monuit. Accipe hunc gladium pro me, ſi rectè agam; ſin aliter, in me magis, quòd moderatorem omnium vel errare minùs fas ſit. Hæc Dion & Aurelius Victor. Vides ut judicem in ſe ſtatuerit imperator egregius quamvis non parem. Hoc idem Tiberius per ſimulationem & vaniloquentiam fortaſſe dixiſſet; Traianum autem virum optimum & ſanctiſſimum non id ex animo dixiſſe quod verum, quod jus & fas eſſe ſentiebat, ſceleſtus penè ſit qui arbitretur. Quanto juſtiùs ergo Senatui, cum viribus ſuperior potuerit non parere, planè ex officii ratione paruit; & jure ſuperiorem eſt faſſus. De quo Plinius in Panegyrico. Senatus ut ſuſciperes quartum Conſulatum & rogavit & juſſit; imperii hoc verbum non adulationis eſſe, obſequio tuo crede: & paulo pòſt, hac nempe intentio tua ut libertatem revoces ac reducas. Quod Traianus de ſe, idem Senatus de Traiano ſenſit, ſuámque authoritatem revera eſſe ſupremam; nam qui imperatorem jubere potuit, potuit eundem & judicare. Sic Marcus Aurelius imperator, cum præfectus Syriæ Caſſius regnum ei eripere conaretur, obtulit ſe in judicium vel Senatui vel Populo Romano; paratus regno cedere ſiquidem iis ita videretur. Jam verò quis rectiùs aut meliùs de jure regio exiſtimare & ſtatuere queat, quàm ex ore ipſo regum optimorum? Profectò jure naturali rex quiſque bonus vel ſenatum vel populum habet ſibi ſemper & parem & ſuperiorem: Tyrannus autem cum naturâ infimus omnium ſit, nemo non illi par atque ſuperior exiſtimandus eſt, quicunque viribus plus valet. Quemadmodum enim à vi olim ad leges duce naturâ deventum eſt, ita, ubi leges pro nihilo habentur, neceſſariò, eadem etiam duce, ad vim eſt redeundum. Hoc ſentire, inquit Cicero pro Seſtio, prudentia eſt; facere, fortitudinis; & ſentire verò & facere, perfectæ cumulataque virtutis. Maneat hoc igitur in natura, nullis paraſitorum artibus concutiendum, rege ſive bono, ſive malo, vel ſenatum vel populum eſſe ſuperiorem. Quod & ipſe confiteris, cum poteſtatem regiam à populo in regem tranſiiſſe dicis. Quam enim regi poteſtatem dedit, eam natura, ac virtute quadam, vel ut ita dicam virtualiter, etiam cum alteri dederit, tamen in ſe habet. Quæ enim cauſæ naturales iſto modo per eminentiam quandam quidvis efficiunt, plus ſemper ſuæ retinent virtutis quàm impertiunt; nec impertiendo ſe exhauriunt. Vides, quo propius ad naturam accedimus, eò evidentiùs poteſtatem populi ſupra regiam eminere. Illud etiam conſtat, populum, modò id ei liberum ſit, poteſtatem regi ſuam ſimpliciter & mancipio nunquam dare, neque naturâ poſſe dare; ſed tantùm ſalutis & libertatis publicæ cauſâ, quam cum rex procurare deſtiterit, intelligitur populum nihil dediſſe; quia certo fini tantummodò dedit, monente ipſa naturâ; quem finem ſi neque natura neque populus aſſequitur, non erit magis ratum quod dedit, quàm pactum quodvis aut fœdus irritum. His rationibus firmiſſimè probatur ſupetiorem rege eſſe populum; unde argumentum hoc tuum maximè potens & validum, non poſſe regem judicari quia parem in ſuo regno non habet, nec ſuperiorem, diluitur. Id enim aſſumis quod nullo modo concedimus. In populari ſtatu, inquis, Magiſtratus à populo poſitus ab eodem ob crimen plecti poteſt; in ſtatu Ariſtocratico optimates, ab iis quos habent collegas, ſed pro monſtro eſt, ut rex in regno ſuo cogatur cauſam capitis dicere. Quid nunc aliud concludis quàm miſerrimos eſſe omnium & ſtultiſſimos, qui regem ſibi conſtituunt? Sed quamobrem, quæſo, non poterit populus tam regem punire reum, quàm popularem magiſtratum, aut optimates? An putas omnes populos qui ſub regibus vivunt, amore ſervitutis uſque eò deperiiſſe, ut, liberi cum eſſent, ſervire maluerint, ſéque omnes, ſéque totos in unius dominium viri ſæpe mali, ſæpe ſtulti ita tradere, ut contra dominum, ſi ſors ferat, immaniſſimum nullum in legibus, nullum in natura ipſa præſidium ſalutis, aut perfugium ſibi reliquerint? cur ergo regibus primò regnum ineuntibus conditiones ferunt, cur leges etiam dant regnandi, an ut ſperni ſe eò magis atque irrideri paterentur? adeóne populum univerſum ſe abjicere, ſe deſerere, ſibi deeſſe, ſpem omnem in uno homine, eóque fere vaniſſimo, collocare? cur item jurant reges nihil ſe contra legem facturos? ut diſcant nempe miſeri mortales ſuo maximo malo, ſolis licere regibus impunè pejerare. Id quod hæc tua nefanda conſectaria demonſtrant. Si rex qui eligitur, aliqua vel cum ſacramento promiſerit, quæ niſi promiſiſſet, fortaſſe nec ſumptus eſſet, ſi ſtare nolit conventis, à populo judicari non poteſt. Immò ſi ſubditis ſuis juraverit in electione, ſe ſecundum leges regni juſtitiam adminiſtraturum, & niſi id faciat, eos ſacramento fidelitatis fore ſolutos, & facto ipſo abiturum eſſe poteſtate, à Deo non ab hominibus pœna in fallentem expoſcenda eſt. Deſcripſi hæc, non ob elegantiam, ſunt enim incultiſſima, nec quod ampliùs refutationis indigeant, etenim ipſa ſe refutant, ſe explodunt, ſe damnant apertiſſimâ falſitate ſua, atque turpitudine; ſed eò feci, ut ob merita tua egregia commendarem te regibus: qui inter officia aulæ tam multa aliquem dignitatis locum, aut munus idoneum tibi proſpiciant: cum enim alii ſint à rationibus, alii à poculis, alii à voluptatibus, tu iis commodiſſimè ſanè eris à perjuriis; tu regiæ non elegantiæ, nam inſcitus nimiùm es, ſed perfidiæ ſummus arbiter eris. Verùm ut ſummam in te ſtultitiam ſummâ improbitate conjunctam eſſe omnes fateantur, expendamus paulo accuratiùs præclara illa, quæ proximè affirmaſti: Rex, inquis, etſi ſubditis juraverit in electione, ſe ſecundum leges regnaturum, & ni faciat, eos ſacramento fidelitatis ſolutos fore, & ſe facto ipſo abiturum poteſtate, abdicari tamen aut puniri ab iis non poterit. Quî minus quæſo rex quàm popularis magiſtratus? quia in eo regimine populus non omnem transfundit poteſtatem ſuam ad magiſtratum. An hic igitur in regem? cui regnum in ſe non diutius tradunt, quàm id benè geſſerit. Tam itaque rex juratus in leges, reus abjici aut puniri poterit, quàm popularis magiſtratus. Nam argumento illo Pancratico omnis in regem tranſlatæ poteſtatis, amplius uti non potes, quod tuis ipſe machinis imprudens arietaſti. Cognoſcite nunc aliam potentiſſimam & invictam ejus rationem cur ſubditi regem judicare nequeant, quia legibus ſolutus eſt, quia leges ſolus rex omnes fert; quæ cum falſiſſima eſſe jam toties probaverim, hæc etiam invicta tua ratio cum priore ad nihilum recidit. Cæterùm rex ob delicta quævis privata, utpote ſtuprum, adulterium, & ſimilia, ſi raro plectitur, non tam juſtitia quam æquitate id fit, ne plus turbarum ex morte regis, & rerum mutatione populo eveniat, quàm boni ex uno atque altero vindicato. Ex quo verò omnibus gravis & intolerandus eſſe incipit, tum quidem, quoquo poſſunt modo, judicatum vel injudicatum omnes nationes tyrannum occidere fas eſſe ſemper credidere. Unde Marcus Tullius in ſecunda Philippica de Cæſaris interfectoribus. Hi primi cum gladiis non in regnum appetentem, ſed in regnantem impetum fecerunt: quod cum ipſum factum per ſe præclarum atque divinum eſt, tum eſt poſitum ad imitandum. Quàm hujus tu diſſimilis! Homicidium, adulterium, injuria, non hæc crimina regia ſunt, ſed privata. Euge paraſite, lenones jam omnes & propudia aulica hac voce demeruiſti; O quàm lepidè ſimul & paraſitaris, & eadem operâ lenocinaris! Rex adulter bene poteſt regnare, & homicida, ideoque vita privari non debet, quia cum vita regno quoque exueretur; at nunquam hoc fuit probatum legibus divinis aut humanis, ut duplex vindicta de uno crimine ſumeretur. Os impurum & infame! eadem ratione nec populares magiſtratus, nec optimates, ne duplici pœnâ afficerentur, ne judex quidam, aut ſenator flagitioſus pœnas capite ullas perſolvere debebit; cum vita enim & ipſi ſuo magiſtratu privarentur. Ut poteſtatem, ſic majeſtatem etiam populo adimere & in regem conferre ſtudes; vicariam ſi vis & tranſlatitiam, primariam certè non potes, uti nec poteſtatem. Crimen, inquis, majeſtatis non poteſt committere rex adverſus populum ſuum; poteſt autem populus adverſus regem. Et tamen rex propter populum duntaxat rex eſt, non populus propter regem. Populus igitur univerſus aut pars major plus ſemper rege debet poſſe: negas, & calculos ponis, plus poteſt quam ſinguli, bini, terni, deni, centeni, milleni, decies milleni. Eſto. Plus quam dimidia pars populi. Non repugno. Quid ſi alterius dimidiæ pars altera accedat, annon adhuc plus poterit?

poterit? Minimè. Progredere; quid auſers abacum, peritiſſime Logiſta, an progreſſionem Arithmeticam non calles? Vertit rationes, & annon rex cum optimatibus plus poteſtatis habent, quærit; iterum nego, Vertumne, ſi pro optimatibus proceres intelligas; quoniam accidere poteſt, ut nemo inter eos optimatis nomine ſit dignus: fit etiam ſæpiùs, ut multo plures de plebe ſint, qui virtute & ſapientiâ proceres antecellant; quibus cum pars populi major vel potior accedit, eos univerſi populi inſtar eſſe haud verear dicere. At ſi plus quam univerſi non poteſt, ergo rex erit tantum ſingulorum, non omnium univerſim ſumptorum, rectè; niſi ipſi voluerint. Rationes jam ſubducito; comperies te imperitè ſupputando ſortem perdidiſſe. Dicunt Angli penes populum jus majeſtatis ex origine & natura reſidere, hoc verò eſt omnium ſtatuum everſionem inducere. Etiamne Ariſtocratiæ, & Democratiæ? Credibile ſanè narras: Quid ſi etiam Gynæcocratiæ, ſub quo ſtatu ferunt te domi propemodùm vapulare, annon bearent te Angli, O perpuſilli homo animi? Sed hoc fruſtra ſperaveris; æquiſſimè enim eſt comparatum, ut qui tyrannidem foris imponere omnibus cupias, ipſe domi tuæ ſervitutem ſervias turpiſſimam, & minimè virilem. Doceamus te oportet, inquis, quid nomine populi intelligi velimus. Permulta ſunt, quæ te doceri potiùs oporteret; nam quæ te propiùs attingunt, videris ea penitùs neſcire, & præter literulas nihil unquam didiciſſe, ne percipere quidem potuiſſe. Hoc tamen ſcire te putas, nos populi nomine plebem ſolùm intelligere quòd optimatum conſeſſum abrogavimus. At illud eſt ipſum quod demonſtrat nos populi vocabulo omnes ordinis cujuſcunque cives comprehendere; qui unam tantummodo populi curiam ſupremam ſtabilivimus, in qua etiam proceres, ut pars populi, non pro ſeſe quidem ſolis, ut antea, ſed pro iis municipiis, à quibus electi fuerint, ſuffragio ferendi legitimum jus habent. Inveheris deinde in plebem, cæcam eam & brutam, regendi artem non habere, nil plebe ventoſius, vanius, levius, mobilius. Conveniunt in te optimè hæc omnia; & de infima quidem plebe ſunt etiam vera, de media non item; quo ex numero prudentiſſimi fere ſunt viri, & rerum peritiſſimi: cæteros hinc luxus & opulentia inde egeſtas & inopia à virtute, & civilis prudentiæ ſtudio plerunque avertit. Plures nunc eſſe modos aſſeris regum conſtituendorum qui nihil populo debent hoc nomine, & imprimis ille qui regnum habent hæreditarium. At verò ſervæ ſint iſtæ nationes oportet, & ad ſervitutem natæ, quæ talem agnoſcant dominum, cui ſe ſine aſſenſu ſuo hæreditate obveniſſe credant: pro civibus certè, aut ingenuis & liberis haberi non poſſunt; nec rempub. habere ullam cenſendæ; quinimmò inter facultates & poſſeſſiones quaſi heri ſui, & herilis filii numerandæ ſunt: nam quod ad jus dominii, quid diſtent à ſervitiis & pecoribus non video. Secundò, qui armis ſibi regnum fecit, populum, inquis, non poteſt authorem agnoſcere imperii prolati vel uſurpati. At nobis non de victore, ſed de ſubacto rege ſermo nunc eſt; quid victor poſſit, aliàs diſputabimus, tu hoc age. Quod autem regi jus patrisfamilias antiquum toties attribuis, ut inde abſoluta poteſtatis in regibus exemplum petas, diſſimillimum id eſſe jam ſæpiùs oſtendi: Ariſtoteles etiam ille quem crepas vel initio politicorum, ſi legiſſes, idem te docuiſſet: ubi aït malè eos judicare, qui inter patremfamilias & regem parùm intereſſe exiſtimant; regnum enim à familia, non numero ſolùm, ſed ſpecie differre. Poſtquam enim pagi in oppida & urbes crevere, evanuit paulatim jus illud regale familiæ, & agnoſci deſitum eſt. Hinc ſcribit Diodorus l. 1. regna antiquitùs dari non regum filiis, ſed iis quorum maxima in populum beneficia extiterunt. Et Juſtinus, Principio rerum, gentium, nationúmque imperium penes reges erat; quos ad faſtigium hujus majeſtatis, non ambitio popularis, ſed ſpectata inter bonos moderatio provehebat. Unde perſpicuum eſt, in ipſo gentium principio, imperium paternum & hæreditarium virtuti, & populari ſtatim juri ceſſiſſe. Quæ origo imperii regii & ratio & cauſa maximè naturalis eſt. Ob eam enim ipſam cauſam primò homines in unum convenere, non ut unus omnes inſultaret, ſed ut quocunque alterum lædente, ne lex deeſſet, neve judex inter homines, quo læſus aut defendatur aut ſaltem vindicetur. Diſperſos olim homines & diſpalatos diſertus aliquis, & ſapiens ad vitam civilem traduxit; tu hoc maximè conſilio, inquis, ut in congregatos imperium haberet. Nimbrotum fortaſſe intelligis, qui tyrannorum primus fuiſſe dicitur: vel hæc tua ſolius malitia eſt, quæ in illos olim magnos & excelſi animi viros cadere non potuit, tuum ſolius commentum, à nemine, quod ſciam, ante te traditum; cum utilitatem & ſalutem generis humani, non ſua commoda, ſuúmque dominatum reſpexiſſe illos primos urbium conditores, antiquorum omnium monumentis proditum ſit. Unum præterire non poſſum, quo tu veluti emblemate quodam exornare credo cætera hujus capitis voluiſti: ſi conſulem, inquis, in judicium venire oportuiſſet, prinſquam magiſtratu abiſſet, dictator ad hoc creandus fuiſſet, cum initio dixeris, ideo collegam ei fuiſſe datum. Sic tua ſemper inter ſe congruunt, & quid de quaque re dicas, quidve ſcribas, quàm nullius momenti ſit, paginis fere ſingulis declarant. Sub antiquis regibus Angloſaxonicis plebem, aïs, ad comitia regni nunquam vocari ſolitam eſſe. Si quis noſtrorum hoc affirmaſſet, poſſem eum haud multo negotio erroris arguere; tua iſta peregrina affirmatione res noſtras hallucinante minùs moveor. Et de communi regum jure quæ habuiſti hæc ferè ſunt. Reliqua multa, nam & ſæpiſſimè devius eſſe ſoles, prætermitto, vel quæ fundamento nituntur nullo, vel quæ extra cauſam poſita ſunt: non enim id operam do, ut tibi par eſſe loquacitate videar.

CAP. VIII.

SI de communi regum jure, Salmaſi, quæ ſentires, ea ſine contumelia cujuſquam protuliſſes, quamvis in hac rerum apud Anglos mutatione, tamen, cum libertate ſcribendi uterere tuâ, neque erat cur quiſquam Anglorum tibi ſuccenſeret, neque in aſſerenda, quam tueris, ſententia minus effeciſſes. Nam ſi hoc & Moſis & Chriſti præceptum eſt omnes regibus ſuis tam bonis quam malis ſubjici, ſive Hiſpanos, ſive Gallos, ſive Italos, ſive Germanos, ſive Anglos, ſive Scotos, quod ſupra ( p. 127 ) affirmabas, quid attinebat te exterum & ignotum jura noſtra balbutire, eaque velle nobis è cathedra quaſi ſchedulas tuas, & miſcellanea prælegere, quæ utcunque legibus divinis debere cedere multis antea verbis docueras? Nunc ſatis conſtat non tam tuopte ingenio ad cauſam regiam adjeciſſe te animum, quàm partim pretio, pro ejus, qui te conduxit, copia, maximo, partim ſpe præmii cujuſdam majoris conductum fuiſſe, ut Anglos vicinorum nemini moleſtos, rerum tantummodò ſuarum arbitros libello infami lacerares. Hoc niſi eſſet, quenquámne tanta credibile eſt impudentia eſſe aut inſania, ut longinquus & extraneus immergere ſe gratis in res noſtras, ad partes etiam ſe adjungere non dubitaret? Nam quid tuâ malùm refert quid rerum Angli inter ſe gerant? Quid tibi vis Ole, quid tibi quæris? nihilne domi habes quod ad te pertinet? Utinam eadem haberes quæ habuit ille notiſſimus in epigrammate Olus; & fortaſſe habes; dignus profectò es. An uxor tua ſtimulatrix illa, quæ ut in gratiam exulis Caroli hæc ſcriberes etiam currentem incitaſſe fertur, ampliores forte in Anglia profeſſiones, & honoraria neſcio quæ, redeunte Carolo, ominata tibi eſt? At ſcitote fœmina Virque, non eſſe locum in Anglia neque lupo neque lupi Domino. Unde mirum non eſt te toties in moloſſos noſtros tantum rabiem effudiſſe. Quin redis ad illuſtres illos in Gallia titulos tuos, & imprimis ad ſamelicum illum Lupi dominatum, deinde ad conſiſtorium illud regis Chriſtianiſſimi ſacrum; nimis longo intervallo conſiliarius peregrè abes à patriâ. Verùm illa, quod planè video, neq; te deſiderat neque conſilia tua; ne cum redires quidam paucis ab hinc annis, & culinam Cardinalitiam olfacere & ſectari cœpiſſes: ſapit mehercule, ſapit, teque oberrare ſemivirum Gallum cum uxore viro, & refertiſſimis inaniarum ſcriniis facile ſinit; donec ſtipem ſive equiti grammatiſtæ, ſive illuſtri Hippocritico ſatis largam alicubi gentium inveneris; ſi cui fert animus regi vel civitati, doctorem erraticum & venalem mercede maximâ liceri. Sed eccum tibi licitatorem; vendibilis necne ſis, & quanti, jam ſtatim videbimus. Pertendunt, inquis, Parricidæ, regni Anglicani ſtatum mixtum eſſe, non merè regium. Pertendit idem ſub Edvardo 6. Smithus noſter, juriſconſultus idem bonus, & politicus, quem fuiſſe parricidam non dices, ejus libri ferè initio, quem de repub. Anglicana ſcripſit; neque id de noſtrâ ſolùm, ſed de omni penè repub. idque ex Ariſtotelis ſententia verum eſſe affirmat; neque aliter ullam rempub. ſtare poſſe. At enim quaſi piaculum eſſe crederes quicquam dicere ſine repugnantiis, ad priores illas & jam tritiſſimas fœdè revolveris. Nullam gentem aïs eſſe nec fuiſſe unquam qua regis appellatione non intellexerit eam poteſtatem qua ſolo deo minor eſt, quæque ſolum Deum judicem haberet; & tamen paulo poſt fateris, nomen regis datum vel olim fuiſſe ejuſmodi poteſtatibus & magiſtratibus qui plenum & liberum jus non haberent, ſed à populi nutu dependens, ut ſuffetes Car- thaginienſium, judices Hebræorum, reges Lacedæmoniorum, & poſtremo Arragonenſium. Satiſne bellè tibi conſtas? Tum quinque monarchiæ ſpecies ex Ariſtotele recenſes, quarum una tantùm jus illud obtinuit quod tu regibus commune omnibus eſſe dicis. De qua haud ſemel jam dictum eſt, nullum ejus exemplum vel ab Ariſtotele allatum, vel uſquam extitiſſe: quatuor reliquas, & legitimas, & legibus fuiſſe minores dilucidè oſtendit. Primum horum erat regnum Laconicum, & maximè quidem ejus ſententiâ regnum, eorum quatuor quæ legitima erant. Secundum erat barbaricum, hoc ſolo diuturnum quia legitimum, & volente populo: nolente autem, omnis rex continuò non erit rex ſed tyrannus, ſi invito populo regnum retinuerit, eodem teſte Ariſtotele, lib. 5. Idem de tertia regum ſpecie dicendum eſt, quos ille Æſymnetas vocat, electos à populo, & ad certum plerunque tempus, certaſque cauſas, quales ferè apud Romanos fuere Dictatores. Quarta ſpecies eorum eſt, qui Heroicis temporibus regnabant, quibus ob egregia merita regnum ultro à populo delatum erat, ſed legitimum tamen; neque verò hi niſi volente populo regnum tenebant, nec aliâ re magis differre has quatuor regni ſpecies à tyrannide aït, quàm quòd illic volente, hìc invito populo regnetur. Quinta denique regni ſpecies, quæ παμβασιλεία dicitur, & eſt cum ſumma poteſtate, quale tu jus regum omnium eſſe vis, à philoſopho planè damnatur, ut neque utile, neque juſtum, neque naturale, niſi ſit ut populus ferre poſſit iſtiuſmodi regnum, iiſque deferat qui virtute aliis omnibus longè prælucent. Hæc tertio politicorum, cuivis obvia ſunt. Verùm tu, credo, ut vel ſemel ingenioſus & floridus eſſe viderere, has quinque monarchiæ ſpecies quinque zonis mundi aſſimilare geſtiebas; Inter duo extrema potentiæ regalis tres aliæ ſpecies interpoſitæ magis temperatæ videntur, ut inter zonas torridam & frigidam, quæ mediæ jacent. Feſtivum caput! quam pulchras nobis ſimilitudines ſemper concinnas! Tu igitur, quò regnum abſolutæ poteſtatis ipſe damnas, ad zonam frigidam hinc ocyùs amolire; quæ poſt adventum illic tuum plus duplo frigebit: nos interim à te novo Archimede ſphæram illam, quam deſcribis, mirabilem expectamus, in qua duæ ſint extremæ zonæ, una torrida, altera frigida, tres mediæ temperatæ. Reges, inquis, Lacedæmoniorum in vincula conjici fas erat, morte multari fas non erat. Quare? an quia damnatum capite Agidem lictoris & peregrini milites rei novitate perculſi, regem ducere ad mortem non eſſe fas exiſtimabant? Et populus quidem Spartanus ejus mortem ægrè tulit, non quòd rex capitali ſupplicio affectus fuerit, ſed quòd bonus, & popularis, factione divitum judicio illo circumventus eſſet. Sic itaque Plutarchus, primus rex Agis ab ephoris eſt morte multatus; quibus verbis non quid fas, ſed quid factum ſit, tantummodò narrat. Nam qui regem in jus ducere, vel etiam in vincula poſſunt, illos non poſſe eundem ſupplicio ultimo afficere, puerile eſt credere. Accingeris jam tandem ad jus regum Anglicorum. Rex, inquis, in Anglia unus ſemper fuit. Hoc eo dicis, quia modò dixeras, rex non eſt niſi unus ſit & unicus. Quod ſi ita eſt, aliquot ſanè quos credebam Angliæ reges fuiſſe, non erant: nam ut multos omittam Saxonicorum, qui conſortes imperii vel filios vel fratres habuere, conſtat Henricum 2. è ſtirpe Normanica cum filio regnaſſe. Oſtendant, inquis, aliquod regnum ſub unius imperio cui non poteſtas abſoluta adjuncta fuerit, in quibuſdam tamen magis remiſſa, in aliis magis intenta. Oſtende tu poteſtatem abſolutam remiſſam, aſine; annon abſoluta eſt ſumma? Quomodo ergò ſumma & remiſſa ſimul erit? quoſcunque fateberis reges cum remiſſa poteſtate eſſe eos non eſſe cum abſoluta facilè vincam; inferiores proinde eſſe populo naturâ libero, qui & ſuus ipſe legiſlator eſt, & poteſtatem regiam vel intendere, vel remittere poteſt. Britannia, an tota olim regibus paruerit, incertum: Veriſimilius eſt, prout tempora ferebant, nunc hanc nunc illam reipub. formam adhibuiſſe. Hinc Tacitus, Britanni olim regibus parebant, nunc per principes factionibus & ſtudiis trahuntur. Deſerti à Romanis, XL circiter annos ſine regibus fuere: regnum itaque perpetuum, quod affirmas, antiquitùs non fuit; fuiſſe autem hæreditarium præciſè nego; quod & regum ſeries, & mos creandi eorum demonſtrat: diſertis enim verbis petuntur populi ſuffragia. Poſtquam enim rex conſuetum juramentum dedit, accedens archiepiſcopus ad quatuor partes exſtructi ſuggeſti toties rogat populum univerſum his verbis, conſentire vultis de habendo ipſum regem? planè ac ſi Romano more dixiſſet, vultis, jubetis hunc regnare? quod opus non foret, ſi regnum jure eſſet hæreditarium; verùm apud reges uſurpatio pro jure ſæpiſſimè obtinet. Tu Caroli bello toties victi jus regium jure belli fundare adniteris: Guilielmus ſcilicet cognomento conqueſtor nos ſubjugavit. At ſciunt qui in noſtra hiſtoria peregrini non ſunt, Anglorum opes uno illo prælio Haſtingenſi non adeò attritas fuiſſe, quin bellum facile inſtaurare potuiſſent. Sed regem accipere, quàm victorem & tyrannum pati malebant. Dant itaque jusjurandum Guilielmo, ſe fidem ei ſervaturos: dat pariter Guilielmus juramentum illis, admotus altari, ſe omnia, quæ par eſt bonum regem, iis eſſe viciſſim præſtiturum. Cum falleret fidem, & rurſus Angli arma caperent, diffiſus ipſe ſuis viribus juravit denuò, tactis Evangeliis, antiquas ſe leges Angliæ obſervaturum. Si poſtea igitur Anglos miſerè afflixit, non id jure belli, ſed jure perjurii fecit. Certum eſt præterea jam multis ab hinc ſeculis victos & victores in unam gentem coaluiſſe; ut jus illud belli, ſi quod unquam fuit, antiquari jam diu neceſſe ſit. Ipſius verba morientis quæ ex libro Cadomenſi fide digniſſimo deſcripta reddimus, omnem dubitationem tollunt. Neminem, inquit, Anglici regni conſtituo hæredem. Qua voce jus illud belli, ſimúlq; illud hæreditarium, cum ipſo mortuo Guilielmo conclamatum atque ſepultum eſt. Video nunc aliquam te in aula dignitatem, quod prædixi fore, eſſe adeptum, ſummus nimirum aulicæ aſtutiæ quæſtor regius & procurator es factus. Unde hoc quod ſequitur videris ex officio ſcribere, Vir magnifice. Siquis prædeceſſorum regum factionibus procerum, vel ſeditionibus plebis coactus, aliquid de ſuo jure remiſerit, id non poteſt ſucceſſori obeſſe, quin id iterum ſibi vindicet. Rectè mones: itaque ſi quo tempore majores noſtri aliquid de jure ſuo per ignaviam amiſere, an id oberit nobis, eorum poſteris? Pro ſe illi quidem ſervitutem ſpondere, ſi vellent, pro nobis certè non poterant; quibus idem ſemper jus erit noſmet liberandi, quod illis erat in ſervitutem ſe cuilibet tradendi. Miraris quid faciat, ut rex Britannia hodie debeat haberi pro magiſtratu tantùm regni, qui autem alia regna in Chriſtianitate obtinent, plenâ & liberâ poteſtate polleant. De Scotia remitto te ad Buchananum, de Gallia etiam tua, ubi hoſpes eſſe videris, ad Francogalliam Hotomani, & Girardum Franciæ Hiſtoricum, de cæteris ad alios, quorum nulli quod ſciam Independentes erant: ex quibus de jure regio longè alia poteras didiciſſe, quàm quæ doces. Cùm jure belli tyrannidem regibus Angliæ aſſerere nequiveris, facis jam periculum in jure paraſitico. Edicunt reges ſe regnare Dei gratiâ: quid ſi Deos ſe eſſe edixiſſent? te credo flaminem facilè erant habituri: Sic Pontifex Cantuarienſis Dei providentiâ archiepiſcopari præ ſe tulit. Túne iſta fatuitate Papam non vis eſſe regem in Eccleſia, ut regem conſtituere pluſquam Papam in repub. poſſis? At in regni ſtatutis appellatur rex Dominus noſter. Mirus tu quidem ſtatutorum noſtrorum nomenclator repentè evaſiſti; neſcis tamen multos dici dominos qui non ſunt; neſcis quam iniquum ſit ex titulis honorariis, ne dicam adulatoriis, de jure & veritate rerum ſtatuere. Eodem refer quod Parlamentum regis dicitur: nam & frænum regis vocatur; adeóque non magis rex Parlamenti eſt dominus, quàm equus eſt ſui dominus fræni. At cur non regis Parlamentum, cum ab eo convocetur? Dicam tibi, quia convocatur etiam ſenatus à Conſule, neque propterea dominus illius concilii erat. Quod itaque rex Parlamentum convocat, id facit pro officio ſuo ac munere quod à populo accepit, ut etiam quos convocat, eos de arduis regni negotiis conſuleret, non de ſuis: aut ſiqua dici ſua poſſunt, de iis poſtremo ſemper loco agi ſolitum erat; ad arbitrium etiam Parlamenti, non ſuum. Nec verò ignorant, quorum id intereſt ſcire, Parlamentum ſive vocatum, ſive non vocatum, bis intra vertentem annum antiquitùs ex lege potuiſſe convenire. At regis etiam leges nuncupantur. Sunt iſtæ quidem ad regem phaleræ; rex autem Angliæ legem ferre per ſe poteſt nullam; neque enim ad leges ferendas, ſed ad cuſtodiendas à populo latas conſtitutus erat. Túque hic fateris congregari idcirco Parlamentum ut leges conderet. Quapropter & lex Terræ vocatur, & lex populi: Unde Ethelſtanus rex in præfatione legum, ubi omnes alloquitur, vobis, inquit, lege veſtrâ omnia largitus ſum: & in formula juramenti quo reges Angliæ antequam crearentur obſtringere ſe ſolebant, ſic populus à rege ſtipulatur. Concedis juſtas leges quas vulgus elegerit? reſpondet rex, concedo. Erras etiam tota Anglia, qui regem quo tempore Parlamentum non habetur, plenè planéque totum regni ſtatum regio jure gubernare aïs. Nam neque de bello, neque de pace quod magni ſit momenti, quicquam decernere, ne in jure quidem dicundo curiarum decretis intercedere poteſt. Jurant itaque judices nihil ſe in judiciis exercendis niſi ex lege facturos, etiamſi rex ipſe dicto, aut mandato, vel etiam literis proprio annulo obſignatis aliter imperaret. Hinc ſæpius in noſtro jure rex infans dicitur; nec ſua jura aut dignitates, nitates, niſi pueri aut pupilli in modum, poſſidere. Spec. Juſt. c. 4. ſect. 22. hinc etiam illud apud nos crebrò dici ſolitum, rex non poteſt facere injuriam: Quod tu hoc modo ſceleratè interpretaris, non eſt injuria quam facit rex, quia in eo non punitur. Admirabilem hominis impudentiam & improbitatem vel hoc ſolo interpretamento quis non perſpiciat? Capitis eſt imperare, inquis, non membrorum, rex Parlamenti caput eſt. Siccine nugarere, ſi cor tibi ſaperet? erras iterum (ſed quis finis errorum eſt tuorum) in quo regis conſiliarios à Parlamenti ordinibus non diſtinguis; nam neque illos quidem omnes, horum verò nullos reliquis non probatos eligere debebat rex; in plebeium autem ordinem ut quenquam eligeret, id ſibi ne ſumebat quidem unquam. Quibus id muneris populus delegabat, per municipia ſinguli ſuffragiis omnium eligebantur; notiſſima loquor, eóque brevior ſum. Falſum autem eſſe aïs, quod ſancta Independentiæ cultores aſſerunt, Parlamentum à populo fuiſſe inſtitutum. Video jam quid ſit cur papatum tanto impetu evertere contendas: alium ipſe papatum in alvo, quod aïunt, geſtas: quid enim aliud uxor uxoris, lupus ex lupa gravidus, niſi aut portentum, aut papatum aliquem novum parturire te oportebat? Certè Papa germanus quaſi jam eſſes, ſanctos & ſanctas pro arbitrio facis; reges etiam omni peccato abſolvis, &, quaſi ſtrato jam hoſte, ejus exuviis opimum te ornas. Verùm quia papa nondum per te planè cecidit, dum libri illius tui de Primatu, ſecunda & tertia, & fortaſſe quarta & quinta pars prodierit, qui multos mortales tædio prius enecabit, quàm tu papam eo libro ſubegeris, ſit ſatis interea, quæſo, ad Antipapatum ſaltem aliquem poſſe aſcendere; eſt altera, quam tu, præter illam Independentiam abs te irriſam, ſanctorum in numerum ſerió retuliſti. Tyrannis regia: ſanctæ ergo Tyrannidis regiæ tu Pontifex eris Maximus; & nequid deſit tibi ad Papales titulos, Servus etiam ſervorum eris, non Dei, ſed aulæ; quoniam illa Chenaani maledictio adhæſiſſe tibi ad præcordia videtur. Beſtiam appellas populum. Quid interim es ipſe? Non enim ſacrum illud conſiſtorium, neque ſanctus ille Lupus te dominum ſuum aut populo exemerit aut vulgo; neque effecerit, quin, ſicuti es, teterrima ipſe beſtia ſis. Certè libri ſacri prophetici magnorum regum monarchiam & dominationem immanis Beſtiæ nomine ac ſpecie adumbrare ſolent. Sub regibus ante Guilielmum, inquis, nulla Parlamenti mentio exſtat. De vocabulo Gallicano altercari non libet: res ſemper fuit: & Saxonicis temporibus Concilium Sapientum vocari ſolitum concedis. Sapientes autem tam ſunt plebis, quàm procerum ex numero. At in ſtatuto Mertonenſi, vigeſimo Hen. 3. comitum & baronum tantùm ſit mentio. Ita te ſemper nomina decipiunt, qui tantùm in nominibus ætatem omnem contriviſti; nobis enim ſatis conſtat, & quinqueportuum curatores, & decuriones urbicos, nonnunquam & mercatores illo ſeculo baronum nomine appellatos fuiſſe, neque dubium omnino eſt, quin Parlamenti quoſque Senatores quantumvis plebeios, ætas illa jure multò potiore barones nuncupaverit: nam & anno ejuſdem regis 52 tam nobiles, quàm plebeios fuiſſe convocatos, Marlbrigii ſtatutum, ſicut & reliqua fere ſtatuta omnia diſertis verbis teſtantur: quos etiam plebeios, comitatuum magnates Edouardus tertius in præfatione Statuti Stapli, quam perdoctè pro me recitas, vocavit; eos nimirum qui de ſingulis civitatibus pro toto comitatu venerant; qui quidem plebeium ordinem conſtituebant, neque erant proceres, aut eſſe poterant: Tradit etiam liber ſtatutis illis vetuſtior, qui inſcribitur, Modus habendi Parlamenta, licere regi cum plebe ſola Parlamentum habere, legeſque ferre, quamvis Comites & Epiſcopi non adſint; non itidem licere regi cum comitibus & epiſcopis, ſi plebs non aderit. Hujus rei ratio quoque adjicitur; quia cum nondum Comites aut epiſcopi conſtituti eſſent, reges cum populo tamen Parlamenta, & Concilia peragebant: deinde comites pro ſe tantum veniunt; plebeii pro ſuo quiſque municipio. Ex quo iſte ordo univerſi populi nomine adeſſe intelligitur; eoque nomine & potiorem, & nobiliorem ordine patricio, omnique ex parte anteponendum eſſe. Sed judicandi poteſtas, inquis, penes domum plebeiam nunquam fuit. Neque penes regem Angliæ fuit unquam: illud tamen memineris, principio omnem poteſtatem a populo fluxiſſe, & etiamnum proficiſci. Quod & Marcus Tullius de lege agraria pulcherrimè oſtendit. Cum omnes poteſtates, imperia, curationes ab univerſo populo proficiſci convenit, tum eas profectò maximè, qua conſtituuntur ad populi fructum aliquem, & commodum; in quo & univerſi deligant quem populo maximè conſulturum putent, & unuſquiſque ſtudio & ſuffragio ſuo viam ſibi ad beneficium impetrandum munire poſſit. Vides Parlamentorum veram originem, illis Saxonicis archivis longè vetuſtiorem. Dum in hac luce veritatis & ſapientiæ verſari licebit, fruſtra nobis obſcuriorum ætatum tenebras offundere conaris. Quod non eò dici à me quiſquam exiſtimet, quaſi ego de authoritate & prudentiâ majorum noſtrorum detrahi quicquam velim; qui in legibus bonis ferendis plus ſanè præſtiterunt, quàm vel illa ſecula, vel illorum ingenium & cultus tuliſſe videatur: & quamvis leges rarò non bonas irrogarent, ignorantiæ tamen, & imbecillitatis humanæ ſibi conſcii, hoc veluti fundamentum legum omnium poſteris tradi voluerunt, quod & noſtri Juriſperiti omnes agnoſcunt, ut ſi qua lex aut conſuetudo legi divinæ aut naturali, aut rationi denique repugnaret, ea ne pro lege ſancitâ habeatur. Unde tu, etiamſi edictum fortaſſe aliquod aut ſtatutum in jure noſtro, quo regi tyrannica poteſtas attribuatur, invenire poſſes, id, cùm & divinæ voluntati, & naturæ, & rationi contrarium ſit, intelligito, ex generali & primariâ iſta lege noſtra quam attuli, reſcindi apud nos, & ratum non eſſe; verùm tu jus nullum tale regium apud nos invenies. Cum enim judicandi poteſtas primitùs in ipſo populo fuiſſe conſtet, Anglos autem eam ab ſe in regem nullâ lege regia unquam tranſtuliſſe, neminem enim judicare aut ſolet aut poteſt rex Angliæ, niſi per leges proviſas jam & approbatas: Fleta l. 1. c. 17. ſequitur eandem adhuc integram atque totam in populo ſitam eſſe; nam parium domui aut nunquam traditam, aut recuperari jure poſſe non negabis. At, regis eſt, inquis, de vico municipium, de eo civitatem facere, ergo illos creat qui conſtituunt domum inferiorem. At inquam, oppida & municipia regibus antiquiora ſunt; etiam in agris populus eſt populus. Jam Anglicismis tuis magnopere delectamur; County Court, The Turn, Hundreda; mira nempe docilitate centenos Jacobæos tuos Anglicè numerare didiciſti.

Longam deinde de comitibus & Baronibus diſſertationem ſubtexis; ut oſtendas regem eſſe eorum omnium creatorem, quod facilè concedimus, eóque nomine regibus plerunque ſerviebant; ideóque ne gentis liberæ deinceps judices eſſent rectè providimus. Poteſtatem convocandi parlamentum quoties libet, & quando vult diſſolvendi ex omni temporis memoria penes regem eſſe affirmas. Tibíne igitur balatroni mercenario & peregrino, perfugarum dictata exſcribenti, an diſertis legum noſtrarum verbis fides habenda ſit, infra videbimus. At, inquis, reges Angliæ parlamento majus imperium habuiſſe alio argumento probatur, eoque invincibili; regis poteſtas perpetua eſt & ordinaria, quæ per ſe ſine Parlamento regnum adminiſtrat, Parlamenti extraordinaria eſt authoritas, & ad certas tantum res, nec ſine rege quicquam validi ſtatuere idonea. Ubinam dicamus vim magnam latere hujus argumenti? an in ordinaria & perpetuâ? Atqui minores multi magiſtratus habent poteſtatem ordinariam & perpetuam, quos Irenarchas vocamus; an ſummam ergo habent? ſuprà etiam dixi poteſtatem regi idcirco traditam à populo fuiſſe, ut videret authoritate ſibi commiſſa ne quid contra legem fiat; utque leges cuſtodiret noſtras, non ut nobis imponeret ſuas; regis proinde poteſtatem niſi in regni curiis & per eas, eſſe nullam: immo populi potius ordinaria eſt omnis, qui per duodecim viros de omnibus judicat. Atq; hinc eſt quod interrogatus in curiâ reus, Cui te permittis judicandum; reſpondet ſemper ex more atque lege, Deo & populo, non deo & regi, aut regis vicario. Parlamenti autem authoritas quæ re & veritate, ſumma populi poteſtas in illum ſenatum collata eſt, ſi extraordinaria eſt dicenda, id tantum propter ejus eminentiam dicitur; alioqui, ut notum eſt, ipſi ordinesappellantur, non extra ordinem ergo; & ſi non actu, quod aïunt virtute tamen perpetuum habent in omnes curias & poteſtates ordinarias jus atque authoritatem; idque ſine rege. Offendunt nunc limatulas, opinor, aures tuas noſtrorum barbaræ locutiones: cujus ego ſi vacaret, aut operæ pretium eſſe, tot barbariſmos hoc uno libro notare poſſem, quot ſi pro merito lueres, profectò omnes puerorum ferulas in te frangi oporteret, nec tot aureos tibi dari, quot illi quondam peſſimo poetæ; colaphos longè plures. Prodigium eſſe aïs, omnibus portentis opinionum monſtroſius, quod fanatici perſonam regis à poteſtate ejus ſejungant. Equidem dicta ſingulorum non præſtitero: perſonam autem ſi pro homine vis dici, ſeparari à poteſtate ejus nec abſurdè poſſe Chryſoſtomus haud fanaticus docere te potuit; qui præceptum Apoſtoli de poteſtatibus ita explanat, ut poteſtatem ibi & rem, non hominem intelligi aſſerat. Quidni dicam regem, qui contra leges quid facit, id agere ut privatum vel tyrannum, non ut regem legitima poteſtate præditum? Tu ſi uno in homine poſſe plures eſſe perſonas, eaſque ab ipſo homine, ſenſu & cogitatione ſeparabiles non intelligis, & ſenſus communis & latinitatis planè expers es. Sed hoc eò dicis, ut reges peccato omni abſolvas, utque erepto Papæ primatu indutum te eſſe exiſtimemus: Rex, inquis, non poſſe peccare intelligitur, quia peccatum ejus pœna non conſequitur. Quiſquis ergo non punitur, non peccat; non furtum ſed pœna fecit furem; Salmaſius Grammaticus non facit ſolœciſmos, quia manum ferulæ ſubduxit: poſt everſum à te Papam ſint iſti ſanè Pontificatûs tui canones, vel certè indulgentiæ tuæ, ſive ſanctæ Tyrannidis, ſive ſanctæ Servitutis Pontifex dici mavis. Congeſta extremo capite maledicta tua in Anglicanæ reipub. & Eccleſiæ ſtatum prætereo: hoc enim habent tui ſimiles, homo contemptiſſime; ut quidque plurimâ dignum eſt laude, id ſolent per calumniam maximè vituperare. Sed de jure regio apud nos, ſeu potius de jure populi in regem nequid temere affirmaſſe videar, proferre ex ipſis monumentis non gravabor, quamvis pauca quidem de multis, ea tamen quibus liquidò ſatis conſtabit, Anglos ex lege & inſtituto, & more etiam majorum ſuorum, regem nuper judicaviſſe. Poſt Romanorum ex inſula diſceſſum ſui juris Britanni circiter annos 40. ſine regibus fuere; quos primos crearunt, eorum nonnullos, ſupplicio affecere. Haud multo hæc poſt Auguſtini obitum geſta ſunt: unde vanitas tua facile redarguitur, qui ſupra aſſeruiſti, primum omnium Papam, & nominatim Zachariam docuiſſè, judicari reges poſſe. Circa annum Chriſti 600. Morcantius, qui tunc temporis in Cambria regnabat, propter cædem patrui ab Oudoceo Landaviæ Epiſcopo in exilium damnatur; quamquam is exilii ſententiam latifundiis quibuſdam eccleſiæ donatis redemit. Ad Saxones jam veniamus; quorum jura cum reperiantur facta prætermittam. Saxones Germanis oriundos memineris; qui nec infinitam aut liberam poteſtatem regibus dedere, & de rebus majoribus conſultare omnes ſolebant; ex quibus intelligere eſt, Parlamentum, ſi ſolum nomen excipias, etiam apud Saxonum majores ſumma authoritate viguiſſe. Et ab iis quidem Concilium Sapientum paſſim nominatur; ipſis Ethelberti temporibus, quem decreta judiciorum juxta exempla Romanorum cum Concilio Sapientum conſtituiſſe memorat Beda; ſic Edwinus Northanhymbrorum, Inas occidentalium Saxonum rex, habito cum ſapientibus & ſenioribus concilio, novas leges promulgavit; alias Aluredus edidit ex concilio, item prudentiſſimorum; atque iis, inquit, omnibus placuit edici earum obſervationes. His atque aliis multis hujuſmodi locis luce clarius eſt, delectos etiam ex plebe conciliis maximis interfuiſſe; niſi ſiquis Proceres ſolos ſapientes eſſe arbitratur. Extat etiam apud nos perantiquus legum liber cui titulus Speculum Juſticiariorum, in quo traditur primos Saxones, poſt Britanniam ſubactam, cum reges crearent, ab iis jusjurandum exigere conſueviſſe, ſe, ut quemvis alium è populo, legibus ac judiciis ſubjectos fore. cap. 1. ſect. 2. ibidem ait jus eſſe & æquum ut rex ſuos in Parlamento habeat pares qui de injuriis quas vel rex vel regina fecerit, cognoſcerent; regnante Aluredo ſancitum legibus fuiſſe, ut ſingulis annis Parlamentum bis Londini, vel eo ſæpius, ſi opus eſſet, haberetur. Quæ lex cùm peſſimo juris neglectu in deſuetudinem abiiſſet duabus ſub Edovardo 3. ſanctionibus renovata eſt. In alio etiam antiquo manuſcripto, qui Modus Parlamenti inſcribitur, hæc legimus; ſi rex Parlamentum prius dimiſerit, quàm ea omnia tranſigantur quorum cauſa concilium indictum erat, perjurii reus erit; & juramentum illud quod regnum initurus dederat, violaſſe cenſebitur. Quomodo enim, quod juratus eſt, juſtas leges concedit, quas populus elegerit, ſi earum eligendi facultatem petenti populo non dat vel rarius Parlamentum convocando, vel citiùs dimittendo quàm res populi ferunt? Jus autem illud jurandum, quo rex Angliæ ſe obligat, noſtri juriſperiti pro ſanctiſſimâ lege ſemper habuere. Quod autem maximis reipub. periculis remedium inveniri poteſt ( qui ſolas convocandi Parlamenti finis erat ) ſi conventus ille magnus, & auguſtiſſimus ad regis libitum ſtultiſſimi ſæpe & pervicaciſſimi diſſolvetur ? Poſſe à Parlamento abeſſe, proculdubiò minus eſt, quàm Parlamentum diſſolvere: at rex per leges noſtras illo Modorum libro traditis abeſſe à Parlamento niſi planè ægrotaret, neq; potuit, neq; debuit: & ne tum quidem niſi inſpecto ejus corpore à duodecim regni paribus, qui de adverſa regis valetudine teſtimonium perhibere in ſenatu poſſent: ſolêntne ſervi cum domino ſic agere? Contrà verò plebeius ordo ſine quo Parlamentum haberi non poteſt, etiam à rege convocatus potuit non adeſſe, & ſeceſſione factâ, de repub. malè geſtâ cum rege expoſtulare: quod & prædictus liber teſtatur. Verùm quod caput eſt, inter leges Edovardi regis vulgò Confeſſoris, una eſt eximia, quæ de regis officio tractat; cui rex officio ſi deſit, nomen regis in eo non conſtabit. Hoc quid eſſet, ne non ſatis intelligeretur, Chilperici Francorum regis exemplum ſubnectit, cui idcircò regnum à Populo abrogatum erat. Puniri autem malum regem ex legis hujus ſententia oportere, ſignificabat ille S. Edovardi gladius cui nomen Curtana erat, quem in regum creatione & pompâ geſtare Comes Palatii ſolebat; inſignum, inquit noſter Matthæus Paris, quòd & regem, ſi oberret, habeat de jure poteſtatem cohibendi: gladio autem nemo fere niſi capite punitur. Hanc legem, cum aliis boni illius Edovardi, Guilielmus ipſe conquæſtor anno regni quarto ratam habuit: & frequentiſſimo Anglorum Concilio prope Verulamium religioſiſſimè juratus confirmavit: quo facto non ſolùm jus omne belli, ſi quod in nos habuit, ipſe extinxit, ſed etiam hujus legis judicio atque ſententiæ ſe ſubjecit. Ejus etiam filius Henricus cùm in omnes Edovardi leges, tùm in hanc quoque juravit; atque iis duntaxat conditionibus, vivente adhuc fratre Roberto natu majore, in regem eſt electus. Jurarunt eadem omnes deinceps reges, antequam inſignia regni acciperent. Hinc celebris ille & antiquus noſter juriſconſultus Bractonus, l. 1. c. 8. Non eſt rex ubi dominatur voluntas & non lex. Et l. 3. c. 9. rex eſt dum benè regit, tyrannus dum populum ſibi creditum violenta opprimit dominatione. Et ibidem, exercere debet rex poteſtatem juris, ut vicarius & miniſter dei: poteſtas autem injuriæ diaboli eſt, non dei: cum declinat ad injuriam rex, diaboli miniſter eſt. Eadem ferme habet vetuſtus alter juriſconſultus, libri illius author qui Fleta inſcribitur, memor nempe uterque & legis illius Edvardinæ, verè quidem regiæ, & regulæ illius in jure noſtro primariæ à me ſupra dictæ, quâ nihil dei legibus & rationi contrarium haberi pro lege poteſt; uti nec tyrannus pro rege, nec miniſter diaboli pro miniſtro dei. Cum itaque lex maximè ratio recta ſit, ſiquidem regi, ſiquidem dei miniſtro obediendum eſt, eâdem prorſùs & ratione & lege, tyranno diaboli miniſtro erit reſiſtendum. Et quoniam de nomine ſæpius quam de re ambigitur, tradunt iidem, regem Angliæ, etiamſi nomen regis nondum perdiderit judicari tamen, ut quilibet è vulgo, & poſſe & debere. Bracton. l. 1. c. 8. Fleta. l. 1. c. 17. non debet eſſe rege major quiſquam in exhibitione juris; minimus autem eſſe debet in judicio ſuſcipiendo, ſi peccat, alii legunt ſi petat. Judicari igitur cum debeat rex noſter, ſive tyranni ſub nomine, ſive regis, quos habeat item judices legitimos dictu difficile non debet eſſe. Eoſdem conſulere authores haud pejus erit. Bracton. l. 2. c. 16. Fleta. l. 1. c. 17. In populo regendo rex habet ſuperiores, legem, per quam factus eſt rex, & curiam ſuam, videlicet comites & Barones: comites dicuntur quaſi ſocii regis, & qui habet ſocium, habet magiſtrum; & ideo ſi rex fuerit ſine fræno, id eſt ſine lege, debent ei frænum ponere. Baronum autem nomine plebeium ordinem comprehendi ſupra oſtendimus; quin & Pares etiam Parlamenti eoſdem fuiſſe dictos, libri legum noſtrarum antiqui paſſim tradunt: & imprimis liber ille cui titulus, Parlamenti modus; Eligentur, inquit, de omnibus regni paribus 15. quorum erunt quinque milites, quinque cives id eſt urbium delegati, quinque municipes; & duo milites pro comitatu majorem vocem habent in concedendo & contradicendo quam major comes Angliæ; & meritò quidem, illi enim pro tota aliqua provincia, aut municipio ſuffragia ferunt, iſti pro ſe quiſque duntaxat. Comites autem illos Codicillares, quos vocas, & reſcriptitios, cum feudales jam nulli ſint. ad judicandum regem à-quo creabantur minimè omnium idoneos eſſe, quis non videt? Cum itaque jus noſtrum ſit, ut eſt in illo ſpeculo antiquo, regem habere pares, qui in Parlamento cognoſcant & judicent, ſi quid rex in aliquem populi ſui peccaverit, ſi notiſſimum ſit licere apud nos cuivis è populo in minoribus quibuſque curiis injuriarum actionem regi intendere, quanto juſtius eſt, quantoque magis neceſſarium, ſi rex in univerſos peccaverit, ut habeat qui eum non refrænare ſolùm & coercere, cere, ſed judicare & punire poſſint. Peſſimè enim & ridiculè inſtitutam eſſe eam neceſſe eſt rempub. in qua de minimis regum injuriis etiam privato cuivis cautum ſit, de maximis nihil in commune proviſum, nihil de ſalute omnium, quo minùs liceat ei univerſos ſine lege perdere, qui ne unum quidem lædere per legem poterat. Comites autem eſſe regis judices, cum oſtenſum ſit neque decere neque expedire, ſequitur judicium illud totum ad plebeium ordinem, qui & pares regni, & Barones, & populi totius poteſtate ſibi delegatâ præditi ſunt, jure optimo pertinere. Cum enim (ut in noſtro jure ſcriptum eſt, quod ſupra attuli) plebs ſola cum rege ſine Comitibus aut Epiſcopis Parlamentum conſtituat, quia rex cum ſola Plebe, etiam ante Comites aut epiſcopos natos, parlamenta peragere ſolebat, eâdem prorſus ratione plebs ſola ſupremam & ſine rege, & regem ipſum judicandi poteſtatem habebit, quòd etiam ante ullum regem creatum, ipſa univerſi populi nomine Concilia & Parlamenta peragere, judicare, ferre leges, ipſa reges creare ſolita erat; non ut populo dominarentur, ſed ut rem populi adminiſtrarent. Quem ſi rex contrà injuriis afficere, & ſervitute opprimere conatus fuerit, ex ipſa legis noſtræ ſententiâ nomen regis in eo non conſtat, rex non eſt; quòd ſi rex non ſit, quid eſt quod ei pares amplius quæramus? Tyrannum enim jam re ipſa ab omnibus bonis judicatum nulli non ſatis pares atque idonei ſunt, qui ſupplicio mactandum eſſe pro tribunali judicent. Hæc cum ita ſint, tot teſtimoniis, tot legibus prolatis, abundè hoc demùm, quod erat propoſitum, eviciſſe arbitror, cum judicare regem penes plebem jure optimo ſit, cúmq; plebs regem de repub. déque eccleſia, ſine ſpe ulla ſanitatis, peſſimè meritum ſupplicio ultimo affecerit, rectè atque ordine, éxque repub. ſuáque fide, dignitate, legibus denique patriis feciſſe. Neque poſſum hîc non gratulari mihi de majoribus noſtris, qui non minore prudentia ac libertate, quàm Romani olim, aut Græcorum præſtantiſſimi, hanc rempub. inſtituerunt; neque poterunt illi, ſiquid noſtrarum rerum ſentiunt, non ſibi etiam gratulari de poſteris ſuis; qui tam ſapienter inſtitutam, tanta libertate fundatam ab impotenti regis dominatione, cum redacti penè in ſervitutem eſſent, tam fortiter, támque prudenter vindicarunt.

CAP. IX.

SAtis jam arbitror palàm eſſe, regem Angliæ etiam Anglorum legibus judicari poſſe; ſuos habere judices legitimos; quod erat probandum. Quid tu porro? (Nam quæ tua repetis, ad ea non repetam mea) ex rebus nunc ipſis propter quas comitia indici ſolent, proclive, inquis, eſt oſtendere regem eſſe ſupra Parlamentum. Sit ſanè proclive quantum voles, in quo præcipitem te dari jam ſtatim ſenties. Parlamentum, inquis, congregari ſolet ad majoris momenti negotia in quibus regni ſalus & populi verſatur. Si rex Parlamentum convocat ad procurandas res populi, non ſuas, neque id niſi aſſenſu eorum atque arbitrio quos convocat, quid aliud eſt, obſecro, niſi miniſter populi & procurator? Cum, ſine ſuffragiis eorum quos populus mittit, ne tantillum quidem, neque de aliis, neque de ſeipſo decernere poſſit. Quod etiam argumento eſt, officium eſſe regis, toties Parlamentum convocare, quoties populus id petit: Quandoquidem & res populi, non regis, iis comitiis tractantur, idque populi arbitrio. Quamvis enim regis quoque aſſenſus honoris cauſa peti ſoleret, quem in rebus minoris momenti ad privatorum duntaxat commoda ſpectantibus poterat non præbere, poterat pro illa formula dicere, rex deliberabit, de iis tamen, quæ ad ſalutem omnium communem & libertatem pertinebant, prorſùs abnuere nullo modo poterat; cum id & contra juramentum regium eſſet, quo veluti lege firmiſſima tenebatur, & contra præcipuum magnæ Chartæ articulum, c. 29. Non negabimus, non differemus cuiquam jus aut juſtitiam. Non negabit rex juſtitiam, negabit ergò juſtas leges? Non cuiquam, an ergò omnibus? Ne in Curiâ quidem ullâ minori, an ergò in Senatu ſupremo? An verò rex ullus tantùm ſibi arrogabit, ut quid juſtum ſit, quid utile, ſe unum univerſo populo ſcire meliùs exiſtimet? Cum ad hoc creatus & electus ſit, ut juſtitiam faciat univerſis, Bracton. l. 3. c. 9. per eas nimirum leges quas vulgus elegerit. Unde illud in archivis noſtris, 7 H. 4. Rot. Parl. Num. 59. Non eſt ulla regis prærogativa, qua ex juſtitia & æquitate quicquam derogat. Et reges olim acta Parlamenti confirmare recuſantes, Chartam videlicet magnam & hujuſmodi alia, majores noſtri ſæpenumerò armis coëgere; neque propterea minùs valere illas leges, aut minùs legitimas eſſe juriſperiti noſtri ſtatuunt: Quandoquidem aſſenſum rex iis decretis coactus præbuit, quibus jure atque ſponte aſſentiri debebat.

Tu dum contendis aliarum etiam gentium reges in poteſtate vel Synedrii vel Senatus, vel Concilii ſui æquè fuiſſe, non nos in ſervitutem aſſeris, ſed eas in libertatem: In quo idem facere pergis quod ab initio feciſti, quodque faciunt pragmaticorum ſtultiſſimi, ut incauti ſeipſos in lite ſæpiùs contraveniant. At nos ſcilicet fatemur regem, ubicunque abſit, in Parlamento tamen cenſeri præſentem vi poteſtatis: Ergò quodcunque illic agitur à rege ipſo actum intelligi. Tum quaſi bolum aliquem nactus eſſes aut mercedulam, illorum recordatione Caroleorum delinitus, accipimus, inquis, quod dant: Accipe igitur, quo dignus es, magnum malum; non enim damus, quod ſperabas, inde ſequi curiam illam non alia potiri poteſtate quàm à rege delegata. Si enim dicitur, poteſtas regis, quæcunque ea ſit, à Parlamento abeſſe non poteſt, an ſuprema continuò dicitur? Annon potiùs transferri in Parlamentum poteſtas regia videtur, útque minor majore contineri? Sanè ſi Parlamentum poteſt, nolente & invito rege, acta ejus & privilegia quibuſvis data revocare atque reſcindere, ſi ipſius regis prærogativas, prout videtur, circumſcribere, ſi proventus ejus annuos & impenſas aulæ, ſi famulitium ipſum, ſi totam denique rem domeſticam regis moderari, ſi vel intimos ejus conſiliarios atque amicos amovere, vel etiam è ſinu abripere ad ſupplicium poteſt, ſi cuivis denique de plebe à rege ad Parlamentum quacunque de re provocatio eſt lege data, non itidem à Parlamento ad regem, quæ omnia & poſſe fieri, & fuiſſe ſæpiùs facta, cum monumenta publica, tum legum noſtrarum conſultiſſimi teſtantur, neminem eſſe arbitror, modò mens ei ſana ſit, qui Parlamentum ſupra regem eſſe non fateatur. Nam in interregno etiam Parlamentum viget; & quod hiſtoriis noſtris teſtatiſſimum eſt, nulla hæreditatis ratione habita, ſæpe, quem ſibi viſum eſt, ſuffragiis liberrimis regem creavit. Ut ſummatim dicam quod res eſt, Parlamentum eſt ſupremum gentis Concilium, ad hoc ipſum à Populo planè libero conſtitutum, & poteſtate plenâ inſtructum, ut de ſummis rebus in commune conſulat; rex ideo erat creatus, ut de conſilio & ſententiâ illorum Ordinum conſulta omnia exequenda curaret. Quod cum Parlamentum ipſum edicto nuper ſuo publicè declararet, neque enim pro æquitate ſua recuſabat vel externis gentibus actionum ſuarum rationem ultrò ac ſponte reddere, ecce tibi è gurguſtio nullius homo authoritatis, aut fidei, aut rei, Burgundus iſte Verna, qui ſummum Angliæ Senatum, jus patrium atque ſuum ſcripto aſſerentem, deteſtandæ & horribilis impoſturæ inſimulat. Patriam mehercule tuam pudebit, verbero, ſe tantæ impudentiæ homuncionem genuiſſe. Sed habes fortaſſe quæ ſalutariter monitos nos velis; agedum, auſcultamus. Quas, inquis, leges ſancire poteſt Parlamentum, in quo nec præſulum ordo comparet? Túne ergo, furioſe, præſules ex Eccleſia extirpatum ibas, ut in Parlamenta induceres? O hominem impium, & Satanæ tradendum, quem neque Eccleſia non ejicere hypocritam & atheum, neque ulla reſpub. recipere communem libertatis peſtem atque labem deberet; qui etiam quod nequit ex Evangelio, id ex Ariſtotele & Halicarnaſſæo, deinde ex ſtatutis Papiſticis praviſſimorum temporum probare adnititur, regem Angliæ caput eſſe Anglicanæ Eccleſiæ, ut Epiſcopos compranſores ſuos & neceſſarios nuper factos, quos ipſe Deus exturbavit, novos iterum prædones & tyrannos, pro virili ſua parte, ſanctæ Dei Eccleſiæ imponat; quorum univerſum ordinem tanquam religioni Chriſtianæ pernicioſiſſimum, eradicandum eſſe ſtirpitùs, editis antea libris clamoſè contenderat. Quis unquam Apoſtata, non dico à ſua, quæ nulla certa eſt, ſed à Chriſtiana doctrina, quam ipſe aſſeruerat, defectione tam fœdâ atque nefariâ deſcivit? Epiſcopis de medio ſublatis, qui ſub rege, & ex ejus arbitrio de cauſis eccleſiæ cognoſcebant, quæris ad quos redibit ea cognitio. O perditiſſime, verere tandem vel conſcientiam tuam; memineris dum licet, niſi ſi hoc ſerò nimis te moneo, memineris quàm non impunè tibi erit, quàm inexpiabile demùm ſit, ſanctum Dei Spiritum ſic illudere. Subſiſte aliquando, & pone aliquem furori modum, ne te accenſa ira numinis repentè corripiat; qui Chriſti gregem, unctóſque Dei minimè tangendos; iis hoſtibus & ſæviſſimis tyrannis obterendos iterum & perſultandos tradere cupis, à quibus elata modò & mirifica Dei manus eos liberavit: Túque ipſe, neſcio eorúmne ad fructum ullum, an ad perniciem & obdurationem tuam, liberandos eſſe docuiſti. Quod ſi jus nullum dominandi in Eccleſiam eſt Epiſcopis, certè multo minùs eſt regibus; quicquid hominum ſtatuta edicunt. Sciunt enim qui labris aliquanto pluſquàm primoribus Evangelium guſtarunt, Eccleſiæ gubernationem divinam eſſe totam ac ſpiritualem, non civilem. In ſecularibus autem, quòd aïs ſupremam juriſdictionem habuiſſe regem Angliæ, id falſum eſſe jura noſtra ubertim declarant. Curias omnes ubi judicia exercentur, non rex, ſed Parlamenti authoritas vel conſtituit, vel tollit; in quibus tamen minimo cuivis è plebe licebat regem in jus vocare; neque raro judices contra regem pronuntiare ſolebant: id ſi rex vel interdicto, vel mandato, vel ſcriptis literis impedire conaretur, ex juramento & lege non parebant judices, ſed ejuſmodi mandata rejiciebant, & pro nihilo habebant. Non poterat rex quenquam in vincula conjicere, aut ullius bona in publicum addicere; poterat neminem ſupplicio punire, niſi in aliquam curiam priùs citatum, ubi non rex, ſed conſueti judices ſententias tulere; idque ſæpe, ut ſupra dixi, contra regem. Hinc noſter Bractonus, l. 3. c. 9. Regia poteſtas juris eſt, non injuriæ; & nihil aliud poteſt rex, niſi id ſolùm quod de jure poteſt. Aliud tibi ſuggerunt Cauſidici tui, qui nuper ſolum verterunt; ex ſtatutis nempe quibuſdam haud antiquis ſub Edvardo Quarto, Henrico Septimo, Edvardo Sexto promulgatis: Neque viderunt, quamcunque regi poteſtatem ſtatuta illa concedunt, eam à Parlamento conceſſam eſſe omnem & quaſi precariam; quàm & eadem authoritas poterat revocare. Cur ſic paſſus es naſuto tibi imponi, ut quo maximè argumento regis poteſtatem ex decretis Parlamenti pendere demonſtratur, eo abſolutam eſſe & ſupremam probare te crederes? Nam & monumenta noſtra ſanctiora teſtantur, reges noſtros non hæreditati, non armis, non ſucceſſioni; ſed populo ſuam omnem poteſtatem debere. Talis poteſtas regia Henrico quarto, talis ante eum Richardo Secundo à plebeio ordine conceſſa legitur; Rot. Parlament. 1 Hen. 4. Num. 108. haud ſecùs atque rex aliquis præſidibus ſuis præfecturas & provincias edicto & diplomate ſolet concedere. Id nempe literis publicis conſignari disertè juſſit Communium Domus, conceſſiſſe ſe regi Richardo, ut tali bona libertate frueretur, qualem ante eum reges Angliæ habuere; quâ cum rex ille contra fidem Sacramenti ſui ad everſionem legum abuteretur, ab iiſdem orbatus regno eſt. Iidem etiam, quod & eadem rotula teſtatur, in Parlamento edicunt, ſe prudentiâ & moderatione Henrici Quarti confiſos, velle ac jubere ut in eadem magna libertate regia ſit quam ejus progenitores obtinuere. Illa autem niſi fiduciaria planè fuiſſet, quemadmodum hæc fuit, neceſſe eſt profectò & Parlamenti illius ordines, qui concederent quod ſuum non erat, ineptos ac vanos, & reges illos qui, quod ſuum jam erat, conceſſum ab aliis vellent accipere, & ſibi & poſteris injurios nimis fuiſſe: Quorum utrumvis credibile non eſt. Tertia pars, inquis, regiæ poteſtatis verſatur circa militiam; hanc partem reges Angliæ ſine pari & æmulo tractarunt. Neque hoc verius quàm cætera quæ perfugarum fide ſcripſiſti. Primùm enim pacis & belli arbitrium penes magnum regni ſenatum ſemper fuiſſe, & hiſtoriæ paſſim noſtræ, & exterorum quotquot res noſtras paulo accuratiùs attigere teſtantur. Sancti etiam Edvardi leges, in quas jurare noſtri reges tenebantur, certiſſimam fidem faciunt, capite de Heretochiis, fuiſſe quaſdam poteſtates per provincias & ſingulos comitatus regni conſtitutas, qui Heretoches vocabantur, latinè ductores exercitus, qui provincialibus copiis præerant, non ad honorem coronæ ſolùm, ſed ad utilitatem regni. Iſti vero eligebantur per commune concilium, & per ſingulos comitatûs in pleno conventu populari, ſicut & vicecomites eligi debent. Ex quo facilè perſpicitur, & copias regni & copiarum ductores in poteſtate populi, non regis & antiquitùs fuiſſe, & eſſe oportere: illámque legem æquiſſimam noſtro in regno haud minus valuiſſe, quàm olim in populari Romanorum ſtatu valebat. De qua & M. Tullium audire non ab re fuerit. Philipp. 10. Omnes legiones, omnes copiæ quæ ubique ſunt, Populi R. ſunt. Neque enim legiones quæ Antonium Conſulem reliquerunt, Antonii potius quàm reipub. fuiſſe dicuntur. Sancti autem Edovardi legem illam, cum aliis illius legibus Guilielmus ille conquæſtor dictus, populo ſic volente ac jubente, juratus confirmavit; ſed & hanc inſuper adjecit, c. 56. Omnes civitates, burgos, caſtella, ſingulis noctibus ita cuſtodiri, prout vicecomes, & Aldermanni, cæterique præpoſiti per commune concilium ad utilitatem regni meliùs providebunt; & lege 62. Ideo caſtella, burgi, civitates ædificata ſunt ad tuitionem gentium & populorum regni, idcirco & obſervari debent cum omni libertate, integritate, & ratione. Quid ergo? Cuſtodientur arces & oppida in pace contra fures & maleficos non niſi per commune Concilium ejuſdem loci, non cuſtodientur in maximo belli metu contra hoſtes ſive externos ſive inteſtinos per commune concilium totius gentis? nique nique in iis cuſtodiendis ulla eſſe poterit ; neque earum rerum quicquam aſſequemur, quarum causâ fundari primùm urbes & arces lex ipſa dicit. Majores certè noſtri quidvis potiùs regi quàm ſua arma & oppidorum præſidia tradere ſolebant ; idem eſſe rati acſi libertatem ipſi ſuam ferocitati regum & impotentiæ proditum irent. Cujus rei exempla in hiſtoriis noſtris uberrima cum ſint, & jam notiſſima, inſerere huic loco ſupervacaneum eſſet. At protectionem rex debet ſubditis, quomodo eos protegere poterit, niſi arma viroſque habeat in ſua poteſtate ? At, inquam, habebat hæc omnia ad utilitatem regni, ut dictum eſt, non ad civium interitum & regni diſperditionem : Quod & Henrici Tertii temporibus, prudenter Leonardus quidam vir doctus in Epiſcoporum conventu reſpondit Ruſtando Papæ nuntio & regis procuratori : Omnes Eccleſiæ ſunt Domini Papæ, ut omnia principis eſſe dicimus, ad tuitionem, non ad fruitionem vel proprietatem, quod aïunt ; ad defenſionem, non ad diſperſionem : Eadem & prædictæ legis Edovardi ſententia erat ; quid eſt hoc aliud niſi poteſtate fiduciaria, non abſoluta ? Qualem cum imperator bellicus fere habeat, id eſt delegatam, non planè propriam, non eò ſegniùs populum, à quo eligitur, ſive domi ſive militiæ defendere ſolet. Fruſtra autem Parlamenta, & impari ſane congreſſu de legibus Sancti Edovardi & libertate olim cum regibus contendiſſent, ſi penes regem ſolum arma eſſe oportere exiſtimaſſent ; nam & leges quamlibet iniquas ipſe dare ſi voluiſſet, fruſtra ſe charta quantumvis magna contra ferrum defendiſſent. At quid proderit, inquis, Parlamento militiæ magiſterium habere, cum ne teruncium quidem ad eam ſuſtinendam queat, nolente rege, de populo cogere. Ne ſit ea tibi cura : Primùm enim hoc falsò ponis, Parlamenti ordines non poſſe ſine rege tributa populo imponere, à quo & ipſi miſſi ſunt, & cujus cauſam ſuſcipiunt. Deinde non poteſt te fugere tam ſedulum de alienis rebus percontatorem, ſua ſponte populum, vaſis aureis atque argenteis conflatis, magnam vim pecuniæ in hoc bellum contra regem impendiſſe. Ampliſſimos exinde regum noſtrorum annuos reditus recenſes : Nil niſi millies quingenties quadragies crepas ; ex patrimonio regis maximas largitiones fieri ſolitas ab iis regibus qui liberalitatis laudibus emicuerunt, avidus audieras : Hac te illecebrâ veluti Bileamum illum infamem proditores patriæ ad ſuam cauſam perduxere ; ut Dei populo maledicere, & divinis judiciis obſtrepere auderes. Stulte ; quid tandem regi injuſto ac violento tam immenſæ opes profuere ? Quid etiam tibi ? Ad quem nihil prorſus eorum, quæ ſpe ingenti devoraveras, perveniſſe audio, præter unam illam crumenulam vitreis globulis vermiculatam, & centenis aureolis conſertam. Cape iſtam, Balaame, quam adamaſti, iniquitatis mercedem, ac fruere. Pergis enim deſipere ; Erectio ſtandardi, id eſt vexilli ad regem ſolum pertinet. Quapropter ? Quia

Tune verò neſcis, Grammatice, hoc idem cujuſvis imperatoris bellici munus eſſe ? At aït Ariſtoteles, neceſſe eſt regi præſidium adſiſtere, quo leges tueri poſſit ; ergo oportet regem plus armis poſſe quàm populum univerſum. Tales hic homo conſequentias torquere ſolet, quales Ocnus funes apud inferos ; quæ nulli ſunt uſui, niſi ut comedantur ab aſinis : Aliud enim eſt præſidium à populo datum, aliud armorum omnium poteſtas, quam Ariſtoteles hoc ipſo, quem protuliſti, loco à regibus abjudicat. Oportet, inquit, habeat rex tantam circa ſe manum armatorum, quanta ſingulis vel compluribus fortior ſit, populo vero minor ; εἶναι δὲ τοσαύτην ἰσχυν ὥστε ἑκάστου μὲν καὶ ἑνὸς καὶ συμπλειονων κρείττω, τοῦ δὲ πλήθους ἥττω, Polit. l. 3. c. 11. Alioqui ſanè, ſub ſpecie tuendi, poſſit ſtatim & populum & leges ſibi ſubjicere. Hoc autem rex & tyrannus intereſt ; rex à ſenatu & populo volente, ac libente, quod ſatis eſt præſidii circa ſe habet contra hoſtes, & ſeditioſos : Tyrannus invito ſenatu ac populo, vel hoſtium, vel perditorum civium præſidium ſibi quàm maximum comparare ſtudet, contra ſenatum ipſum & populum. Conceſſit itaque Parlamentum regi, ut alia omnia, ſic ſtandardi erectionem ; non ut infeſta patriæ ſigna inferret, ſed ut populum contra eos defenderet, quos Parlamentum hoſtes judicat ; ſi ſecus feciſſet, ipſe hoſtis judicandus erat ; cum juxta ipſam Sancti Edovardi, vel quod ſanctius eſt, ipſam naturæ legem, nomen regis perdiderit. Unde in prædictâ Philippicâ, amittit is omne exercitûs & imperii jus, qui eo imperio & exercitu rempub. oppugnat. Neque licebat regi feudales illos equites ad bellum evocare, quod Parlamenti authoritas non decreviſſet ; id quod ex ſtatutis pluribus manifeſtum eſt. Idem de vectigalibus & cenſu navali cenſendum; quem imperare civibus ſine ſenatuſconſulto rex non potuit: atque ita graviſſimi legum noſtrarum interpretes annis abhinc plus minus duodecim, tum cum adhuc firmiſſimum erat regium imperium, publicè ſtatuerunt. Sic diu ante eos Forteſcutius Henrici Sexti cancellarius juris noſtri conſultiſſimus; rex Angliæ, inquit, neque leges mutare poteſt, neque tributa, nolente populo, imponere, ſed nec probaverit quiſquam ullis teſtimoniis antiquorum regni Angliæ ſtatum mere eſſe regalem. Habet rex, inquit Bractonus, juriſdictionem ſuper omnes. Id eſt in curiâ; ubi regis quidem nomine, noſtris autem legibus jus redditur. Omnis ſub rege eſt; id eſt, ſinguli: atque ita ſe explicat ipſe Bractonus locis à me ſupra citatis. Ad ea quæ reſtant, ubi eundem volvis lapidem, in quo vales ipſum, credo, Siſyphum delaſſare, ex ſupra dictis abunde reſpondetur. De cætero, ſi quando Parlamenta ſuum regibus bonis obſequium ampliſſimis verbis citra aſſentationem & ſervitutem detulere, id quaſi eodem modo tyrannis delatum eſſet, intelligi, aut populo fraudi eſſe non debet; neque enim juſto obſequio libertas imminuitur. Quod autem ex Edvardo Coco & aliis citas, Angliæ regnum abſolutum eſt imperium, id eſt, ſi ad ullum regem externum, aut Cæſarem reſpicias; vel, ut Cambdenus aït, quia in imperii clientela non eſt: alioqui adjicit uterque imperium hoc conſiſtere non ex rege ſolo, ſed ex corpore politico. Unde Forteſcutius, de laud. legum Angl. c. 9. rex, inquit, Angliæ populum gubernat non mera poteſtate regia, ſed politica; populus enim iis legibus gubernatur quas ipſe fert. Externos hoc etiam ſcriptores non latebat. Hinc Philippus Cominæus author graviſſimus commentariorum quinto; inter omnia orbis terræ regna, quorum ego notitiam habeo, non eſt meâ quidem ſententiâ, ubi publicum moderatius tractetur, neque ubi regi minus liceat in populum, quàm in Anglia. Poſtremò ridiculum eſt, inquis, argumentum, quod afferunt, regna ante reges fuiſſe, quaſi dicas lucem ante ſolem extitiſſe. At nos, ô bone vir, non regna, ſed populum ante reges fuiſſe dicimus. Quem interim te magis ridiculum dicam, qui lucem ante ſolem extitiſſe, quaſi ridiculum, negas. Ita dum in alienis curioſus eſſe vis, elementa dedidiciſti. Miraris denique, eos qui regem in comitiis regni viderunt ſolio ſedentem, ſub aureo & ſerico cœlo, potuiſſe in dubium vocare utrum penes regem an penes Parlamentum majeſtas ſit. Incredulos profectò homines narras, quos tam lucidum argumentum è cœlo ipſo petitum nihil movit. Quod tu cœlum aureum homo ſtoicus adeò es religioſè & unicè contemplatus, ut & cœli Moſaici & Ariſtotelici oblitus eſſe penitus videare: cum in illo lucem ante ſolem exſtitiſſe negaveris, in hoc tres Zonas temperatas eſſe ſupra docueris. Quot Zonas in illo regis aureo & ſerico cœlo obſervaveris, neſcio: hoc ſcio, te Zonam unam centum ſtellis aureis bene temperatam ex illa tua cœleſti contemplatione abſtuliſſe.

C A P. X.

CUm hæc omnis controverſia de jure, ſive generatim regio, ſive ſeparatim regis Angliæ, obſtinatis partium contentionibus, quàm ipſa rei natura difficilior facta ſit, ſpero, qui ſtudium veritatis factionibus anteponunt, iis ea me ex lege Dei, jureque gentium, ex inſtitutis denique patriis, copioſè attuliſſe, quæ regem Angliæ judicari poſſe, atque etiam capite puniri indubitatum reliquerint. Cum cæteris, quorum animos aut ſuperſtitio occupavit, aut mentis etiam anticipata regii ſplendoris admiratio ita perſtrinxit, ut nihil in virtute ac libertate verâ illuſtre ac ſplendidum videre poſſint, ſive ratione & argumentis agamus, ſive exemplis, fruſtra contendimus. Tu verò, Salmaſi, ut reliqua omnia, ita hoc etiam abſurdè admodùm facere videris, qui cum omnes independentes omnibus probris onerare non deſinas, regem ipſum quem defendis, maximè omnium independentem fuiſſe ſtatuis: neque regnum populo, ſed generi debuiſſe: deinde quem capitis cauſam dicere coactum initio graviter dolebas, eum nunc inauditum periiſſe quereris. At verò totam cauſæ dictionem ejus, fide ſumma Gallicè editam, inſpicere ſi libet, perſuaſum tibi aliud fortaſſe erit. Carolo certè cum per aliquot dies continuos ampliſſima loquendi facta copia eſſet, non ille quidem eſt ea uſus ad objecta ſibi crimina diluendum, ſed ad judicium illud ac judices omninò rejiciendum. Qui autem reus aut tacet, aut aliena ſemper reſpondet, eum non eſt injuria, ſi manifeſtus criminum ſit, vel inauditum condemnari. Carolum ſi mortem aïs planè egiſſe vita reſpondentem, aſſentior: ſi dicis piè & ſanctè & ſecurè vitam finiiſſe, ſcito aviam ejus Mariam, infamem fœminam, pari in ſpeciem pietate, ſanctitate, conſtantia in pegmate occubuiſſe. Ne animi præſentiæ, quæ in morte quibuſvis è vulgo maleficis permagna ſæpè eſt, nimium tribuas, ſæpè deſperatio aut obfirmatus animus fortitudinis quandam ſpeciem & quaſi perſonam induit; ſæpè ſtupor tranquillitatis: videri ſe bonos, intrepidos, innocentes, interdum & ſanctos peſſimi quique non minùs in morte quàm in vita cupiunt; ínque ipſa ſcelerum ſuorum capitali pœna ſolent ultimam ſimulationis ſuæ & fraudum, quàm poſſunt ſpecioſiſſimè, pompam ducere, &, veluti poetæ aut hiſtriones deterrimi, plauſum in ipſo exitu ambitioſiſſimè captare. Nunc ad iſtam quæſtionem perveniſſe te aïs, quâ tractandum eſt quinam fuerint illius regiæ condemnationis præcipui authores. Cum de te potiùs inquirendum ſit, quomodo tu, homo exterus, & Gallicanus erro, ad quæſtionem de rebus noſtris, tibi tam alienis, habendam perveneris? quo pretio emptus? verùm de eo ſatis conſtat. Te vero percontantem de rebus noſtris quis demum docuit? ipſi nimirum perfugæ, & perduelles patriæ, qui te hominem vaniſſimum nacti, mercede ad maledicendum facilè adduxerunt. Data deinde tibi eſt aliqua aut furibundi cujuſpiam ſacellani ſemipapiſtæ, aut ſervientis aulici, de ſtatu rerum ſcriptiuncula; eam ut latinè verteres negotium tibi dabatur: hinc iſtæ narrationes confectæ, quas, ſi videtur, paulùm excutiamus. In hanc condemnationem non centena milleſima pars populi conſenſit. Quid ergo cæteri, qui ſeſe nolentibus tantum facinus fieri ſunt paſſi? an ſtipites, an trunci hominum, an fortè quales illi in ſcena Virgiliana,

Non enim veros tu quidem Britannos, ſed pictos neſcio quos, vel etiam acu pictos videris mihi velle dicere. Cum itaque incredibile ſit gentem bellicoſam à tam paucis, iiſque infimis de plebe ſua, ſub jugum mitti, quod in narratione tua primum occurrit, id eſſe falſiſſimum apparet. Ordo eccleſiaſticus erat ab ipſo ſenatu ejectus. Eo miſerior itaque tua eſt inſania, necdum enim te ſentis inſanire, qui eos è Parlamento quereris ejectos, quos tute ex eccleſia ejiciendos eſſe, libro longiſſimo ſcribis? Senatûs alter ordo qui in proceribus conſiſtebat, ducibus, comitibus, vicecomitibus, ſtatione ſua dejectus eſt. Et meritò, à nullo enim municipio miſſi pro ſe tantùm ſedebant, nihil juris in populum habebant, juri tamen ejus & libertati, ſuo quodam inſtituto refragari in pleriſque conſueverant: erant à rege conſtituti, ejus comites, & famuli, & quaſi umbræ, quo amoto, ipſi neceſſe eſt ad plebem, unde orti ſunt, redigerentur. Una & deterrima portio Parlamenti poteſtatem ſibi vindicare non debuit reges judicandi. At plebeius ordo, quòd te ſupra docui, non ſolum Parlamenti pars erat potiſſima, etiam ſub regibus, ſed per ſe ipſe Parlamentum omnibus numeris abſolutum & legitimum, etiam ſine Comitibus, nedum Eccleſiaſticis, conſtituebat. Atqui ne tota quidem hæc ipſa pars ad ſententiam de regis capite ferendam admiſſa eſt. Pars illa nempe non admiſſa, quem verbo regem, re hoſtem toties judicaverat, ad eum animis atque conſiliis palam defecerat. Parlamenti ordines Anglicani cum iis qui à Scotiæ itidem Parlamento miſſi erant legati, idibus Januarii 1645. reſcripſerant regi, doloſas inducias & habenda ſecum Londini colloquia petenti, non poſſe ſe eum in urbem admittere, donec is de bello civili tribus jam regnis ejus operâ excitato, de cædibus tot civium ejus juſſu factis reipub. ſatisfeciſſet; déque pace firma atque ſincera iis conditionibus caviſſet, quas ei utriuſque regni Parlamenta & tulerant ſæpiùs, & latura eſſent: ipſe è contrario poſtulata eorum æquiſſima jam ſepties humillimè oblata, reſponſionibus aut ſurdis repudiaverat, aut ambiguis eluſerat. Ordines tandem poſt tot annorum patientiam ut ne fraudulentus rex, quam debellare rempub. in acie non valebat, eam in vinculis per dilationes everteret, & jucundiſſimum ex noſtris diſſidiis fructum capiens, de victoribus etiam ſuis reſtitutus hoſtis inſperatum ſibi triumphum ageret, decernunt, ſe regis deinceps rationem non habituros, nullas ſe ei poſtulationes ampliùs eſſe miſſuros, aut ab eo accepturos. Poſt hæc tamen decreta reperti ſunt ex ipſo ordinum numero, qui invictiſſimi exercitûs odio, cujus maximis rebus geſtis invidebant, quémque poſt ingentia merita, dimittere cum ignominia cupiebant, & miniſtris aliquot ſeditioſis, quibus miſerè ſerviebant, morem gerentes, opportunum ſibi tempus nacti, cum eorum multi, quos à ſe longè diſſentire ſciebant, ad ſedandos Presbyterianorum gliſcentes jam tumultus, miſſi ab ipſo ordine, in provinciis abeſſent, mira levitate, ne dicam perfidia, decernunt, inveteratum hoſtem, verbotenùs duntaxat regem, nulla penè ab eo ſatisfactione priùs accepta, aut cautione facta, ad urbem eſſe reducendum; in ſummam dignitatem atque imperium æquè eſſe reſtituendum, ac ſi de repub. præclare meritus eſſet. Ita religioni, libertati, fœderi denique illi à ſe toties jactato regem præponebant. Quid illi interea qui integri tam peſtifera agitari conſilia videbant? An ideo deeſſe patriæ, ſaluti ſuorum non proſpicere debuerant, eò quod iſtius mali contagio in ipſorum Ordinem penetraverat? At quis iſtos excluſit malè ſanos? Exercitus, inquis, Anglicanus, id eſt, non externorum, ſed fortiſſimorum & fidiſſimorum civium; quorum tribuni plerique, ſenatores ipſi erant, quos illi boni excluſi patriâ ipſa excludendos, & in Hiberniam procul ablegandos eſſe cenſuerant; dum Scoti interim dubia jam fide quatuor Angliæ provincias ſuis finibus proximas magnis copiis inſidebant, firmiſſima earum regionum oppida præſidiis tenebant, regem ipſum in cuſtodia habebant: dum ipſi etiam factiones ſuorum atque tumultus, Parlamento ipſi pluſquam minaces, & in urbe & in agris paſſim fovebant, qui paulò pòſt in bellum non civile ſolùm, ſed & Scoticum illud erupere. Quòd ſi privatis etiam conſiliis aut armis ſubvenire reipublicæ laudatiſſimum ſemper fuit, non eſt certè cur exercitus reprehendi poſſit, qui Parlamenti authoritate ad urbem accerſitus imperata fecit; & regiorum factionem atque tumultum ipſi curiæ ſæpiùs minitantem facilè compeſcuit. In id autem diſcrimen adducta res erat, ut aut nos ab illis, aut illos à nobis opprimi neceſſe eſſet. Stabant ab illis Londinenſium plerique inſtitores atque opifices, & miniſtrorum factioſiſſimi quique; à nobis exercitus magna fide, modeſtia, virtute cognitus. Per hos cum retinere libertatem, rempub. ſalutem liceret, an hæc omnia per ignaviam & ſtultitiam prodenda fuiſſe cenſes? Debellati regiarum partium duces arma quidem inviti, animum hoſtilem non depoſuerant: omnibus belli renovandi occaſionibus intenti ad urbem ſe receperant. Cum his, quamvis inimiciſſimis quamvis ſanguinem eorum avidè ſitientibus, Presbyteriani, poſtquam non permitti ſibi in omnes tam civilem quàm eccleſiaſticam dominationem viderunt, clandeſtina conſilia, & prioribus tum dictis tum factis indigniſſima conſociare, cœperant: eóque acerbitatis proceſſere, ut mallent ſe regi denuò mancipare, quàm fratres ſuos in partem illam libertatis quam & ipſi ſuo ſibi ſanguine acquiſiverant, admittere; mallent tyrannum tot civium cruore perfuſum, irâ in ſuperſtites, & concepta jam ultione ardentem rurſus experiri dominum, quàm fratres, & amiciſſimos æquo jure ferre ſibi pares. Soli Independentes qui vocantur, & ad ultimum ſibi conſtare, & ſua uti victoria ſciebant: qui ex rege hoſtem ſe fecerat, eum ex hoſte regem eſſe amplius, ſapienter, meo quidem judicio, nolebant: neque pacem idcircò non volebant, ſed involutum pacis nomine aut bellum novum, aut æternam ſervitutem prudentes metuebant. Exercitum autem noſtrum quo fuſiùs infamare poſſis, narrationem quandam rerum noſtrarum inconditam & ſtrigoſam exordiris: in qua tametſi multa falſa, multa frivola reperio, multa abs te vitio data, quæ laudi ducenda eſſent, huic tamen alteram ex adverſo narrationem opponere nihil arbitror attinere. Rationibus enim hic non narrationibus certatur; atque illis utrobique, non his fides habebitur. Et ſanè ſunt ejuſmodi res iſtæ, ut niſi juſta hiſtoria dici pro dignitate nequeant. Melius itaque puto, quod de Carthagine Salluſtius, ſilere tantis de rebus, quàm parùm dicere: neque committam ut non ſolùm virorum illuſtrium, ſed Dei præcipuè maximi laudes, in hac rerum ſerie mirabili ſæpiſſimè iterandas, tuis hoc libro intexam opprobriis. Ea igitur duntaxat, quæ argumenti habere ſpeciem videntur, pro more decerpam. Anglos & Scotos quòd ais ſolenni conventione promiſiſſe, ſe regis majeſtatem conſervaturas, omittis quibus id conditionibus promiſere; ſi ſalvâ nimirum religione & libertate id fieri poſſet: quibus utriſque ad extremum uſque ſpiritum iniquus adeò & inſidioſus rex iſte erat, ut, vivente illo, & religionem periclitaturam, & libertatem interituram eſſe facile appareret. Sed redis jam ad illos regii ſupplicii authores. Si res ipſa ponderibus ſuis, & momentis rectè æſtimetur, exitus facti nefandi ita Independentibus imputari debet, ut principii & progreſſus gloriam Presbyteriani ſibi poſſent vindicare. Audite Presbyteriani, ecquid nunc juvat, ecquid confert ad innocentiæ & fidelitatis opinionem veſtræ, quòd à rege puniendo abhorrere tantopere videremini?

Vos iſto regis actore verboſiſſimo, accuſatore veſtro, pluſquam dimidium itineris confeciſtis; vos ad quartum actum & ultra in dramate hoc deſultando friguttientes ſpectati eſtis; vos meritò regis occiſi crimine notari debetis; ut qui viam ad ipſum occidendum muniiſtis; vos nefariam illam ſecurim cervicibus ejus inflixiſtis, non alii. Væ vobis imprimis, ſi unquam ſtirps Caroli regnum poſthac in Anglos recuperabit: in vos, mihi credite, cudetur hæc faba. Sed Deo vota perſolvite, fratres diligite liberatores veſtros, qui illam calamitatem, atque certam perniciem ab invitis etiam vobis hactenus prohibuere. Poſtulamini vos item, quòd aliquot annos antè per varias petitiones jus regis imminuere moliti eſtis, quòd voces contumelioſas regi illis ipſis libellis quos nomine Senatus regi porrexiſtis, inſertas publicaſtis; videlicet in illa declaratione dominorum & communium, Maii 26. 1642. apertè quid ſenſiſtis de regis authoritate aliquoties perduellionem ſpirantibus & inſanis poſitionibus faſſi eſtis. Hullæ oppidi portas Hothamus, tali mandato à ſenatu accepto, venienti regi occluſit; vos quid rex pati poſſet, hoc primo rebellionis experimento cognoſcere concupiviſtis. Quid hoc dici potuit accommodatiùs ad conciliandos inter ſe Anglorum animos, atque à rege penitùs abalienandos? cum intelligere hinc poſſint, ſi rex revertatur, ſe non ſolùm regis mortem, ſed etiam petitiones quondam ſuas, & frequentiſſimi Parlamenti acta de liturgia & epiſcopis abolendis, de triennali Parlamento, & quæcunque ſummo populi conſenſu ac plauſu ſancita ſunt, tanquam ſeditioſas atque inſanas Presbyterianorum poſitiones luituros. Sed repente mutat animum homo leviſſimus; & quod modò rem ipſam rectè æſtimanti ſibi videbatur ſolis Presbyterianis deberi, id nunc rem eandem ab alto revolventi Independentibus totum deberi videtur. Modò Presbyterianos vi aperta atque armis contra regem graſſatos eſſe, eúmque ab iis bello victum, captum, in carcerem conjectum affirmabat, nunc omnem hanc rebellionis doctrinam Independentium eſſe ſcribit. O hominis fidem & conſtantiam! quid aliam jam opus eſt narrationem comparare contra tuam, quæ ipſa ſibi tam turpiter decoxit? Verùm de te ſiquis dubitat, albúſne an ater homo ſis, tua legat quæ ſequuntur. Tempus eſt, inquis, pandere unde & quando proruperit inimica regibus ſecta: belli iſti ſanè Puritani ſub regno Eliſabethæ prodire tenebris Orci, & Eccleſiam inde turbare primùm cœperunt, immo rempub. ipſam: non enim ſunt minores reipub. peſtes quàm eccleſiæ. Nunc te verè Balaamum vox ipſa ſonat; ubi enim virus omne acerbitatis evomere cupiebas, ibi inſciens atque invitus benedixiſti. Hoc enim tota Anglia notiſſimum eſt, ſi qui ad exemplum eccleſiarum vel Gallicarum vel Germanicarum, ut quaſque reformatiores eſſe judicabant, puriorem cultus divini rationem ſequi ſtudebant, quam penè omnem Epiſcopi noſtri cæremoniis & ſuperſtitionibus contaminaverant, ſi qui tandem pietate erga Deum, aut vitæ integritate cæteris præſtabant, eos ad Epiſcoporum fautoribus Puritanos fuiſſe nominatos. Hi ſunt quorum doctrinam regibus inimicam eſſe clamitas; neque hi ſolum, nam plerique reformatorum, inquis, qui in alios diſciplinæ ejus articulos non jurarunt, hunc tamen unum videntur approbaſſe, qui regiæ adverſatur dominationi. Ita Independentes, dum graviſſimè inſectaris, laudas; qui eos ab integerrima Chriſtianorum familia deducis; & quam doctrinam Independentium eſſe propriam ubique aſſeris, eam nunc reformatorum pleroſque approbaſſe confiteris; eò uſque demùm audaciæ, impietatis, apoſtaſiæ provectus es, ut etiam Epiſcopos, quos tanquam peſtes & Antichriſtos ex Eccleſia radicitùs evellendos, atque exterminandos eſſe nuper docuiſti, eos nunc à rege tuendos fuiſſe affirmas, ne quid Sacramento ſcilicet inaugurationis derogatum iret. Nihil eſt ulterius jam ſceleris aut infamiæ quò poſſis procedere, quàm, quòd ſolum ſupereſt, ut reformatam, quam polluis, religionem quamprimùm ejures. Quòd autem nos aïs omnes ſectas & hereſes tolerare, id noli accuſare; quandiu te impium, qui Chriſtianorum ſanctiſſimos, & pleroſque etiam reformatos tibi adverſos è tenebris orci prodire, audes dicere, te vanum, mendacem, & conductitium calumniatorem, te denique Apoſtatam Eccleſia tamen toleret. Tuas autem exinde ſycophantias, quibus magnam reliqui capitis partem inſumis, & quæ monſtroſa dogmata Independentibus, ad cumulandam iis invidiam, affingis, quidni omittam? cum neque ad cauſam hanc regiam omninò pertineant, & ea ferè ſint quæ riſum potiùs aut contemptum cujuſvis quàm refutationem mereantur.

CAP. XI.

AD undecimum hoc caput videre mihi, Salmaſi, quamvis nullo cum pudore, cum aliqua tamen conſcientia futilitatis tuæ accedere. Cum enim hoc loco perquirendum tibi propoſueris qua authoritate pronunciatum de rege fuerit, ſubjungis quod à te nemo expectabat, fruſtra id quæri; ſcilicet, quæſtioni huic vix locum reliquit qualitas hominum qui id fecere. Cum igitur, quàm es importunitatis & impudentiæ in hac cauſa ſuſcipienda compertus, tam ſis nunc etiam loquacitatis tibi conſcius, eò à me brevius reſponſum feres. Quærenti jam tibi qua authoritate ordo plebeius vel judicavit ipſe regem, vel aliis id judicium delegavit, reſpondeo ſupremâ: ſupremam quemadmodum habuerit, docebunt te ea quæ tunc à me dicta ſunt, cum te ſuprà hac ipſa de re gnaviter ineptientem redarguerem. Quòd ſi tibi ſaltem crederes, poſſe te ullo tempore quod ſatis eſt dicere, non eadem toties cantare odioſiſſimè ſoleres. Aliis autem delegare ſuam judicandi poteſtatem ordo plebeius eadem ſanè ratione potuit, qua tu regem, qui & ipſe omnem poteſtatem à populo accepit, eandem aliis delegare potuiſſe dicis. Unde in illa ſolenni conventione, quam nobis objeciſti, cum Angliæ tum Scotiæ ſummi ordines religioſè profitentur ac ſpondent, ea ſe ſupplicia de perduellibus eſſe ſumpturos, quibus utriuſque gentis poteſtas judiciaria ſuprema, aut qui ab ea delegatam poteſtatem accepturi erant, plectendos judicarent. Audis hîc utriuſque gentis Senatum una voce teſtantem ſe poſſe ſuam authoritatem judiciariam, quam ſupremam ipſi vocant, aliis delegare: vanam ergo & frivolam de iſta poteſtatis delegatione controverſiam moves. At cum his, inquis, judicibus è domo inferiori ſelectis juncti etiam judices fuere ex cohortibus militaribus ſumpti; nunquam autem militum fuit civem judicare. Pauciſſimis te retundam; non enim de cive nunc, ſed de hoſte memineris nos loqui: quem ſi imperator bellicus cum tribunis militaribus ſuis, bello captum, & è veſtigio, ſi ita videretur, occidendum, pro tribunali judicare voluerit, an quicquam præter jus belli aut morem cenſebitur feciſſe? qui autem hoſtis reipublicæ, & bello captus eſt, ne pro cive quidem is, nedum pro rege in ea repub. haberi poteſt. Hanc ipſa lex Regis Edovardi ſacroſancta ſententiam tulit; quæ negat malum regem aut eſſe regem, aut oportere regis nomine appellari. Ad illud autem quod aïs non integram plebis domum, ſed mancam & mutilam de regis capite judicaſſe, ſic habeto; eorum, qui regem plectendum eſſe cenſebant, longè majorem fuiſſe numerum, quàm qui res quaſcunq; in Parlamento tranſigere, etiam per abſentiam cæterorum, ex lege debebant; qui cum ſuo vitio atq; culpâ abeſſent (defectio enim animorum ad communem hoſtem peſſima abſentia erat) nullam iis, qui in fide permanſerant, afferre moram conſervandæ reipub. poterant; quam vacillantem, & ad ſervitutem atque interitum prope redactam, populus univerſus eorum fidei, prudentiæ, fortitudini primò commiſerat. Atque illi quidem ſtrenuè rem geſſere; exulcerati regis impotentiæ, furori, inſidiis ſeſe objecere; omnium libertati atque ſaluti ſuam poſthabuere; omnia antehac Parlamenta, omnes majores ſuos prudentia, magnanimitate, conſtantia ſupergreſſi. Hos tamen populi magna pars, quamvis omnem illis fidem, operam, atque auxilium pollicita, ingratis animis in ipſo curſu deſeruit. Pars hæc ſervitutem & pacem cum ignavia atque luxuria ullis conditionibus volebat; pars altera tamen libertatem poſcebat, pacem non niſi firmam atq; honeſtam. Quid hîc ageret Senatus? partem hanc ſanam, & ſibi & patriæ fidelem defenderet, an deſertricem illam ſequeretur? Scio quid agere oportuiſſe dices; non enim Eurylochus, ſed Elpenor es, id eſt vile animal Circéum, porcus immundus, turpiſſima ſervitute etiam ſub fœmina aſſuetus; unde nullum guſtum virtutis, & quæ ex ea naſcitur, libertatis habes; omnes eſſe ſervos cupis, quòd nihil in tuo pectore generoſum aut liberum ſentis, nihil non ignobile atque ſervile aut loqueris aut ſpiras. Injicis porrò ſcrupulum quòd & Scotiæ rex erat, de quo ſtatuimus, quaſi idcirco in Anglia impune quidvis illi facere liceret. Ut hoc caput denique præ cæteris elumbe atque aridum aliquo ſaltem facetè dicto queas coucludere, duæ inquis, ſunt voculæ iiſdem ac totidem elementis conſtantes, ſolo literarum ſitu differentes, ſed immane quantum ſignificatione differentes, Vis, & Jus. Minimè profectò mirum eſt te trium literarum hominem tam ſcitam ex tribus literis argutiolam exculpere potuiſſe; hoc magis mirandum eſt quod toto libro aſſeris, duas res tam inter ſe cæteroqui differentes, in regibus unum atque idem eſſe. Quæ enim vis eſt unquam à regibus facta, quam non jus regium tu eſſe affirmaſti? Hæc ſunt quæ novem paginis bene longis reſponſione digna animadvertere potui; cætera ſunt ea, quæ aut identidem repetita haud ſemel refutavimus, aut ad hanc cauſam diſceptandam nullum habent momentum. Itaque ſolito nunc brevior ſi ſum, id non meæ diligentiæ, quam in hoc ſummo tædio langueſcere non patior, ſed tuæ loquacitati, rerum & rationum tam caſſæ atque inani, imputandum erit.

CAP. XII.

VEllem equidem, Salmaſi, ne cui forte videar in regem Carolum, ſuo fato atque ſupplicio defunctum, iniquior eſſe aut acerbior, ut totum hunc de criminibus ejus locum, quod & tibi & tuis conſultius fuiſſet, ſilentio præteriiſſes. Nunc verò quoniam id magis placuit, ut de iis præfidenter & verboſè diceres, faciam profectò ut intelligas,nihil à te fieri incogitantius potuiſſe,quàm ut deterrimam cauſæ tuæ partem, nempe ejus crimina ad extremum refricanda & accuratiùs inquirenda reſervares; quæ, cum vera & atrociſſima oſtendero fuiſſe, & ejus memoriam omnibus bonis ingratam atque inviſam, & tui defenſoris odium quàm maximum in animis legentium noviſſimè relinquant. Duæ, inquis, partes ejus accuſationis fieri poſſunt; una in reprehenſione vitæ verſatur, altera in delictis quæ tanquam rex potuit committere. Et vitam quidem ejus inter convivia, & ludos, & fœminarum greges dilapſam facilè tacebo: quid enim habet luxus dignum memoratu? Aut quid hæc ad nos, ſi tantùm privatus feciſſet? poſtquam voluit rex eſſe, ut nec ſibi vivere, ita ne peccare quidam ſibi ſolùm potuit. Primùm enim exemplo ſuis vehementiſſimè nocuit; ſecundo loco, quod temporis libidinibus & rebus ludicris impendit, quod erat plurimum, id totum reipub. quam ſusceperat gubernandam, ſubduxit; poſtremò immenſas opes, innumerabilem pecuniam non ſuam, ſed publicam luxu domeſtico dilapidavit. Itaque domi rex malus primùm eſſe cœpit. Verum ad ea potius crimina quæ malè regnando commiſiſſe arguitur tranſeamus. Hic doles tyrannum eum, proditorem, & homicidam fuiſſe judicatum. Id non injuria factum demonſtrabitur. Tyrannum autem priùs, non ex vulgi opinione, ſed ex Ariſtotelis & doctorum omnium judicio definiamus. Tyrannus eſt qui ſuam duntaxat, non populi utilitatem ſpectat. Ita Ariſtoteles ethicorum decimo, & alibi; ita alii plerique. Suane commoda an populi ſpectarit Carolus, pauca hæc de multis, quæ tantummodò perſtringam, teſtimonio erunt. Cum aulæ ſumptibus patrimonium & proventus regii non ſufficerent, imponit graviſſima populo tributa; iiſq; abſumptis nova excogitavit: non ut rempub. vel augeret, vel ornaret, vel defenderet, ſed ut populi non unius opes vel unam in domum congerendas inferret, vel una in domo diſſiparet. Hunc in modum ſine lege cum pervolaret omnia, quod unicum ſciebat ſibi fræno fore, Parlamentum aut funditus abolere, aut convocatum haud ſæpius quàm id ſuis rationibus conduceret, ſibi ſoli reddere obnoxium conatus eſt. Quo fræno ſibi detracto, aliud ipſe populo frænum injecit: Germanos equites, pedites Hibernos per urbes, pérque oppida quaſi in præſidiis, cum bellum eſſet nullum, collocandos curavit: parúmne tibi adhuc tyrannus videtur? In quo etiam, ut in aliis multis rebus, quod ſupra per occaſionem abs te datam oſtendi ( quanquam tu Carolum Neroni crudeliſſimo conferri indignaris ) Neroni perquàm ſimilis erat: nam & Senatum ille à repub. ſe ſublaturum perſæpe erat minatus. Interea conſcientiis religioſorum hominum ſupra modum gravis, ad cæremonias quaſdam & ſuperſtitioſos cultus, quos è medio papiſmo in eccleſiam reduxerat, omnes adigebat; renuentes aut exilio aut carcere multabat; Scotos bis eam ob cauſam bello adortus eſt. Huc uſque ſimplici ſaltem vice nomen tyranni commeruiſſe videatur. Nunc cur adjectum in accuſatione proditoris nomen fuerit exponam. Cum huic Parlamento ſæpiùs pollicitis, edictis, execrationibus confirmaſſet, ſe nihil contra rempub. moliri, eodem ipſo tempore aut papiſtarum delectus in Hibernia habebat, aut legatis ad regem Daniæ clanculùm miſſis, arma, equos, auxilium diſertè contra Parlamentum petebat, aut exercitum nunc Anglorum nunc Scotorum pretio ſollicitabat; illis Urbem Londinum diripiendam, his quatuor provincias Aquilonares Scotorum ditioni adjungendas promiſit, ſi ſibi ad Parlamentum quoquo modo tollendum commodare ſuam operam vellent. Cum hæc non ſuccederent, cuidem Dillonio perduelli dat ſecretiora ad Hibernos mandata, quibus juberentur omnes Anglos ejus inſulæ colonos repente armis adoriri. Hæc ferè proditionum ejus monumenta ſunt, non vanis rumoribus collecta, ſed ipſis literis ipſius manu ſubſcriptis atq; ſignatis comperta. Homicidam denique fuiſſe, cujus acceptis mandatis Hiberni arma ceperint, ad quinquies centena millia Anglorum in ſumma pace nihil tale metuentium exquiſitis cruciatibus occiderint, qui etiam tantum reliquis duobus regnis bellum civile conflârit, neminem puto negaturum. Addo enim quod in illo Vectenſi colloquio hujus belli & culpam & crimen rex palàm in ſe ſuſcepit, eòque omni Parlamentum notiſſima confeſſione ſuâ liberavit. Habes nunc breviter quamobrem rex Carolus & tyrannus & proditor & Homicida judicatus fuerit. At cur non prius, inquis in illo ſolenni fœdere, neque poſtea cum deditiτius eſſet, vel à Presbyterianis vel ab Independentibus ſic judicatus eſt, ſed potiùs, ut regem decuit accipi, omni reverentia eſt exceptus? Vel hoc ſolo argumento perſuaderi cuivis intelligenti queat, non niſi ſerò tandem, & poſtquam omnia ſuſtinuerant, omnia tentaverant, omnia perpeſſi erant, deliberatum Ordinibus fuiſſe regem abjicere. Tu id ſolus malitioſe nimis in invidiam rapis, quod ſummam eorum patientiam, æquanimitatem, moderationem, faſtúſque regii tolerantiam nimis fortaſſe longam apud omnes bonos teſtabitur. At menſe Auguſto, qui præceſſit ejus ſupplicium, domus Communium quæ ſola jam tum regnabat & Independentibus erat obnoxia, ſcripſit literas ad Scotos, quibus teſtabatur nunquam ſibi in animo fuiſſe mutare ſtatum qui huc uſque in Anglia obtinuerat ſub rege, domo dominorum, & Communium. Vide jam quàm non doctrinæ Independentium abrogatio regis attribuenda ſit. Qui ſuam diſſimulare doctrinam non ſolent, etiam potiti rerum profitentur nunquam ſibi in animo fuiſſe ſtatum regni mutare. Quod ſi id poſtmodùm in mentem venit, quod in animo non fuit, cur non licebat quod rectius, & è repub. magis eſſe videbatur, id potiſſimum ſequi? præſertim cum Carolus neque exorari, neque flecti ullo modo potuerit, ut juſtiſſimis eorum poſtulatis quæque ſemper eadem ab initio obtulerant, aſſentiretur. Quas initio de religione, quas de jure ſuo ſententias perverſiſſimas tuebatur, nobíſque adeò calamitoſas, in iiſdem permanebat: ab illo Carolo nihil mutatus, qui & pace & bello tanta nobis omnibus mala intulerat. Siquid eſt aſſenſus, id & invitè facere, & quamprimùm ſui juris foret, pro nihilo ſe habiturum haud obſcuris indiciis ſignificabat: idem apertè filius, abducta ſecum per eos dies claſſis parte, ſcripto, idem ipſe per literas ad ſuos quoſdam in urbe declarabat. Interea cum Hibernis Anglorum hoſtibus immaniſſimis, reclamante Parlamento, fœdis conditionibus occultè pacem coagmentaverat, Anglos ad repetita inutiliter colloquia & pacem quoties invitabat, toties contra eos omni ſtudio bellum coquebat. Hic ille quibus concredita reſpub. erat. Quò ſe verterent? an commiſſam ſibi noſtram omnium ſalutem in manus hoſti acerbiſſimo traderent? An alterum belli propè internecini ſeptennium, nequid pejus ominemur, gerendum nobis iterum, & exantlandum relinquerent? Deus meliorem illis mentem injecit, ut prioribus de rege non movendo cogitationibus, non enim ad decreta pervenerant, rempub. religionem, libertatem ex ipſo illo fœdere ſolenni anteponerent; quæ quidem, ſtante rege conſtare non poſſe, tardiùs illi quidem quàm oportuit, ſed aliquando tamen viderunt. Sanè Parlamento nunquam non liberum atque integrum eſſe debet, ex re natâ quàm optimè reipub. conſulere; neque ita ſe prioribus addicere ſententiis, ut religio ſit in poſterum, etiamſi Deus dederit, vel ſibi, vel reipub. plus ſapere. At Scoti non idem ſentiunt, quinimo ad filium Carolum ſcribentes, ſacratiſſimum regem appellant parentem ejus, & ſacerrimum facinus quo necatus eſt. Cave plura de Scotis, quos non noviſti; nos novimus, cum eundem regem ſacerrimum, & homicidam & proditorem; facinus quo tyrannus necaretur ſacratiſſimum appellarent. Nunc regi quam dicam ſcripſimus, quaſi parùm commodè ſcriptam cavillaris, & quid opus fuerit ad Elogium illud tyranni addere proditoris & homicidæ titulos, quæris: cum tyranni appellatio omnia mala comprehendat: tum quis tyrannus ſit grammaticè & gloſſematicè etiam doces. Aufer nugas iſtas, literator, quas una Ariſtotelis definitio modò allata nullo negotio difflabit; quæque te doctorem docebit nomen tyranni, quoniam tuâ nihil intereſt præter nomina intelligere, poſſe citra proditionem & homicidium ſtare. Atqui leges Anglicanæ non dicunt proditionis crimen regem incurrere ſi procuraverit ſeditionem contra ſe vel populum ſuum. Neque dicunt, inquam, Parlamentum læſæ Majeſtatis reum eſſe, ſi malum regem tollat, aut unquam fuiſſe, cum ſæpius olim ſuſtulerit:

poſſe autem regem ſuam majeſtatem lædere atque minuere, immò amittere, clara voce teſtantur. Quod enim in illa lege Sancti Edovardi legitur, nomen regis perdere, nihil aliud eſt quàm regio munere ac dignitate privari; quod accidit Chilperico Franciæ regi, cujus exemplum illuſtrandæ rei cauſa eodem loco lex ipſa ponit. Committi autem ſummam perduellionem tam in regnum, quàm in regem non eſt apud nos juriſperitus qui inficias ire poſſit. Provoco ad ipſum, quem profers Glanvillanum. Siquis aliquid fecerit in mortem regis, vel ſeditionem regni, crimen proditionis eſſe. Sic illa machinatio quâ Papiſtæ quidam Parlamenti curiam cum ipſis ordinibus uno ictu pulveris nitrati in auras disjicere parabant, non in regem ſolum, ſed in Parlamentum & regnum, ab ipſo Jacobo & utraq; ordinum domo ſumma proditio judicata eſt. Quid plura attinet in re tam evidenti, quæ tamen facilè poſſem, ſtatuta noſtra allegare? cum ridiculum planè ſit & ratione ipſa abhorrens, committi perduellionem in regem poſſe, in populum non poſſe, propter quem & cujus gratia, cujus, ut ita dicam, bonâ veniâ, rex eſt id quod eſt. Fruſtra igitur tot ſtatuta noſtra deblateras, fruſtra in vetuſtis legum Anglicarum libris exerces te atque volutas; ad quas vel ratas vel irritas habendas Parlamenti authoritas ſemper valuit; cujus etiam ſolius eſt, quid ſit perduellio, quid læſa majeſtas interpretari: quam majeſtatem nunquam ſic à populo in regem tranſiiſſe, ut non multo celſior atque auguſtior in Parlamento conſpiciatur, jam ſæpiùs oſtendi. Te verò vappam & circulatorem Gallum jura noſtra interpretantem quis ferat? Vos verò Anglorum perfugæ, tot epiſcopi, doctores, juriſconſulti, qui literaturam omnem & eruditionem vobiſcum ex Anglia aufugiſſe prædicatis, adeóne ex veſtrûm numero nullus cauſam regiam atque ſuam defendere ſatis ſtrenuè ſatiſque latinè ſciebat, gentibúſque exteris dijudicandum exponere, ut cerebroſus iſte & crumenipeta Gallus mercede accerſendus in partes neceſſariò eſſet, qui regis inopis, tot doctorum & ſacerdotum infantiâ ſtipati, patrocinium ſuſciperet? magna, mihi credite, infamiâ etiam hoc nomine apud exteras nationes flagrabitis; & meritò vos utique cecidiſſe cauſâ omnes exiſtimabunt, quam ne verbis quidem, nedum armis aut virtute ſuſtinere valuiſtis. Sed ad te redeo, vir bone, dicendi perite, ſi tute modò ad te rediiſti; nam ſtertentem te tam prope finem & de morte voluntaria neſcio quid ab re ſomniantem offendo; tum ſtatim negas cadere in regem ſuæ mentis compotem, ut populum ſeditionibus diſtrahat, exercitus ſuos hoſtibus debellandos tradat, ut factiones contra ſe ſuſcitet. Quæ omnia cum & alii multi reges, & Carolus ipſe fecerit, dubitare non potes, præſertim Stoicus, quin ut omnes improbi, ſic omnes quoque tyranni prorſùs inſaniant. Flaccum audi.

> Quem mala ſtultitia, & quæcunque inſcitia veri
> Cæcum agit, inſanum Chryſippi porticus & grex
> Autumat, hæc populos, hæc magnos formula reges,
> Excepto ſapiente, tenet. —

Si igitur inſani cujuſpiam facti crimen à rege Carolo amovere cupis, debebis improbitatem ab eo priùs amovere quàm inſaniam. At enim rex non potuit proditionem in eos committere, qui vaſſalli ipſius & ſubjecti fuere. Primùm, cum æquè atque ulla gens hominum liberi ſimus, nullum barbarum morem fraudi nobis eſſe patiemur: fac deinde vaſſallos fuiſſe nos regis, ne ſic quidem tyrannum perferre dominum tenemur. Omnis ea ſubjectio, ut ipſæ leges noſtræ loquuntur, honeſto & utili definita eſt. Leg. Hen. 1. c 55. Fidem eam eſſe mutuam juriſconſulti omnes tradunt, ſi dominus ligeam, quod aïunt, defenſionem præſtiterit: ſin è contrario nimiùm ſævus fuerit, aut atrocem aliquam injuriam intulerit, diſſolvi & penitùs extingui omnem homagii connexionem. Hæc ipſa Bractoni verba & Fletæ ſunt. Unde vaſſallum eſt ubi lex ipſa in dominum armat; eúmque ſingulari certamine à vaſſallo, ſi acciderit, interimendum tradit. Idem ſi univerſæ civitati aut nationi in tyrannum non licuerit, deterior liberorum hominum conditio quàm ſervorum erit. Nunc Caroli homicidia aliorum regum partim homicidiis, partim juſtè factis excuſare contendis. De lanienâ Hiberniensi remittis lectorem ad opus illud regium Iconis Baſilicæ; & ego te remitto ad Iconoclaſtem. Captam Rupellam, proditos Rupellenſes, oſtentatam potiùs quàm datam opem, imputari Carolo non vis: imputetur necne meritò, non habeo dicere; ſatis ſuperque ab eo peccatum eſt domi, ne externa perſequi curem: omnes interim eccleſias proteſtantium, quotquot ullo tempore ſe contra reges religionis hoſtes armis defenderunt, eodem nomine rebellionis damnas. Quam contumeliam ab alumno ſuo ſibi illatam quanti interſit ad diſciplinam eccleſiaſticam, ſuamque tuendam integritatem, non negligere, ſecum ipſi cogitent: nos etiam Anglos ea expeditione proditos acerbè tulimus. Qui enim regnum Angliæ in tyrannidem convertere diu meditatus erat, non, niſi extincto priùs militari civium robore ac flore, cogitata perficere ſe poſſe arbitrabatur. Aliud erat crimen regis, quod ex jurejurando à regibus regnum capeſſentibus dari ſolito verba quædam ejus juſſu eraſa fuerint, antequam juraſſet. O facinus indignum & execrandum! impium qui fecit, quid dicam qui defendit? nam quæ potuit, per Deum immortalem, quæ perfidia, aut juris violatio eſſe major? quid illi ſanctius poſt ſacratiſſima religionis myſteria illo jurejurando eſſe debuit? Quis quæſo ſceleratior, iſne qui in legem peccat, an qui ſecum legem ipſam ut peccare faciat dat operam? aut denique ipſam legem tollit ne peccaſſe videatur? Agedum, jus hoc religioſiſſimè jurandum rex iſte violavit; ſed ne palàm tamen violaſſe videretur, turpiſſimo quodam adulterio per dolum corrupit; & ne pejeraſſe diceretur, jus ipſum jurandum in perjurium vertit. Quid aliud potuit ſperari, niſi injuſtiſſimè, verſutiſſimè, atque infeliciſſimè regnaturum eſſe eum, qui ab injuria tam deteſtanda auſpicatus regnum eſt; juſque illud primum adulterare auderet, quod ſolum impedimento ſibi fore, ne jura omnia perverteret, putabat? At enim Sacramentum illud, ſic enim defendis, non magis obligare reges poteſt, quàm leges; legibus autem ſe devinciri velle præ ſe ferunt, & ſecundum eas vivere, cum tamen re vera iis ſoluti ſint. Quemquámne tam ſacrilego, támque inceſto ore eſſe, ut ſacramentum religioſiſſimum tactis Evangeliis datum, quaſi per ſe leviculum ſolvi ſine cauſa poſſe aſſerat? Te verò, ſcelus atque portentum, ipſe Carolus redarguit; qui cum ſacramentum illud non eſſe per ſe leve quidpiam exiſtimaret, idcircò ejus religionem aut ſubterfugere, aut fallaciâ quavis eludere ſatius duxit, quàm apertè violare; & corruptor jusjurandi hujus & falſarius eſſe maluit, quàm manifeſtè perjurus. At verò jurat quidem rex populo ſuo, ut populus viciſſim regi; ſed populus jurat regi fidelitatem, non populo rex. Lepidum ſanè hominis commentum! annon qui juratus promittit atque ſpondet ſe quidpiam fideliter præſtiturum, fidem ſuam iis obligat qui jusjurandum ab eo exigunt? Rex ſanè omnis quoad præſtanda ea quæ promittit, & fidelitatem, & obſequium, & obedientiam populo jurat. Hîc ad Guilielmum Conquæſtorem recurris, qui ipſe, non quod ſibi collibitum erat, ſed quod populus ab eo & magnates poſtulabant, id omne haud ſemel jurare eſt coactus ſe præſtiturum. Quòd ſi multi reges coronam ſolenni ritu non accipiunt & proinde non jurant, & tamen regnant, idem de populo reſponderi poteſt, cujus pars magna fidelitatem nunquam juravit. Si rex ob eam cauſam ſolutus erit, erit & populus. Quæ autem pars populi jurabat, non regi ſolùm, ſed regno & legibus jurabat, à quibus rex factus eſt, & quidem eatenus tantum regi, quoad is leges obſervaret, quas vulgus, id eſt, communitas ſive plebeius ordo elegerit. Stultior enim ſit, qui legum noſtrarum loquelam ad puriorem ſemper latinitatem exigere velit. Hanc clauſulam, quas Vulgus elegerit, Carolus, antequam coronam acciperet, ex formula juramenti regii eradendam curavit. At, inquis, ſine regis aſſenſu nullas leges vulgus elegerit; eóque nomine duo ſtatuta citas, unam Anni xxxvii. Hen. 6. c. xv. alterum decimo tertio Edovardi iv. c. viii. Tantùm autem abeſt quo minùs eorum alterutrum in libro ſtatutorum uſquam appareat, ut annis abs te citatis, neque rex iſte neque ille ullum omninò ſtatutum promulgaverit. Tu fidem jam perfugarum, ſtatuta tibi dictantium, eluſus querere; dum alii tuam admirantur impudentiam ſimul & vanitatem, quem non pudebat iis in libris verſatiſſimum videri velle, quos inſpexiſſe nunquam, ne vidiſſe quidem tam facilè argueris. Clauſulam autem iſtam jusjurandi, quam tu perfricti oris balatro commentitiam audes dicere, regis, inquis, defenſores fieri poſſe aiunt, ut in aliquot antiquis exemplaribus extiterit, ſed in deſuetudinem abiiſſe, quòd commodam ſignificationem non haberet. Verùm ob id ipſum majores noſtri illam clauſulam in hoc regis jurejurando poſuere, ut ſignificationem tyrannidi ſemper non commodam haberet. In deſuetudinem autem ſi abierat, quod tamen falſiſſimum eſt, quis neget multo meliori jure revocandam fuiſſe? fruſtra, ſi te audiam: quippe in regibus mos ille jurandi qui hodie receptus eſt, cæremonialis eſt tantùm. Atqui rex, cum epiſcopos aboleri oportuit, per illud jusjurandum non licere ſibi cauſatus eſt. Atque ita ſacramentum illud ſanctiſſimum, quoties ex uſu eſt regis, vel ſolidum quiddam & firmum erit, vel inane tantùm & cæremoniale. Quod ego vos obteſtor, Angli, etiam atque etiam animadvertatis: & qualem eſtis regem habituri, ſi redierit, vobiſcum reputetis: non enim in mentem veniſſet unquam huic Grammatico ſceleroſo & extraneo de jure regis Anglorum velle ſcribere, aut poſſe, niſi Carolus ille extorris, diſciplinâ patriâ imbutus, unáque illi monitores ejus profligatiſſimi, quid hac de re ſcribi vellent omni ſtudio ſuggeſſiſſent. Dictabant huic illi, totum Parlamentum proditionis in regem inſimulari poſſe, vel ob hoc ſolum, quòd ſine aſſenſu regis declaravit omnes eſſe proditores qui arma contra Parlamentum Angliæ ſumpſerunt; vaſſallum ſcilicet regis eſſe Parlamentum; jusjurandum verò regium cæremoniale tantùm eſſe, quidni vaſſallum etiam? Ita neque legum ulla ſanctitas, neque ſacramenti ulla fides, aut religio, quicquam valebit ad cohibendam à vita atque fortunis veſtrûm omnium vel libidinem effrænati regis, vel ultionem exacerbati: qui ita inſtitutus à pueritia eſt, ut leges & religionem, ipſam denique fidem vaſſallari ſibi, & ſervire ſuis libitis arbitretur debere. Quanto præſtabilius eſſet, vobiſque dignius, ſi opes, ſi libertatem, ſi pacem, ſi imperium vultis, à virtute, induſtria, prudentia, fortitudine veſtra indubitanter petere hæc omnia quàm ſub regio dominatu incaſsùm ſperare? Certè qui ſine rege ac domino parari hæc poſſe non putant, dici non poteſt, quàm abjectè, quàm non honeſtè, non dico quàm indignè, de ſe ipſi ſtatuant: quid enim aliud niſi ſe inertes, imbecllios, mentis inopes, atque conſilii, corpore atque animo ad ſervitium natos fatentur eſſe? Et ſervitus quidem omnis homini ingenuo turpis eſt; vobis autem poſt libertatem, Deo vindice veſtróque marte recuperatam, poſt tot fortia facinora, & exemplum in regem potentiſſimum tam memorabile editum velle rurſus ad ſervitutem, etiam præter fatum, redire, non modo turpiſſimum, ſed & impium erit, & ſceleratum: párque veſtrum ſcelus illorum ſceleri erit, qui ſervitutes olim Ægyptiacæ deſiderio capti, multis tandem cladibus ac variis divinitùs abſumpti, liberatori Deo pœnas tam ſervilis animi dedere. Quid tu interim, ſervitutis conciliator? Potuit, inquis, rex proditionis & delictorum aliorum gratiam facere; quod ſatis evincit legibus eum ſolutum fuiſſe. Proditionis quidem, non quæ in regnum, ſed quæ in ſe commiſſa erat, poterat rex, ut quivis alius, gratiam facere: poterat & quorundam aliorum fortaſſe maleficiorum, quanquam non id ſemper: an ideò qui maleficum ſervandi nonnunquam jus quoddam habet, idem continuò omnes bonos perdendi jus ullum habebit? Citatus in curiam, eámque inferiorem, reſpondere non tenetur, niſi per procuratorem, rex; an ideo in Parlamentum citatus ab univerſis non veniet? non ipſe reſpondebit? Conari non aïs Batavorum exemplo factum noſtrum tueri, atque hinc, ſtipendo ſcilicet metuens quo te Batavi luem atque peſtem alunt, ne Anglos infamando etiam Batavos altores tuos infamaſſe videaris, demonſtrare cupis quàm diſſimile ſit quod hi & quod illi fecerunt. Quam ego collationem tuam, quanquam in ea quædam ſunt falſiſſima, alia, ne ſalario fortaſſe tuo non ſatis litares, palpum olent, omittam. Negant enim Angli opus ſibi eſſe ut exterorum quorumvis exemplo facta ſua tueantur. Habent leges, quas ſecuti ſunt, patrias, hac in parte, ſicubi terrarum aliæ ſunt, optimas: habent quos imitentur, majores ſuos, viros fortiſſimos, qui immoderatis regum imperiis nunquam ceſſere; multos eorum intolerantiùs ſe gerentes per ſupplicium necavere. In libertate ſunt nati, ſibi ſufficiunt, quas volunt leges poſſunt ſibi ferre; unam præ cæteris colunt antiquiſſimam, à natura ipſa latam, quæ omnes leges, jus omne atque imperium civile non ad regum libidinem, ſed ad bonorum maximè civium ſalutem refert. Jam præter quiſquilias & rudera ſuperiorum capitum reſtare nihil video; quorum quidem acervum cum ſatis magnum in fine congeſſeris, neſcio quid aliud tibi volueris, niſi hujus tuæ fabricæ ruinam quaſi præſagire. Tandem aliquando poſt immenſam loquacitatem rivos claudis; Deum teſtatus te hanc cauſam tuendam ſuſcepiſſe, non tantum quia rogatus, ſed quia meliorem nullam te potuiſſe defendere conſcientia tibi ſuggeſſit. Rogatus tu in res noſtras tibi alieniſſimas, nobis non rogantibus, te interponas? Tu populi Anglicani ſummos magiſtratus pro authoritate próque imperio ſibi commiſſo quod ſuum munus eſt in ſua ditione agentes, nulla injuriâ laceſſitus (neque enim natum te eſſe ſciebant) indigniſſimis verborum contumeliis laceres, libróque infami edito proſcindas? A quo autem rogatus? An ab uxore, credo, quæ jus regium, ut perhibent, in te exercet; quæque tibi, quoties libet, ut illa Fulvia, cujus, ex epigrammate obſcœno, centones modò conſuiſti (p. 320.) aut ſcribe aut pugnemus aït: unde tu, ne ſigna canerent, ſcribere malebas. An rogatus fortaſſe à Carolo minore, & perditiſſimo illo peregrinantium aulicorum grege, quaſi alter Balaamus ab altero Balacco rege accerſitus, ſitus, ut jacentem regis cauſam, & malè pugnando amiſſam maledicendo erigere dignarere? Sic ſanè fieri potuit; niſi quod hoc ferè interfuit; ille enim vir ſagax aſino inſidens locutuleio ad execrandum venit; tu aſinus loquaciſſimus inſeſſus à fœmina, & ſanatis quos vulneraveras epiſcoporum capitibus obſitus, apocalypticæ illius beſtiæ parvam quandam imaginem exprimere videris. Sed ferunt pœnituiſſe te hujus libri, pòſt paulò quàm ſcripſiſſes. Benè profectò habet; tuam itaque ut teſtere omnibus pœnitentiam, nihil tibi priùs faciendum erit, quàm ut pro libro tam longo unam tantummodò literam adhuc longam ex te facias. Sic enim pœnituit Iſcarioten illum Judam cui ſimilis es; ídque novit puer Carolus, qui crumenam idcircò tibi, inſigne illud Judæ proditoris, dono miſit, quòd primùm audierat, & poſtmodùm ſciebat, te apoſtatam eſſe & Diabolum. Judas ille Chriſtum prodidit, tu Chriſti Eccleſiam; Epiſcopos Antichriſtos eſſe docueras, ad eos defeciſti: Quos inferis damnaveras, eorum cauſam ſuſcepiſti: Chriſtus omnes homines liberavit, tu omnes ad ſervitutem redigere conatus es: Ne dubita, poſtquàm in Deum, in Eccleſiam, in omne genus hominum tam impius fuiſti, quin te etiam idem exitus maneat, ut deſperatione magis quàm pœnitentiâ ductus, tuíque pertæſus, ab infelici tandem arbore pendens, ſicut & par ille tuus olim, medius crepes; illámque malefidam & fallacem conſcientiam, bonorum & ſanctorum inſectatricem, ad deſtinatas tibi quandoque ſupplicii ſedes præmittas. Hactenus, quod initio inſtitueram ut meorum civium facta egregia contra inſanam & lividiſſimam furentis ſophiſtæ rabiem, & domi & foris defenderem, júſque populi commune ab injuſto regum dominatu aſſererem, non id quidem regum odio, ſed tyrannorum, Deo bene juvante, videor jam mihi abſolviſſe: Neque ullum ſine reſponſo vel argumentum, vel exemplum, vel teſtimonium ab adverſario allatum ſciens prætermiſi, quod quidem firmitatis in ſe quicquam, aut probationis vim ullam habere videretur; in alteram fortaſſe partem culpæ propior, quòd ſæpiuſculè ineptiis quoque ejus, & argutiis tritiſſimis, quaſi argumentis, reſpondendo, id iis tribuiſſe videar, quo dignæ non erant. Unum reſtat, & fortaſſe maximum, ut vos quòque, ô Cives, adverſarium hunc veſtrum ipſi refutetis; quod nulla alia ratione video poſſe fieri, niſi omnium maledicta veſtris optimè factis exuperare perpetuò contendatis. Vota veſtra & preces ardentiſſimas Deus, cum ſervitutis haud uno genere oppreſſi, ad eum confugiſtis, benignè exaudiit. Quæ duo in vita hominum mala ſanè maxima ſunt, & virtuti damnoſiſſima, Tyrannis & ſuperſtitio, iis vos gentium primos glorioſè liberavit; eam animi magnitudinem vobis injecit, ut devictum armis veſtris & dedititium regem judicio inclyto judicare, & condemnatum punire primi mortalium non dubitaretis. Poſt hoc facinus tam illuſtre, nihil humile aut anguſtum, nihil non magnum atque excelſum & cogitare & facere debebitis. Quam laudem ut aſſequamini, hac ſola incedendum eſt via, ſi ut hoſtes bello domuiſtis, ita ambitionem, avaritiam, opes, & ſecundarum rerum corruptelas, quæ ſubigunt cæteras gentes hominum, oſtenderitis poſſe vos etiam inermes media in pace omnium mortalium fortiſſimè debellare: Si, quam in repellenda ſervitute fortitudinem præſtitiſtis, eam in libertate conſervanda juſtitiam, temperantiam, moderationem præſtiteritis. His ſolis argumentis & teſtimoniis evincere poteſtis, non eſſe vos illos, quos hic probris inſequitur, Perduelles, latrones, ſicarios, parricidas, fanaticos; non vos ambitionis aut alieni invadendi ſtudio, non ſeditione, aut pravis ullis cupiditatibus, non amentia aut furore percitos, regem trucidâſſe, ſed amore libertatis, religionis, juſtitiæ, honeſtatis, patriæ denique charitate accenſos, tyrannum puniiſſe. Sin autem, quod, bone Deus, ne unquam ſiveris, aliter in animum induxeritis, ſi in bello fortes; in pace turpes eritis, qui manifeſtum ſenſiſtis numen vobis tam propitium, hoſtibus tam grave, neque exemplo tam inſigni & memorando ante oculos poſito, Deum vereri, & juſtitiam colere didiceritis, quod ad me attinet, concedam ſanè, & fatebor, neque enim potero negare, ea omnia quæ nunc maledici & mendaces de vobis peſſimè aut loquuntur aut ſentiunt, vera eſſe: Vóſque multo iratiorem brevi tempore experturi eſtis Deum, quàm aut infenſum inimici veſtri, aut vos benignum & faventem & paternum, præ cæteris omnibus terrarum orbis gentibus hodiernis, experti eſtis.

DEFENSIO ## SECUNDA
Pro Populo Anglicano,
Contra Infamem Libellum Anonymum,
Cui Titulus,
Regii Sanguinis clamor ad Cœlum, adverſus Parricidas Anglicanos.

Quod in omni vita hominum, omníque genere officii eſt primum, ut grati ſemper erga Deum, ejúſque memores beneficiorum ſimus, tum præſertim, ſi qua ſupra ſpem votúmque evenerint, uti, ob ea, ſingulares atque ſolennes gratias quamprimùm referamus, id mihi nunc in ipſo limine orationis tribus potiſſimùm de cauſis video eſſe faciendum. Primùm iis me natum temporibus patriæ, quibus civium virtus eximia, & ſupergreſſa omnes majorum laudes magnitudo animi atque conſtantia, obteſtata priùs Deum, eundémque ſequuta manifeſtiſſimum ducem, editis poſt orbem conditum exemplis factíſque fortiſſimis, & gravi dominatione rempublicam, & indigniſſimâ ſervitute religionem liberavit. Deinde, cùm extitiſſent ſubitò multi, qui, ut eſt ferè ingenium vulgi, egregiè facta odioſè criminarentur, unúſque, præ cæteris, literatorio faſtu, & conceptâ de ſe gregalium ſuorum opinione inflatus ac fidens, conſcripto in nos libro admodum infami, tyrannorum omnium patrocinium nefariè ſuſcepiſſet , me potiùs quàm alium quemvis, neque tanti nominis adverſario, neque tantis rebus dicendis viſum imparem, ab ipſis patriæ liberatoribus has partes accepiſſe communi omnium conſenſu ultrò delatas, ut cauſam & populi Anglicani, & ipſius adeò Libertatis, ſiquis unquam alius, publicè defenderem. Poſtremò, in re tam arduâ & expectationis plenâ, neque civium meorum de me ſive ſpem, ſive judicium illud fefelliſſe, neque exterorum quamplurimis cùm doctis viris, tum rerum peritis non ſatisfeciſſe ; adverſarium verò, quamvis audaciſſimum, ita profligâſſe, ut animo ſimul & exiſtimatione fractâ cederet ; trienniòque toto, quo poſtea vixit, multa licèt minatus ac fremens, nullam tamen ampliùs moleſtiam nobis exhiberet, niſi quòd viliſſimorum quorundam hominum obſcuram operam ſubſidio ſibi corrogaret, & laudatores neſcio quos ineptos atque immodicos, ad inopinatam ac recentem infamiam, ſiquo modo poſſet, ſarciendam ſubornaret ; quod ſtatim patebit. Hæc ego divinitus mihi accidiſſe bona, & magna quidem ratus, appoſitiſſima denique non modò ad perſolvendas numini ex debito gratias, ſed ad auſpicium quoque optimum inſtituti operis capiendum, cum veneratione, ut facio, imprimis commemoranda eſſe duxi. Nam quis eſt qui patriæ decora non arbitretur ſua ? quid patriæ cujuſquam eſſe magis decori aut gloriæ poteſt, quàm libertas, non civili tantùm vitæ, ſed divino etiam cultui reſtituta ? quæ gens, quæ civitas aut feliciùs aut fortiùs hanc ſibi utrobique peperit ? Etenim fortitudo, cùm non tota in bello atque armis eniteat, ſed contra omnes æquè formidines diffundat vim ſuam atque intrepida ſit, Græci quidem illi, quos maximè admiramur, & Romani, ad tollendos ex civitatibus tyrannos nullam ferè virtutem, præter ſtudium libertatis, expedita arma, promptáſque manus attulere ; Cætera omnia in proclivi, inter laudes omnium & plauſus, & læta omnia, peragebant; nec tam ad diſcrimen & ambiguum facinus quàm ad certamen virtutis glorioſiſſimum atque pulcherrimum, ad præmia denique & coronas ſpémque immortalitatis certiſſimam properabant. Nondum enim Tyrannis res ſacra erat; nondum tyranni, Chriſti ſcilicet proreges atque vicarii repentè facti, cùm benevolentiâ non poſſent; cæcâ vulgi ſuperſtitione ſeſe munierant: nondum Clericorum malis artibus attonita plebs, ad barbariem eâ fœdiorem, quæ ſtolidiſſimos mortalium infamat Indos, degeneraverat. Illi enim noxios ſibi Dæmonas, quos abigere non poſſunt, pro Diis colunt; hæc Tyrannos nè liceret tollere cùm poſſet, impotentiſſimos creabat in ſe Deos; & humani generis peſtes in ſuam perniciem conſecrabat. At contra has omnes traditarum diu opinionum, religionum, calumniarum, atque terrorum denſiſſimas acies, hoſte ipſo vehementiùs ab aliis formidatas, decertandum Anglis erat. Quæ omnia, edocti meliùs, & proculdubio cœlitus imbuti, tantâ cauſæ fiduciâ, tantâ animorum firmitate ac virtute ſuperârunt, ut cùm numero populus ſanè magnus eſſent, animis tamen tam erectis támque excelſis, vulgus eſſe deſierint; Britanniáque ipſa poſthac, quæ tyrannorum terra ferax dicta olim eſt, nunc liberatorum longè feracior, perpetuâ ſeculorum omnium celebratione dici meruerit. Quos non legum contemptus aut violatio in effrænatam licentiam effudit; non virtutis & gloriæ falſa ſpecies, aut ſtulta veterum æmulatio inani nomine libertatis incendit, ſed innocentia vitæ, morúmque ſanctitas rectum atque ſolum iter ad libertatem veram docuit, legum & religionis juſtiſſima defenſio neceſſariò armavit. Atque illi quidem Deo perinde confiſi, ſervitutem honeſtiſſimis armis pepulere: cujus laudis etſi nullam partem mihi vendico, à reprehenſione tamen vel timiditatis vel ignaviæ, ſiqua infertur, facilè me tueor. Neque enim militiæ labores & pericula ſic defugi, ut non aliâ ratione, & operam, multò utiliorem, nec minore cum periculo meis civibus navârim, & animum dubiis in rebus neque demiſſum unquam, neque ullius invidiæ, vel etiam mortis plus æquo metuentem præſtiterim. Nam cùm ab adoleſcentulo humanioribus eſſem ſtudiis, ut qui maximè deditus, & ingenio ſemper quàm corpore validior, poſthabitâ caſtrenſi operâ, quâ me gregarius quilibet robuſtior facilè ſuperâſſet, ad ea me contuli, quibus plus potui; ut parte meî meliore ac potiore, ſi ſaperem, non deteriore, ad rationes patriæ, cauſámque hanc præſtantiſſimam, quantum maximè poſſem momentum accederem. Sic itaque exiſtimabam, ſi illos Deus res gerere tam præclaras voluit, eſſe itidem alios à quibus geſtas dici pro dignitate atque ornari, & defenſam armis veritatem, ratione etiam, (quod unicum eſt præſidium verè ac propriè humanum) defendi voluerit. Unde eſt, ut dum illos invictos acie viros admiror, de mea interim provincia non querar; immo mihi gratuler, & gratias inſuper largitori munerum cœleſti iterum ſummas agam obtigiſſe talem, ut aliis invidenda multò magis, quàm mihi ullo modo pœnitenda videatur. Et me quidem nemini vel infimo libens confero; nec verbum de me ullum inſolentius facio: ad cauſam verò omnium nobiliſſimam, ac celeberrimam, & hoc ſimul defenſores ipſos defendendi munus ornatiſſimum ipſorum mihi ſuffragiis attributum atque judiciis quoties animum refero, fateor me mihi vix temperare, quin altiùs atque audentiùs quàm pro exordii ratione inſurgam; & grandius quiddam, quod eloqui poſſim, quæram: quandoquidem oratores illos antiquos & inſignes, quantum ego ab illis non dicendi ſolùm ſed & loquendi facultate, (in extranea præſertim, quâ utor neceſſariò, linguâ, & perſæpe mihi nequaquam ſatisfacio) haud dubiè vincor, tantùm omnes omnium ætatum, materiæ nobilitate & argumento vincam. Quod & rei tantam expectationem ac celebritatem adjecit, ut jam ipſe me ſentiam non in foro aut roſtris, uno duntaxat populo, vel Romano, vel Athenienſi circumfuſum; ſed attentâ, & conſidente quaſi totâ penè Europâ, & judicium ferente, ad univerſos quacunque graviſſimorum hominum, urbium, gentium, conſeſſus atque conventus, & priore defenſione, dixiſſe, & hac rurſus dicturum. Jam videor mihi, ingreſſus iter, tranſmarinos tractus & porrectas latè regiones, ſublimis perluſtrare; vultus innumeros atque ignotos, animi ſenſus mecum conjunctiſſimos. Hinc Germanorum virile & infeſtum ſervituti robur, inde Francorum vividi digníque nomine liberales impetus, hinc Hiſpanorum conſulta virtus, Italorum inde ſedata ſuíque compos magnanimitas ob oculos verſatur. Quicquid uſpiam liberorum pectorum quicquid ingenui, quicquid magnanimi aut prudens latet aut ſe palàm profitetur, alii tacitè favere, alii apertè ſuffragari, accurrere alii & plauſu accipere, alii tandem vero victi, dedititios ſe tradere. Videor jam mihi, tantis circumſeptus copiis, ab Herculeis uſque columnis ad extremos Liberi Patris terminos, libertatem diu pulſam atque exulem, longo intervallo domum ubique gentium reducere: Et, quod Triptolemus olim fertur, ſed longè nobiliorem Cereali illâ frugem, ex civitate mea gentibus importare; reſtitutum nempe civilem liberúmque vitæ cultum, per urbes, per regna, pérque nationes diſſeminare. Sed nec ignotus plané, nec fortaſſe non gratus rurſum advenero; ſi ſum idem, qui pugnaciſſimum tyrannorum ſatellitem, & opinione plerorumque, & ſuî fiduciâ inſuperabilem antea creditum, cùm nos noſtráſque acies contumelioſè laceſſeret, & Optimates noſtri me primùm intuerentur, ſingulari certamine congreſſus, adacto convitiantis in jugulum hoc ſtylo, immò ſuiſmet ipſius telis, collocavi; & niſi velim tot undique lectorum intelligentium calculis atque ſententiis, neutiquam addictis mihi aut obnoxiis diffidere prorſus & derogare, opima ſpolia retuli. Hæc ſine ulla vaniloquentia ità eſſe re vera, vel illud maximè argumento eſſè poteſt, quod ego nec ſine Dei nutu reor accidiſſe, quòd, cùm à Regina Suecorum Sereniſſima, quâ vivit opinor nemo, aut olim vixit, vel optimarum artium, vel doctorum hominum ſtudioſior, honorificè ſanè eſſet invitatus, veniſſétque & Salmaſius & Salmaſia, ( uter enim horum is erat, uxoris palàm dominatus cum fama tum domi incertum admodum reddiderat ) quo in loco peregrinus magno in honore degebat, ibi eum noſtra Defenſio nihil tale metuentem occupavit. Quâ ſtatim à pluribus perlectâ, Regina quidem, quæ & ipſa cumprimis perlegerat, de ſuâ priſtinâ benignitate ac munificentiâ, id ſolum ſpectans quod ſe dignum erat, in hoſpitem nihil remiſit: de cætero, ſi audita ſæpius & quæ arcana non ſunt, licet referre, tanta animorum facta ſubitó mutatio eſt, utqui nudiuſtertius ſummâ gratiâ floruerat, nunc penè obſoleſceret; nec ità multò poſt diſcedens cum bona venia hoc unum in dubio permultis relinqueret, honoratiórne advenerit, an contemptior abierit. Sed neque aliis in locis detrimentum levius feciſſe famæ ſatìs conſtat. Verùm hæc omnia non eò attuli; quò me cuiquam venditarem, neque enim eſt opus; ſed quò id duntaxat latiùs oſtenderem, quod initio inſtitui, quas ob cauſas, & quàm non leves, ab agendis Deo Optimo Maximo gratiis potiſſimùm ſim exorſus; mihíque proœmium hoc fore honeſtiſſimum atque pulcherrimum, in quo præcipuè, tot argumentis enumeratis, demonſtrare liceat, me, haud expertem licèt calamitatum humanarum, me tamen, réſque meas Deo curæ eſſe; me maximis prope de rebus, & ad patriæ neceſſaria tempora accommodatis, & civilis vitæ religioníſque ex uſu maximè futuris, non uno pro populo, nedum uno pro reo, ſed pro univerſo potiùs hominum genere, contra humanæ libertatis hoſtes, quaſi in communi omnium gentium & frequentiſſimo concurſu diſſerentem, divino favore & auxilio adjutum atque auctum: quo ego majus aut glorioſius quicquam mihi tribuere, neque poſſim ullo tempore neque cupiam. Eundem proinde immortalem Deum oro, ut conſuetâ ejus ope ac benignitate ſolâ fretus, quâ integritate, diligentiâ, fide, felicitate etiam, fortiſſimè juſtiſſiméque ſimul facta haud ità pridem defendi, eâdem, vel eâ amplius, Authores ipſos, méque tantis viris ignominiæ cauſâ, non honoris additum ab immeritis opprobriis, atque calumniis vindicare ſufficiam. Quòd ſi eſt, qui contemni hæc ſatiùs arbitretur potuiſſe, fateor equidem, ſi apud eos qui nos rectè nôſſent hæc ſpargerentur: cæteris quâ tandem ratione conſtabit non eſſe verum quicquid adverſarius noſter eſt mentitus? cùm autem, data, quæ par eſt, opera, à nobis erit, ut quo præceſſit calumnia, eodem vindex quoque veritas ſequatur, & illos de nobis perperam ſentire opinor deſituros, & iſtum fortaſſe mendaciorum pudebit: ſi non puduerit, tum demùm, ſatiùs contempſerimus. Huic interea reſponſum pro meritis celeriùs expediviſſem, niſi ſe falſis rumoribus hactenus muniiſſet; dum ſæpius denuntiaret, ad incudem ſudare Salmaſium, nova volumina in nos fabricare, jam jámque editurum: ex quo hoc ſolum eſt conſequutus, ut maledicentiæ pœnas aliquanto ſeriùs daret: expectandum enim duxi potiùs, ut potiori viribus adverſario, integrum me ſervarem. Sed cum Salmaſio debellatum jam puto mihi eſſe, utpote mortuo; & quemadmodum mortuo, non dicam: non enim ut ille mihi cæcitatem, ſic ego illi mortem vitio vertam. Quanquam ſunt, qui nos etiam necis ejus reos faciunt, illóſque noſtros nimis acriter ſtrictos aculeos; quos dum repugnando altiùs ſibi infixit, dum quod præ manibus habebat opus, vidit ſpiſſiùs procedere, tempus reſponſionis abiiſſe, operis gratiam periiſſe, recordatione amiſſæ famæ, exiſtimationis, Principum denique favoris, ob rem regiam malè defenſam, erga ſe imminuti, triennali tandem mœſtitiâ, & animi magis ægritudine, quàm morbo confectum obiiſſe. Utcunque ſit, ſi iterum cum hoſte ſatis mihi cognito, ſi bella etiam poſthuma gerenda ſunt, cujus feroces ac ſtrenuos impetus facilè ſuſtinui, ejus languentes & moribundos conatus non eſt ut reformidem.

Nunc verò ad hoc quicquid eſt hominis, qui nos inclamat, aliquando veniamus: clamorem quidem audio, non Regii ſanguinis, ut præ ſe fert titulus, ſed obſcuri cujuſpiam nebulonis; clamantem enim nuſquam reperio. Eho! quis es? homóne an nemo? hominum certè infimi, nè mancipia quidem, ſine nomine ſunt. Sempérne ergò mihi cum anonymis res erit? at verò hi regios haberi ſe vel maximè volunt: miror ſi regibus ſic perſuaſerint. Regum ſequaces atque amicos regum non pudet; quo pacto igitur ſunt iſti regibus amici? non dant munera; immo verò libentiùs multò accipiunt: res ſuas non impendunt, qui ne nomina quidem cauſæ regiæ dare audent: quid ergò? verba dant, ſed nec verba gratìs dare ſuis regibus, vel ſatìs benevoli in animum inducunt, vel ſatis conſtantes nomine adſcripto audent. Me quidem ὦ ἄνδρες ἀνώνυμοι, fas enim ſit Græcè quos Latinè quid nominem non reperio, me inquam, cum veſter ille Claudius de Jure Regio, materiâ ſanè gratioſiſſimâ, ſine nomine tamen orſus eſſet ſcribere, & exemplo poſſem uti, uſque adeò neque mei, neque cauſæ puditum eſt, ut ad rem tantam accidere, niſi nomen palàm profeſſus, turpe ducerem. Quod ego in Republica palàm videor contra Reges, cur vos in Regno, vel Regum ſub patrocinio, non niſi furtim & clanculum, contra Rempublicam audetis? cur in tuto pavidi, cur in luce nocturni, ſummam potentiam, ſummam gratiam, timiditate invidioſâ planè atq; ſuſpectâ obſcuratis? ſatíſne vobis ut præſidii ſit in Regibus veremini? ſic tecti, ſic obvoluti non vos mehercule ad aſſerendum jus Regium defenſores, ſed ad ærarium compilandum fures potiùs videmini veniſſe. Equidem quod ſum, profiteor; quod Regibus nego jus eſſe, vel in regno quovis legitimo pernegare auſim: nemo me læſerit Monarcha, quin ſe priùs damnet, tyrannum faſſus. Si tyrannos inſector, quid hoc ad Reges? quos ego à tyrannis longiſſimè ſejungo. Quantum à viro malo diſtat vir bonus, tantundem à tyranno diſcrepare Regem contendo: Unde efficitur, tyrannum non modò non eſſe Regem, ſed Regi quidem adverſiſſimum ſemper imminere. Et ſanè qui monumenta rerum percurrit, plures à tyrannis quàm à populo oppreſſos Reges, atque ſublatos inveniet. Qui igitur tollendos affirmat tyrannos, non Reges, ſed inimiciſſimos Regibus, immo infeſtiſſimos regum hoſtes tollendos affirmat. Vos contrà, quod regibus jus datis, ut quicquid libeat jus ſit, non eſt jus, ſed injuria, ſed ſcelus, ſed ipſa pernicies: venenato iſto munere, non ſalutari, quos ſupra omnem vim atque periculum fore prædicatis, eos ipſi occiditis; regem & tyrannum idem eſſe, ſiquidem idem utrobique Jus eſt, ſtatuitis. Nam ſi iſto ſuo jure, Rex non utitur (utetur autem nunquam quamdiu Rex, non tyrannus, erit) non hoc Regi, ſed viro aſſignandum eſt. Quid autem abſurdius illo jure Regio fingi queat, quo ſi quis utatur, quoties Rex vult eſſe, toties eſſe vir bonus deſinat: quoties vir eſſe bonus maluerit, toties ſe arguerit non eſſe Regem? quo quid in Reges dici contumelioſius poteſt? Hoc jus qui docet, ipſe ſit oportet injuſtiſſimus, atque omnium peſſimus: pejor autem quo pacto fiat, quàm ſi quales format ac fingit alios, talis ipſe imprimis fuerit? Quòd ſi omnis vir bonus, ut antiquorum ſecta quædam magnificè ſanè philoſophatur, eſt Rex, pari ratione ſequitur, omnem virum malum pro ſuo quemque modulo tyrannum eſſe: neque enim magnum, nè hoc nomine intumeſcat, ſed infimum quiddam eſt tyrannus; & quantò omnium maximus, tantò omnium viliſſimus, & maximè ſervilis. Alii enim ſuis tantùm vitiis volentes ſerviunt; Hic non modò ſuis ſed miniſtrorum etiam atque ſatellitum importuniſſimis flagitiis etiam nolens cogitur ſervire; & ſuas quaſdam tyrannides abjectiſſimo cuique ſuorum concedere: Tyranni igitur ſervorum infimi, ſuis ſerviunt etiam ſervitiis. Quamobrem rectè hoc nomen vel in minimum quemque tyrannorum pugilem, vel in hunc etiam clamatorem poterit convenire; qui in hac cauſa tyrannica cur tam ſtrenuè vociferetur, ex his quæ dicta ſunt, quæque mox dicentur, ſatis liquebit: utì etiam cur anonymus: aut enim turpiter conductus, clamorem hunc ſuum regio ſanguini; Salmaſium ſequutus, vendidit; aut infamis doctrinæ conſcientiâ pallens, aut vitâ flagitioſus ac turpis latere ſi cupit, mirum non eſt: aut fortaſſis ità ſe parat, ut ſicubi ſpem quæſtûs uberiorem odoretur, deſertis quandoq; regibus integrum ſibi ſit, ad quamlibet etiam futuram rempublicam transfugere; nè tunc quidem ſine exemplo magni ſui Salmaſii, qui affulgente lucro captus, ab Orthodoxis ad Epiſcopos, à popularibus ad regios, etiam ſenex defecit. Tu igitur iſte è gurguſtio clamator, qui ſis non fallis; fruſtrà tibi iſta latibula quæſiſti: Extrahère mihi crede, neque Plutonis iſta galea diutiùs te teget: Dejerabis, quoad vixeris, me aut cæcum non eſſe, aut tibi ſaltem non connivere. Quis igitur ſit, quod genus hominis, quâ ſpe adductus, quibus illecebris, quibus lenociniis delinitus, ad hanc cauſam regiam acceſſerit, (Mileſia propemodum, aut Baiana fabula eſt) ſi vacat nunc audite.

Eſt Morus quidam, partim Scotus, partim Gallus; nè tota hominis infamia gens una, aut regio nimiùm laboraret; homo improbus, & cùm aliorum, tum, quod graviſſimum eſt, amicorum, quos ex intimis inimiciſſimos ſibi fecit, teſtimoniis quam plurimis infidus, mendax, ingratus, maledicus, & virorum perpetuus obtrectator & fœminarum, quarum nec pudicitiæ plus unquam parcere, quàm famæ conſuevit. Is, ut primæ ætatis obſcuriora præteream, primùm Genevæ Græcas literas docuit; verùm, ſæpius licet nomen ſuum Græcè Morum diſcipulis interpretatus, ſtultum & nequam ipſe dediſcere nequivit. Quin eo potiùs furore eſt agitatus cùm tot ſcelerum eſſet ſibi conſcius, quamvis fortaſſe nondum compertus, ut paſtoris in Eccleſia munus ambire, atque iſtis moribus inquinare non horreſceret. Verùm haud diu Presbyterorum cenſuram effugere potuit mulierarius ac vanus, multiſque aliis criminibus notatus, multis ab Orthodoxâ fide erroribus damnatus, quos & turpiter ejuravit, & ejuratos impiè retinuit, tandem adulterii manifeſtus. Hoſpitis ancillam quandam fortè adamaverat; eam paulò pòſt etiam alteri nuptam ſectari non deſtitit; tuguriolum quoddam intrare hortuli, ſolum cum ſola, vicini ſæpe animadverterant. Citra adulterium, inquis; poterat enim quidvis aliud: Sanè quidem; poterat confabulari, nimirum de re hortenſi, prælectiones quaſdam ſuas ſciolæ fortaſſe fœminæ & audiendi cupidæ expromere de hortis, Alcinoï putà vel Adonidis; poterat nunc areolas laudare, umbram tantummodo deſiderare, liceret modò ficui morum inſerere, complures indè ſycomoros quàm citiſſimè enaſci, ambulationem amœniſſimam; modum deinde inſitionis mulieri poterat monſtrare: Hæc & plura poterat, quis negat? Veruntamen Presbyteris ſatiſfacere non poterat, quin illum tanquam adulterum cenſurâ ferirent, & paſtoris munere indignum prorſus judicarent: Harum & hujuſmodi accuſationum capita in Bibliotheca illius urbis publica etiamnum aſſervantur. Interea, dum hæc palàm nota non eſſent, ab Eccleſia, quæ Middelburgi erat Gallica, procurante Salmaſio, in Hollandiam vocatus, magnâ cum offenſione Spanhemii, viri ſanè docti, & paſtoris integerrimi, qui eum Genevæ antea probè noverat, literas teſtimoniales, quas vocant, dum alii non ferendum exiſtimarent, ut homo iſtiuſmodi Eccleſiæ teſtimonio ornaretur, alii quidvis potiùs ferendum, quàm ipſum hominem, ægrè à Genevenſibus, & non aliâ quàm ſui diſceſſûs conditione, atque illas quidem frigidulas, tandem impetravit. In Hollandiam ut venit, ad ſalutandum Salmaſium profectus, domi ejus in uxoris ancillam, cui Pontiæ nomen erat, oculos nequiter conjecit: Semper enim in ancillis prolabitur libido hominis; hinc ſummâ aſſiduitate Salmaſium cœpit colere, & quoties licuit Pontiam. Neſcio an ille commoditate hominis & aſſentatione captus, an hic optabilem excogitâſſe ſe conveniendæ eo ſæpius Pontiæ occaſionem ratus, prior ſermones injecerit de reſponſo Miltonii ad Salmaſium. Ut ut fuit, Morus propugnandum ſuſcipit Salmaſium: Et Salmaſius quidem Theologicam in ea urbe cathedram ſuâ operâ pollicetur Moro; Morus & hanc & aliud inſuper ſuaviculum, furtivos Pontiæ concubitus pollicetur ſibi. Per cauſam conſulendi de hoc opere Salmaſium, dies ac noctes eam domum frequentat. Jámque ut olim Pyramus in morum, ità nunc repente morus in Pyramum tranſmutatus ſibi videtur, Genevenſis in Babylonium; verùm illo juvene quantò improbior, tantò fortunatior, nunc ſuam Thiſben, factâ ſub eodem tecto copiâ, ut libitum eſt, Pontiam alloquitur; rimam in pariete conquirere opus non erat: Spondet matrimonium; eâ ſpe pellectam vitiat; eodémque ſcelere, horreo dicere, ſed dicendum eſt, Sacroſancti Evangelii miniſter, hoſpitalem etiam domum conſtuprat. Ex hoc demum congreſſu, mirum quiddam, & præter ſolitum naturæ prodigioſum accidit, ut & fœmina & mas etiam conciperet, Pontia quidem Morillum, quod & Plinianum exercitatorem diu poſtea exercuit Salmaſium; Morus ovum hoc irritum & ventoſum, ex quo tympanites iſte clamor regii ſanguinis prorupit. Quod quidem primò regiis noſtris in Belgio eſurientibus pergrata admodum ſorbitio fuit; nunc rupto putamine, vitioſum ac putridum repertum averſantur. Nam Morus hoc ſuo fœtu haud mediocriter inflatus, & Arauſiacam factionem totam demeruiſſe ſe ſentiens, jam integras profeſſionum cathedras ſpe improbâ devoraverat, & ſuam Pontiam utpote ancillam & pauperculam, jam gravidam ſceleratus deſeruerat. Illa deſpectam ſe atque deluſam querens, & ſynodi fidem & magiſtratûs imploravit. Sic tandem evulgata hæc res, & conviviis penè omnibus, ac circulis diu riſum & cachinnos præbuit. Unde aliquis, & lepidi ſanè, quiſquis erat, ingenii, hoc diſtichon,

Galli ex concubitu gravidam te, Pontia, Mori,
Quis bene moratam, morigerâmque neget?

Sola Pontia non riſit; ſed nec querendo quicquam profecit; Clamor enim regii ſanguinis clamorem ſtupri, & ſtupratæ mulierculæ ploratum facilè obruerat; Salmaſius quoque illatam ſibi hanc totíque familiæ & injuriam & labem ægrè ferens, ſéque ab amico & laudatore ſuo ſic ludos factum, ſic adverſario rurſus obnoxium, accedente ad priores ejus in cauſa regia infelicitates forſitan hoc etiam infortunio, haud itâ multò pòſt ſupremum diem obiit. Verùm aliquantò hæc poſteriùs. Interim Salmaſius, Salmacidis quodam fato, ut enim nomen, itâ & fabula non abludit, neſcius Hermaphroditum ſe adjunxiſſe ſibi Morum tam gignendi quàm pariendi compotem, quid is domi genuiſſet ignarus, quod peperit exoſculatur; librum nempe iſtum in quo ſentit ſe Magnum toties dici, & ſuo fortè judicio dignè, aliorum certè ſtultè atque ridiculè laudatum. Itaque typographum feſtinanter quærit; & fugientem ab ſe jam diu famam, retinere fruſtrà conatus, quas laudes, quas potiùs fœdas ſuî adulationes per hunc atque alios miſerè concupiverat, iis etiam divulgandis obſtetricatur ipſe atque ſubſervit. Ad hanc operam Vlaccus quidam eſt viſus omnium maximè idoneus; huic facilè perſuadet, non modò ut librum illum excudendum curaret, quod nemo reprehendiſſet; ſed etiam ut Epiſtolæ ad Carolum videlicet miſſæ, multis in me, qui hominem nunquam nôram, probris & contumeliis refertæ, ſubſcripto nomine ſe profiteretur authorem. Nequis igitur miretur cur ſe exorari tam facilè ſit paſſus, ut me tam impudenter nullâ de cauſâ laceſſeret, & alienas etiam intemperies in ſe transferre atque præſtare tam pro nihilo duceret, erga omnes etiam alios quemadmodum ſe geſſerit, ſicuti ego compertum habeo, oſtendam. Eſt Vlaccus unde gentium neſcio, vagus quidam librariolus, veterator atque decoctor notiſſimus; is Londini aliquandiu Bibliopola fuit clancularius; quâ ex urbe, poſt innumeras fraudes, obæratus aufugit. Eundem Pariſiis fide caſſum & malè agendo inſignem, via tota Jacobæa cognovit: Unde olim quoque profugus nè multis quidem paraſangis audet appropinquare; nunc ſi cui opus eſt balatrone perditiſſimo atque venali, proſtat Hagæcomitis Typographus recoctus. Hunc ut intelligatis, quid dicat, quídve agat, quàm nihil penſi habeat, nihil eſſe tam ſanctum, quod non lucro vel exiguo poſterius putet, ſéque non cáuſa publica, quod quis putâſſet, ſic in me eſſe debacchatum, fatentem ipſum in ſe teſtem producam. Is cum vidiſſet quod in Salmaſium ſcripſeram, nonnullis librariis æra meruiſſe, ſcribit ad amicos quoſdam meos mecum agerent, ut ſiquid haberem excudendum, ſibi committeretur; ſe typis longè melioribus, quàm qui priùs excudiſſet, mandaturum: Reſpondi per eoſdem, non habere me in præſentia, quod excuſo eſſet opus. Ecce autem! cui ſuam operam tam officioſè modò detulerat, in eum haud itâ multò poſt, ſcripti contumelioſiſſimi non excuſor ſolùm ſed & author, ſubdititius licèt, prodit. Indignantur amici; reſcribit impudentiſſimus, mirari ſe ſimplicitatem eorum, & rerum imperitiam, qui officii rationem aut honeſti ab ſe exigant aut deſiderent, cùm videant quibus rebus quæſtum faciat: Se ab ipſo Salmaſio illam epiſtolam, cùm libro accepiſſe; qui rogabat, id uti ſuâ gratiâ, vellet facere quod fecit; ſi Miltonio, vel cuivis alteri viſum eſſet reſpondere, nullum ſibi eſſe ſcrupulum; ſiquidem eâdem ſuâ operâ uti voluerint: Id eſt, vel in Salmaſium vel in Carolum; namque id erat ſolum quod in reſponſo ejuſmodi futurum expectare poterat. Quid plura? Hominem videtis; ad reliquos nunc pergo, non enim unus eſt duntaxat, qui hanc in nos regii Clamoris quaſi tragœdiam adornavit. En igitur initio, ut ſolet, dramatis perſonæ: Clamor prologus, Vlaccus Balatro, aut ſi mavultis, Salmaſius Vlacci Balatronis perſona & lacernis involutus, Duo Poetaſtri Cereviſiali vappâ temulenti, lenti, Morus adulter & ſtuprator. Mirificos ſanè tragœdos! Bellum certamen mihi paratum! Verùm qualeſcunque ſortiti, quoniam alios atque hujuſmodi adverſarios vix eſt ut cauſa noſtra habere poſſit, nunc ſingulos aggrediamur; hoc tantùm præfati, ſi cui minus gravitatis noſtra alicubi refutatio habere videbitur, cogitare eum debere, non cum gravi adverſario, ſed cum grege hiſtrionico, nobis rem eſſe; ad quem dum refutationis genus accommodandum erat, non ſemper quid magis decuiſſet, ſed quid illis dignum eſſet, ſpectandum duximus.

Siquidem non jure fuſum oſtendiſſes, More, iſtum ſanguinem, haud incredibile narrares: Nunc, quemadmodum primis reſtituti Evangelii temporibus, Monachi, cùm argumentis minùs valerent, ad ſpectra neſcio quæ, & ficta monſtra decurrere ſolebant; ſic vos, poſtquam omnia defecere, ad clamores nuſquam auditos, & obſoletas fraterculorum artes revertimini. Voces è cœlo audire quemquam noſtrorum, longè abeſt ut credas; ego te clamores ab Inferis audîſſe, quod poſtulas, facilè crediderim. Verùm hunc regii ſanguinis clamorem dic ſodes quis audivit? Te ais: Nugæ: Primùm enim malè audis: Ad Cœlum autem qui clamor perveniat, ſi quis præter Deum, juſti puto ſoli & integerrimi quique audiunt, ut qui poſſint, immunes ipſi, iram Dei conſciis denuntiare. Tu verò quorſum audires, an ut ſatyram cynædus ſcriberes? Videris enim eodem tempore, & ementitus hunc clamorem ad cœlum, & cum Pontia furtim libidinatus eſſe. Multa te impediunt, More, multa intus foriſque circumſonant, quæ te res iſtiuſmodi ad cœlum perlatas audire non ſinunt; & ſi nihil aliud certè qui contra ipſum te ad Cœlum quam plurimus fit clamor. Clamat contra te, ſi neſcis, Mœcha illa tua hortenſis, tuo maximè Paſtoris ſui exemplo, deceptam ſe eſſe queſta; clamat contra te maritus, cujus torum violâſti; clamat Pontia, cui pactum nuptiale temerâſti; clamat, ſiquis eſt, quem probro genitum, infantulum abdicâſti; horum omnium clamores ad Cœlum contra te, ſi non audis, neque illum regii ſanguinis audiveris: Interea libellus iſte, non regii Sanguinis clamor ad Cœlum, ſed laſcivientis Mori hinnitus ad Pontiam, rectiùs inſcribetur. Quæ ſequitur Epiſtola prolixa quidem, & bene putida, partim Carolo, partim Miltonio, alteri amplificando, alteri infamando, dedicatur. Ab ipſo ſtatim initio Authorem diſcite: Caroli Regna, inquit, in Sacrilegam parricidarum, & (quia verba deſunt idonea, Tertullianeâ voce abutimur) Deicidarum poteſtatem venerunt. Hæc ſive Salmaſiæa, ſive Moræa, ſive Vlaccæa ſartago ſit, prætereamus. Hoc verò aliis ridendum, Carolo indignandum profectò eſt, quod paulò pòſt, neminem, ait vivere felicitatis Caroli ſtudioſiorem. Quíne eandem & epiſtolandi, & excudendi operam Caroli hoſtibus detuliſti, te vivit nemo felicitatis ejus ſtudioſior? Miſerum profectò dicis regem ſic ab amicis omnibus derelictum, ut qui intimi reſtant, iis Vappa typographus comparare ſe audeat. Miſerrimum, cujus fideliſſimis, Vlaccus perfidus fide ac ſtudio non cedat: Quo quid inſolentius de ſe, contemptius de rege amicíſque regiis pronunciare potuit? Neque hoc minùs ridiculum, induci Idiotam & operarium de rebus graviſſimis ac regiis virtutibus phiſophantem, eáque dicentem, qualiacunque ſunt, quibus nec Salmaſius ipſe, nec Morus meliora dixiſſet. Equidem Salmaſium, ut ſæpe aliàs, ità hoc loco haud obſcurè, ſi multâ lectione, judicio tamen puerili & nullius uſûs hominem deprehendi; qui cùm legere potuiſſet ſummos in Spartanâ civitate optimè inſtitutâ magiſtratus, ſi quid fortè viro malo excidiſſet ſapienter dictum, id ei adimi juſſiſſe, & in virum aliquem bonum ac frugi ſortitione conferri, adeò id omne quod decorum dicitur ignorârit, ut è contra, quas probum atque prudentem decere ſentias arbitraretur, eas homini nequiſſimo attribui ſuſtineret. Bono es animo, Carole: Veterator Vlaccus, qua ſua eſt in Deum fiducia, bono animo te eſſe jubet. Noli tot mala perdere: Vlaccus decoctor perditiſſimus, qui bona omnia, ſiqua habuit, perdidit, author tibi eſt, perdere ut nolis mala: Fruere novercante fortunâ: Potin'es ut nè fruare, hortatore præſertim tali, qui alienis etiam fortunis frui per fas & nefas tot annis conſuevit? In ſapientiam penitùs ingurgitâſti, & ingurgita: Sic monet, ſic præcipit regum Inſtitutor ſanè optimus Vlaccus gurges, qui arreptâ atramentoſis manibus, coriaceâ lagenâ, inter combibones operas, ingenti hauſtu, ſapientiam tibi propinat. Hæc audet tuus Vlaccus, tam præclara monita, nomine etiam conſcripto, quæ Salmaſius, quæ Morus, cæteríque pugiles tui aut timidi non audent, aut ſuperbi non dignantur; nimirum quoties te monito eſt opus aut defenſo, alieno ſemper nomine, atque periculo, non ſuo, ſapientes aut fortes ſunt. Deſinat ergò, quiſquis hic eſt, ſtrenuam & animoſam facundiam ipſe ſuam inaniter jactare; dum vir, ſi diis placet, inſignis, decoro ingenio nomen ſuum celeberrimum edere metuit; librum quo regium ſanguinem ulciſci ſe ait, ne dicare quidem Carolo niſi per Vlaccum interpretem & vicarium auſus, verbis typographi miſerè contentus ſignificare, librum ſe, ſine nomine, ſi pateris, O Rex, tuo nomini dicatum ire. Sic functus Carolo in me impetum parat minitabundus: Poſt hæc proœmia, tubam terribilem inflabit ὁ θαυμάσιος ille Salmaſius. Salubritatem prædicis & concentûs muſici novum genus futurum; iſti enim tubæ terribili, cùm inflabitur, nulla aptior excogitari ſymphonia poterit, quàm ſi affatim oppedetur. Buccam verò Salmaſius nimis inflatam ne afferat moneo; quo enim attulerit inflatiorem, eò mihi crede, opportuniorem ad Colaphos præbebit; qui thaumaſii Salmaſii rhythmicum hunc ſonum, quo delectaris, buccis ambabus reſonantibus, numeroſe reddent. Pergis cornicari. Qui nec parem nec ſecundum habet, in univerſo literarum & ſcientiarum orbe. Veſtram fidem! Eruditi, quotquot eſtis, veſtram fidem! Siccine vobis omnibus anteferri Cimicem Grammaticum, cujus res atque ſpes omnis in gloſſario vertebatur? Quem vel extremum meritò occupet ſcabies, ſi cum viris verè doctis comparetur. Hæc autem, niſi ab infimo quopiam & infra Vlaccum ipſum væcorde affirmari tam fatuè nequiverunt. Quique jam ſtupendam & infinitam eruditionem cœleſti junctam ingenio ad cauſam tuæ majeſtatis contulit. Si meminiſtis quod ſuprà narravi, ipſum Salmaſium, attuliſſe hanc epiſtolam cum libro excudendam, vel ab ipſo ſcriptam, vel ab anonymo quovis, vernámque typographum exorâſſe, ut quod author nollet, ipſe ſuum nomen adſcriberet, cognoſcetis profectò puſilli omnino, & abjectiſſimi hominem ingenii ſuis laudibus tam miſerè velificantem, & immenſa encomia tam ſtolidi laudatoris aucupantem. Opus æternum fruſtrà ſugillantibus nonnullis, juriſconſulti mirari ſatis nequeunt quòd homo Gallus ità ſubitò res Anglicas, leges, decreta, inſtrumenta, ità teneat, enodet, &c. Immo quàm ineptierit in noſtris legibus & pſittacus fuerit, noſtris etiam juriſconſultis teſtibus abunde oſtendimus. Sed ipſe mox altera, quam in Rebelles molitur, impreſſione, ſimul Theonum ora comprimet, ſimul Miltonum nobis pro eo ac meretur concaſtigatum dabit. Tu igitur ut piſciculus ille anteambulo, præcurris Balænam Salmaſium, impreſſiones in hæc littora minitantem; nos ferramenta acuimus, expreſſuri ſi quid habent impreſſiones & concaſtigationes illæ ſive olei ſive gari. Bonitatem interea magni viri mirabimur pluſquam Pythagoricam, qui animalia quoque miſeratus, & præſertim piſces, quorum carnibus, ne quadrageſima quidem parcit, iis tam decenter involvendis tot volumina deſtinârit, tot pauperum millibus, Thunnorum, credo, aut Scombrorum, chartaceas in ſingulos tunicas teſtamento legârit.

Gaudete Scombri, & quicquid eſt piſcium ſalo,
Qui frigidâ hyeme incolitis algentes freta,
Veſtrûm miſertus ille Salmaſius eques
Bonus amicire nuditatem cogitat;
Chartæque largus apparat papyrinos
Vobis cucullos præferentes Claudii
Inſignia nomenque & decus Salmaſii,
Geſtetis ut per omne cetarium forum
Equitis clientes, ſcriniis mungentium
Cubito virorum, & capſulis gratiſſimos.

Hæc habui in Editionem diu exſpectatam tam nobilis libri; cujus impreſſionem, dum, ut ais, molitur Salmaſius, tu ejus domum, More, fædiſſimâ compreſſione Pontiæ contaminâſti. Et videtur ſanè, ad hoc opus abſolvendum, Salmaſius diu multúmque incubuiſſe; paucis enim ante mortem diebus, cùm vir quidam doctus, à quo hoc ipſum accepi, miſiſſet, qui ex eo quæreret, ecquando apparatûs partem ſecundam in Primatum Papæ editurus eſſet, reſpondit, ad illud opus non ante reverſurum ſe, quàm abſolviſſet quod adhuc commentaretur adverſùs Miltonium. Ità ego etiam Papæ refutandus præferor; & quem illi primatum in Eccleſia negavit, eum mihi ultro in inimicitia ſua concedit; ſic ego primatui Papæ jam jam evertendo ſalutem attuli; ego redivivum hunc Catilinam, non in toga, ut conſul olim Tullius, nè per ſomnum quidem, ſed aliud omnino agens, Romanis mœnibus averti; non unus profectò cardinalatus mihi hoc nomine debebitur; vereor, nè tranſlato in me regum nuper noſtrorum titulo, Defenſor fidei ab Romano Pontifice appellandus ſim. Videtis quantus invidiæ artifex in me concitandæ, Salmaſius fuerit; verùm ipſe viderit, qui tam honeſtâ provinciâ turpiter relictâ, alienis ſe controverſiis immiſcuerit, ab Eccleſiæ cauſa, ad civiles & externas, quarum ſuâ nihil intererat, ſe traduxerit; cum Papa inducias fecerit; & quod fœdiſſimum fuit, cum Epiſcopis, poſt bellum apertiſſimum, in gratiam redierit. Veniamus nunc ad mea crimina; éſtne quod in vita aut moribus reprehendat? Certè nihil: Quid ergo? Quod nemo niſi immanis, ac barbarus feciſſet, formam mihi ac cæcitatem objectat.

Nunquam exiſtimabam equidem fore, ut de forma, cum Cyclope certamen mihi eſſet; verùm ſtatim ſe revocat. Quanquam nec ingens, quo nihil eſt exilius, exſanguius, contractius. Tametſi virum nihil attinet de forma dicere, tamen quando hîc quoque eſt, unde gratias Deo agam, & mendaces redarguam, nè quis (quod Hiſpanorum vulgus de hæreticis, quos vocant, plus nimio Sacerdotibus ſuis credulum opinatur) me fortè Cynocephalum quempiam, aut Rhinocerota eſſe putet, dicam. Deformis quidem à nemine, quod ſciam, qui modò me vidit, ſum unquam habitus; formoſus nécne, minùs laboro; ſtaturâ fateor non ſum procerâ: Sed quæ mediocri tamen quàm parvæ propior ſit: Sed quid ſi parvâ, quâ & ſummi ſæpe tum pace tum bello viri fuere, quanquam parva cur dicitur, quæ ad virtutem ſatis magna eſt. Sed neque exilis admodum, eo ſanè animo iiſque viribus, ut cùm ætas vitæque ratio ſic ferebat, nec ferrum tractare, nec ſtringere quotidiano uſu exercitatus neſcirem; eo accinctus, ut plerumque eram, cuivis vel multò robuſtiori exæquatum me putabam, ſecurus quid mihi quis injuriæ vir viro inferre poſſet. Idem hodie animus, eædem vires, oculi non iidem; ità tamen extrinſecus illæſi, ità ſine nube clari ac lucidi, ut eorum qui acutiſſimùm cernunt: In hac ſolùm parte, memet invito, ſimulator ſum. In vultu, quo nihil exſanguius eſſe dixit, is manet etiamnum color exſangui & pallenti planè contrarius, ut quadragenario major vix ſit cui non denis prope annis videar natu minor; neque corpore contracto neque cute. In his ego ſi ulla ex parte mentior, multis millibus popularium meorum, qui de facie me nôrunt, exteris etiam non paucis, ridiculus meritò ſim: Sin iſte in re minimè neceſſariâ, tam impudenter & gratuitò mendax comperietur, poteritis de reliquo eandem conjecturam facere. Atque hæc de forma mea vel coactus: De tua quanquam & contemptiſſimam accepi, & habitantis in te improbitatis atque malitiæ vivam imaginem, neque ego dicere, neque ullus audire curat. Utinam de cæcitate pariter liceret inhumanum hunc refellere adverſarium; ſed non licet; feramus igitur: Non eſt miſerum eſſe cæcum; miſerum eſt cæcitatem non poſſe ferre: Quidni autem feram, quod unumquemque ità parare ſe oportet, ut ſi acciderit, non ægrè ferat, quod & humanitus accidere cuivis mortalium, & præſtantiſſimis quibuſdam, atque optimis omni memoriâ viris accidiſſe ſciam: Sive illos memorem vetuſtatis ultimæ priſcos vates, ac ſapientiſſimos; quorum calamitatem, & Dii, ut fertur, multò potioribus donis compenſârunt, & homines eo honore affecerunt, ut ipſos inculpare maluerint deos, quàm cæcitatem illis crimini dare. De augure Tireſia quod traditur, vulgò notum. De Phineo ſic cecinit Apollonius in Argonauticis:

——— Οὐδ᾽ ὅσσον ὀπίζετο καὶ Διὸς αὐτοῦ
Χρωον ἀτρεκέως ἱερὸν νόον ἀνθρώποισι.
Τῷ καὶ οἱ γῆρας μὲν ἐπὶ δ᾽ ιωαιὸν ἴαλλεν
Ἐκ δ᾽ ἕλετ᾽ ὀφθαλμῶν γλυκερὸν φάος.

——— neque eſt veritus Jovem ipſum
Edens veraciter mentem divinam hominibus:
Quare & ſenectam ei diuturnam dedit,
Eripuit autem oculorum dulce lumen.

Cæterum deus & ipſe veritas eſt: in qua homines edocenda quò quis veracior eò ſimilior deo acceptiórque ſit, oportet. Non eſt pium veritatis invidentem deum credere; aut nolle hominibus quàm liberrimè impertitam: Ob nullam igitur noxam, divinus vir, & humani generis erudiendi ſtudioſiſſimus, ut philoſophorum etiam complures, caruiſſe luminibus videtur. Sive illos commemorem civili prudentiâ, geſtiſque rebus admirabiles olim viros; primùm Timoleontem Corinthium, & civitatis ſuæ, & Siciliæ totius liberatorem; quo virum meliorem, aut in republica ſanctiorem nulla ætas tulit; tum Appium Claudium, cujus in Senatu pulcrè dicta ſententia, Italiam Pyrrho, gravi hoſte, ſeipſum cæcitate non liberavit; tum Cæcilium Metellum Pontificem, qui non urbem ſolùm, ſed & fatum urbis Palladium, & penitiſſima ſacra dum ab incendio ſervavit, ſuos oculos perdidit; quanquam aliàs certè Deus pietati tam egregiæ favere ſe, etiam inter gentes, teſtatus eſt: quod tali igitur viro uſu venit, ponendum in malis eſſe vix putem. Quid alios recentiorum temporum adjungam, vel illum Venetiarum Principem Dandulum longè omnium præſtantiſſimum; vel Boëmorum Ziſcam ducem fortiſſimum, orthodoxæ fidei propugnatorem? Quid ſummi nominis theologos Hieronymum Zanchium, nonnullóſq; alios? cùm & ipſum Iſaacum Patriarcham, quo nemo unquam mortalium Deo charior fuit, annos haud paucos, cæcum vixiſſe conſtet; aliquot fortaſſe Jacobum etiam ejus filium, & ipſum Deo haud minùs dilectum: cùm deniq; Chriſti ſervatoris noſtri divino teſtimonio compertiſſimum ſit, illum hominem ab ſe ſanatum, neque ob ſuum, neque ob parentum ſuorum aliquod peccatum, etiam ab utero cæcum fuiſſe. Ad me quod attinet, te teſtor, Deus, mentis intimæ, cogitationúmque omnium indagator, me nullius rei (quanquam hoc apud me ſæpius, & quàm maximè potui, ſeriò quæſivi, & receſſus vitæ omnes excuſſi) nullius vel recèns vel olim commiſſi, mihimet conſcium eſſe, cujus atrocitas hanc mihi præ cæteris calamitatem creare, aut accerſiſſe meritò potuerit. Quod etiam ullo tempore ſcripſi (quoniam hoc nunc me luere quaſi piaculum regii exiſtimant, atque adeò triumphant) teſtor itidem Deum, me nihil iſtiuſmodi ſcripſiſſe, quod non rectum & verum, Deóque gratum eſſe, & perſuaſerim tum mihi, & etiamnum perſuaſus ſim; ídque nullâ ambitione, lucro, aut gloriâ ductus; ſed officii, ſed honeſti, ſed pietatis in patriam ratione ſolâ; nec reipublicæ tantùm, ſed Eccleſiæ quoque liberandæ cauſâ potiſſimùm feciſſe: adeò ut cùm datum mihi publicè eſſet illud in defenſionem regiam negotium, eodémque tempore & adverſâ ſimul valetudine, & oculo jam penè altero amiſſo, conflictaret, prædicerén tque diſertè medici, ſi hunc laborem ſuſcepiſſem, fore, ut utrumque brevi amitterem, nihil iſtâ præmonitione deterritus, non medici nè Æſculapii quidem Epidaurii ex adyto vocem, ſed divinioris cujuſdam intus monitoris viderer mihi audire; duáſque ſortes, fatali quodam nutu, jam mihi propoſitas, hinc cæcitatem, indè officium; aut oculorum jacturam neceſſariò faciendam, aut ſummum officium deſerendum: occurrebántque animo bina illa fata, quæ retuliſſe Delphis conſulentem de ſe matrem, narrat Thetidis filius.

Iliad. 9.

Duplicia fata ducere ad mortis finem:
Si hic manens circa Troum urbem pugnavero,
Amittitur mihi reditus; ſed Gloria immortalis erit:
Si domum revertor dulce ad Patrium ſolum,
Amittitur mihi Gloria pulcra, ſed diuturna vita
Erit. ———

Unde ſic mecum reputubam multos graviore malo minus bonum morte gloriam, redemiſſe; mihi contrà majus bonum minore cum malo proponi: ut poſſem cùm cæcitate ſola vel honeſtiſſimum officii munus implere; quod ut ipſa gloria per ſe eſt ſolidius, ità cuique optatius atque antiquius debet eſſe. Hac igitur tam brevi luminum uſurâ, quanta maxima quivi cum utilitate publica, quoad liceret, fruendum eſſe ſtatui. Videtis quid prætulerim, quid amiſerim, quâ inductus ratione: deſinant ergò judiciorum Dei calumniatores maledicere, déque me ſomnia ſibi fingere: ſic denique habento; me ſortis meæ neque pigere neque pœnitere; immotum atque fixum in ſententia perſtare; Deum iratum neque ſentire, neque habere, immò maximis in rebus clementiam ejus & benignitatem erga me paternam experiri atque agnoſcere; in hoc præſertim, quòd ſolante ipſo atque animum confirmante in ejus divina voluntate acquieſcam; quid is largitus mihi ſit quàm quid negaverit ſæpius cogitans: poſtremò nolle me cum ſuo quovis rectiſſimè facto, facti mei conſcientiam permutare, aut recordationem ejus gratam mihi ſemper atque tranquillam deponere. Ad cæcitatem denique quod attinet, malle me, ſi neceſſe eſt, meam, quam vel ſuam, More, vel tuam. Veſtra imis ſenſibus immerſa, nequid ſani videatis aut ſolidi, mentem obcæcat: mea, quam objicitis, colorem tantummodo rebus & ſuperficiem demit; quod verum ac ſtabile in iis eſt contemplationi mentis non adimit. Quàm multa deinde ſunt quæ videre nollem, quàm multa quæ poſſem libens non videre, quàm pauca reliqua ſunt quæ videre cupiam. Sed neque ego cæcis, afflictis, mœrentibus, imbecillis, tametſi vos id miſerum ducitis, aggregari me diſcrutior; quandoquidem ſpes eſt, eo me propiùs ad miſericordiam ſummi patris atque tutelam pertinere. Eſt quoddam per imbecillitatem, præeunte Apoſtolo, ad maximas vires iter: ſim ego debiliſſimus, dummodo in mea debilitate immortalis ille & melior vigor eo ſe efficaciùs exerat; dummodo in meis tenebris divini vultûs lumen eo clariùs eluceat; tum enim infirmiſſimus ero ſimul & validiſſimus, cæcus eodem tempore & perſpicaciſſimus; hac poſſim ego infirmitate conſummari, hac perfici, poſſim in hac obſcuritate ſic ego irradiari. Et ſanè haud ultima Dei cura cæci ſumus; qui nos, quò minus quicquam aliud præter ipſum cernere valemus, eò clementiùs atque benigniùs reſpicere dignatur. Væ qui illudit nos, væ qui lædit, execratione publicâ devovendo; nos ab injuriis hominum non modò incolumes, ſed penè ſacros, divina lex reddidit, divinus favor; nec tam oculorum hebetudine, quàm cœleſtium alarum umbrâ has nobis feciſſe tenebras videtur, factas illuſtrare rurſus interiore ac longe præſtabiliore lumine haud raro ſolet. Huc refero, quòd & amici officioſiùs nunc etiam quàm ſolebant, colunt, obſervant, adſunt; quòd & nonnulli ſunt, quibuſcum Pyladéas atque Theſéas alternare voces verorum amicorum liceat.

Ορες. Ἕρπε νῦν οἴαξ ποδὸς μοι. Πυ. φίλα γ' ἔχων κηδεύματα,
Vade gubernaculum mei pedis. Py. per gratam mihi habens curam. Eurip. in Oreſt.

Et alibi,

δίδου χεῖρ' ὑπηρέτῃ φίλῳ,
Da manum miniſtro amico.

δίδου δέρῃ σὴν χεῖρ' ὁδηγήσω δ' ἐγώ,
Da collo manum tuam, ductor autem viæ ero tibi ego. Id. in Her. furent.

Non enim hoc caſu factum me omnino nullum; non quicquid eſt probi aut cordati hominis, poſitum in oculis putant eſſe. Quin & ſummi quoque in republica viri, quandoquidem non otio torpentem me, ſed impigrum & ſumma diſcrimina pro libertate inter primos adeuntem oculi deſeruerunt, ipſi non deſerunt; verùm humana qualia ſint, ſecum reputantes, tanquam emerito favent, indulgent, vocationem atque otium faciles concedunt; ſi quid eſt ornamenti, non detrahunt; ſi quid publici muneris, non adimunt; ſi quid ex ea re commodi, non minuunt; & quamvis non æquè nunc utili, præbendum nihilo minùs benignè cenſent; eodem planè honore, ac ſi, ut olim Athenienſibus mos erat, in Prytanéo alendum decreviſſent. Sic mihi & apud Deum & apud homines cæcitatem ſolari meam quandiu licuerit, amiſſos honeſti causâ oculos, nemo meos lugeat; abſit quoque ut ipſe lugeam, aut vel animi ſatis ut nè habeam quo cæcitatis convitiatores facilè poſſim contemnere, vel veniæ ut nè poſſim faciliùs condonare. Ad te, quiſquis es, redeo, qui parùm tibi conſtans, nunc pumilionem me, nunc Antæum vis eſſe: Non aliud poſtremò optas libentiùs fœderatis Belgii Provinciis, quàm ut tam facile, tamque feliciter defungantur hoc Bello, quàm defungetur Salmaſius Miltonio. Cui ego voto ſi facilè aſſenſero, arbitror me noſtris ſucceſſibus Reique Anglicanæ nec ominari malè nec malè precari.

En verò iterum clamorem, alienum quendam & ſtridulum! anſeres puto alicunde advolare: Jam ſentio quid ſit; memini clamoris hanc eſſe tragœdiam; prodit Chorus: en duo Poëtaſtri; vel duo vel unus, biformi ſanè ſpecie & bicolore; Sphingémne dicam an Horatianum illud monſtrum Poëticum, capite muliebri, cervice aſininâ variis indutum plumis, undique collatis membris: id profectò ipſiſſimum eſt. Rhapſodus videlicet quiſpiam, centonibus & pannis obſitus; unúſne an duo incertum, nam & Anonymus quoque eſt. Poëtas equidem verè dictos & diligo & colo, & audiendo ſæpiſſimè delector; illorum etiam pleroſque tyrannis eſſe ſcio inimiciſſimos, ſi vel à primis exorſus ad Buchananum uſque noſtrum recenſerem: iſtos verò verſiculorum nugivendos, quis non oderit? quo genere hominum nihil ſtultius, aut vanius, aut corruptius, aut mendacius. Laudant, vituperant, ſine delectu, ſine diſcrimine, judicio, aut modo, nunc principes, nunc plebeios, doctos juxtà atque indoctos, probos an improbos, perinde habent; prout Cantharus, aut ſpes nummuli, aut fatuus ille furor inflat ac rapit; congeſtis undique & verborum & rerum tot diſcoloribus ineptiis támque putidis, ut laudatum longè præſtet ſileri, & pravo, quod aïunt, vivere naſo, quàm ſic laudari: vituperatus verò qui ſit, haud mediocri ſanè honori ſibi ducat, ſe tam abſurdis, tam ſtolidis nebulonibus diſplicere. Primus qui eſt, ſi modò bini ſunt, dubito Poëta ſit an Cæmentarius; ità Salmaſio os oblinit, immo totum quaſi parietem dealbat atque incruſtat. Curru nempe triumphantem inducit, Heroëm Gigantomachum, haſtilia & caſtus, & neſcio quæ nugamenta armorum vibrantem, doctos omnes pedibus quadrigam ſequentes, ſed poſt térga ejus innumeris ſpatiis relictos, utpote quem numen rebus trepidis ſalutem orbis admoverit; tandem ergo tali tempus erat tegi umbone reges parente nimirum Juris & imperii. Delirus neceſſe eſt fuerit & bis puer Salmaſius, qui his laudibus non ſolùm tantopere ſibi placuerit, ſed excudendas etiam quàm primùm de ſe tam ſedulò curaverit: Miſellus etiam poëta atque indecorus, qui Grammaticum, quod genus hominum poëtis miniſtrum ſemper atque ſubſerviens fuit, tam immodicis laudibus dignetur. Alter verò non verſus facit, ſed planè inſanit, enthuſiaſtarum omnium quos tam rabidè inſectatur, ipſe amentiſſimus: hic Salmaſii carnifex quaſi ſit, Syri Damæ filius, Lorarios invocat & Cadmum; veratro deinde ebrius, totam, quicquid ubique eſt, Servulorum & Ballionum ſentinam, ex Indice Plautino evomit; credas lingua Oſcum non latinè loquentem, aut inferarum, quas natat, paludum coaxare ranam. Tum ut intelligatis, quantus ſit Iamborum artifex, duabus ſyllabis unâ in voce peccat, alterâ productâ alterâ perperam correptâ.

Aufer iſtas, aſine, vacivitatum tuarum clitellas; & tria verba, ſi potes ſani ac ſobrii hominis tandem affer; ſi tua iſta cucurbita & blennum caput vel ad punctum temporis poteſt ſapere: interea te ego puerorum virgidemiis tuis cædendum trado Orbilium. Tu mihi ſic perge maledicere, ut Cromuello pejor tibi ſim, quâ nullâ majore me laude afficere potuiſti. Te verò benevolúmne dicam, an ſtolidum, an hoſtem inſidioſum? benevolus certè non es, verba enim hoſtem indicant; cur ergò tam ſtolidus fuiſti vituperator, ut anteferre me tanto viro in buccam tibi venerit; ecquid tu non intelligis, an me putas non intelligere, quò graviora veſtra in me eſſe odia oſtenditis, eò vos ampliora mea in rempublicam merita prædicare, veſtra tot opprobria, tot mea eſſe apud meos præconia? Nam ſi vos me omnium maximè odiſtis, ſanè ego vos omninm maximè exulceravi, vos ego maximè afflixi, cauſæque veſtræ nocui: id ſi ità eſt, idem ego de meis civibus optime quoque merui; hoſtis enim vel teſtimonium vel judicium, etſi aliàs leve admodùm, de ſuo tamen dolore longè eſt graviſſimum. An Poëta non meminiſti, cùm de Achillis mortui armis, Ajax & Ulyſſes contenderent, non Græcos populares ſed Trojanos hoſtes ex ſententia Neſtoris Judices datos?

Quapropter Trojanis permittamus prudentibus hanc litem judicandam.

Et paulò poſt,

οἳ ῥα δίκην ἰθεῖαν ἐπὶ σφίσι ποιήσονται.
οὔ τινι ἦρα φέροντες ἐπεὶ μάλα πάντας Ἀχαιοὺς
Ἶσον ἀπεχθαίρουσι κακῆς μεμνημένοι ἄτης.

Qui juſtum judicium de iis fecerint,
Nemini gratificantes, cùm vehementer omnes Achivos
Æquè oderint, mali memores damni.

Hæc Smyrnæus ille, ſive Calaber. Inſidioſus itaque ſis oportet, méque in invidiam conjicere labores, qui quod judicium in hoſte rectum atque ſincerum eſſe ſolet, id dolo malo & graviùs lædendi animo corrumpis atq; depravas, ita non vir modò ſed & hoſtis depravatiſſimus es. Verùm ego, nullo negotio fruſtrabor te, vir bone; quanquam enim Ulyſſem, id eſt, quàm optimè de patria meritum me eſſe ſanè perquàm vellem, tamen Achilleïa arma non ambio; cœlum in clypeo pictum, quod alii, non ego, in certamine aſpiciant, præferre, onus non pictum ſed verum, humeris portare, quod ego, non alii ſentiant, non quæro: Equidem cùm nullas omnino ſimultates aut inimicitias ullo cum homine privatas geram, neque ullus, quod ſciam, mecum gerat, tot in me maledicta jactari, tot probra torqueri, reipublicæ duntaxat cauſâ, non meâ, eo æquiore animo fero: nec præmii & commodorum inde provenientium, partem longè minimam, ignominiæ longè maximam perveniſſe ad me queror; contentus quæ honeſta factu ſunt, ea propter ſe ſolùm appetiſſe, & gratis perſequi: Id alii viderint, túque ſcito, me illas opimitates atque opes, quas mihi exprobas, non attigiſſe, neque eo nomine quo maximè accuſas, obolo factum ditiorem. Hic rurſus infit Morus, & ſecunda epiſtola cauſas ſcribendi refert; tuinam? Lectori Chriſtiano nempe Mœchus & ſtuprator Morus ſalutem: piam ſanè epiſtolam promittis; jam cauſas incipe. Excitati ſunt Europaarum gentium animi, maxime omnium Galli noſtri reformati, ut parricidium & parricidas, &c. cognoſcerent. Galli & ipſi reformati contra reges bella geſſerunt; quid ulteriùs fuiſſent facturi paribus uſi rerum ſucceſſibus, affirmari non poteſt: certè reges ipſorum, ſi qua earum rerum monumentis fides, ab illis haud minùs metuebant tibi, quàm à nobis noſter: neque injuria, quoties meminiſſent quæ etiam illi ſcriptitarunt, & minati ſæpe ſunt: Nolint igitur, quicquid tu cauſare, ſplendidè nimis de ſe polliceri, iniquiùs de nobis ſentire. Pergit in cauſis. Equidem ea Anglorum melioris notæ conſuetudine ſum uſus. Qui tibi ſunt melioris notæ, viris bonis ſunt peſſimæ. Ut auſim dicere me iſta hominum monſtra noſſe intus & in cute. Putabam te mœchas tantummodo tuas & ſcorta; tu etiam monſtra intus & in cute. Ut nomen meum premerem, facile impetrarunt Angli quibuſcum conſuevi. Et aſtutè quidem illi: ſic enim ſperabant & ſe impudentia tua eò largiore fruituros, & te tua fama, etiam tum mala, eo minus cauſæ nociturum. Noverant enim te, & quàm eſſes olim bonus hortorum cuſtos, & nunc raſus licèt & pumicatus ſacerdos, ut à Pontia ne Pilata quidem abſtinere manus potueris; nec de nihilo ſanè, ſi enim à conficienda carne carnifex dictus putatur, cur minùs tu conficiendo Pontiam Pontifex factus ex ſacerdote tibi videare? Hæc cùm de te non neſcirent alii, cùm non poſſes ipſe quin tibimet conſcires, tamen incredibili, & execrandâ quadam impietate palàm audes profiteri, te Dei gloriam unice quærere, & vindicare: & dum ipſe turpiſſima quæris, ſimul accuſare alios, quod pietatis larvam criminibus imponant: cùm id nemo manifeſtiùs ac ſceleratiùs quàm tu ipſe facis, unquam fecerit. Ad rerum ais geſtarum ſeriem magno tibi fuiſſe adjumento cum alios ſcriptores tum maxime elenchum motuum nuperorum in Angliæ. Næ tu ineptus homo es, qui tanto clamore facto, quod tuum ſit nihil afferas; ſed ſcriptores tantùm, regiis partibus addictos eóq; meritò ſuſpectos authores contra nos adducere potuiſti, quorum fides ſi elevabitur, progredi nequeas. Nos igitur ſcriptores illos, ſi opus erit & elenchum elencho refutabimus, non illis per te, ſed tibi per illos, cum viſum erit reſpondebimus; tibi quæ de tuo protuleris, videndum interea, ut tueri queas; quæ cujuſmodi ſint, ab impio & planè Atheo homine profecta, audiant nunc omnes pii & horreſcant. Jubet amor Dei, & injuriæ ſancto ejus nomini factæ ſenſus acerrimus cogit ſupplices manus ad Deum attollere. Abde abde obſcœnas illas manus, quas libidine & ambitione ſupinatus attollere non vereris, nè cœlum ipſum quoque audeas iis manibus inceſtare, quibus ſacra religionis myſteria contrectando polluiſti. Quam enim divinam ultionem aliis temerarius & væcors imprecaris, eam in ipſius tuum impuriſſimum caput devocaſſe te olim intelliges.

Hactenus clamoris quaſi præludia fuere; nunc (ſummas enim, & propè ſolas in hoc dramate partes clamor obtinet,) quàm poteſt maximo hiatu, rictum diducit: in cœlum ſcilicet iturus; quo ſi aſcenderit, in neminem profectò acriùs clamabit quam in ipſum clamatorem Morum. Cum omnibus ſeculis, ſacra fuerit regum majeſtas, &c. Multa tu quidem More vulgariter, multa malitioſè in nos declamas, quæ nihil attinent: regis enim cædes, & tyranni ſupplicium non ſunt idem, More, non ſunt, inter ſe diſtant longiſſimè, atque diſtabunt, dum ſenſus & ratio, jus atque fas, rectique & obliqui judicium hominibus concedetur. Verùm de his ſatìs jam ſæpiùs dictum, ſatìs defenſum eſt: non patiar qui tot diris inanibus lædere non potes, ut repetitâ crambe nos demum occidas. De patientiâ, deinde & pietate bellè diſputas: Sed

> Clunem agitas: ego te ceventem more verebor?

Omnes aïs reformatos, preſertim Belgas & Gallos, factum noſtrum horruiſſe: & ſtatim, bonis ubique non licuiſſe, idem ſentire & loqui. Sed te tibi repugnare leviculum eſt; hoc multo indignius atque atrocius: præ noſtro, inquis, ſcelere, nihil fuit Judæorum ſcelus, Chriſtum crucifigentium, ſive hominum mentem, ſive ſceleris effectus compares. Furioſe! túne Chriſti miniſter perpetratum facinus in Chriſtum tam leviter fers, quacunque demum mente vel effectu ut pari ſcelere interfectum quemlibet regem audeas dicere? Judæi certè clariſſimis indiciis Dei filium agnoviſſe poterant; nos Carolum non eſſe tyrannum, nulla ratione potuimus intelligere. Eventûs autem, ad minuendum ſcelus, ineptiſſimè facis mentionem: verùm ſemper animadverto regios, quò quiſque acrior eſt, eò leviùs ferre quicquid committitur in Chriſtum, quàm ſi quid in regem: cui tamen cùm Chriſti præcipuè cauſa obediendum doceant, facilè oſtendunt ſe neque Chriſtum verè colere, neque regem: ſed aliud quiddam ſibi quærentes, incredibilem hanc erga reges fidem ac religionem ſuam, vel ambitioni, vel occultis quibuſdam aliis cupiditatibus obtendere. Prodiit ergo magnus literarum princeps Salmaſius. Deſine toties magnum illud, More; quod millies licèt ingeſſeris, haud cuiquam profectò intelligenti perſuaſeris magnum eſſe Salmaſium, ſed minimum eſſe Morum, & nullius pretii homulum, qui, quid deceat ignarus, magni cognomine tam imperitè abutatur. Nos grammaticis atque criticis, quorum ſumma laus aut in alienis lucubrationibus edendis, aut librariorum mendulis corrigendis verſatur, induſtriam quidem ac literarum ſcientiam, doctrinæ etiam haud contemnendæ laudem, ac præmia libenter concedimus, magni cognomen haud largimur. Is ſolus magnus eſt appellandus, qui res magnas aut gerit, aut docet, aut dignè ſcribit: res autem magnæ ſunt ſolæ, quæ vel vitam hanc noſtram efficiunt beatam, aut ſaltem cum honeſtate commodam atque jucundam, vel ad alteram ducunt beatiorem. Horum verò Salmaſius quid egit? egit verò nihil; quid autem docuit aut ſcripſit magnum? niſi fortè contra Epiſcopos, & primatum Papæ, quod ipſe poſtea & ſuis moribus, & aliis in nos pro epiſcopatu ſcriptis, recantatum penitus evertit. Magnus ergo ſcriptor dici non debet, qui aut nihil magnum, aut quod optimum in vita ſcripſerat, ei fœdiſſimè renunciavit. Literarum princeps ut ſit, & Alphabeti per me licet; at verò tibi non princeps modò literarum eſt, ſed patronus regum, & patronus quidem dignus tantis clientibus. Pulchrè tu quidem regibus conſuluiſti, ut poſt alios inſignes titulos, Claudii Salmaſii clientes appellentur. Ea nimirum lege ſolvimini cunctis aliis legibus Reges, ut in clientelam Grammatico tradatis vos Salmaſio, ſceptra ferulæ ſubmittatis: Debebunt ei Reges, dum ſtabit orbis, dignitatis & ſalutis ſuæ vindicias. Audite Principes; qui peſſimè vos defendit, immo ne defendit quidem, nemo enim oppugnavit, dignitatem & ſalutem veſtram ſibi imputat. Hoc nempe ſolum conſequuti ſunt, qui ſuperbiſſimum Grammaticum ſuſtinendis regum rationibus ex tinearum & blatarum foro advocârunt. Cui quantum res regia, tantundem etiam eccleſia debebit; non laudem ſanè, ſed meritiſſimam deſertæ ſuæ cauſæ notam. Nunc in laudes effunderis Defenſionis regiæ; ingenium, doctrinam, infinitum prope rerum uſum, & intimam ſacri & profani juris penum, concitatæ orationis vigorem, eloquentiam, facundiam aurei illius operis admiraris, quorum cum nihil affuiſſe homini contendo (quid enim Salmaſio cum eloquentia?) tum aureum fuiſſe illud opus vel centies fateor; tot enim Carolus aureos numeravit, ne dicam quid Arauſiacus etiam princeps in idem opus profuderit. Nunquam major ſurrexit vir magnus, nunquam magis Salmaſius: Et tantò quidem major ut ſe ruperit, quàm magnus enim fuerit in illo opere jam vidimus; & ſiquid ejuſdem argumenti, menti, ut fertur, poſthumum reliquit, ſortaſſe videbimus. Non equidem inficior, edito illo libro, Salmaſium in ore omnium fuiſſe, regiis mirè placuiſſe; ab auguſtiſſima Sueciæ regina, ampliſſimis præmiis invitatum; quinimò tota illa contentione Salmaſio ſecunda omnia, adverſa mihi penè omnia fuere. Primùm de illius eruditione, erat hominum ſumma opinio, quam multis ab annis jam diu collegerat, libros conſcribendo multos, & bene magnos, non eos quidem plerúmque utiles, ſed abſtruſiſſimis de rebus, & ſummorum authorum citariunculis differtos; quo nihil citiùs literatorum vulgus in admirationem rapit; me verò quis eſſem, nemo in iis ferè regionibus nôrat; magnam ille ſuî expectationem concitârat, attentior operi quàm ſolebat aliàs, ut in re tanta; ego mei nullam potui movere: immò verò multi me ab illo dehortabantur, tyronem cum veterano congreſſurum, partim invidentes, nè utcunque mihi gloriæ foret cum tanto hoſte decertâſſe; partim & mihi, & cauſæ metuentes, nè utriuſque gravi cum ignominia victus diſcederem; cauſa denique ſpecioſa atque plauſibilis, inveterata vulgi opinio, ſive ſuperſtitio dicenda potiùs eſt, & propenſus in regium nomen favor Salmaſio vires & ſpiritus addiderat; eadem omnia contra me fecêre, quo magìs eſt mirandum, quamprimum reſponſio noſtra prodiit, non ſi à pleriſque avidè arriperetur, videre geſtientibus ecquis tam præceps animi eſſet ut auderet cum Salmaſio confligere, ſed tam eſſe placitam multis atque gratam, ut, non authoris, ſed ipſius veritatis ratione habitâ, qui modò ſummo in honore fuerat Salmaſius, nunc quaſi detractâ, ſub qua latuerat, perſonâ, & exiſtimatione, & animo repentè caderet; ſéque aſſerere, tametſi omnibus nervis id agens, quoad vixit poſtea non valuerit. Te verò, ſereniſſima Suecorum regina, tuúmque illud acre judicium fallere haud diu potuit; tu veritatis partium ſtudiis anteferendæ, Princeps atque Author propè dicam cœleſtis extitiſti. Quamvis enim illum hominem eximiæ doctrinæ fama, cauſæque regiæ patrocinio tunc temporis longè omnium celeberrimum, à te invitatum, multis honoribus affeciſſes, tamen prodeunte illo reſponſo, & ſingulari æquanimitate abs te perlecto, poſtquam vanitatis & apertiſſimæ corruptelæ redargutum Salmaſium, multa leviter, multa immoderatè, falſa quædam, adverſùs ſeipſum alia, & prioribus ſententiis contraria diſſeruiſſe animadverteras, ad quæ, coram accitus, ut ferunt, quod ſatis reſponderet nihil habuit, ita palàm animo affecta es, ut ab illo tempore neque hominem, ut antea, colere, neque ejus ingenium aut doctrinam magni facere, &, quod erat planè inopinatum, ejus adverſario propenſiùs favere, omnes te intelligerent. Quod enim erat in tyrannos dictum, negabas id ad te ullo modo pertinere: unde & apud te fructum, & apud alios famam rectiſſimæ conſcientiæ adepta es. Cùm enim tua facta ſatis declarent, tyrannum te non eſſe, hæc tua tam aperta animi ſignificatio adhuc clariùs demonſtrabat, te ejus rei ne omnino quidem tibi eſſe conſciam. O me ſpe meâ omni feliciorem! ( Eloquentiam enim, niſi quæ in ipſa veritate Suada eſt, nullam mihi ſumo ) qui, cùm in ea patriæ tempora incidiſſem, ut neceſſe eſſet in cauſa tam ardua támque invidioſa verſari, ut jus omne regium impugnare viderer, tam illuſtrem, tam verè regiam nactus ſim integritatis meæ teſtem atque interpretem, nullum me verbum feciſſe contra reges, ſed contra regum labes ac peſtes duntaxat tyrannos. Te verò magnanimam, Auguſta, te tutam undique divinâ planè virtute ac ſapientiâ munitam! quæ quod in jus tuum ac dignitatem poterat videri ſcriptum, non ſolùm tam æquo animo atque ſedato, tam incredibili mentis candore, vultúſque verâ ſerenitate perlegere ſuſtinuiſti; ſed contra ipſum Patronum tuum ejuſmodi ſententiam ferre, ut ejus adverſario palmam etiam adjudicare à pleriſque exiſtimeris. Quo te honore, quâ te veneratione, Regina, proſequi ſemper debuero, cujus excelſa virtus ac magnitudo animi non tibi ſolùm glorioſa, ſed mihi etiam tam fauſta atque fortunata, & ſuſpicione me omni atque infamiâ apud alios reges liberavit, & præclaro ac immortali hoc beneficio tibi in perpetuum devinxit. Quàm bene de æquitate tua, déque juſtitia & ſentire exteri, & ſentire & ſperare ſemper tui populi debebunt, qui, cùm tua res ac majeſtas ipſa agi videretur, tam nihil turbatam te de tuo haud minùs placidè, quàm de populi jure ſoles, judicantem viderunt. Jam tu quidem haud temerè, tot conquiſita undique volumina, tot literarum monumenta congeſſiſti, non quaſi te illa quicquam docere, ſed ut ex illis tui cives te diſcere, tuæque virtutis ac ſapientiæ præſtantiam contemplari poſſint; cujus ipſa Divæ ſpecies, niſi tuo animo penitùs inſediſſet, & quaſi oculis conſpiciendam ſe tibi præbuiſſet, haud ulla profectò librorum lectione, tam incredibiles amores excitâſſet in te ſui : quò magìs illum mentis tuæ vigorem planè æthereum & quaſi puriſſimam divinæ auræ partem in illas ultimas regiones delapſam admiramur; quam neque cœlum illud triſte ac nubiloſum ullis frigoribus extinguere aut gravare, neque ſolum illud horridum ac ſalebroſum, quod & ingenia quoque incolarum haud rarò indurat, quicquam in te inæquale aut aſperum creare potuit: quin & ipſa terra illa, tot metallis fæcunda, ſi aliis noverca, tibi certè alma parens, te ſummis enixa viribus totam auream produxiſſe videtur. Dicerem Adolphi filiam invicti atque inclyti regis unicam prolem, niſi tu illi, Chriſtina, tantum præluceres, quantum viribus ſapientia, belli artibus pacis ſtudia præcellunt. Jam inde profectò regina Auſtri haud ſola celebrabitur: habet nunc & ſeptentrio reginam ſuam, & dignam ſanè quæ non modò ſapientiſſimum illum Judæorum regem, aut ſiquis unquam ſimilis futurus eſſet, auditum proficiſceretur, ſed ad quam alii tanquam ad clariſſimum regalium virtutum exemplar, & viſendam omnibus Heroinam, undique concurrant: nullùmque in terris faſtigium par eſſe ejus laudibus ac meritis fateantur, in qua minimum hoc eſſe videant, quòd ſit Regina, tot gentium monarcha. Non autem hoc minimum, quòd etiam hoc eſſe decorum ſuorum minimum ipſa ſentiat, aliúdque longè majus atque ſublimius meditetur, quàm regnare; hoc ipſo nomine innumeris regibus præponenda. Poteſt itaque, ſi ea manet Suecorum gentem calamitas, regnum abdicare, Reginam deponere nunquam poteſt, non Sueciæ ſed totius orbis terrarum dignam ſe imperio teſtata.

In has digreſſum me Reginæ meritiſſimas laudes, nemo eſt, opinor, qui non collaudet, nedum reprehendat; quas ego quidem ſine ſumma ingratitudinis culpa, vel aliis tacentibus, prætermittere non potui; qui neſcio quâ meâ ſorte, ſanè feliciſſimâ, aut ſi quis eſt occultus vel ſiderum, vel animorum, vel rerum conſenſus aut moderamen, tantam arbitram quam omnium minimè ſperabam, omnium maximè optabam, tam mihi æquam & faventem in ultimis terris repererim. Nunc ad relictum opus, longè quidem diverſiſſimum, redeundum tamen eſt. Infremuiſſe, aìs, nos ad Defenſionis regiæ famam; diſpexiſſe igitur Grammaticaſtrum aliquem famelicum, qui venalem calamum parricidii patrocinio vellet commodare. Hæc abs te malitioſiſſimè ficta ſunt, ex quo memineras, regios, cum ſuis mendaciis ac maledicentiæ præconem diſpicerent, adiiſſe Grammaticum, ſi non famelicum, certè auri plus nimio ſitientem Salmaſium; qui non ſolùm præſentem operam ſuam, ſed bonam quoqe mentem, ſi quam priùs habuit, illis libentiſſimè vendidit; ex quo memineras Salmaſium, famâ jam deploratâ atque perditâ, cum diſpiceret, qui exiſtimationem afflictam atque obtritam, quoquo modo reparare quiret, te inveniſſe juſto Dei judicio, non, unde excuſſus es, miniſtrum Geneven ſem, ſed epiſcopum Lapmſacenum, id eſt, ex horto Priapum, ſuæ domûs conſtupratorem; unde & inſulſiſſimas laudes, tanto cum dedecore emptas averſatus, & ex amico inimiciſſimus factus, tibi laudatori ſuo, multa moriens imprecatus eſt. Unus inventus eſt, magnus ſcilicet Heros, quem Salmaſio opponerent, Joannes Miltonus. Ego Heroëm me eſſe neſciebam, tu Heroïs cujuſpiam fortè filius per me ſis licèt; totus enim noxa es. Atque unum me eſſe inventum, qui cauſam populi Anglicani tuear, ſi reipublicæ rationes cogito, ſanè quàm doleo, ſi laudem, ejus participem habere me neminem facilè patior. Quis & unde ſim dubium ais eſſe. Tam olim erat dubium quis Homerus, quis Demoſthenes. Equidem tacere diu, & poſſe non ſcribere, quod nunquam potuit Salmaſius, didiceram; eáque in ſinu geſtabam tacitus, quæ ſi tum proferre libuiſſet, æquè ac nunc, inclaruiſſe jamdudum poteram: ſed cunctantis famæ avidus non eram, ne hæc quidem, niſi idoneâ datâ occaſione unquam prolaturus; nihil laborans etſi alii me quæcunque nôſſem ſcire neſciebant; non enim famam ſed opportunitatem cujuſque rei præſtolabar; unde factum eſt, ut multò ante plurimis eſſem notus, quàm Salmaſius notus eſſet ſibi; nunc Andremone notior eſt caballo. Homóne an vermis. Equidem malim me vermem eſſe, quod fatetur de ſe etiam rex Davides, quàm tuum vermem in pectore nunquam moriturum intùs celare. Aiunt, inquis, hominem Cantabrigienſi Academia ob flagitia pulſum, dedecus & patriam fugiſſe, & in Italiam commigraſſe. Vel hinc licebit conjicere quàm veraces illi fuerint, ex quibus res noſtras auditione accepiſti; hîc enim & te & illos impudentiſſimè mentiri & nôrunt omnes qui me nôrunt, & ſtatim ampliùs oſtendam. Pulſus verò Cantabrigiâ, cur in Italiam potiùs quàm in Galliam aut Hollandiam commigrarem? ubi tu tot flagitiis co-opertus, Miniſter Evangelii, non modò impunè vivis, ſed concionaris, ſed ſacra etiam miniſteria, ſummo cum illius Eccleſiæ opprobrio, inquinatiſſimis manibus conſpurcas. Cur verò in Italiam, More? novus credo Saturnus, ut alicubi laterem, in Latium ſcilicet profugi. Verùm ego Italiam, non, ut tu putas, facinoroſorum latibulum aut aſylum, ſed humanitatis potiùs, & civilium doctrinarum omnium hoſpitium & noveram antea, & expertus ſum. Reverſus librum de divortiis conſcripſit. Non aliud ſcripſi atque ante me Bucerus de regno Chriſti copioſè, Fagius in Deuteronomium, Eraſmus in Epiſtolam primam ad Corinthios deditâ operâ in Anglorum gratiam, aliíque multi percelebres viri, in commune bonum ſcripſerunt. Quod in illis nemo reprehendit, cur id mihi præ cæteris fraudi eſſet, non intelligo: vellem hoc tantùm, ſermone vernaculo me non ſcripſiſſe; non enim in vernas lectores incidiſſem; quibus ſolenne eſt ſua bona ignorare, aliorum mala irridere. Téne verò, turpiſſime, de divortiis obſtrepere, qui cum Pontia ancilla tibi deſponſata, poſt ſtuprum eo obtentu illatum, immaniſſimum omnium divortium feciſti? Et tamen erat illa Salmaſii famula, Anglica, ut fertur, fœmina, regiis partibus apprimè dedita; nempe hoc erat, ſcelerate, adamâſti ut rem regiam, reliquiſti ut rem publicam, cujus tamen converſionis, quam odiſſe adeo vis videri, vide ne ipſe author fueris; vide inquam ne ſubverſa funditus dominatione Salmaſiana Pontiam ipſe in rem publicam converteris. Et hoc modo multas tu quidem una in urbe res publicas, regius licet, aut fundaſſe diceris aut ab aliis fundatas miniſter publicus adminiſtrare. Hæc tua ſunt divortia, ſeu mavis, diverticula, unde in me Curius prodiiſti. Ad mendacia nunc redis. Cum de regis capite inter conjuratos ageretur, ſcripſit ad eos, & nutantes in malam partem impulit. Ego vero neque ad eos ſcripſi, neque impellere attinebat, quibus id omnino agere ſine me deliberatum jam erat: verùm ea de re quid ſcripſerim, infrà dicetur, uti etiam de Iconoclaſte. Nunc quoniam iſte (Hominem an dicam hæreo purgamentum potiùs hominis) ab ancillarum adulteriis ad adulterandam omnem veritatem progreſſus, congeſtis in me tot una ſerie mendaciis, apud exteros infamem reddere conatus eſt, peto ne quis rem ſecùs interpretetur, aut in invidiam trahat, néve moleſtè ferat, ſi de me plura quàm vellem & dixi ſuprà, & porrò dicam: ut ſi oculos à cæcitate, nomen ab oblivione aut calumnia non poſſum, vitam tamen poſſim ab ea ſaltem obſcuritate quæ cum macula ſit, in lucem vindicare. Idque non unam ob cauſam mihi erit neceſſariò faciendum. Primùm ut tot viros bonos atque doctos, qui per omnes vicinas gentes noſtra jam legunt, deque me haud malè ſentiunt, ne propter hujus maledicta mei pœniteat; verùm ita ſibi perſuadeant non eum eſſe me, qui honeſtam orationem inhoneſtis moribus, aut liberè dicta, ſerviliter factis unquam dedecorârim; vitámque noſtram, Deo bene juvante, ab omni turpitudine ac flagitio remotam longè ſemper fuiſſe: deinde, ut quos laudandos mihi ſumo viros illuſtres ac laude dignos, hi ſciant nihil me pudendum magis exiſtimare, quàm ſi ad eorum laudes vituperandus ipſe ac nequam accederem; ſciat denique populus Anglicanus, quem ut defenderem, meum ſive fatum ſive officium, ſua virtus impulit, ſi vitam pudenter atque honeſtè ſemper egi, meam defenſionem, neſcio an honori aut ornamento, certè pudori aut dedecori nunquam ſibi fore: qui igitur, & unde ſim, nunc dicam. Londini ſum natus, genere honeſto, patre viro integerrimo, matre probatiſſima, & eleemoſynis per viciniam potiſſimum nota. Pater me puerulum humaniorum literarum ſtudiis deſtinavit; quas ita avidè arripui, ut ab anno ætatis duodecimo vix unquam ante mediam noctem à lucubrationibus cubitum diſcederem; quæ prima oculorum pernicies fuit: quorum ad naturalem debilitatem acceſſerant & crebri capitis dolores; quæ omnia cum diſcendi impetum non retardarent, & in ludo literario, & ſub aliis domi magiſtris erudiendum quotidie curavit: ita variis inſtructum linguis, & percepta haud leviter philoſophiæ dulcedine, ad Gymnaſium gentis alterum, Cantabrigiam miſit: Illic diſciplinis atque artibus tradi ſolitis ſeptennium ſtudui; procul omni flagitio, bonis omnibus probatus, uſquedum Magiſtri, quem vocant, gradum, cum laude etiam adeptus, non in Italiam, quod impurus ille comminiſcitur, profugi, ſed ſponte meâ domum me contuli, meíque etiam deſiderium, apud Collegii pleróſque ſocios à quibus eram haud mediocriter cultus, reliqui. Paterno rure, quo is tranſigendæ ſenectutis cauſâ conceſſerat, evolvendis Græcis Latiníſque ſcriptoribus ſummum per otium totus vacavi; ita tamen ut nonnunquam, rus urbe mutarem, aut coëmendorum gratia librorum, aut novum quidpiam in Mathematicis, vel in Muſicis, quibus tum oblectabar, addiſcendi. Exacto in hunc modum quinquennio, poſt matris obitum, regiones exteras, & Italiam potiſſimùm, videndi cupidus, exorato patre, uno cum famulo profectus ſum. Abeuntem vir clariſſimus Henricus Woottonus, qui ad Venetos Orator Jacobi regis diu fuerat, & votis & præceptis, eunti peregrè ſanè utiliſſimis, eleganti epiſtolâ perſcriptis, me amiciſſimè proſequutus eſt. Commendatum ab aliis nobiliſſimus vir Thomas Scudamorus Vicecomes Slegonenſis, Caroli regis Legatus, Pariſiis humaniſſimè accepit; méque Hugoni Grotio viro eruditiſſimo, ab Regina Suecorum tunc temporis ad Galliæ regem Legato, quem inviſere cupiebam, ſuo nomine, & ſuorùm uno atque altero deducente, commendavit: Diſcedenti poſt dies aliquot Italiam verſùs, literas ad mercatores Anglos, quà iter eram factùrus, dedit, ut quibus poſſent officiis mihi præſtò eſſent. Nicæâ ſolvens, Genuam perveni; mox Liburnum & Piſas, inde Florentiam. Illa in urbe, quam præ cæteris propter elegantiam cum linguæ tum ingeniorum ſemper colui, ad duos circiter menſes ſubſtiti; illic multorum & nobilium ſanè & doctorum hominum familiaritatem ſtatim contraxi; quorum etiam privatas academias (qui mos illic, cum ad literas humaniores, tum ad amicitias conſervandas laudatiſſimus eſt) aſſiduè frequentavi. Tui enim Jacobe Gaddi, Carole Dati, Freſcobalde, Cultelline, Bonmatthæi, Clementille, Francine, aliorúmque plurium memoriam, apud me ſemper gratam atque jucundam, nulla dies delebit. Florentia Senas, inde Romam profectus, poſtquam illius urbis antiquitas & priſca fama me ad bimeſtre ferè ſpatium tenuiſſet (ubi & Luca Holſtenio, aliiſque viris cum doctis tum ingenioſis, ſum uſus humaniſſimis) Neapolim perrexi: Illìc per Eremitam quendam, quîcum Roma iter feceram, ad Joannem Baptiſtam Manſum, Marchionem Villenſem, virum nobiliſſimum atque graviſſimum (ad quem Torquatus Taſſus inſignis poeta Italus de amicitia ſcripſit) ſum introductus; eodémque uſus, quamdiu illic fui, ſanè amiciſſimo; qui & ipſe me per urbis loca & Proregis aulam circumduxit, & viſendi gratia haud ſemel ipſe ad hoſpitium venit: Diſcedenti ſeriò excuſavit ſe, tametſi multò plura detuliſſe mihi officia maximè cupiebat, non potuiſſe illa in urbe, propterea quòd nolebam in religione eſſe tectior. In Siciliam quoque & Græciam trajicere volentem me, triſtis ex Anglia belli civilis nuntius revocavit: Turpe enim exiſtimabam, dum mei cives domi de libertate dimicarent, me animi causâ otioſè peregrinari. Romam autem reverſurum, monebant Mercatores ſe didiciſſe per literas parari mihi ab Jeſuitis Anglis inſidias, ſi Romam reverterem; eò quod de religione nimis liberè loquutus eſſem. Sic enim mecum ſtatueram, de religione quidem iis in locis ſermones ultro non inferre; interrogatus de fide, quicquid eſſem paſſurus, nihil diſſimulare. Romam itaque nihilo minùs redii: Quid eſſem, ſi quis interrogabat, neminem celavi; ſi quis adoriebatur, in ipſa urbe Pontificis, alteros prope duos menſes, Orthodoxam Religionem, ut antea, liberrimè tuebar: Deóque ſic volente, incolumis Florentiam rurſus perveni; haud minùs mei cupientes reviſens, ac ſi in patriam revertiſſem. Illic totidem, quot priùs, menſes libenter commoratus, niſi quod ad paucos dies Luccam excucurri, tranſcenſo Apennino, per Bononiam & Ferraram, Venetias contendi. Cui urbi luſtrandæ cum menſem unum impendiſſem, & libros, quos per Italiam conquiſiveram, in navem imponendos curâſſem, per Veronam ac Mediolanum, & Pæninas Alpes, Lacu denique Lemanno, Genevam delatus ſum. Quæ urbs, cùm in mentem mihi hinc veniat Mori calumniatoris, facit ut Deum hìc rurſus teſtem invocem, me his omnibus in locis, ubi tam multa licent, ab omni flagitio ac probro integrum atque intactum vixiſſe, illud perpetuò cogitantem, ſi hominum latere oculos poſſem, Dei certè non poſſe. Genevæ cum Joanne Deodato, Theologiæ profeſſore doctiſſimo, quotidianus verſabar. Deinde eodem itinere, quo priùs, per Galliam, poſt annum & tres plus minus menſes in patriam revertor; eodem ferme tempore quo Carolus cum Scotis, ruptâ pace, bellum alterum quod vocant Epiſcopale, redintegrabat; in quo fuſis primo congreſſu regiis copiis, cùm videret etiam omnes Anglos, & meritò quidem, in ſe peſſimè animatos, malo coactus, non ſponte, Parlamentum haud ita multò poſt, convocavit. Ipſe, ſicubi poſſem, tam rebus turbatis & fluctuantibus, locum conſiſtendi circumſpiciens, mihi libríſque meis, ſat amplam in urbe domum conduxi; ibi ad intermiſſa ſtudia beatulus me recepi; rerum exitu Deo imprimis, & quibus id muneris populus dabat, facilè permiſſo. Interea Parlamento rem ſtrenuè gerente, Epiſcoporum faſtus detumuit. Ut primùm loquendi ſaltem cæpta eſt libertas concedi, omnia in Epiſcopos aperiri ora; alii de ipſorum vitiis, alii de ipſius ordinis vitio conqueri; iniquum eſſe, ſe ſolos ab Eccleſiis omnibus, quotquot reformatæ ſunt, diſcrepare; exemplo fratrum, ſed maximè ex verbo Dei, gubernari Eccleſiam convenire. Ad hæc ſanè experrectus, cùm veram affectari viam ad libertatem cernerem, ab his initiis, his paſſibus, ad liberandam ſervitute vitam omnem mortalium, rectiſſimè, procedi, ſi ab religione diſciplina orta, ad mores & inſtituta reipublicæ emanaret, cùm etiam me ita ab adoleſcentia parâſſem, ut quid divini, quid humani eſſet juris, ante omnia poſſem non ignorare, méque conſuluiſſem ecquando ullius uſus eſſem futurus, ſi nunc patriæ, immo verò eccleſiæ tótque fratribus evangelii causâ, periculo ſeſe objicientibus deeſſem, ſtatui, etſi tunc alia quædam meditabar, huc omne ingenium, omnes induſtriæ vires transferre. Primùm itaque de reformanda eccleſia Anglicana, duos ad amicum quendam libros conſcripſi: Deinde, cum duo præ cæteris magni nominis Epiſcopi ſuum jus contra Miniſtros quoſdam primarios aſſererent, ratus de iis rebus, quas amore ſolo veritatis, & ex officii Chriſtiani ratione didiceram haud pejùs me dicturum quàm qui de ſuo quæſtu & injuſtiſſimo dominatu contendebant, ad hunc libris duobus, quorum unus de Epiſcopatu prælatico, alter de ratione Diſciplinæ Eccleſiaſticæ inſcribitur, ad illum, ſcriptis quibuſdam animadverſionibus, & mox Apologia, reſpondi; & miniſtris facundiam hominis, ut ferebatur ægrè ſuſtinentibus, ſuppetias tuli; & ab eo tempore, ſi quid poſtea reſponderent, interſui. Cùm petiti omnium telis Epiſcopi tandem cecidiſſent, otiúmque ab illis eſſet, verti aliò cogitationes; ſi qua in re poſſem libertatis veræ ac ſolidæ rationem promovere; quæ non foris, ſed intus quærenda, non pugnando, ſed vitam rectè inſtituendo, rectéque adminiſtrando adipiſcenda potiſſimùm eſt. Cùm itaque tres omnino animadverterem libertatis eſſe ſpecies, quæ niſi adſint, vita ulla tranſigi commodè vix poſſit, Eccleſiaſticam, domeſticam ſeu privatam, atque civilem, déque prima jam ſcripſiſſem, déque tertia Magiſtratum ſedulò agere viderem, quæ reliqua ſecunda erat, domeſticam mihi deſumpſi; ea quoque tripartita, cùm videretur eſſe, ſi res conjugalis, ſi liberorum inſtitutio rectè ſe haberet, ſi denique liberè philoſophandi poteſtas eſſet, de conjugio non ſolùm ritè contrahendo, verùm etiam, ſi neceſſe eſſet, diſſolvendo, quid ſentirem explicui; ídque ex divina lege, quam Chriſtus non ſuſtulit, nedum aliam, tota lege Moſaïca graviorem civiliter ſanxit; quid item de excepta ſolùm fornicatione ſentiendum ſit, & meam aliorúmque ſententiam exprompſi, & clariſſimus vir Seldenus noſter, in Uxore Hebræâ plùs minùs biennio pòſt editâ, uberiùs demonſtravit. Fruſtrà enim libertatem in comitiis & foro crepat, qui domi ſervitutem viro indigniſſimam, inferiori etiam ſervit; ea igitur de re aliquot libros edidi; eo præſertim tempore cùm vir ſæpè & conjux hoſtes inter ſe acerrimi, hic domi cum liberis, illa in caſtris hoſtium materfamilias verſaretur, viro cædem atque perniciem minitans. Inſtitutionem deinde liberorum uno opuſculo breviùs quidem tractabam; ſed quod ſatis arbitrabar iis fore, qui ad eam rem, quâ par eſſet diligentiâ, incumberent; quâ quidem re, nihil ad imbuendas, unde vera atque interna oritur libertas, virtute hominum mentes, nihil ad rempublicam bene gerendam, & quam diutiſſimè conſervandam majus momentum poteſt afferre. Poſtremò de typographia liberanda, ne veri & falſi arbitrium, quid edendum, quid premendum, penès paucos eſſet, eóſque ferè indoctos, & vulgaris judicii homines, librorum inſpectioni præpoſitos, per quos nemini ferè quicquam quod ſupra vulgus ſapiat, in lucem emittere, aut licet aut libet, ad juſtæ orationis modum Areopagiticam ſcripſi. Civilem, quæ poſtrema ſpecies reſtabat, non attigeram; quam Magiſtratui ſatis curæ eſſe cernebam: Neque de jure regio quicquam à me ſcriptum eſt, donec Rex hoſtis à Senatu judicatus, bellóque victus, cauſam captivus apud Judices diceret, capitíſque damnatus eſt. Tum verò tandem, cùm Presbyteriani quidam Miniſtri, Carolo priùs infeſtiſſimi, nunc Independentium partes ſuis anteferri, & in Senatu plus poſſe indignantes, Parlamenti ſententiæ de Rege latæ (non facto irati, ſed quod ipſorum factio non feciſſet) reclamitarent, & quantum in ipſis erat, tumultuarentur, auſi affirmare Proteſtantium doctrinam, omnéſque eccleſias reformatas ab ejuſmodi in reges atroci ſententiâ abhorrere, ratus falſitati tam apertæ palàm eundum obviàm eſſe, ne tum quidem de Carolo quicquam ſcripſi aut ſuaſi, ſed quid in genere contra tyrannos liceret, adductis haud paucis ſummorum Theologorum teſtimoniis, oſtendi; & inſignem hominum meliora profitentium, ſive ignorantiam ſive impudentiam propè concionabundus inceſſi. Liber iſte non niſi poſt mortem Regis prodiit, ad componendos potiùs hominum animos ſactus, quàm ad ſtatuendum de Carolo quicquam quod non mea, ſed Magiſtratuum intererat, & peractum jam tum erat. Hanc intra privatos parietes meam operam nunc eccleſiæ, nunc reipublicæ gratìs dedi ; mihi viciſſim vel hæc vel illa præter incolumitatem nihil ; bonam certè conſcientiam, bonam apud bonos exiſtimationem,& honeſtam hanc dicendi libertatem facta ipſa reddidere: Commoda alii, alii honores gratìs ad ſe trahebant : Me nemo ambientem, nemo per amicos quicquam petentem, curiæ foribus affixum petitorio vultu, aut minorum conventuum veſtibulis hærentem nemo me unquam vidit. Domi fere me continebam, meis ipſe facultatibus, tametſi hoc civili tumultu magna ex parte ſæpe detentis, & cenſum ferè iniquiùs mihi impoſitum, & vitam utcunque frugi tolerabam. His rebus confectis, cùm jam abundè otii exiſtimarem mihi futurum, ad hiſtoriam gentis, ab ultima origine repetitam, ad hæc uſque tempora, ſi poſſem, perpetuo filo deducendam me converti : Quatuor jam libros abſolveram, cum ecce nihil tale cogitantem me, Caroli regno in rempublicam redacto, Concilium Statûs, quod dicitur, tum primùm authoritate Parlamenti conſtitutum, ad ſe vocat, meâque operâ ad res præſertim externas uti voluit. Prodiit haud multò poſt attributus Regi liber, contra Parlamentum invidioſiſſimè ſane ſcriptus : Huic reſpondere juſſus, Iconi Iconoclaſten oppoſui ; non regiis manibus inſultans, ut inſimulor, ſed reginam veritatem regi Carolo anteponendam arbitratus ; immo cum præviderem hanc calumniam cuivis maledico in promptu fore, ipſo exordio, & ſæpe aliàs, quoad licuit, à me iſtam invidiam ſum amolitus. Prodiit deinde Salmaſius ; cui quis reſponderet, adeò non diu, quòd ait Morus, diſpiciebant, ut me in concilio tum etiam præſentem ſtatim omnes ultro nominarent. Hactenus ad obturandum os tuum, More & mendacia redarguenda bonorum maximè virorum in gratiam, qui me aliàs non nôrint, meî rationem reddidi. Tu igitur, More, tibi dico immunde, φιμώθητι, obmuteſce inquam ; quo enim magis mihi maledixeris, eo me rationes meas uberiùs explicare coëgeris ; ex quo aliud lucrari nihil poteris, quàm ut tibi mendaciorum opprobrium adhuc gravius concilies, mihi ad integritatis commendationem eo latiùs viam aperias. Reprehenderam ego Salmaſium, quòd extraneum ſe & alienigenam rebus noſtris immiſcuiſſet : Tu inſtas, ad eos qui ad Angliam non pertinent, hanc defenſionem maxime pertinere. Quid enim? Poſſint, inquis, Angli exiſtimari ſtudio partium acriùs agere ; Gallos verò conſentaneum eſt rei, non hominum, rationem habuiſſe. Ad hæc eadem quæ priùs regero ; externum & longinquum, qualis tu es, in alienas res præſertim turbatas, immerſurum ſe neminem niſi corruptum ; Salmaſium prius demonſtravi mercede conductum ; te conſtat per Salmaſium & Arauſionenſes profeſſoriam cathedram petiiſſe ; deinde, quod fædius eſt, exagitas Parlamentum, & ſubagitas Pontiam. Quam autem affers rationem, cur hæc ad exteros potius pertinerent, deridicula prorſus eſt ; ſi enim Angli partium ſtudiis feruntur, quid vos aliud, qui illos ſolos ſequimini, quàm eorum affectus duntaxat in vos transfertis ? Adeò ut, ſi Anglis illis credendum in ſua cauſa non eſt, vobis profectò ſit multò minus ; qui rerum noſtrarum nihil intelligitis, aut ſaltem creditis, niſi quas ab ipſis accepiſtis quibus, veſtrâ quoque ſententiâ, vix eſt credendum. Hìc rurſum effundis te in laudem magni Salmaſii : Magnus ſanè tibi fuit, quem tu quaſi pro lenone habuiſti ancillæ ſuæ ; laudas tamen ; at is te non laudat, immo ante mortem palàm eſt abominatus, ſéque ipſe millies incuſavit, quod Spanhemio graviſſimo Theologo, de te, quàm impius eſſes, non crediddiſſet. Nunc totus in rabiem verſus rationi quaſi renuntias ; Jamdudum ratione ſcilicet defunctus eſt Salmaſius. Tu clamandi tantum & furendi partes tibi depoſcis, & tamen primas in maledicendo etiam tribuis Salmaſio ; non quia verbis ſævit, ſed quia Salmaſius. Ω σπερμολόγε ! Has nempe argutias morigeranti debemus Pontiæ. Hinc clamor tuus argutari atque etiam minurizare didicit ; hinc minitabundus quoque, experiemini, inquis, aliquando, fœdiſſima bellua, quid ſtyli potuerint. Téne experiemur, ancillariole, tène mœche, aut ſtylum tuum, ancillis tantummodo metuendum ? Cui ſi quis raphanum aut mugilem ſolùm intenderit, actum mehercule præclarè tecum putes, ſi nate non fiſſa & incolumi ſtylo iſto ſalaci tuo queas aufugere. Equidem non adeo ſum, inquis, vacui capitis ut Provinciam à Salmaſio ſuſceptam aggrediar : Quam ille quidem ſine capite admodum vacuo, nunquam aggreſſus fuiſſet ; feſtivè tu quidem vacuitate capitis, magnum Salmaſium tibi anteponis. At regii ſanguinis clamorem ad cœlum tollere quod ineruditi etiam debent: hoc nempe tuum eſſe ais. Clama, vociferare, boa; perge hypocritari, ſancta verba uſurpare, & Priapeïa vivere: Exurget, mihi crede, aliquando quem inclamas toties ultionum Deus; exurget, téque imprimis eradicabit, diaboli miniſtrum, & reformatæ eccleſiæ infandum dedecus & luem. Inculpantibus Salmaſii maledicentiam quamplurimis, reſpondes, Sic cum parricidis monſtrorum omnium turpiſſimis, fuiſſe agendum. Laudo; telis enim nôs inſtruis: & quo te pacto, tuóſque perduelles tractari conveniat, commodus doces, nóſq; ipſe abſolvis. Nunc quando ratione nihil potes, ne audes quidem occupatum ab Salmaſio jus omne regium, & quicquid eſt in eo rationis cauſatus, à contumeliis & rabie ad narrationes quaſdam miſerabiles converſus, expers rationis, inſtitutos ab initio clamores tantùm perſequeris: quas partim Salmaſianas recoxiſti, partim ex elencho illo ἐλεγχιστῶ anonymo, qui non patriâ ſolùm ſed nomine etiam profugit, deſcriptas interpolâſti: quarum ad præcipua capita, vel in Iconoclaſte, vel in Salmaſianis ita jam reſpondi, ut citra modum Hiſtoriæ, reſponderi ampliùs poſſe non putem. Sempérne ego ut identidem eandem orbitam teram, & ad Balatronis cujuſque ſtridorem dicta toties cogar iterare? non faciam; neq; meâ ſic abutar vel operâ vel otio. Si quis conductitios ejulatus, & compoſitos vænaliſſimi hominis ploratus, ſi quis declamatiunculas, quas etiam ancillaris concubitus, adulterinas edixit & ſpurias, Morilli nothi gemellas, fide ſatis locupletes, arbitratur eſſe, ad me quod attinet, nihil quidem moror, quo minùs ita exiſtimet; neque enim eſt ut ab ejuſmodi credulo ac temerario metuendum nobis quicquam ſit: attingam tamen pauca, multorum inſtar, ex quibus tam quis ipſe, quàm quid dicat, & quid de reliquo judicandum ſit, ſummatim intelligetis. Poſtquam de camera plebis & camera procerum, ad unum redigenda, multa exoticus deblateravit (quod poſtulatum nemo ſanus reprehenderet) ut æqualite, inquit, in rempublicam invecta, ad eandem in eccleſiam introducendam procederetur; tunc enim adhuc ſtabant epiſcopi: hic niſi ſit purus putus Anabaptiſmus, nihil video. Quis hoc à Theologo & miniſtro Gallico ſperâſſet unquam? ſanè qui Anabaptiſmus quid ſit, niſi hoc ſit, non videt, eum ego crediderim haud magìs videre quid ſit Baptiſmus. Sed ſi res propriis vocabulis appellare malimus, æqualitas in republica non eſt Anabaptiſmus, ſed Democratia, longè antiquior; in eccleſia præſertim conſtituta, eſt diſciplina Apoſtolica. At enim ſtabant epiſcopi. Fatemur, ſtabant & Genevæ; cum illa civitas & epiſcopum & eundem legitimum principem religionis causâ expulit; quod illis laudi, cur id nobis probro ducitur? ſcio quid tibi vis, More, Genevenſium ſuffragia ultum is; quibus dimiſſus cum ignominia, an ejectus ex illa eccleſia fueris, in dubio eſt. Te ergo cum Salmaſio tuo ab evangelico hoc inſtituto deſciviſſe, & ad epiſcopos tranſfugiſſe, ſi modo refert quo tu transfugeris, apparet. Deinde ad miniſtrorum, inquis, noſtratium æqualitatem reſpublica tranſiit, ut palàm ſit eundem ſpiritum tunc viguiſſe qui octavo demum anno nefando regis parricidio rem peregit. Ergo idem ut videtur ſpiritus & miniſtros conſtituit veſtrates, & parricidium peregit: Perge ut occepiſti, quas par eſt apoſtatam eructare inſanias. Non plures, inquis, tribus libellis ſupplicibus confecerunt, qui in regem animadverti poſtulabant. Quod notum eſt, & ipſe memini falſiſſimum eſſe. Sanè qui has res apud nos memoriæ mandarunt, non tres tantummodo libellos iſtiuſmodi, ſed multos ex diverſis Angliæ provinciis, exercitúſque legionibus unius ferè menſis ſpatio, tres uno die allatos fuiſſe memorant. Vides quanta cum gravitate hac de re deliberaverit Senatus, cujus cunctationem Populus lenitatis nimiæ ſuſpectam tot ſupplicibus libellis eximendam putavit. Quot reris millia hominum fuiſſe idem ſentientium, qui Senatum ad id hortari, quod jam tum ſeriò agitabat vel importunum exiſtimarent vel ſupervacaneum? quorum ex numero & ipſe fui, qui tamen quid voluerim obſcurum non eſt. Quid ſi conticuiſſent omnes rei magnitudine perculſi, eóne minùs habuiſſet Senatus in re tanta quod ſtatueret, expectanduſne populi nutus erat, ex quo tantorum exitus conſiliorum penderet? enimverò ſupremum gentis Concilium, ab univerſo populo ea mente adhibitum, ut impotentem regis dominatum coerceret, poſteaquam efferatum & repugnantem bello cepiſſet, ſi recurrere ad juſſa populi deberet, velit jubeátne de captivo hoſte ſupplicium ſumi, profectò qui rempublicam fortiſſimè recuperaſſent, quid aliud feciſſe viderentur quàm in laqueos tyranni à populo, ſi fors ita ferret, abſoluti ſeſe præcipites dediſſe? aut ſi accepta maximis de rebus decernendi ſumma poteſtate, de iis quæ præſertim vulgi captum ſuperant, non dico ad populum (nam cum hac poteſtate ipſi populus jam ſunt) ſed ad multitudinem rurſus referre cogerentur quæ imperitiæ ſuæ, conſcia ad eos prius omnia retulerat, quis ultro citróque referendi finis eſſet? quis tandem in hoc Euripo conſiſtendi locus? quod firmamentum inter libellos iſtiuſmodi tot capitum leviſſimorum, quæ ſalus quaſſatis rebus hominum foret? quid ſi reſtituendum regno Carolum poſtulaſſent? cujuſmodi libellos extitiſſe aliquot non ſupplices ſed minaces fatendum eſt ſeditioſorum hominum, quorum nunc odium, nunc miſeratio æquè ſtulta aut malitioſa eſſe ſolebat; horúmne ratio habenda fuit? qui ut cum Regè colloquium inſtitueretur, ingenti, inquis, numero pagis relictis ad Parlamenti fores accurrebant; quorum Senatores, immiſſo milite, plurimos trucidarunt. Et Surrienſes dicis paganos, qui neſcio aliorúmne malitia, agreſtes ipſi, an ſua improbitate impulſi, cum libello ſupplice bene poti, & comeſſabundi potiùs, quam aliquid petituri, per urbem ibant; mox curiæ fores facto agmine, ferociter obſederunt; collocatos ibi milites ſtationibus deturbarunt, unum ad ipſas curiæ fores occiderunt, priuſquam illos vel dicto vel facto quiſquam laceſſiſſet: inde meritò pulſi ac malè multati, haud ultra duos tréſve occiſi, vinolentiam potiùs quàm libertatem ſpirantes. Paſſim concedis potiores fuiſſe Independentium partes, non numero, ſed conſilio & virtute militari. Unde ego & jure & merito ſuperiores quoque fuiſſe contendo: nihil enim eſt naturæ convenientius, nihil juſtius, nihil humano generi utilius aut melius, quàm ut minor majori, non numerus numero, ſed virtus virtuti, conſilium conſilio cedat; qui prudentiâ, qui rerum uſu, induſtriâ, atque virtute pollent, hi meâ quidem ſententiâ, quantumvis pauci, quantovis numero, plures erunt, & ſuffragiis ubique potiores. Multa ſparſim inſeris de Cromuello, quæ cujuſmodi ſint infra videbimus; de reliquis reſponſum jampridem Salmaſio eſt. Judicium quoque Regis non prætermittis, quamvis & illud à magno tuo rhetore miſerabiliter ſit declamatum. Proceres, id eſt, Regis purpuratos, & miniſtros ferè aulicos, à judicando Rege ais abhorruiſſe: Nos id parùm referre, altero libro oſtendimus. Deinde curiarum judices eraſos; quippe qui reſponderant eſſe contra Angliæ leges, Regem judicio ſiſti. Neſcio quid tunc reſponderint, ſcio quid jam approbent atque defendant: non eſt novum, Judices, quos minimè decet, meticuloſos eſſe. Præficitur ergo ſordidæ & ſceleratæ curiæ, par Præſes, obſcuriſſimus & petulantiſſimus nebulo. Te verò tot vitiis & ſceleribus obſtrictum, immo meram ſpurcitiem, merum ſcelus, uſque adeo obduxiſſe menti & ſenſibus callum, niſi tua mens potiùs tota callus eſt, ut in Deum atheus, & ſacrorum contaminator, in homines inhumanus, cujuſque optimi calumniator eſſe auſis, quid aliud eſt eſſe quàm germanum Iſcariotam atq; diabolum? Quamvis autem tua vituperatio laus ſumma ſit, tamen præſtantiſſimo viro cui oblatras, nec non amico mihi ſemper plurimùm colendo, nequaquam deero; quo minus ab improbiſſimis perfugarum & Mororum linguis, quas, niſi cauſa reipublicæ nunquam ſenſiſſet, vindicem. Eſt Joannes Bradſcianus (quod nomen libertas ipſa, quacunq; gentium colitur, memoriæ ſempiternæ celebrandum commendavit) nobili familia, ut ſatis notum eſt, ortus; unde patriis legibus addiſcendis, primam omnem ætatem ſedulò impendit; dein conſultiſſimus cauſarum ac diſertiſſimus patronus, libertatis & populi vindex acerrimus, & magnis reipublicæ negotiis eſt adhibitus, & incorrupti Judicis munere aliquoties perfunctus: Tandem uti Regis judicio præſidere vellet, à Senatu rogatus, provinciam ſanè periculoſiſſimam non recuſavit. Attulerat enim ad legum ſcientiam ingenium liberale, animum excelſum, mores integros ac nemini obnoxios; unde illud munus omni prope exemplo majus ac formidabilius, tot Sicariorum pugionibus ac minis petitus, ita conſtanter, ita graviter, tanta animi cum præſentia ac dignitate geſſit atq; implevit, ut ad hoc ipſum opus, quod jam olim Deus edendum in hoc populo mirabili providentia decreverat, ab ipſo Numine deſignatus atque factus videretur; & Tyrannicidarum omnium gloriam tantum ſuperaverit, quantò eſt humanius, quantò juſtius, ac majeſtate plenius, Tyrannum judicare, quàm injudicatum occidere. Alioqui nec triſtis, nec ſeverus, ſed comis ac placidus, perſonam tamen quam ſuſcepit tantam, æqualis ubique ſibi, ac veluti conſul non unius anni, pari gravitate ſuſtinet: ut non de tribunali tantùm, ſed per omnem vitam judicare Regem diceres. In conſiliis ac laboribus publicis maximè omnium indeſeſſus, multíſque par unus; domi, ſi quis alius, pro ſuis facultatibus hoſpitalis ac ſplendidus, amicus longè fideliſſimus, atque in omni fortuna certiſſimus, bene merentes quoſcunque nemo citiùs aut libentiùs agnoſcit, neque majore benevolentia proſequitur; nunc pios, nunc doctos, aut quavis ingenii laude cognitos, nunc militares etiam & fortes viros ad inopiam redactos ſuis opibus ſublevat; iis ſi non indigent, colit tamen libens atque ampleſtitur; alienas laudes perpetuò prædicare, ſuas tacere ſolitus; hoſtium quoque civilium, ſi quis ad ſanitatem rediit, quod experti ſunt plurimi, nemo ignoſcentior. Quòd ſi cauſa oppreſſi cujuſpiam defendenda palam, ſi gratia aut vis potentiorum oppugnanda, ſi in quenquam bene meritum, ingratitudo publica objurganda ſit, tum quidem in illo viro, vel facundiam vel conſtantiam nemo deſideret, non patronum, non amicum, vel idoneum magis & intrepidum, vel diſertiorem alium quiſquam ſibi optet; habet, quem non minæ dimovere recto, non metus aut munera propoſito bono atque officio, vultúſque ac mentis firmiſſimo ſtatu dejicere valeant. Quibus virtutibus, & pleriſque merito charus, & inimiciſſimis non contemnendus, geſtarum egregiè rerum in republica laudem, dirupto te, More, tuíque ſimilibus, apud omnes tum exteros tum poſteros, in omne ævum propagabit. Sed pergendum, Rex capite damnatus eſt: contra hanc veſaniam Londini pulpita fere omnia detonare. Ligneo iſto tonitru haud multum terres; iſtos Salmoneas nihil veremur, qui fictitium illud fulmen & arrogatum ſibi, aliquando luent; graves profectò authores & ſinceri, qui paulò ante ex iiſdem pulpitis contra Pluraliſtas & Nonreſidentes ſtrepitu æquè horribili detonabant; paulò poſt, raptis hic ſibi ternis, ille quaternis Prælatorum ſacerdotiis, quos tonando abegerant, atque inde nonreſidentes neceſſariò facti, eodem ipſi crimine tenebantur in quod detonabant, & ſui quiſque tonitrus bidental factus eſt: neque ullus adhuc pudor; nunc in vendicandis ſibi decimis toti ſunt; & ſanè ſi decimarum tanta ſitis eſt, cenſeo affatim decimandos: non terræ fructus tantùm, ſed & maris fluctus ſibi habeant decumanos. Iidem primò bellum ſuadebant in Regem, ut in hoſtem exitio devotum; mox capto hoſti, & imputatæ à ſemetipſis toties cædis ac ſanguinis effuſi damnato, parci volebunt utpote regi. Ita in pulpitis tanquam in taberna quadam meritoria, quæ volunt mercimonia, quæ volunt ſcruta, vendunt popello; & quod miſerius eſt, quæ jam vendidere, quoties volunt repoſcunt. At Scoti regem ſibi reddi flagitabant, commemorant Senatus promiſſa quando Anglis regem tradiderant. Atqui ego vel Scotos etiam fatentes habeo, nulla omnino promiſſa publica interceſſiſſe, cum rex traderetur; & turpe ſanè fuiſſet Anglis, regem ſuum à Scotis in Anglia conductitiis, reddendum non fuiſſe niſi per conditiones: quid? quod ipſa Parlamenti reſponſio ad Scotorum cartulas Id. Mart. 1647. edita, ullam hac de re interpoſitam ab ſe fidem, quo pacto rex tractandus eſſet, dilucidè negat; indignum quippe cenſuiſſe, non niſi eâ lege ſua jura obtineri à Scotis potuiſſe. Attamen regem reddi ſibi flagitabant. Mites, credo, homines frangebantur animo, deſiderium ſui regis ferre diutius non poterant: immoverò iidem illi, cum ab initio horum in Britannia motuum, de jure regio haud ſemel in Parlamento retuliſſent, eſſétque ab omnibus aſſenſum, ob tres maximè cauſas regem privari regno poſſe, ſi tyrannus exiſtat, ſi fundum regium alienet, ſi ſuos deſerat, circa annum 1645. Parlamento Perthæ habito ſententias rogare cæperunt, ſitne rex quem ſanctis infeſtum eſſe conſtet, communione eccleſiæ interdicendus? verùm antequam ea de re quicquam decerneretur, Montroſſius ad eam urbem cum copiis accedens conventum diſturbavit. Iidem in ſuo quodam ad Cromuellum Imperatorem reſponſo, An. 1650. fatentur punitum jure regem, juris tantummodo formam fuiſſe vitioſam, eo quòd ipſi in illius judicii conſortium non vocarentur. Hoc ergo facinus ſine illis atrox, cum illis egregium fuiſſet, ex eorum quippe nutu fas atque nefas pendebat, juſtum atque injuſtum definiendum erat: quid iſti, obſecro, rege ſibi reddito lenius in eum ſtatuiſſent? At Delegati Scotici à Senatu Anglico reſponſum hoc prius tulerant, nolle ſe regni Anglicani formam immutare, poſtea tamen reſpondere ſe tunc noluiſſe, nunc velle, prout ſalus reipublica poſtularet. Et rectè quidem reſponderunt: quid tu hinc? hac ſtropha, inquis, omnia fædera, commercium, ipſumque ſenſum communem evertit. Tuum quidem evertit, qui neſcis inter libera promiſſa, & pactam fæderis fidem quid interſit: Angli de forma reipublicæ ſuæ futura, cujus rationem Scotis reddere neceſſe non erat, quod tum ipſis videbatur; liberè quidem reſpondent; nunc ſalus reipublicæ aliud ſuadebat; ſi fidem, ſi jusjurandum populo datum violare nollent. Utrum ſanctius obligare putas, liberúmne de forma reipublicæ futura datum Scoticis legatis reſponſum, an neceſſarium de ſalute reipublicæ procuranda datum ſuo populo jusjurandum & ſummam fidem? Licere autem Parlamento vel Senatui, prout expedit, conſilia mutare, quoniam quicquid nos affirmamus, anabaptiſticum tibi eſt & monſtroſum, malo ex Cicerone audias pro Plancio. ‘Stare omnes debemus tanquam in orbe aliquo reipublicæ; qui quoniam verſetur,

‘ navigium atq; curſum, ex reipublicæ tempeſtate moderari. Ego verò hæc ‘ didici, hæc vidi, hæc ſcripta legi, hæc de ſapientiſſimis & clariſſimis viris & in ‘ hac republica, & in aliis civitatibus monumenta nobis literæ prodiderunt, non ‘ ſemper eaſdem ſententias, ab iiſdem, ſed quaſcunq; Reipublicæ ſtatus, incli-‘ natio temporum, ratio concordiæ poſtularet, eſſe defendendas. Hæc Marcus Tullius: ſed tu, More, Hortenſium mavis; hæc illæ ætates quæ civili maximè prudentiâ floruerunt; quæ ſi ſequuntur anabaptiſtæ, meâ quidem ſententiâ ſapiunt. Quàm multa alia poſſem proferre, quæ à miniſterculis hiſce & ſuo Salmaſio, ſi res non verba ſpectemus, planè indocto, pro anabaptiſticis damnantur. At nihilo, inquis, plus potuerant potentiſſimi Belgii fæderati ordines, qui per oratores ſuos & prece & pretio oblato ſtrenuè allaborarunt ſacrum Regis caput redimere. Velle profectò juſtitiam ſic redimere, idem erat atque regem ſalvum nolle: verùm didicerunt, non omnes eſſe mercatores; non adeò vendacem eſſe Senatum Anglicanum. Quod autem ad judicium regis, ut plurima, inquis, Chriſto ſimilia Carolus pateretur, milites in eum ingeminant ludibria. Plura quidem paſſus eſt ſimilia Chriſtus maleficis, quàm Carolus Chriſto; & multa iſtiuſmodi jactabantur vulgò ab iis quibus ad invidiam facti majorem excitandam, quidvis fingere aut fictum referre ſtudium erat: Fac tamen gregarios milites inſolentiùs ſe geſſiſſe; non id continuò in cauſam eſt conferendum. Mactatum vero eſſe quempiam ad pedes regis prætereuntis, apprecantem ut Deus ejus miſereretur, nec antea audivi unquam, nec convenire quenquam adhuc potui qui audiviſſet: quin immo tribunum ipſum, qui toto illius judicii tempore cuſtodiis præfuit, regíſque à latere vix diſceſſit, interrogandum hac de re curavi: is denique nec audiſſe ſe hoc antea, & pro certo ſcire falſiſſimum id eſſe, conſtanter aſſeverabat. Ex quo intelligi poteſt tuarum narrationum fides, etiam in reliquis quàm firma ſit. Nam in benevolentia quoque & adoratione, ſi poſſes, Carolo poſt mortem procuranda, quàm in odio nobis vel iniquiſſimè conflando haud multo veracior inveni-eris. Auditum, ais, fuiſſe Regem in fatali pegmate epiſcopo Londinenſi ingeminantem, memento, memento. Id regis Judices anxios nempe habuit, quid illa ultimum iterata vox ſibi voluiſſet; accerſitur, ut ais, epiſcopus, & illud geminum memento quid ſibi quæſiviſſet, additis minis, enuntiare jubetur. Is primò (ſic enim fingi expediebat) ex compoſito nimirum delicias fecit, &, quaſi arcanum quoddam, prodere recuſavit. Cum illi vehementiùs inſtarent, id quaſi metu ſibi expreſſum, & nolenti extortum, ægrè tandem edidit, quod re vera quovis pretio divulgatum vellet; Juſſerat me, inquiens, rex, ut ſi poſſem ad filium pervenire, hoc ſupremum morientis patris mandatum ad eum perferrem, ut regno & poteſtati ſuæ reſtitutus, vobis ſua necis authoribus ignoſceret: hoc me meminiſſe, rex iterum atque iterum juſſit. O magis, regémne dicam pietatis, an epiſcopum rimarum plenum! qui rem tam ſecretò in pegmate ſuæ fidei commiſſam ut effutiret, tam facilè expugnari potuit. At ô taciturne! jampridem Carolus hoc idem inter alia præcepta filio mandaverat, in illa Icone Baſilica; quem librum ideo ſcriptum ſatis apparet, ut omni cum diligentia nobis vel invitis ſecretum illud, qua oſtentatione ſimulatum erat, eadem paulo pòſt evulgaretur. Sed video planè decreviſſe vos Carolum quendam abſolutiſſimum, ſi non Stuartum hunc, at ſaltem hyperboreum aliquem & fabuloſum, fucatis quibuſlibet coloribus depictum, imperitis rerum obtrudere: ita fabellam hanc velut acroama quoddam, diverbiis & ſententiolis pulchrè diſtinctum, neſcio quem ethologum imitatus, ad ineſcandas vulgi aures putidè concinnaſti. Ego verò, ut non negaverim interrogatum fortaſſe obiter ab uno vel altero conſeſſorum hac de re epiſcopum, ita accerſitum, dedita opera vel à concilio vel ab illo judicum collegio, quaſi id omnes curaſſent, aut ſollicitè quæſiviſſent non comperio. Sed demus inde quæ vis: dederit in pegmate ſuprema hæc epiſcopo mandata, ut ſuæ necis authoribus ignoſceretur, perferenda ad filium Carolus: quid tam egregium aut ſingulare præter cæteros eò loci deductos fecit? quotuſquiſq; eſt morientium in pegmate, qui peracturus jam vitæ fabulam, cùm hæc mortalia quàm vana ſint videt, non idem faciat; & inimicitias, iras, odia, tanquam ex ſcena quadam jam exiturus, libens non deponat, aut ſaltem ſimulet, ut vel miſericordiam, vel innocentiæ opinionem ſuæ in animis hominum relinquat? Simulâſſe Carolum, neque unquam ex animo, & ſincero mentis propoſito tale mandatum dediſſe filio, ut ſua necis authoribus ignoſceret, vel ſi hoc palàm, aliud tamen clanculum mandâſſe, argumentis non levibus demonſtrari poteſt: nam filius, alioqui plus ſatis patri obſequens, patris graviſſimo atque ultimo præcepto tam religioſè ſibi per epiſcopum tradito, haud dubiè paruiſſet: quî autem paruit, cujus vel juſſu vel authoritate duo Legati noſtri, alter in Hollandia, alter in Hiſpania, & hic ne ſuſpitione quidem ulla regiæ necis reus, trucidati ſunt? qui denique haud ſemel ſcripto publico edixit atque omnibus palam fecit, ſe nolle patris ſui interfectoribus ullo pacto veniam concedere? Hanc igitur narratiunculam tuam vide an veram eſſe velis; quæ quo magis collaudat patrem, eo magis vituperat filium. Nunc inſtituti oblitus, non regii ſanguinis ad cœlum, ſed populi ad Senatum clamores ementiris, odioſiſſimus poſt Salmaſium in republica aliena pragmaticus & ardelio, qui tam fœdè præſertim res tuas domi agas. Tuáne voce, impuriſſime, populus pro ſe utatur, cujus halitum ipſum oris lue venerea fœtidum, purus omnis averſaretur? tu verò perfugarum ac perditorum voces populo attribuis; & quod agyrta peregrinus ad coronam ſolet, viliſſimorum duntaxat animalium voces imitaris. Quis autem negat ea poſſe tempora ſæpiùs accidere, in quibus civium longè major numerus improborum ſit; qui Catilinam vel Antonium, quàm ſaniorem ſenatus partem ſequi malint; neque idcirco boni cives obniti contra, & fortiter facere non debebunt, ſui magis officii, quàm paucitatis rationem ducentes: tuam ergo tam bellam pro noſtro populo oratiunculam, ne charta omnino pereat, in annales Voluſi ſuadeo inſeras; nobis rhetorculo tam hircoſo atque olido, non eſt uſus. Dehinc injuriarum in eccleſiam poſtulamur. Exercitus eſt omnium hæreſeωn lerna. Qui non maledicunt, exercitum noſtrum ut fortiſſimum, ita modeſtiſſimum ac religioſiſſimum eſſe confitentur: aliis in caſtris ferè potatur, variis libidinibus indulgetur, rapitur, aleâ luditur, juratur & perjuratur; in his noſtris quod datur otii, diſquirendæ veritati impenditur, ſacræ Scripturæ invigilatur; nec quiſquam pulchrius exiſtimat hoſtem ferire, quàm ſe atque alios cœleſtium cognitione rerum erudire, aut bellicam magis quàm evangelicam militiam exercere. Et ſanè ſi proprium belli uſum conſideramus, quid aliud magis deceat milites? qui ideo conſtituti ſunt atque conſcripti, ut eſſent legum defenſores, paludati juſtitiæ ſatellites, eccleſiæ propugnatores: quid illis, non ferocius aut truculentius, ſed civilius aut humanius eſſe oporteat? qui non bellum ſerere ac metere, ſed pacem & incolumitatem humano generi arare, vero ac proprio fine laborum ſuorum debent. Quòd ſiquos ad hæc præclara, inſtituta aſpirantes vel alienus error, vel ſua animi infirmitas tranſverſos abducit, in eos, non ferro ſæviendum, ſed rationibus ac monitis precibus quoque ad Deum fuſis enitendum, cujus eſt ſolius omnes animo errores diſpellere, & cœleſtem veritatis lucem, cui volet impertire. Hæreſes quidem, ſic verè dictas, nos nullas approbamus, ne omnes quidem toleramus; extirpatas etiam volumus, ſed quibus convenit modis, præceptis nimirum & ſaniore doctrina, ut in mente ſitas, non ferro ac flagris quaſi ex corpore evellendas. Altera, inquis, par noſtra injuria eſt in temporali, quod vocant, eccleſiæ fundo. Percontare Belgas vel etiam Germaniæ ſuperioris poteſtantes, numquid ab eccleſiæ bonis abſtinuerint; in quos Cæſar Auſtriacus quoties bellum movet, vix alium quærit belli titulum, quàm ut bona eccleſiæ reſtitui jubeat. Verùm illa profectò non eccleſiæ, ſed eccleſiaſticorum duntaxat bona fuere, qui hoc maximè ſenſu clerici, vel etiam holoclerici, ut qui ſortem totam invaſiſſent, rectiùs nominari poterant; immo lupi veriùs plerique eorum, quàm aliud quidvis erant dicendi; luporum autem bona, vel congeſtas potiùs prædas majorum ex ſuperſtitione partas, quam per tot ſæcula quæſtui habuerunt, in uſus transferre belli à ſemetipſis conflati, nefas non erat, quando aliud non erat reliquum, unde ſumptus belli tam gravis ac diuturni ſuppeterent. Atqui expectabatur, ut epiſcopis erepta opes in paſtores eccleſiarum erogarentur. Expectabant, ſcio, illi, & avebant omnia in ſe transfundi: nulla enim eſt vorago tam profunda, quæ non expleri citiùs quàm clericorum avaritia poſſit. Aliis fortaſſe in locis, haud æquè miniſtris proviſum; noſtris jam ſatis ſuperque bene erat; oves potiùs appellandi quàm paſtores, paſcuntur magis quàm paſcunt; pinguia illis plerumque omnia, ne ingenio quidem excepto; decimis enim ſaginantur, improbato ab aliis omnibus eccleſiis more; Deòque ſic diffidunt, ut eas malint per magiſtratum atque per vim ſuis gregibus extorquere, quàm vel divinæ providentiæ, vel eccleſiarum benevolentiæ & gratitudini debere; atque inter hæc tamen & apud diſcipulos & apud diſcipulas, tam crebrò convivantur, ut quid domicœnium ſit, aut domiprandium penè neſciant: hinc itaque luxuriant plerique, non egent; liberíque eorum & conjuges luxu & lautitiis, cum divitum liberis atque conjugibus certant: hanc novis latifundiis adauxiſſe luxuriam, idem prorſus fuiſſet, ac ſi quis novum venenum (quam olim peſtem ſub Conſtantino vox miſſa cœlitùs, deflevit) in eccleſiam infudiſſet. Proximum eſt ut de injuriis in Deum, quarum tres maximè nominantur, de fiducia nimirum divinæ opis, de precibus etiam atque jejuniis, reddenda nobis ratio ſit. Verùm ex ore tuo, hominum corruptiſſime, te redarguo; illúdque Apoſtoli abs te prolatum in te retorqueo, Quis es tu qui alienum ſervum judicas? coram Domino noſtro ſine ſtemus vel cadamus. Illud inſuper addam Davidis prophetæ, Cùm flens affligo jejunio animam meam, tum hoc vertitur in ſummum probrum mihi. Cæteras hac de re tuas garritiones febriculoſas, quas nemo bis legat, minutim perſequi ſi vellem, haud leviùs profectò ipſe peccem. Nec minus aliena ſunt quæ de ſucceſſibus prolixè oſcitas: Cave tibi, More, & vide, ne poſt Pontianos ſudores, gravedinem fortè contraxeris aut polypum; metuendum, ne, ut Salmaſius ille magnus nuper, Thermas refrigeres. Equidem de ſucceſſu ſic paucis reſpondeo; cauſam ſucceſſu neque probari bonam, neque argui malam: nos cauſam noſtram non ex eventu, ſed eventum ex cauſa judicari poſtulamus. Jam rationes politicas deſumis tibi tractandas, mancipium cathedrarium, immo cathedralitium; injurias nimirum noſtras, in omnes reges ac populos. Quas? nobis enim nihil tale propoſitum erat; res noſtras tantummodo egimus, aliorum miſſas fecimus; ſiquid ad vicinos ab exemplo noſtro boni redundavit, haud invidemus; ſi quid ſecùs non noſtrâ id culpâ, ſed abutentium evenire credimus. Reges aut populi, te Balatronem ſuarum injuriarum interpretem, quinam tandem conſtituerunt? certè oratores eorum ac legatos, alii in Senatu, ipſe in concilio cum audierentur ſæpè audivi non ſolùm de ſuis injuriis nihil querentes, ſed amicitiam noſtram ac ſocietatem ultrò petentes; quinetiam regum ſuorum ac principum nomine, de rebus noſtris nobis gratulantes, etiam bene precantes, pacem ac diuturnitatem, atque eoſdem felices ſucceſſus, in perpetuum exoptantes. Non inimicorum hæ voces, non eorum qui odiſſent, ut tu prædicas; aut tu mendacii, quod in te leviſſimum eſt, aut reges ipſi fraudum ac malarum artium, quod illis inhoneſtiſſimum foret, damnentur neceſſe eſt. Verùm ſcripta noſtra objectas confitentium, Dediſſe nos exemplum populis omnibus ſalutare, tyrannis omnibus formidandum. Immane crimen profectò narras; idem ferè atque ſi dixiſſet quiſpiam,

Numquid dici potuit pernicioſius? hac Cromuellius ad Scotos poſt Dumbarrenſe prælium ſcripſit. Et ſe quidem & illa nobili victoria dignè. Ejuſmodi ſeſamo & papavere conſperſa ſunt infames Miltoni paginæ. Illuſtrem tu quidem collegam ſemper mihi adjungis, & in hoc facinore parem planè facis, nonnunquam & ſuperiorem; quo ego nomine cohoneſtari me maximè abs te putem, ſiquid à te honeſtum poſſet proficiſci. Cremata vero, inquis, ſunt iſta paginæ à carnifice Pariſienſi ſupremi Senatus authoritate. Nequaquam id comperi à Senatu factum, ſed ab officiario quodam urbico, locotenente civili neſcio an incivili, cui clerici quidam, ignaviſſima animalia, authores fuere; tam ex diſſito atque longinquo, abdomini ſuo, quod aliquando precor evenire poſſit, augurantes. Cenſes non potuiſſe nos viciſſim Salmaſii defenſionem regiam cremaſſe? potuiſſem ſanè vel ipſe à magiſtratibus noſtris hoc facilè impetraſſe, niſi illam contumeliam contemptu potiùs ulciſcendam exiſtimaſſem: Vos ignem igne properantes extinguere, Herculeum præbuiſtis rogum, unde clarior exurgerem; nos conſultiùs, Defenſionis Regiæ frigus calfaciendum non cenſuimus. Illud miror, tam eſſe Majorum diſſimiles factos Toloſates (nam & Toloſæ combuſtos nos accepimus) ut qua in urbe ſub Raimundis comitibus, & libertas & religio defenſa olim tam inſigniter eſt, in ea nunc & libertatis & religionis Defenſio combureretur. Vtinam & Scriptor, inquis. Itane ergaſtulum? at ego parem ne reddam tibi ſalutem, More, tu egregiè caviſti; ut qui nigrioribus multò ignibus jamdudum pereas: urunt te adulteria tua, urunt ſtupra, urunt perjuria, quorum ope deſponſatam tibi ſtupro fœminam perfidus excuſſiſti; urunt perditiſſimi furores, qui impulerunt te, ut ſacroſancta munia facinoroſus concupiſceres, & imperſpectum Domini corpus inceſtis manibus ſacerdos pollueres; ſanctitatem etiam ſimulans, in ſanctitatis ſimulatores, dira omnia hoc tuo clamore denunciares; tuúmque execrabile caput, tuamet ipſius damnatum ſententia irretires: his tu ſceleribus & infamiis totus flagras, his tu flammis furialibus dies atque noctes torreris, dáſque nobis pœnas quibus graviores imprecari tibi nullus hoſtis poteſt. Me interim concremationes veſtræ non lædunt, non tangunt, & iſtis ignominiis habeo complura quæ opponam grata meo animo atque jucundâ. Una me curia, unus fortè lictor Pariſienſis, malarum avium impulſu, combuſſit; at quamplurimi per totam Galliam viri boni atque docti nihilo minus legunt, approbant, amplectuntur? quamplurimi per immenſum Germaniæ totius tractum, libertatis ferè domicilium, per cæteras quoque regiones, quâcunque ejus veſtigia ulla adhuc manent; quin & ipſa Græcia, ipſæ Athenæ Atticæ, quaſi jam redivivæ, nobiliſſimi alumni ſui Philaræ voce, applauſere. Hoc etiam verè poſſum dicere, quo primùm tempore noſtra Defenſio eſt edita, & legentium ſtudia incaluere, nullum vel principis vel civitatis legatum in urbe tum fuiſſe, qui non vel fortè obvio mihi gratularetur, vel conventum apud ſe cuperet vel domi inviſeret. Tuos verò nefas ſit præterire manes, Adriane Pauui, qui legatus ad nos ſummo cum honore miſſus, Hollandiæ decus atque ornamentum, ſummam in me ac ſingularem benevolentiam tuam, etiamſi videre nunquam contigerit, multis ſæpè nuntiis ſignificandam curaſti. Hoc verò etiam ſæpius recolere memoria juvat; quod ſine Dei propitio numine accidere arbitror nunquam potuiſſe; mihi, qui contra reges, ut videbatur, ſcripſeram, majeſtatem ipſam regiam placidè annuiſſe; meæque integritati, nec non ſententiæ, ut veriori, teſtimonium divino proximum perhibuiſſe. Quid enim verear hoc dicere, quoties auguſtiſſimam reginam illam, quantis cum laudibus in ore omnium verſetur, mecum cogito. Equidem Athenienſem illum ſapientiſſimum, cui me tamen non confero, ne ipſius quidem Pythii teſtimonio, quàm me illius judicio ornatiorem exiſtimem. Quòd ſi mihi quidem hæc ſcribere adoleſcenti contigiſſet, & oratoribus idem quod poetis liceret, haud dubitaſſem profectò ſortem meam deorum ſorti nonnullorum anteferre: quippe illos de forma duntaxat aut de muſica, Deos, humano ſub judice, contendiſſe; me hominem in certamine longè omnium prcælariſſimo, deâ judice, ſuperiorem diſceſſiſſe. Sic me cohoneſtatum, nemo niſi carnifex ignominioſè audeat tractare, tam qui juſſerit quàm qui fecerit. Hîc vehementer laboras, ut ne facta noſtra Belgicorum pro libertate facinorum exemplo tueri queamus; quod à Salmaſio quoque fruſtra laboratum eſt: cui quod tunc reſpondi, idem tibi nunc reſponſum volo; Falli qui nos opinatur cujuſquam exemplo niti; Belgarum pro libertate facinora adjuviſſe ſæpius ac foviſſe, æmulari neceſſe nunquam habuiſſe; ſiquid pro libertate fortiter faciendum eſt, authores ipſi nobis ſumus, præire, non ſequi alios aſſueti. Tu verò etiam ad bellum contra nos treſſis orator, ſtultiſſimis argumentis, & te verberone dignis, Gallos hortaris: Noſtros, inquis, legatos excipere Gallicus ſpiritus nunquam ſuſtinebit. Suſtinuit quod plus eſt, ſuos jam ter & amplius ad nos ultrò mittere: Galli igitur generoſi, ut ſolent, tu degener & ſpurius, politicarum rationum rudis ac falſus deprehenderis. Hinc id agis ut demonſtres, à fœderatis ordinibus ex compoſito rem in longum duci, eoſque nobiſcum nec fœdus nec bellum velle. Atqui intereſt profectò ipſorum ordinum, non pati conſilia ſua ſic nudari, &, ut ita dicam, vitiari à Genevenſe perfuga apud ſe ſtabulante, qui ſi diutiùs toleretur, non ancillis modò, ſed conſiliis etiam publicis ſtuprum videtur illaturus; cùm ipſi fraterna atque ſincera omnia præ ſe ferant; nunc pacem, quæ vota ſunt bonorum omnium, perpetuam nobiſcum redintegraverint. Jucundum erat, inquit, videre quibus ludibriis, quibus periculis furciferi illi legati, Anglorum ſcilicet, quotidie conflictarentur, non modo ab Anglis regiis, &c. ſed maxime omnium à Batavis. Niſi exploratum nobis jam diu eſſet quibuſnam & prioris legati Doriſlai cædes, & duorum poſtea acceptæ injuriæ referendæ ſint, en delatorem, qui hoſpites & altores ſuos etiam falſò deferat: Hunccine apud vos, Batavi, non modò venereum in eccleſia miniſtrum, ſed ſanguinarium etiam, nec violandi ſolùm juris omnis hortatorem, ſed violati quoque falſum indicem ac proditorem ali?

Ultimus accuſationum titulus eſt noſtra injuria in Reformatas eccleſias. At verò quî magis noſtra in illas quàm illarum in nos? ſi exemplo inſtes, certè ſi ab ipſis Valdenſibus & Toloſanis, ad Rupellanam uſque famem monumenta repetas, nos omnium eccleſiarum ultimi reperiemur contra tyrannos arma ſumpſiſſe. At primi capite damnaſſe. Sanè quia nobis hoc primis in manu adhuc fuit: quid illi, ſi data ſimilis facultas fuiſſet, fuiſſent facturi, opinor ne ipſos quidem ſatis nôſſe. Equidem in ea ſum ſententia, contra quem bellum gerimus, eum, ſiquis rationis aut judicii uſus ſit, hoſtem à nobis judicari; hoſtem autem tam interficere quàm oppugnare, eodem ſemper jure licuiſſe: Tyrannus igitur cùm non noſter ſolùm, ſed totius propè generis humani publicus hoſtis ſit, eum quo jure armis oppugnari, eodem poſſe & interfici. Nec verò hæc mea unius ſententia eſt, aut nova, eandem & aliis olim ſive prudentia ſive ſenſus communis dictavit. Hinc pro Rabirio M. Tullius: Si interfici Saturninum nefas fuit, arma ſumpta eſſe contra Saturninum ſine ſcelere non poſſunt; ſi arma jure ſumpta concedis, interfectum jure concedas neceſſe eſt. Plura hac de re & ſuprà dixi, & ſæpè aliàs, & per ſe res obſcura non eſt: Ex quibus quid Galli etiam, eadem data occaſione fuiſſent facturi, ipſe queas divinare. Addo & hoc amplius, quicunque armis tyrannum oppugnant, iidem, quantum in ſe eſt, & interficiunt: immo, quicquid vel ſibi vel aliis ineptè ſatis perſuadere cupiunt, jam interfecere. Sed & doctrina hæc nobis haud magis quàm Gallis, quos tu hoc piaculo cupis eximere, debetur: unde enim Francogallia illa, niſi ex Gallia, unde vindiciæ contra tyrannos? qui liber etiam Bezæ vulgò tribuitur; undè alii quorum meminit Thuanus? tu tamen, quaſi ego ſolus, id ſatagit, inquis, Miltonus, cujus ego piacularem veſaniam pro meritis excepiſſem. Tu excepiſſes, furcifer? cujus nefaria flagitia ſi eccleſia illa Middleburgenſis, te paſtore infamis & infelix, pro meritis excepiſſet, jamdudum te Satanæ mandaſſet; ſi pro meritis excepiſſet magiſtratus, jamdudum adulteria patibulo pendens luiſſes: Et luiturus propediem ſane videris; evigilavit enim, ut audeo nuper, tua illa eccleſia Middleburgenſis, ſuæque famæ conſuluit, téque caprimulgum paſtorem, immo hircum potius olentiſſimum ablegavit ab ſe in malam crucem; hinc & magiſtratus Amſterodamenſis pulpitum quoque interdixit tibi, orcheſtram tuam; tuúmque illud os impudicum eo ex loco ad ſummam omnium bonorum offenſionem conſpici, illam impiam vocem vetuit in ſacro publicè audiri: reſtat jam tibi ſola Græcarum literarum profeſſio; & hæc quoque brevi eripienda, præter unam illam literam, cujus non profeſſor, ſed diſcipulus mox penſilis meritò futurus es. Neque hæc iratus tibi ominor, ſed duntaxat jus dico: maledicis enim tantum abeſt ut talibus offendamur qualis tu es, ut tales ſemper nobis vel exoptemus; immo divinâ plané benevolentiâ fieri arbitremur, ut qui in nos acerrimè clamitarunt, tales potiſſimùm ſemper extiterint; qui maledicendo non infamant, ſed honeſtant, ſed laudant, nam laudando certè maledixiſſent. Sed irruentem modò quid te retinuit tam fortem homuncionem? Niſi mihi, inquis, religio fuiſſet in magni Salmaſii provinciam excurrere, cui ſolida de magno ſcilicet adverſario victoria relinquetur. Siquidem & ille & ego nunc magnus tibi videor, eo difficilior provincia, præſertim mortuo, fortaſſis ero; de victoria, modò veritas vincat, parum ſollicitus. Interim tu clamitas; parricidium in doctrinam vertunt, eámque reformatarum eccleſiarum conſenſione cupiunt quidem, non audent aperto ore defendere; fuit, inquit Miltonus, etiam ſummorum hæc ſententia Theologorum, qui ipſi reformandæ eccleſiæ authores fuere. Fuit, inquam, & id fuſiús docui in eo libro qui noſtro idiomate Tenor ſive Tenura regum & magiſtratuum inſcriptus eſt, ſecundúm editus, & alibi: nunc actum toties, agendi faſtidium cepit: illic ex Luthero, Zuinglio, Calvino, Bucero, Martyre, Paræo, citantur ipſa verbatim loca; ex illo denique Cnoxo, quem unum, me, Scotum ais innuere, quemque hac in re reformatos omnes, præſertim Gallos, illa ætate condemnaſſe. Atqui ille contrà, quod ibi narratur, ſe illam doctrinam nominatim à Calvino, ſummíſque aliis ea tempeſtate theologis, quibuſcum familiariter conſueverat, hauſiſſe affirmat: plura etiam illic noſtrorum, regnante Maria & Elizabetha, ſinceriorum theologorum in eandem ſententiam deprompta reperies. Tu verò tandem conceptis ad Deum precibus malè prolixis peroras impius abominandis; & os illud adulterum, obduratus cœlo offers: ſino te facilè, neque interpello; major enim cumulus ad impietatem tuam accedere non potuit. Revertor nunc ad id quod ſuprà pollicitus ſum, & objecta Cromuello præcipua crimina quæ ſunt, in medio hic ponam; ut ſparſa quàm fuerint levia poſſit intelligi, quæ collecta nullum pondus in ſe habent. Coram pluribus teſtibus pronunciavit ſibi in animo eſſe, monarchias omnes evertere, reges omnes exitio dare. Quæ tua ſit narrationum fides, jam aliquoties vidimus; dixit fortaſſe tibi perfugarum aliquis Cromuellum ita dixiſſe: ex illis multis teſtibus nullum nominas: quod itaque ſine authore maledicis, ſuopte vitio ruit. Non is eſt Cromuellus, quem de ſuis jam factis ullus unquam vaniloquum audierit; tantùm abeſt ut infecta quæ ſunt, támque difficilia, de iis inſolentius quicquam promittere ac minitari conſueverit: ſanè iſta tibi qui narrarunt, niſi voluntate atque natura magis quàm conſilio mendaces eſſent, hoc ſaltem quod ab ingenio ejus alieniſſimum eſt, non affinxiſſent. Regibus autem, quos ut ſibi caveant frequenter mones, licebit cum ſaluti proſpexerint ſuæ, ſpreto te monitore tam imperito, non ſermunculos ex trivio arripere, ſed rationes ſe dignas inire, quibus quid ſua interſit faciliùs perſpexerint. Alterum eſt crimen perſuaſiſſe regi Cromuellum, ut in inſulam Vectim clanculum ſe ſubduceret. Conſtat regem Carolum rem ſuam multis aliàs rebus, ter fuga perdidiſſe; primùm cum Londino Eboracum fugit, deinde cum ad Scotos in Anglia conductitios, poſtremò cum ad inſulam Vectim. At hujus poſtremæ ſuaſor erat Cromuellus. Optime; ſed tamen ego regios illos primùm miror, qui Carolum toties affirmare non dubitant fuiſſe prudentiſſimum, & eundem ſimul vix unquam ſuæ ſpontis; ſive apud amicos ſive inimicos, in aula vel in caſtris, in aliena ferè poteſtate ſemper fuiſſe; nunc uxoris, nunc epiſcoporum, nunc purpuratorum, nunc militum, denique hoſtium; pejora plerúmque conſilia, & pejorum fermè ſequutum; Carolo perſuadetur, Carolo imponitur, Carolo illuditur, metus incutitur, ſpes vana oſtenditur, velut præda omnium communis, tam amicorum quàm hoſtium, agitur & fertur Carolus. Aut hæc è ſcriptis ſuis tollant, aut ſagacitatem Caroli prædicare deſiſtant. Fateor deinde, quamvis prudentia atq; conſilio præſtare pulcrum ſit, tamen ubi reſpublica factionibus laborat, ſuis incommodis haud carere; & conſultiſſimum quemq; eo magis obnoxium calumniis utriuſq; partis reddere: hoc ſæpe Cromuello obſuit; hinc presbyteriani, inde hoſtes quicquid in ſe durius fieri putant, non id communi Senatus conſilio, ſed Cromuello ſoli imputant; immo ſiquid per imprudentiam ipſi malè gerunt, id dolis & fraudibus Cromuelli aſſignare non erubeſcunt; culpa omnis in eum derivatur, omnis in eum faba cuditur. Et tamen certiſſimum eſt, fugam ad Vectim regis Caroli, abſenti tum aliquot millibus paſſuum Cromuello, tam novum accidiſſe & inopinatum, quàm cuilibet ex Senatu tum in vrbe verſanti, quem ut de re inopinatiſſima ſibi recèns allata per literas certiorem fecit. Res autem ita ſe habuit; exercitus univerſi vocibus rex territus, qui eum nullis officiis ſuis aut pollicitis factum meliorem, ad ſupplicium poſcere jam tunc cœperat, ſtatuit cum duobus tantummodo conſciis nocturnâ fugâ ſibi conſulere: verùm fugiendi certior, quàm quo fugeret, per comitum ſuorum vel imperitiam vel timiditatem, inops conſilii quo ſe reciperet, Hamundo Vectis inſulæ præſidi ſe ultro dedidit; ea ſpe, facilem ſibi ex ea inſula, parato clam navigio, tranſitum in Galliam aut in Belgiam fore. Hæc ego de fuga regis in Vectim ex iis comperi, quibus rem totam pernoſcendi quàm proxima facultas erat. Sed & hoc quoque criminoſum eſt, quòd per Cromuellum, Angli ingentem de Scotis parti ſunt victoriam. Non parti ſunt, More, ſed ſine ſolœciſmo claram ſibi pepererunt; tu verò cogita, quàm Scotis cruentum illud prælium fuerit, cujus tu mentionem tantummodo facere nequiviſti, quin inſtabile præ metu profeſſorium caput tuum ad Priſciani pluteum nutando allideres. Sed videamus porro quantum flagitium Cromuelli fuerit, Scotos irrumpentes, imperium ſibi in Anglos jam pollicentes, nobiliſſimo poſt multas ætates prælio viciſſe. Inter has turbas, dum Cromuellus cum exercitu abeſt: Immò dum hoſtem in Angliæ viſcera jam progreſſum, jam Parlamento ipſi imminentem Cromuellus etiam deficientes Cambros ad fidem reducendo, & obſidione longa defeſſus, ut vidit, ut vicit, ut glorioſiſſimè fudit, Presbyterianos tædium Cromuelli ceperat: Hîc verum dicis; dum is communem hoſtem cum vitæ diſcrimine propulſat, hi militantem pro ſeſe & in acie fortiter dimicantem confictis criminibus accuſant domi; & Huntingtonum centurionem quendam in ejus caput ſubornant. Quis tantæ ingratitudinis fœditatem ſine fremitu vel audire poſſit? Eorundem inſtinctu, nequiſſimum genus homuncionum ac petulantiſſimum, tyrones tabernarum maximo numero curiæ fores obſident; Senatum, quicquid ipſis videtur (quo quid indignius?) clamore ſuo ac minis cogunt decernere: jámque reducem à Scotis victorem fortiſſimum, aut exulantem, aut pœnas indigniſſimas dantem vidiſſemus Camillum noſtrum; niſi Fairfaxius imperator, invictiſſimi Legati ſui tantum dedecus perferendum non ſenſiſſet; niſi cunctus exercitus, & is quoque ſatis ingratè habitus, tam atrocia prohibuiſſet. Urbem itaque ingreſſus, urbicos nullo negotio repreſſit; Scotorum hoſtium partibus addictos meritò Senatu movit: pars reliqua inſolentiis tabernariorum jam liberata, colloquium Vectenſe contra Senatus conſultum edictúmque publicum, cum rege initum reſcindit: Huntingtonus autem ille accuſator, impunis & ſui juris relictus, tandem pœnitentiâ ductus, ipſe ſua ſponte à Cromuello veniam petiit, & à quibus eſſet ſubornatus ultro faſſus eſt. Hæc ferè ſunt quæ fortiſſimo patriæ liberatori, niſi ad quæ ſupra reſpondi, crimina objiciuntur; quæ quid valeant videtis. Verùm ego tantum virum, déque hac republica tam inſignitè meritum, ſi duntaxat nihil mali commiſiſſe defendam, nihil egero; cum præſertim non reipublicæ ſolùm, ſed & meâ quoque interſit, ut qui eadem infamia tam prope ſim conjunctus, quàm optimum eum, atque omni laude digniſſimum, gentibus, quoad poſſum, omnibus atque ſæculis demonſtrare. Eſt Oliverius Cromuellus genere nobili atque illuſtri ortus: nomen republica olim ſub regibus benè adminiſtrata clarum, religione ſimul orthodoxa vel reſtituta tum primùm apud nos vel ſtabilita clarius: Is matura jam atq; firmata ætate, quam & privatus traduxit, nulla re magis quàm religionis cultu purioris, & integritate vitæ cognitus, domi in occulto creverat; & ad ſumma quæque tempora fiduciam Deo fretam & ingentem animum tacito pectore aluerat. Parlamento ab rege ultimùm convocato, ſui municipii ſuffragiis lectus Senatorium munus obtinuit; illic rectiſſimis ſententiis conſiliiſque firmiſſimis ſtatim innotuit: Ubi ad arma deventum eſt, delata ſua opera, equitum turmæ præficitur; ſed bonorum virorum concurſu, ad ejus ſigna undique confluentium, auctus copiis, & geſtarum rerum magnitudine & celeritate conficiendi ſummos ferè duces brevi ſuperavit. Nec mirum; ſui enim noſcendi exercitatiſſimus miles, quicquid intus hoſtis erat, ſpes vanas, metus, cupiditates, apud ſe prius aut deleverat, aut ſubactas jam habuerat in ſe priùs imperator, ſui victor, de ſe potiſſimùm triumphare didicerat; itaq; ad externum hoſtem quo primùm die in caſtra venit, veteranus, & in illa omni caſtrenſi militia conſummatus acceſſit. Non eſt ut in his poſſim orationis carceribus, tot urbes captas, tot prælia & quidem maxima, in quibus nunquam victus aut fuſus, Britannicum orbem totum continuis victoriis peragravit, pro dignitate rerum exequi; quæ juſtæ ſanè hiſtoriæ grande opus & iterum quaſi campum quendam dicendi, & exæquata rebus narrandi ſpatia deſiderant. Sufficit hoc unicum ſingularis & prope divinæ virtutis indicium, tantam in eo viguiſſe ſive animi vim atq; ingenii, ſive diſciplinæ non ad militarem modò, ſed ad Chriſtianam potiùs normam & ſanctimoniam inſtitutæ, ut omnes ad ſua caſtra tanquam ad optimum non militaris duntaxat ſcientiæ, ſed religionis ac pietatis gymnaſium, vel jam bonos & fortes undiq; attraheret, vel tales, ipſius maximè exemplo, efficeret: eóſq; toto belli, pacis etiam nonnunquam intermediæ tempore, per tot animorum & rerum viciſſitudines, non largitionibus & militari licentia, ſed authoritate & ſolo ſtipendio, adverſantibus licèt multis, in officio contineret & adhuc contineat: quâ quidem laude neq; Cyro, neq; Epaminondæ, neque antiquorum ulli excellentiſſimo Imperatori laus ulla major attribui ſolet. Hinc enim exercitum, quo nemo minori ſpatio majorem aut inſtructiorem, ſibi comparavit, & per omnia dicto audientem, & civibus gratum atque dilectum; & hoſtibus, armatis quidem formidoloſum, pacatis admirabilem, quorum in agris atque ſub tectis ita non gravis, & ſine omni maleficio verſabatur, ut cum regiorum ſuorum vim, vinolentiam, impietatem atque libidines, cogitarent, mutata ſorte læti, non nunc hoſtes, ſed hoſpites adveniſſe crederent; præſidium bonis omnibus, terrorem malis, virtutis etiam omnis & pietatis hortatores. Sed neque te fas eſt præterire, Fairfaxi in quo cum ſummâ fortitudine ſummam modeſtiam, ſummam vitæ ſanctitatem, & natura & divinus favor conjunxit: Tu harum in partem laudum evocandus tuo jure ac merito es; quanquam in illo nunc tuo ſeceſſu, quantus olim Literni Africanus ille Scipio, abdis te quoad potes; nec hoſtem ſolùm, ſed ambitionem, & quæ præſtantiſſimum quemque mortalium vincit, gloriam quoque viciſti; tuiſque virtutibus & præclarè factis, jucundiſſimum & glorioſiſſimum per otium frueris, quod eſt laborum omnium & humanarum actionum vel maximarum finis; qualique otio cùm antiqui Heroes, poſt bella & decora tuis haud majora, fruerentur, qui eos laudare conati ſunt poetæ, deſperabant ſe poſſe aliâ ratione id quale eſſet dignè deſcribere, niſi eos fabularentur, cœlo receptos, deorum epulis accumbere. Verùm te ſive valetudo, quod maximè crediderim, ſive quid aliud retraxit perſuaſiſſimum hoc habeo, nihil te à rationibus reipublicæ divellere potuiſſe, niſi vidiſſes quantum libertatis conſervatorem, quàm firmum atque fidum Anglicanæ rei columen ac munimentum in ſucceſſore tuo relinqueres. Te enim ſalvo, Cromuelle, ne Deo quidem ſatis confidit, qui rebus Anglorum, ſatis ut ſalvæ ſint, metuat; cùm videat tam faventem tibi, tam evidenter opitulantem ubique Deum. Verùm tibi tum ſoli decertanda alia bellorum palæſtra erat.

Quid autem multa? res maximas, quâ tu celeritate ſoles, eadem ſi poſſum brevitate expediam. Amiſſâ Hiberniâ præter unam urbem totâ, tu, exercitu tranſmiſſo, uno ſtatim prælio Hibernicorum opes fregiſti; reliqua indies conficiebas; cùm repentè ad bellum Scoticum revocaris. Hinc contra Scotos irruptionem cum rege ſuo in Angliam parantes, indefeſſus proficiſceris; regnum illud, quod omnes reges noſtri octingentis annis non poterant, uno circiter anno perdomuiſti, & Anglorum ditioni adjeciſti; reliquas eorum copias, validiſſimas tamen & expeditas, per ſummam deſperationem in Angliam tum ferè præſidiis nudatam, inopinâ impreſſione factâ, Vigornium uſque progreſſas, magnis itineribus aſſecutus, uno prælio deleviſti; captâ penè tota gentis nobilitate. Hinc alta pax domi: tum te, ſed neque tum primùm, non minùs conſiliis, quàm belli artibus valere ſenſimus; id quotidiè in ſenatu agebas, vel ut cum hoſte pacta fides ſervaretur, vel uti ea, quæ ex republicâ eſſent, maturè decernerentur. Cum videres moras necti, privatæ quemque rei, quam publicæ, attentiorem, populum queri deluſum ſe ſuâ ſpe, & potentiâ paucorum circumventum eſſe, quod ipſi toties moniti nolebant, eorum dominationi finem impoſuiſti. Parlamentum aliud convocatur novum; conceſſa iis duntaxat, quibus par erat, eligendi poteſtate; conveniunt electi; nihil agunt; cùm ſe invicem diſſidiis & altercationibus diu defatigaſſent, animadvertentes plerique ſe rebus tantis exequendis, neque pares eſſe, néque idoneos, ipſi ſeſe diſſolvunt. Deſerimur Cromuelle; tu ſolus ſuperes, ad te rerum ſumma noſtrarum rediit; in te ſolo conſiſtit; inſuperabili tuæ virtuti cedimus cuncti, nemine vel obloquente, niſi qui aut æquales inæqualis ipſe honores ſibi quærit, aut digniori conceſſos invidet, aut non intelligit nihil eſſe in ſocietate hominum magis vel Deo gratum, vel rationi conſentaneum, eſſe in civitate nihil æquius, nihil utilius, quàm potiri rerum digniſſimum. Eum te agnoſcunt omnes, Cromuelle, ea tu civis maximus & glorioſiſſimus, dux publici conſilii, fortiſſimorum exercituum Imperator, pater patriæ geſſiſti: ſic tu ſpontaneâ bonorum omnium & animitùs miſſâ voce ſalutaris: alios titulos te dignos tua facta non norunt, non ferunt, & ſuperbos illos, vulgi licet opinione magnos, meritò reſpuunt. Quid enim eſt titulus, niſi definitus quidam dignitatis modus? tuæ res geſtæ cùm admirationis, tum certè titulorum modum omnem excedunt; & velut pyramidum apices cœlo ſe condunt, populari titulorum aurâ excelſiores. Sed quoniam ſummis etiam virtutibus, qui honos habetur, humano quodam faſtigio finiri ac terminari, non dignum eſt, ſed tamen expedit, aſſumpto quodam titulo patris patriæ ſimillimo, non evehi te quidem, ſed tot gradibus ex ſublimi deſcendere, & velut in ordinem cogi, publico commodo, & ſenſiſti & ſuſtinuiſti; regium nomen majeſtate longè majore aſpernatus. Et meritò quidem: quod enim nomen, privatus ſub jugum mittere, & ad nihilum planè redigere potuiſti, eo ſi tantus vir factus caperere, idem penè faceres, atque ſi gentem aliquam Idololatram Dei veri ope cùm ſubegiſſes, victos abs te coleres deos. Tu igitur, Cromuelle, magnitudine illâ animi macte eſto; te enim decet: tu patriæ liberator, libertatis auctor, cuſtoſque idem & conſervator, neque graviorem perſonam, neque auguſtiorem ſuſcipere potes aliam; qui non modò regum res geſtas, ſed Heroum quoque noſtrorum fabulas factis exuperaſti. Cogita ſæpiùs, quàm caram rem, ab quàm cara parente tua, libertatem à patriâ tibi commendatam atque concreditam, apud te depoſitam habes: quod ab electiſſimis gentis univerſæ viris, illa modò expectabat, id nunc à te uno expectat, per te unum conſequi ſperat. Reverere tantam de te expectationem, ſpem patriæ de te unicam; reverere vultus & vulnera tot fortium virorum, quotquot, te duce, pro libertate tam ſtrenuè decertârunt; manes etiam eorum qui in ipſo certamine occubuerunt: reverere exterarum quoque civitatum exiſtimationem de nobis atque ſermones? quantas res de libertate noſtra, tam fortiter partâ, de noſtrâ republicâ, tam glorioſè exortâ ſibi polliceantur: quæ ſi tam citò quaſi aborta evanuerit, profectò nihil æquè dedecoroſum huic genti, atque pudendum fuerit: teipſum denique reverere, ut pro quâ adipiſcendâ libertate, tot ærumnas pertuliſti, tot pericula adiiſti, eam ademptus, violatam per te, aut ullâ in parte imminutam aliis, ne ſinas eſſe. Profectò tu ipſe liber ſine nobis eſſe non potes; ſic enim natura comparatum eſt, ut qui aliorum libertatem occupat, ſuam ipſe primus omnium amittat; ſéque primum omnium intelligat ſervire: atque id quidem non injuriâ. At verò, ſi patronus ipſe libertatis, & quaſi tutelaris deus, ſi is, quo nemo juſtior, nemo ſanctior eſt habitus, nemo vir melior, quam vindicavit ipſe, eam poſtmodùm invaſerit, id non ipſi tantùm, ſed univerſæ virtutis ac pietatis rationi pernicioſum ac lethale propemodum ſit neceſſe eſt: ipſa honeſtas, ipſa virtus tus decoxiſſe videbitur, religionis anguſta fides, exiſtimatio perexigua in poſterum erit, quo gravius generi humano vulnus, poſt illud primum, infligi nullum poterit. Onus longè graviſſimum ſúſcepiſti, quod te penitùs explorabit, totum te atque intimum perſcrutabitur atque oſtendet, quid tibi animi, quid virium inſit, quid ponderis; vivatne in te verè illa pietas, fides, juſtitia, animíque moderatio, ob quas evectum te præ cæteris Dei numine ad hanc ſummam dignitatem credimus. Tres Nationes validiſſimas conſilio regere, populos ab inſtitutis pravis ad meliorem, quàm ante hac, frugem ac diſciplinam velle perducere, remotiſſimas in partes ſollicitam mentem, cogitationéſque immittere, vigilare, prævidere, nullum laborem recuſare, nulla voluptatum blandimenta non ſpernere, divitiarum atque potentiæ oſtentationem fugere, hæc ſunt illa ardua, præ quibus bellum ludus eſt; hæc te ventilabunt atque excutient, hæc virum poſcunt divino fultum auxilio, divino penè colloquio monitum atque edoctum. Quæ tu, & plura, ſæpenumero quin tecum reputes atque animo revolvas, non dubito: uti & illud, quibus potiſſimùm queas modis & illa maxima perficere, & libertatem ſalvam nobis reddere & auctiorem. Quod meo quidem judicio, haud alia ratione rectiùs effeceris, quam ſi primùm quos laborum atque diſcriminum comites habuiſti, eoſdem, quod facis, conſiliorum ſocios cum primis adhibueris; viros ſanè & modeſtiſſimos, & integerrimos, & fortiſſimos; quos tot mortes conſpectæ, tot ſtrages ante ora editæ, non ad crudelitatem, aut duriciem animi, ſed ad juſtitiam, & numinis reverentiam, & humanæ ſortis miſerationem, ad libertatem denique eo acriùs retinendam erudierunt, quo gravioribus ejus cauſa, periculis ipſi ſuum caput objecêre: Non illi quidem ex colluvione vulgi, aut advenarum, non turba collectitia, ſed melioris pleriq; notæ cives, genere vel nobili, vel non inhoneſto, fortunis vel amplis, vel mediocribus; quid ſi ipſa paupertate aliqui commendatiores? quos non præda convocavit, ſed difficillima tempora, rebus maximè dubiis, ſæpè adverſis, ad liberandam tyrannide rempubl. excitarunt; non in tuto aut curiâ ſermones inter ſe atque ſententias tantùm, ſed manus cum hoſte conſerere paratos. Quòd niſi ſpes ſemper infinitas, atque inanes perſequemur, in quibus tandem mortalium ſiſti aut confidi poſſit non video, ſi his horùmque ſimilibus fides non habebitur. Quorum fidelitatis certiſſimum pignus, & indubitatum habemus, quòd pro republica vel mortem oppetere, ſi ita ſors tuliſſet, non recuſarint; pietatis, quòd implorato ſuppliciter dei auxilio, totieſque ab eo inſigniter adjuti, à quo auxilium petere, eidem gloriam tribuere omnem rerum proſperè geſtarum conſueverint; juſtitiæ, quòd etiam regem in judicium adduxerint, damnato parci noluerint; moderationis, quòd & eam experti jam diu ſumus, &, quam ipſi ſibi peperere pacem, ſi eorundem per injuriam rumpatur, quæ mala inde oritura ſunt, ipſi primi ſint perſenſuri, ipſi prima vulnera ſuis corporibus excepturi, déque ſuis omnibus fortunis atque ornamentis feliciter jam partis rurſus dimicaturi; fortitudinis denique, quòd nulli unquam libertatem feliciùs aut fortiùs recuperaverint; ne arbitremur ullos alios poſſe diligentiùs conſervare. Geſtit clarorum virorum nomina commemorare oratio mea: te primum, Fletuode, quem ego ab ipſis tyrociniis ad hos uſque militiæ honores, quos nunc obtines à ſummis proximos, humanitate, manſuetudine, benignitate animi eundem novi; hoſtis fortem & imperterritum, ſed & mitiſſimum quoque victorem ſenſit: Te, Lamberte, qui vix modicæ dux manûs, ducem Hamiltonum juvenis, totius Scoticæ juventutis flore ac robore circumſeptum, & progredientem retardaſti, & retardatum ſuſtinuiſti: Te, Desboroe, Te, Hualei, qui atrociſſimas hujus belli pugnas vel audienti mihi vel legenti, inter hoſtes confertiſſimos expectati ſemper occurriſtis: Te, Overtone, mihi multis abhinc annis, & ſtudiorum ſimilitudine, & morum ſuavitate; concordiâ pluſquam fraternâ conjunctiſſime, te Marſtonenſi prælio illo memorabili, pulſo ſiniſtro cornu noſtro, reſpectantes in fugâ duces ſtantem cum tuo pedite, & hoſtium impetus propulſantem inter denſas utrinq; cædes vidêre: Scotico deinde bello, ut primùm Cromuelli auſpiciis, tuo marte occupata Fifæ littora, & patefactus ultra Sterlinium aditus eſt, te Scoti occidentales, te Boreales humaniſſimum hoſtem, te Orcades extremæ domitorem fatentur. Addam & nonnullos, quos togâ celebres & pacis artibus, conſiliarios tibi advocaſti, vel amicitia vel fama mihi cognitos; Huitlochium, Picheringum, Striclandium, Sidnamum, atq; Sidneium (quod ego illuſtre nomen noſtris ſemper adhæſiſſe partibus lætor) Montacutium, Laurentium, ſummo ingenio ambos, optimiſque artibus expolitos; alioſque permultos eximiis meritis cives, partim ſenatorio jampridem munere, partim militari operâ inſignes. His & ornatiſſimis viris & ſpectatiſſimis civibus libertatem noſtram proculdubio rectè commiſeris; immò quibus tutiùs committi poſſit aut concredi, haud facilè quis dixerit. Deinde ſi eccleſiam eccleſiæ reliqueris, téque ac magiſtratus eo onere, & dimidio ſimul & alieniſſimo, prudens levaveris; nec duas poteſtates longè diverſiſſimas, civilem & eccleſiaſticam, ſiveris inter ſe ſcortari; ſéque invicem promiſcuis ac falſis opibus in ſpeciem quidem firmare re autem verâ labefactare ac demum ſubvertere: ſi vim omnem ab eccleſia ſuſtuleris; vis autem nunquam aberit, quandiu pecunia, eccleſiæ toxicum, veritatis angina, enunciandi evangelii merces, vi etiam ab nolentibus coacta, erit; ejeceris ex eccleſia nummularios illos, non columbas ſed columbam, ſanctum ipſum ſpiritum cauponantes. Tum ſi leges non tot rogaveris novas, quot abrogaveris veteres; ſunt enim ſæpè in republica, qui multas leges ferendi, ut verſificatores multa carmina fundendi impetigine quadam pruriunt: ſed leges quo ſunt plures, eo ferè ſunt deteriores; non cautiones ſed cautes, tu neceſſarias duntaxat retinueris, alias tuleris, non quæ bonos cum malis eodem jugo ſubjiciant, aut quibus, dum improborum fraudes præcaventur, quod bonis liberum eſſe debet, vetatur, ſed quæ in vitia tantum animadvertant, res per ſe licitas abutentium ob noxam, non prohibeant. Leges enim ad frænandam malitiam ſolùm ſunt comparatæ, virtutis libertas formatrix optima atque auctrix eſt. Deinde ſi juventutis inſtitutioni ac moribus meliùs proſpexeris, quàm eſt adhuc proſpectum, nec dociles juxta atque indociles, gnavos atque ignavos, impenſis publicis ali æquum ſenſeris, ſed jam doctis, jam benè meritis doctorum præmia reſervaveris. Tum ſi liberè philoſophari volentibus permiſeris, quæ habent, ſine magiſtelli cujuſpiam privato examine, ſuo periculo in lucem proferre: ita enim maximè veritas effloruerit; nec ſemidoctorum ſemper ſive cenſura, ſive invidia, ſive tenuitas animi, ſive ſuperſtitio aliorum inventa, omnémque ſcientiam ſuo modulo metietur, ſuóque arbitrio nobis impertiverit. Poſtremò ſi ipſe neque verum neque falſum, quicquid id eſt, audire metueris: eos autem minimè omnium audieris, qui ſeſe liberos eſſe non credunt, niſi aliis eſſe liberis, per ipſos non liceat; nec ſtudioſius aut violentius quicquam agunt, quàm ut fratrum non corporibus modò ſed conſcientiis quoque vincula injiciant; peſſimámque omnium tyrannidem, vel pravarum conſuetudinum vel opinionum ſuarum & in rempublicam & in eccleſiam inducant: tu ab eorum parte ſemper ſteteris, qui non ſuam tantummodo ſectam aut factionem, ſed omnes æquè cives, æquali jure liberos eſſe in civitate arbitrantur oportere. Hæc ſicui ſatis libertas non eſt, quæ quidem à magiſtratibus exhiberi poteſt, is mihi ambitionis atque turbarum, quàm libertatis ingenuæ ſtudioſior videtur; præſertim cum agitatus tot factionibus populus, ut poſt tempeſtatem, cùm fluctus nondum reſederunt, ſtatum illum rerum optabilem atque perfectum, ipſe non admittat.

Nam & vos, ô cives, quales ipſi ſitis ad libertatem vel acquirendam vel retinendam haud parvi intereſt: niſi libertas veſtra ejuſmodi ſit, quæ neque parari armis, neque auferri poſſit, ea autem ſola eſt, quæ pietate, juſtitiâ, temperantâ, verâ denique virtute nata, altas atque intimas radices animis veſtris egerit, non deerit profectò qui vobis iſtam, quam vi atque armis quæſiviſſe gloriamini, etiam ſine armis citò eripiat. Multos bellum auxit, quos pax minuit; ſi perfuncti bello, pacis ſtudia neglexeritis, ſi bellum pax veſtra, atque libertas, bellum tantummodò veſtra virtus eſt, veſtra ſumma gloria, invenietis mihi credite, ipſam pacem vobis infeſtiſſimam; pax ipſa veſtrum bellum longè difficillimum, & quam putâſtis libertatem, ſervitus veſtra erit. Niſi per veram atque ſinceram in Deum atque homines pietatem, non vanam atque verboſam, ſed efficacem & operoſam, ſuperſtitiones animis, religionis veræ ac ſolidæ ignoratione ortas, abegeritis, habebitis, qui dorſo atque cervicibus veſtris, tanquam jumentis inſidebunt; qui vos etiam victores bello ſuam veluti prædam ſub haſtâ non bellicâ nundinabuntur; & ex ignorantiâ & ſuperſtitione veſtrâ, uberem quæſtum facient. Niſi avaritiam, ambitionem, luxuriam mentibus, immo familiis quoque veſtris luxum expuleritis, quem tyrannum foris & in acie quærendum crediđiſtis eum domi, eum intus vel duriorem ſentietis, immò multi indies tyranni ex ipſis præcordiis veſtris intolerandi pullulabunt. Hos vincite in primis, hæc pacis militia eſt, hæ ſunt victoriæ, difficiles quidem, at incruentæ, illis bellicis & cruentis longè pulchriores; niſi hìc quoque victores eritis, illum modo in acie hoſtem atque tyrannum, aut non omnino aut fruſtra viciſtis: nam pecuniæ vim maximam in ærarium inferendi rationes poſſe calidiſſimas excogitare, pedeſtres atque navales copias impigrè poſſe inſtruere, poſſe cum legatis exterorum cautè agere, ſocietates & fœdera peritè contrahere, ſi qui majus atque utilius ac ſapientius in republica exiſtimaviſtis eſſe, quàm incorrupta populo judicia præſtare, afflictis per injuriam atque oppreſſis opem ferre, ſuum cuique jus expeditum reddere, quanto ſatis in errore verſati, tum ſerò nimis perſpicietis, cum illa magna repentè vos fefellerint, hæc parva veſtro nunc judicio & neglecta adverſa tum vobis & exitio fuerint. Quin & exercituum & ſociorum, quibus confiditis, fluxa fides, niſi juſtitiæ ſola authoritate retineatur: & opes atque honores, quos plerique ſectantur, facilè dominos mutant: ubi virtus, ubi induſtria, & laborum tolerantia plus viget, eò transfugiunt, & ignavos deſerunt. Sic gens gentem urget, ut ſanior pars gentis corruptiorem proturbat: ſic vos regios dejeciſtis. Si vos in eadem vitia prolabi, ſi illos imitari, eadem ſequi, eaſdem inanitates aucupari ceperitis, vos profectò regii iſtis, vel eiſdem adhuc hoſtibus, vel aliis viciſſim opportuni; qui iidem ad Deum precibus, eadem patientia, integritate, ſolertia freti, qua vos primò valuiſtis, depravatos nunc, & in regium luxum atque ſocordiam prolapſos, meritò ſubjugabunt. Tum verò, quod miſerum eſt, videbimini, planè quaſi Deum veſtri pœnituiſſet, pervaſiſſe ignem ut fumo pereatis: quantæ nunc admirationi, tantæ tunc omnibus contemptioni eritis; hoc ſolum quod aliis fortaſſe, non vobis, prodeſſe in poſterum queat, ſalutare documentum relicturi, quantas res vera virtus & pietas efficere potuiſſet, cum ficta & adumbrata, duntaxat bellè ſimulando, & aggredi tantas, & progreſſus in iis tantos per vos facere valuerit. Non enim, ſi propter veſtram ſive imperitiam, ſive inconſtantiam, ſive improbitatem tam præclarè facta malè ceſſerunt, idcirco viris melioribus minus poſt hæc vel licebit vel ſperandum erit. Sed liberare vos denuò tam facilè corruptos nemo, ne Cromuellus quidem, nec tota, ſi reviviſceret, Brutorum natio liberatorum, aut ſi velit, poſſit, aut ſi poſſit, velit. Quid enim quiſquam vobis libera ſuffragia & eligendi quos vultis in ſenatum poteſtatem tum aſſereret, an ut ſuæ quiſque factionis homines per urbes, aut qui conviviis unctiùs vos, & majoribus poculis per municipia colonos ac ruſticos exceperit, eum quantumvis indignum eligere poſſitis? ita non prudentia, non authoritas, ſed factio & ſagina, aut ex tabernis urbicis caupones & inſtitores reipublicæ, aut ex pagis bubulcos & verè pecuarios ſenatores, nobis creaverit. Illis nempe rempublicam commendaret, quibus vel rem privatam nemo committeret; illis ærarium & vectigalia qui rem ſuam turpiter prodegere? illis publicos reditus, quos depeculentur, quos ex publicis privatos reddant? an legiſlatores ut illi extemplò gentis univerſæ fiant, qui ipſi quid lex, quid ratio, quid fas aut jus, rectum aut curvum, licitum aut illicitum ſit, nunquam intellexerint? qui poteſtatem omnem in violentia, dignitatem in ſuperbia atque faſtidio poſitam exiſtiment? Qui in Senatu nihil prius agant, quàm ut amicis pravè gratificentur, inimicis memores adverſentur? qui propinquos ſibi ac neceſſarios, tributis imperandis, bonis proſcribendis, per provincias ſubſtituant, homines pleroſque viles ac perditos, qui ſuarum ipſi auctionum ſectores, grandem exinde pecuniam cogant, coactam intervertant, rempublicam fraudent, provincias expilent, ſe locupletent ad opulentiam atque faſtum ex mendicitate heſterna ac ſordibus repentini emergant? quis talis ferat ſervos furaces, dominorum vicarios? quis ipſos furum dominos ac patronos, libertatis idoneos fore cuſtodes crediderit, aut illiuſmodi curatoribus reipublicæ ( quingenti licet conſueto numero ſint ex municipiis omnibus hunc in modum electi) pilo ſe factum liberiorem putet, cùm & libertatis ipſi cuſtodes & quibus cuſtoditur, tam pauci tum ſint futuri, qui libertate uti atque frui vel ſciant vel digni ſint? Libertate autem indigni, quod omittendum poſtremò non eſt, erga ipſos primum liberatores ingratiſſimi ferè exiſtunt. Quis nunc talium pro libertate pugnare, aut vel minimum adire periculum velit; non convenit, non cadit in tales eſſe liberos; utut libertatem ſtrepant atque jactent, ſervi ſunt & domi & foris, nec ſentiunt; & cùm ſenſerint tandem, & velut ferocientes equi frænum indignantes, non veræ libertatis amore ( quam ſolus vir bonus rectè poteſt appetere ) ſed ſuperbia & cupiditatibus pravis impulſi, jugum excutere conabuntur, etiamſi armis rem ſæpiùs tentaverint, nihil tamen proficient; mutare ſervitutem fortaſſe poterunt. exuere non poterunt. Id quod Romanis etiam antiquis luxu jam fractis ac diffluentibus perſæpè accidit; recentioribus multò magis; cùm longo poſt tempore

Creſcentii Nomentani auſpiciis, & poſtea duce Nicolao Rentio, qui ſe tribunum plebis nominaverat, antiquam renovare gloriam Romanam, & rempublicam reſtituere affectarent. Scitote enim, ne fortè ſtomachemini, aut quemquam præter voſmetipſos inculpare poſſitis, ſcitote, quemadmodum eſſe liberum idem planè eſt atque eſſe pium, eſſe ſapientem, eſſe juſtum ac temperantem, ſui providum, alieni abſtinentem, atque exinde demum magnanimum ac fortem, ita his contrarium eſſe, idem eſſe atque eſſe ſervum; ſolitóque Dei judicio & quaſi talione juſtiſſima fit, ut quæ gens ſe regere ſéque moderari nequit, ſuíſque ipſa ſe libidinibus in ſervitutem tradidit, ea aliis, quibus nollet, dominis tradatur; nec libens modò, ſed invita quoque ſerviat. Quod etiam & jure & naturâ ipſâ ſancitum eſt, ut qui impos ſui, qui per inopiam mentis aut furorem ſuas res rectè adminiſtrare nequit, in ſuâ poteſtate ne ſit; ſed tanquam pupillus, alieno dedatur imperio; nedum ut alienis negotiis, aut reipublicæ præficiendus ſit. Qui liberi igitur vultis permanere, aut ſapite imprimis, aut quamprimùm reſipiſcite: ſi ſervire durum eſt, atque nolitis, rectæ rationi obtemperare diſcite, veſtrûm eſſe compotes; poſtremo factionibus, odiis, ſuperſtitionibus, injuriis, libidinibus ac rapinis invicem abſtinete. Id niſi pro virili veſtra parte feceritis, neque Deo neque hominibus, ne veſtris quidem jam nunc liberatoribus, idonei poteritis videri, penes quos libertas & reipublicæ gubernatio, & imperandi aliis, quod tam cupidè vobis arrogatis, poteſtas relinquenda ſit: cum tutore potius aliquo rerúmque veſtrarum fideli ac forti curatore tanquam pupilla gens, tum quidem indigeatis. Ad me quod attinet, quocunque res redierit, quam ego operam meam maximè ex uſu reipublicæ futuram judicavi, haud gravatim certè, & ut ſpero, haud fruſtra impendi; meáque arma pro libertate, non ſolùm ante fores extuli, ſed etiam iis ita latè ſum uſus, ut factorum minimè vulgarium jus atque ratio, & apud noſtros & apud exteros explicata atque defenſa, bonis certè omnibus probata, & ad meorum civium ſummam laudem, & poſterorum ad exemplum præclarè conſtet. Si poſtrema primis non ſatis reſponderint, ipſi viderint; ego quæ eximia, quæ excelſa, quæ omni laude propè majora fuere, iis teſtimonium, prope dixerim monumentum, perhibui, haud citò interiturum; & ſi aliud nihil, certè fidem meam liberavi. Quemadmodum autem poeta is qui Epicus vocatur, ſi quis paulò accuratior, miniméque abnormis eſt, quem Heroem verſibus canendum ſibi proponit, ejus non vitam omnem, ſed unam ferè vitæ actionem, Achillis putà ad Troiam, vel Uliſſis reditum, vel Æneæ in Italiam adventum ornandum ſibi ſumit, reliquas prætermittit; ita mihi quoque vel ad officium, vel ad excuſationem ſatis fuerit, unam ſaltem popularium meorum heroicè rem geſtam exornaſſe; reliqua prætereo, omnia univerſi populi præſtare quis poſſit? ſi poſt tam fortia facinora fœdiùs deliqueritis, ſi quid vobis indignum commiſeritis, loquetur profectò poſteritas, & judicium feret; jacta ſtrenuè fundamenta fuiſſe, præclara initia immò pluſquam initia; ſed qui opus exædificarent, qui faſtigium imponerent, non ſine commotione quadam animi deſiderabit; tantis incœptis, tantis virtutibus, non adfuiſſe perſeverantiam dolebit; ingentem gloriæ ſegetem, & maximarum rerum gerendarum materiam præbitam videbit, ſed materiæ defuiſſe viros: non defuiſſe qui monere recta, hortari, incitare, qui egregiè tum facta, tum qui feciſſent, condecorare, & victuris in omne ævum celebrare laudibus potuerit.

Alexandrum Morum Eccleſiaſten,

Libelli famoſi, cui titulus, Regii ſanguinis clamor ad cœlum adverſus Parricidas Anglicanos, Authorem rectè dictum.

NIhil equidem aut antea inauditum, aut meâ tum expectatione alienum, cùm Libertatis cauſam primò accepi defendendam, uſu venturum mihi arbitratus ſum, ſi liberatores Patriæ, cives meos, unus præ cæteris publicê laudaſſem, Tyrannorum jus infinitum atque injurium coarguiſſem, ut improborum omnium in me propè unum ſerentur odia, atque redundarent. Prævidebam etiam tum bellum vobis, Angli, cum hoſtibus haud diuturnum, mihi cum perfugis, & eorum mercenariis ſempiternum propemodum fore: ut quorum vos tela de manibus eripuiſſetis, eorum in me maledicta atque convicia eò acriùs conjicerentur. In vos ergo furor hoſtium atque impetus deferbuit: mihi ut videtur ſoli hujus belli reliquiæ ſuperſunt; contemptiſſimæ quidem illæ, ſed ut ferè ſunt infimorum impetus animalium, ſatis infeſtæ. Non perditorum duntaxat civium, ſed exterorum etiam ut quiſque alienarum rerum plus nimio curioſus, ut quiſque importuniſſimus, corruptiſſimúſque eſt, in me involat, officii tantummodo mei ſatagentem; in me omne virus & aculeos dirigit. Quo fit, ut quod plerique ad commendationem operis, & audientiam ſibi faciendam præfari initio ſolent, ſe ab exili atque humili rerum materiâ ad res dictu graviſſimas atque maximas aſpirare, id mihi in præſentia nequaquam conceſſum ſit; ut cui nunc contrà vel invito atque nolenti à rebus maximis & glorioſiſſimis dicendis ad res obſcuras, anonymorum latebras, & adverſarii turpiſſimi perſequenda luſtra atque flagitia neceſſariò ſit deſcendendum. Quod etſi parum exordienti honorificum & ad reddendos lectorum animos attentiores minus accommodatum eſſe videatur, habet tamen quod exemplo haud abſimili, cùm viris optimis & præſtantiſſimis idem contigerit, conſolari poſſit ſiquidem & Africanus ipſe Scipio, poſtquam ea geſſerat quibus nihil in eo laudis genere felicius aut majus potuit, inclinatione rerum ſuarum perpetuâ & decreſcente ſemper ſuæ virtutis materiâ uſus eſſe videtur: Et primò Dux quidem ſummus, atque Hannibale ſuperior, mox contra hoſtem Syrum & imbellem Legatus, Tribunorum deinde impotentiâ vexatus, ſuam tandem communire villam Liternenſem contra fures atque latrones coactus eſt: in hac tamen rerum ſuarum declivitate atque deſcenſu par ipſe ſemper ſibi & æqualis dicitur fuiſſe. Unde ego, atque aliis aliundè monitis quicquid ſortis aut provinciæ dederit modò Deus, multo licet priore anguſtius, atque tenuius, id non aſpernari erudior. Sed quemadmodum Dux bonus (quidni enim bonos in omni genere liceat imitari?) contra hoſtem qualemcunque boni Ducis officium explebit; vel ſi hoc nimis invidioſum eſt, ut ſutor bonus, ita enim vir ſapiens olim philoſophatus eſt, ex eo quodcunque eſt ad manum corio calceamentum quàm poteſt optimum conficiet, ſic ego ex hoc calceamento (argumentum enim cùm inſtituiſſem dicere, puduit) trito præſertim jam antea atque diſſuto, ſiquid concinnare quod legentium auribus tantum non faſtidio ſit potero, experiar. Parſurus utique omninò huic operæ, niſi accuſationes mihi neſcio quas falſas, & mendacia objeciſſet adverſarius, quam ego maculam aut ſuſpicionem adhærere mihi minimè volo. Quando hoc neceſſariò tollendum mihi onus eſt, dabit quiſque veniam, uti ſpero, ſi populo qui non deſui pridem & Reipublicæ, mihimet nunc non deſuero.

Quoniam itaque tuam fidem, More, quam in ipſo libelli titulo tu publicam vocas, Ego publicatam jamdudum & perditam ſcio, ita ultrò ſtatim nobis obſtringis, ut ſiquid eorum in te agnoſceres, quæ de te ego ſcripſerim, majorem in modum iraſcerere, ex ore imprimis tuo, quo laqueo ſolet improbus irretiri ſemper & capi, judicandum te omnibus atque damnandum addico. Cùm enim & ex perpetuâ calumniâ, quâ meum omne dictum aut factum in deterrimam partem trahis, méque obruere invidiâ quæris, & ex contumeliis quas ſemper iniquiſſimas undique in me arripis jaciendas, ex omnibus denique ſignis atq; indiciis iræ facilè appareat vehementiſſimè te, quamvis id uſque neges, & apertiſſimè iraſci, effugere non potes quin arguaris agnoſcere in te ea, quæ vel affinxiſſe tibi me ais, vel in lucem protuliſſe.

Duæ ſunt res quarum ego te poſtulabam: altera injuriarum, altera flagitiorum. Injuriarum, quòd libelli in nos clamoſiſſimi Author extitiſſes; nam quòd populum Anglicanum ſatis lædere exiſtimares te non poſſe, niſi me eximiè præter cæteros læſiſſes, id ego honori mihi potius, quàm contumeliæ duco. Flagitia verò tua commemorare, ut dignum erat, idcirco non gravabar, ut oſtenderem, ſiquidem is eſt habendus clamoris author, qui edidit, & alius certè præter te nemo hactenus comparuit, quàm caſto ex ore clamor ille prorupiſſet. Quid tu ad hæc? negas te authorem illius libelli; & ita ſedulò, ita prolixe negas, cùm tamen liber ille nequaquam tibi diſpliceat, ut magis mihi pertimuiſſe videare, ne illum librum ſcripſiſſe, quàm ne illa in te tot probra admiſiſſe reperiaris; de quibus ſic leviter & timidè, ſed ſimul verſutè ac veteratoriè te purgas, ut nemo non ſubeſſe ulcus perſpiciat. Haud incallido fortaſſe conſilio; nam quis unum libellum ſcripſerit, quàm quis multa ſtupra fecerit difficilior longè eſt probatio; libellus ſine arbitris confici potuit; hæc ſine ſociis, & ſcelerum conſciis non potuerunt: illic veſtigia penè nulla neceſſariò apparent; hic plurima indicia & præcedunt, & unà adſunt, & ſubſequuntur. Itaque, ſi pernegaſſes ad te librum illum pertinere, arbitrabaris eâdem operâ & fidem meam de reliqua tua vita ſaltem apud longinquos infirmari, & meâ credulitate atque injuriâ, quâ te ſcilicet temere violaſſem, tuam magnâ ex parte levari infamiam: ſin ire inficias de libello non poſſes, reſtare tibi hoc ſolum prævidebas, quo nihil difficilius erat aut acerbius, ut de moribus & flagitiis haud perfunctoriè reſpondendùm tibi eſſet. Verùm ego niſi hoc doceo, niſi planum facio aut te authorem illius libelli famoſiſſimi in nos eſſe, aut te ſatis cauſæ præbuiſſe cur pro authore meritò haberi debeas, non recuſo quin abs te victus in hac cauſâ cum dedecore atque pudore turpitèr diſcedam; nullam à me culpam neque imprudentiæ, neque temeritatis, neque maledicentiæ deprecor.

Prodiit hoc biennio anonymus & probroſus liber, Regii ſanguinis clamor ad cœlum adverſus Parricidas Anglicanos inſcriptus; in quo libro, cùm Reſpublica Anglorum tota, tum nominatim Cromuellus, eo quidem tempore noſtrorum exercituum Imperator, nunc totius Reipublicæ vir ſummus, omni verborum contumeliâ laceratur: Secundùm eum, ſic illi anonymo viſum eſt, maledictorum pars maxima in me conjicitur. Vix ſuis integer ſchedulis liber iſte in Conſilio mihi eſt traditus; ab eo mox conſeſſu qui quæſtionibus tum præfuit, alter mittitur: ſignificatum quoque eſt, expectari à me hanc operam Reipub. navandam, ut huic importuno clamatori os obturarem. Verùm me, tum maximé, & infirma ſimul valetudo, & duorum funerum luctus domeſticus, & defectum jam penitus oculorum lumen diverſâ longè ſollicitudine urgebat: foris quoque adverſarius ille prior, iſti longè præferendus, impendebat; jamjamque ſe totis viribus incurſurum indies minitabatur: quo derepente mortuo levatum me parte aliquâ laboris ratus, & valetudine partim deſperatâ, partim reſtitutâ, utcunque confirmatus, ne omnino vel ſummorum hominum expectationi deeſſe, vel omnem inter tot mala abjeciſſe curam exiſtimationis viderer, ut primùm de iſto Clamatore anonymo certum aliquid comperiendi facultas data eſt, hominem aggredior. De te, More, dictum hoc volo: quem ego (quamvis tu nunc, quaſi inſons omnium atque inſciens falsò te accuſari vocifereris) nefandi illius clamoris vel eſſe authorem, vel eſſe pro authore haud injuriâ habendum ſtatuo. Et cur ſic ſtatuam nunc audies. Primùm ego, neque hoc leve putaveris, famam communem, conſentientem, conſtantem ſum ſecutus: neque eam ſolùm quæ populi vox, & ab antiquis Dea credita eſt, & à nobis hodiè vox Dei nuncupatur, tur, ſed eam etiam, ut legitimè tecum agi intelligas, quam Juriſperiti ab authoribus & probis & benè notis exortam, fidem adjicere teſtimonio docent. Verè hoc dico & religiosè, me toto biennio nullum neque popularem, neque peregrinum conveniſſe, cum quo de iſthoc libello ſermones mihi fuiſſent, quin omnes unâ voce te ejus Authorem dici conſentirent, neminem præter te alium nominarent. Ita univerſim obtinuit hæc fama, ut te poſſim ipſum hujus rei teſtem producere. Recita tuum ipſe teſtimonium.

Teſtimonium Mori, pag. 10.

Neque verò tacui, ſi cui fortè ſubiit aliquid ejuſmodi ſuſpicari, ſed palam & exertè reſpondi reclamans, conqueſtúſque ſum invito ſupponi mihi fœtum alienum, ſiquidem illius auctor libri vel ex parte vel in totum exiſtimarer.

Quamvis hoc falſum ſit tacuiſſe te, aut reclamaſſe quod plurimi teſtantur, qui te de eo libro & confitentem & gloriantem audierunt, dum hoc tutum tibi, aut lucro aut honori credidiſti fore, hìc tamen vides, quàm hæc fuerit concepta altè, nec ſine cauſa proculdubio, hominum opinio, ut ne familiaribus quidem tuis perſuadere potueris, quo minùs reclamantem te & conquerentem atque invitum illius libri authorem vel ex parte vel in totum exiſtimarint. Quid ſi ego, qui te noſtris partibus inimiciſſimum eſſe, & de Republicâ noſtrâ peſſimè ſolere loqui intelligerem, hâc pluſquam famâ nixus, hâc hominum non vulgarium communi opinione atque conſenſu adductus, hoc pro certo ſumpſiſſem, te hunc libellum compoſuiſſe? Tu contra quid affers, quamobrem tantæ hominum, etiam amicorum tuorum conſenſioni de inimico noſtro facilè habere fidem non debuerim? Factum negas. At quotuſquiſque eſt reorum, qui multis etiam teſtibus in judicio convictus atque damnatus in ipſo ſupplicii loco, ubi etiam pœnâ capitali jamjam plectendus eſt, pernegare crimen ſuum non ſoleat; immò ſecretum quodvis anteactæ vitæ facinus ſuum proferre in lucem non malit, cujus pœnas meritas dare ſe nunc dicat, quàm de illo crimine confiteri de quo ſit condemnatus? Accedit quod is tum negat, cùm ſententiâ jam latâ, eùm expeditâ & imminente jam ſecuri, nihil juvat neque prodeſt negare: Tu propterea, quòd prodeſt, quòd eſt cur metuas, quòd manendum tibi in iis provinciis ſi faterere non eſſet, idcirco negas. Pacis articulos inter Nos & Fæderatas Provincias Latinè conditos vertiſſe te dicis. Legito itaque nonum, decimum, & undecimum, quos tu cùm vertebas, ſolùm vertere debuiſti.

Articulus pacis nonus.

Quod neutra dictarum Rerump. hoſtes alterius Reipub. declaratos vel declarandos, in ejus dominia recipiet, neque eorum alicui in prædictis locis vel aliò quocunque, etiam extra ſua dominia auxilium, conſilium, hoſpitium concedet, nec iſtiuſmodi hoſtibus ullum auxilium, conſilium, hoſpitium, favorem, pecunias præſtari permittet.

Articulus decimus.

Quòd ſi alterutra dictarum Rerumpub. aliquem ſuum fuiſſe & eſſe hoſtem, & in ſua dominia receptum eſſe, aut ibidem commorari per literas ſuas publicas alteri ſignificaverit, tunc illa Reſp. quæ hujuſmodi literas receperit, intra ſpatium viginti octo dierum tenebitur dicto hoſti mandare, ut extra ſua dominia exeat. Et ſiquis prædictorum hoſtium intra quindecimum diem non exiverit, ſinguli morte & amiſſione bonorum multabuntur.

Articulus undecimus.

Quòd nullus hoſtis publicus Reip. Angliæ in aliqua oppida, vel alia loca recipietur; neque Domini Ordines Generales alicui hujuſmodi hoſti publico in locis prædictis, pecuniis, commeatu, aut alio quocunque modo auxilium, conſilium, aut favorem dari permittent.

Hæccine audis? quàm diligenter, quàm ſeverè ab utraque Republica tribus continuis articulis cautum atque proviſum ſit, nequis alterius hoſtis ab alterutra vel hoſpitio vel tecto recipiatur; qui hoſtis declaratus vel declarandus ab alterutrâ ſit, ei ut aquâ & igni ab altera ſit interdicendum, ut morte etiam multandus dus ſit, ni intra dies quindecim poſt denunciatum ſibi diſceſſum ſarcinas collegerit? Hæccine, inquam, ſine metu ac trepidatione audis? qui ſi hoſtis eſſe aut fuiſſe deprehendêris, nóſque ut viros fortes decet, in ſententia perſiſtemus, neque articulos otioſos ad numerum duntaxat compoſuimus, ubi tua illa ſtipendia, & ſacrarum Hiſtoriarum profeſſiones? cui de tota illa ditione intra paucos dies decedendum erit; & relictis Hiſtoriis, illa vitæ tuæ fabula nequiſſima neſcio quibus in terris peragenda. Quis enim hoſtis noſter magis publicus eſt dicendus, quàm is, qui libro famoſiſſimo in vulgus edito totam Angliæ Rempubl. inhumaniſſimis verborum contumeliis proſcindit atque dilaniat? latrocinii, cædis, perduellionis, impietatis, parricidii, immò novo prorſus vocabulo deicidii demùm incuſat; omnes Principes, Populos, Nationes in nos, tanquam in monſtra ac peſtes generis humani ad arma, quantum in ſe eſt, concitat; & quaſi ad commune atque ſacrum bellum nobis inferendum hortatur? Hunc tu confeciſſe librum niſi pertinaciter negares, nullus nunc locus conſiſtendi iis in locis tibi eſſet. Cum igitur tibi tam ſit omnino periculoſum fateri, cùm incolumitatis & commodorum tuorum, ac prope ſalutis tam vehementer interſit librum iſtum ejurare, cur tua inimici & improbiſſimi hominis negatio contra famam conſtantem, immò verò quod plus eſt, contra tot hominum ſatis perſpicacium, & amicorum aliquot tuorum opinionem valere debeat, non video. At enim dicis, non te ſolum negaſſe; teſtem habere reverendum antiſtitem Ottonum, qui clariſſimum Duræum admonuerit te illius libri non eſſe auctorem, ſibi probè notum auctorem longè alium. Itaque ex ipſis Duræi literis oſtendam, neque probè hoc noviſſe Ottonum, neque teſtem omnino eſſe, vel ſiquid teſtatur, ex eo reddi te multo quàm antea ſuſpectiorem.

Ex literis Durai, Haga, April. $\frac{14}{24}$. 1654.

“Quod ad reſponſum Miltoni ad eum librum, cui titulus Regii ſanguinis clamor: Equidem à Miniſtro quodam Midelburgenſi, qui Mori perfamiliaris eſt, certior ſum factus, Morum non eſſe illius libri authorem, ſed Miniſtrum quendam Gallicum, quem Morus ſub conditione ſilentii eidem nominavit.

Et ex alteris Amſterodamo, April. $\frac{19}{29}$. 1654.

“Cum D. Ottono colloquutus ſum; hic quidem acerrimè Regius eſt, & Moro perquam intimus; idque mihi dixit, quod ſuperioribus literis ad te ſcripſi, Morum non eſſe Clamoris Regii ſanguinis authorem.

Ex quibus hoc in primis nemo non intelligit, Ottono, ut qui partibus Regiis addictiſſimus, nobis inimiciſſimus, Moro à ſceretis ſit, ne ſi ſua quidem fide quicquam afferat, credendum eſſe. Nunc autem cùm apertè fateatur Ottonus, quicquid hac de re ſciat, abs te hauſiſſe, tuâ ſolâ authoritate niti, tuum hoc apud ſe depoſitum arcanum eſſe, non hoc Ottoni teſtimonium, ſed tua adhuc ſola negatio eſt: immò verò potiùs tua clara confeſſio dicenda erit, illius te libelli vel componendi vel procurandi cum pauciſſimis eſſe conſcium; ſi non authorem, at certè ſocium & adminiſtrum; vel tuâ operâ vel tuo conſilio librum illum fuiſſe editum. Quod ſi ita eſt, ut eſt ſanè per tuum teſtem, ex tuometipſius ore veriſimillimum, equidem haud metuo, ne te falsò inſimulaſſe dicar, ſi vel authorem ipſum affirmaverim te, vel eodem numero habuerim. Quis non jam planè perſpiciat, quàm penitùs ex ſinu tuo liber iſte prodierit? quàm non de nihilo conſtantiſſima de te iſta fama invaluerit? verùm adhuc clarius hoc idem ſtatim perſpicere cuivis licebit. Jam enim à fama, quod poſtmodum apparebit, minimè fallaci, ne vocis invidiâ contra me utaris, ad juſtam probationem & compertiſſimos mihi teſtes tranſeo. Accipe in primis literarum partem, quæ haud ita multo pòſt Lugduno Batavorum ſunt datæ, quàm libellus iſte clamoſus Hagæ-Comitis eſt editus. Miſſæ ſunt hæ literæ ad amicum quendam meum ab homine & docto & prudente, & rerum peritiſſimo, mihi ſatis noto, & in Hollandia notiſſimo: in quibus libelli cujuſdam famoſi factâ mentione, hæc ſtatim verba ſubjungit.

Literæ Leidenſes, Septemb. 27. ſtilo novo. 1652.

Nec majoris momenti eſt iſte Mori liber, cui titulus Clamor Regii ſanguinis ad cœlum: ſatiſque vendibilis fuit, donec Author illius vitiatâ Salmaſii uxoris ancillâ, ipſe ſuam exiſtimationem commaculavit. Hæ literæ eodem puto menſe, integræ ſunt evulgatæ, inque actis diurnis apud nos quinto quoque die hebdomadæ prodire ſolitis, palam extant; ejuſque authoritate vel qui miſit eas, vel qui edidit, fidem facilè ſuam tuentur, meam abſolvunt. Hæc habui neque levia, neque ullo modo contemnenda, cur hunc Regii ſanguinis clamorem opus tuum eſſe crediderim: famam conſtantem, non vulgi, ſed ampliſſimorum hominum per biennium totum opinionem atque conſenſum, literas viri intelligentiſſimi atque honeſtiſſimi vicina ex urbe miſſas, quibus an quid certius in re præſertim longinqua de inimico & extraneo homine, & omni infamiâ jamdudum cooperto, expectandum fuerit aut requirendum, haud ſcio. Age verò; ne tu me triſtem nimis & obſtinatum queraris, aliquanto laxiùs te habebo, quo deinde fortiùs teneam atque conſtringam: quoniam attributum tibi librum elegantulum ſic averſaris atque horres, contra hæc omnia quæ afferre hactenus potui tam valida, tuam valere ſingularem & ſuſpectiſſimam negationem patiar; remittam tibi hoc totum atque largiar, non eſſe te hujus libelli, qui Regii ſanguinis clamor inſcribitur, authorem; & tamen, quod jam forſitan expectas, non ſic abibis. Conſtat iſte liber & coagmentatur prooemiis quibuſdam & epilogis, Epiſtolâ ad Carolum alterâ ad Lectorem, clauditur carmine, altero in Salmaſium Eucharistico, altero in me diffamatorio: ſi ullam hujus libri paginam, ſi verſiculum fortè unicum ſcripſiſſe aut contuliſſe, ſi edidiſſe, aut procuraſſe, aut ſuaſiſſe, ſi denique edendo præfuiſſe, aut vel operæ tantillum accommodaſſe te reperero, quandoquidem nemo alius exiſtit, tu mihi ſolus totius operis reus, & author, & clamator eris. Neque verò meam hanc ſeveritatem, aut vehementem animum eſſe dixeris; idem apud omnes fere gentes jure &æquiſſimis legibus eſt comparatum. Quod ab omnibus receptiſſimum eſt adducam, jus civile Imperatorium.

Siquis ad infamiam alicujus libellum, aut carmen (aut hiſtoriam) ſcripſerit, compoſuerit, ediderit, dolóve malo fecerit, quo quid eorum fieret, &c. Adjiciunt aliæ leges, Etiamſi alterius nomine ediderit, vel ſine nomine. Et omnes decernunt eum pro authore habendum eſſe atque plectendum. Quæro nunc ex te, non utrùm Regii ſanguinis clamorem, ſed an præmiſſam clamori epiſtolam Carolo dicatam, ullámve ejus particulam feceris, ſcripſeris, edideris, edendámve curaveris? quæro an alteram ad lectorem, quæro denique an illud infame carmen condideris, aut vulgandum curaveris? nihildum ad hæc reſpondiſti; ſi clamorem ipſum tantummodo abdicaſſes, omnémque ejus particulam gnaviter ejuraſſes, ſalva fide evaſiſſe te putabas, nóſque probè ludificaſſe; Epiſtolam videlicet ad Carolum filium, aut ad Lectorem, carmen etiam Iambum, Regii ſanguinis clamorem non eſſe. Tu itaque ſic breviter habeto, ne tergiverſari in poſterum queas, aut prævaricari; ne diverticulum ullum, aut latibulum ſperare; ut jam ſciant omnes quàm non mendax, ſed veriloqua, aut ſaltem non de nihilo iſta fama de te increbuerit, tu, inquam, ſic habeto: me non famâ ſolùm, ſed eo teſtimonio, quo nullum certius eſſe poteſt comperiſſe, te & libelli totius cui Regii ſanguinis Clamor eſt titulus, editionem adminiſtraſſe, & operam typographicam correxiſſe, & Epiſtolam illam ad Carolum ſecundum, Vlacci nomen præferentem, vel ſolum, vel cum uno atq; altero compoſuiſſe. Id quod tuum ipſum nomen Alexander Morus exemplis aliquot illius epiſtolæ ſubſcriptus, multis ejus rei teſtibus oculatis clariùs indicavit, quàm tu negare aut expedire te ullo pacto queas. Si dicis, importunitati quorundam amicorum te hoc dediſſe, ut epiſtolæ nomen tuum apponeres, non aliunde quàm ex ore tuo ſic excuſanti qui ſolenniter affirmas, & eo præſertim loco paginæ 39. in quo, ut credatur tibi enixè flagitas tueri te tua, aliena tunc demum forte curaturum, cum ex cuſſus propriis fueris. Teipſo itaque flagitante, credendum non eſt te nomen tuum illi Epiſtolæ fuiſſe ſubſcripturum, tua niſi eſſet: id quod ſequente paginâ penè confiteris, tuàmque ipſe fraudem detegis & fallaciam, quâ fretus Clamoris authorem te eſſe toties negas. Nam quis non miſereatur, inquis, hallucinationis tuæ cùm Præfationem Typographo tri- buis modo, modo adimis: Clamorem totum in me confers, qui ne particulam quidem ullam ejus extuli. Hoc cui non ſuboleat? cùm Præfationis ſeu Epiſtolæ ſimul & Clamoris mentionem facis, Clamoris ne ullam quidem particulam conferri in te ſinis; Præfationis nullam reſpuis, nullam inficiaris: immò quaſi errorem meum videris propemodum ridere, quòd ſatis conſtanter non dixerim tuam eſſe. Si inſciente te & prorſus ignaro factum hoc dicis, ut nomen tuum ſubſcriberetur, primùm credibile non eſt quenquam eſſe auſum mittendæ ad Regem Epiſtolæ cum dedicato libro excuſæ, alienum nomen ipſo inconſulto ſubſcribere. Complures deinde ſunt, qui ex te ipſo audierunt, cùm tuam eſſe illam epiſtolam vel interrogantibus faterere, vel ultrò ipſe prædicares. Verùm tua nécne fuerit, non admodum laboro; túne ſolus an cum uno aut altero eam compoſueris; quod & hîc pag. 41. ſubindicare ludibundus propè videris. Te iſtius ego non Epiſtolæ duntaxat, ſed & libelli infamiſſimi ſolum propè conſcium, te ejuſdem editorem aut edendi adminiſtrum, te Epiſtolæ ad Carolum aliquammultis exemplaribus divulgatæ ſubſcriptorem notiſſimum, te ſcriptorem etiam confeſſum, te ergò omnium legum conſenſu atque ſententiâ totius operis authorem ipſum tuo ore convictum atque conſtrictum teneo. Hæc quo dicam teſtimonio tam remotus, & unde mihi tam liquidò conſtare potuerint, ſi quæris, non famâ, inquam, ſolâ, ſed partim teſtibus religioſiſſimis qui coràm hæc mihi ſanctiſſimè aſſeverarunt, partim literis vel ad alios vel ad me ſcriptis. Literarum verba ipſa expromam, ſcribentium nomina non edam; propterea quòd in rebus alioqui notiſſimis neceſſe non habeo. Hem tibi imprimis ab homine probo, & cui ad hanc rem perveſtigandam haud mediocris facultas fuit, literas Hagâ Comitis ad me datas.

Ex Literis Hag. Com.

Exploratiſſimum mihi eſt, Morum ipſum Clamoris Regii ſanguinis exemplar nonnullis aliis imprimendum obtuliſſe, antequam Vlaccus illud accepiſſet; ipſum corrigendis operarum erratis præfuiſſe; ab ipſo exemplaria, ut primum quodque abſolutum eſt, compluribus impertita ac diſſipata.

Viden' ut hæc dilucida atque diſtincta ſint, ut non dubiis rumoribus collecta, ſed datâ operâ ac diligentiâ hominis iis in locis ac rebus verſatiſſimi, perveſtigata & inquiſita, certiſſimis indiciis comprobata atque comperta? Atqui teſtem, inquies, unum jus omne rejicit: en itaque ex ore duorum teſtium, quo teſtimonio neque ſacrum, neque civile jus quicquam amplius aut locupletius deſiderat, firmatum à me omne verbum, ut dicitur, & corroboratum habebis. Accipe nunc ſis quæ vir honeſtiſſimus idemque intelligentiſſimus & certò ſibi cognita, & illic teſtatiſſima Amſterodamo ſic ſcribit.

Ex Literis Amſterodamo.

Certiſſimum eſt omnes ferè per hæc loca Morum pro authore illius libri habuiſſe, qui Regii ſanguinis clamor inſcribitur: nam & ſchedas à prælo exceptas ipſe correxit, & aliqua exempla ſubſcriptum dedicatoriæ nomen Mori præferebant, cujus & ipſe author erat; dixit enim ipſe amico cuidam meo, ſe illius Epiſtolæ authorem fuiſſe: immò nihil certius eſt, quàm illam ſibi Morum vel attribuiſſe, vel agnoviſſe pro ſuâ.

Verùm requiris adhuc tertium: non id quidem cogit lex, attamen indulget. Eſto; largiſſimâ per me lege utere: poteſt fieri, ut terni opus ſint teſtes: coarctatum tibi à me juris quicquam non dices. Addo jam tertium.

Ex alteris literis Hagâ Comitis.

Dixit mihi Hagæ Comitis vir quidam primarius, habere ſe Regii ſanguinis Clamorem, cum ipſa Mori epiſtola.

Vides quàm largiter tibi admetiar: clara enim hæc ſunt, quis neget? tu tamen ſcito clariora apud me eſſe, quæ datæ fidei cauſâ reticeo, quàm quæ nunc palam exhibeo. Quod ſi adhuc tamen vis cumulum, fortaſſis accedet. Interea nunc libero ac ſoluto animo ad reliqua proficiſcor; quandoquidem id quod Deum Opt. Max. precatus ſum, adeptum me eſſe ſpero, ut nemini videar, viro præſertim bono & intelligenti, incertis rumoribus elatus temerè, accuſationem contra te falſam inſtituiſſe, nec fictis criminibus innocentem, quod quereris, & immeritum perfudiſſe; ſed tectum atque duplicem veris redarguiſſe, latentem atque ſectantem tenebras in lucem protraxiſſe: quod quidem & ex ipſa teſtimonii claritate perſpicuum eſſe reor, & in ipſis plurimorum hominum non conſcientiis modò, ſed & ſermonibus, ubi hæc geſta ſunt, clarius elucere. Quibus ſi ego teſtimonium denuntiare poſſem, obruerere, mihi crede, multitudine tot teſtium: quos tamen aliquando ſponte ſuâ veritati tam illuſtri, ſi opus erit, ſua nomina palam daturos eſſe confido. Quòd ſi hanc probationis vim atque evidentiam, quam ne Judex quidem ſeveriſſimus repudiaſſet, tu falſam tamen eſſe, id quod incredibile eſt, contendere audebis, erit fortaſſe cur de tuo queraris atque deplores infortunio, aut iratum tibi atque infenſum agnoſcas Deum, qui per aliorum vel errorem vel mendacium aſſignati tibi hujus libelli illa alia tua dedecora in Eccleſia diutius non ferenda, latiùs patefieri, & perſonam illam eccleſiaſticam, quam circumfers impudentiſſimè, detrahi tibi voluerit; me cur incuſes deinceps aut reprehendas non erit, immo nec unquam fuit, velles modò tua in nos commiſſa recognoſcere; verùm illa mordicus inficiari nimium tibi expedit, & ſimul pergis laceſſere. Noli igitur, quod jam iterum moneo, me inculpare, ſi rurſus quæ nolis nunc viciſſim audieris. Sed videamus quid ſit. Primùm occurrit mihi, nec opinato, mea pro Pop. Anglicano Defenſio ſecunda, typis Vlacci malevoli mendoſiſſimè ac malitioſiſſimè excuſa; omiſſis nonnunquam verbis integris, non ſine ſtructuræ totius atque ſententiæ vel depravatione vel interitu. Quod ego omnes volo monitos, qui mea curant legiſſe, nequid meum ex officina hominis inimici & veteratoris exire integrum aut ſincerum exiſtiment. Huic acceſſio eſt. Vlacci itidem mala merx, Alexandri Mori fides publica. Ita ego quos à me longiſſimè ſummoviſſe ac protelaſſe ſum ratus, eos vel invitus ſub iiſdem pellibus conjunctiſſimos mihi reperio. Sic eſt profecto; qui liberrimè riſerit hos homines, ſibi devinxerit. Cavendum ſanè & procul fugiendum erit cui putaverint iſti naſum eſſe aduncum; ne aliquando ſatis irriſi, irridentis naribus duntaxat uncis ipſi ſeſe tanquam uniones hinc atque inde ſuſpendant. Cognoſcite verò nunc adverſarium, ſiquis unquam fuit, degenerem, iniquum, odioſum. Nam ut primùm, neſcio quo caſu per amicum meum, non id agentem ut ab iſto gratiam iniret ullam, intellexit me ad Clamorem Regii ſanguinis reſponſum in ſe edere, æſtuare mens hominis conſcia, & omnes in partes verſare ſe cœpit. Inter alia trepidantis atque degeneris animi indicia, qui libellum modò famoſum tam cupidè, támque improbè in alios edidiſſet, libellum nunc ſupplicem ad Legatum Fœderatorum Ordinum apud nos commorantem ſcribit, orans atque obſecrans, uti cum Dom. Protectore quam inſtantiſſimè de ſupprimenda mea Defenſione ageret. Cùm reſponſum tuliſſet impetrari nequaquam id poſſe, exire nihilominus in lucem, jamque adnavigare animadverſorem in ſe librum cum ſpicilegio quodam & collectaneis facinorum ſuorum, conturbatus, & huc, illuc curſitans, circumſpectiſſimus deinde homo, totus in ſpeculis eſt; oculos ab litore dimovere vix audet; ubi adveniſſe librum cognovit, ſuúmque ſtatim indicem ſenſit, prece neſcio an pretio exorat librarium, ut exemplum illius libri ullum me divenderet, donec ipſe reſponſum ſuum confeciſſet; id eſt, ut commercii fidem violaret, donec iſte fidem publicam conflaſſet. Ita bonus ille vir quingenta plus minus exempla rectè & emendatè edita ſuo arbitratu premit, dum Vlaccus interim jacturam alienam ſuum ratus compendium, quot ſibi videtur mendoſa imprimit. Bene agis, Vlacce, ut conſueviſti; ſed auctarium hoc damni quid ſibi vult adjectum? cur appendices vos ipſos adjunxiſtis mihi, hominum importuniſſimi? nemóne ut poſſit me velle, quin vos quoque vel ingratiſſimum onus unà ferre cogatur? Ergo ego, ut videtur, non cæcus, ſed cæcias, quos volebam propellere nebulones, attraxi. Tu verò, adeóne tibi, More, tuóque ſive genio ſive ingenio diffiſus es, ut victurum te, & in manus hominum perventurum deſperares, niſi te mihi aſſeclam quocunque irem, malè conciliatum agglutinares, & emptoribus etiam nolentibus te obtruderes? verùm expertus jam didici quid ſit picem attrectare; & erat hoc, opinor, haud minus Vlacci aſtutiâ proviſum, qui non Typographus ſolùm, ſed arithmeticus, quod jam fateor, vetulus, metuebat ne Alexandri Mori neglecta fides publica jaceret, ſéque à ſoricibus ægrè tueretur, niſi hanc artem Alligationis, verè cauponariam, adhibuiſſet, & vile ac vitioſum vendibili miſcuiſſet. Age verò, quoniam neceſſe eſt cum Defenſione pro pop. Anglicano, Alexandri Mori fidem publicam coemere, quanquam parva hæc, utcunque nummulorum jactura erit, diſcere ex te avemus, quid ſit Mori fides publica? utrùm confeſſionem tuæ fidei publicam nobis exhibes, an quid in ſymbolum? Hæc enim tua fides publica eſt, opinor; privata an ſit, dicant qui te Spir. Sanctum non agnoſcere accuſant. Quid ergo eſt? tuámne dicamus fidem eſſe publicam, an fidem publicam eſſe tuam? Tuam fidem ſicut & pudicitiam eſſe publicam, non eſt difficile ut credamus. Qui enim alienas uxores & ancillas vis eſſe publicas, quidni tua omnia, pudorem etiam ac fidem publicam eſſe velis? An verò hoc eſt quod dicis, fidem publicam eſſe tuam? at hoc quì poteſt fieri? Túne fidem publicam pro ſcorto abduxiſſe te putas, tua ut ſimul eſſet & publica? aut captioſus hic titulus eſt, aut ſenſu vacuus. Si tua fides hæc eſt, quemadmodum eſt publica? ſi publica eſt, quemadmodum eſt tua? Relinquitur ut vel imprudens hoc titulo ſignificaſſe videare cùm Alexandri Mori fides publica ſit, adeóque non tua; rurſus cùm tua ſit, ideóque non publica, hanc quam affers fidem repugnantem & implicitam, nec publicam eſſe nec tuam. Quid ergo? aut dubiam, aut inanem, aut denique nullam. Quòd ſi contendis hanc fidem omnino eſſe publicam, quæ tua tanta impudentia eſt, More, ut cùm fidem ipſe nullam habeas quam pro te afferas, tot flagitia perpetrare fide publicâ exiſtimes tibi licere? ut nunquam aliàs dici veriùs, quàm de te verſiculus iſte videatur, quicquid peccat Morus, plectitur fides publica. Hæc tibi uni licentia ſi concedatur, non tu Alexander Morus, ſed Alexander ille Phrygius meâ quidem ſententiâ nominaberis. Beatum interim te, cui militet fides publica. Contra quem autem? contra meas nempe calumnias. Quas tandem illas? an quòd infamis libelli Clamoris Regii authorem te affirmaverim, nunc etiam juſtâ probatione arguerim? at verbum de iſto clamore in tua fide publica nullum. An quòd hortenſem te adulterum, domeſticum Pontiæ ſtupratorem enarraverim? at horti percautè tu quidem ac timidè mentionem facis; facta utrobique flagitia aut non omnino, aut obliquè tantùm & frigidè negas. Quid ergo fidem publicam ſollicitare opus erat iis de rebus, quas audacter ipſe negare non potes? nihil ſanè, niſi quòd circumforanei pharmacopolæ & vaniſſimi circulatoris hoc ſolum tibi defuit, ut elogiis ac teſtimoniis, neſcio quo pacto adſcitis atque correptis, & oſtentatâ fide publicâ te venditares. Tibi igitur ſi Scurra ſum, minus commoveor: quandoquidem is, qui ab oraculo ſapientiſſimus, ab tui ſimilibus Scurra Atticus eſt dictus. Cur autem Scurra tibi videor, More? an quòd nequitias tuas interdum ſallé perſtrinxerim? ne tu ſtultior ſis, More, & adhuc magis ridendus, ſi quenquam putas, modò emunctæ naris ſit, ad tuos fœtores, niſi ſale conſperſos, poſſe appropinquare. Sed vide, quàm tibi temperaverim, quàm leniter tecum egerim: Cùm enim in ipſa fronte libri nullo negotio potuerim tibi paria retuliſſe, & affixo tibi cognomento appoſitiſſimo atque meritiſſimo ita ſcripſiſſe, Contra Alexandum Morum adulterum & cinædum, cohibui me; partim tui miſertus, partim ut legentium oculis atque auribus nonnihil conſulerem, ne ſubito occurſu tantæ fæditatis atque offenſione averterentur.

Sed de his plus ſatis; ab infantiſſimo nunc titulo ad librum ipſum veniamus: id quod te, ut video, non delectat; nam rectâ eunti viam obſtruis; & ægrotantem Doctorculum neſcio quem Crantzium cum lectulo & culcitra, tanquam aggerem aut vallum obdis tibi & tranſverſum extrudis. Qui æger, ut ipſe ait, & ni fallor ægerrimus, id eſt maledicendi cupidiſſimus, haud ſcio an ventilatâ lodice vix ſe in cubitum erexerit, ut hæc ſua febriculoſa ſomnia deliraret. Mox quaſi teſtamento jam facto ſubjicit, Scripſi propia manu & ſubſignavi licet æger corpore. Age jam tu, ſi vis, animam; nos reſignemus; & Lectori imprimis quid legaveris inſpiciamus: multam, opinor, ſalutem; ne unciolam quidem; quid ergo? plorare: Lege ſi potes & luge. Me verò quòd ignotus minimé expectabam, ſecundum hæredem quincunce toto maledictorum aſpergis. Lege, inquis, & luge ſæculi vicem, in quo maledicentia tantum licet: Luge potiùs tot inſipientes doctorculos, quos niſi maturè caveat hoc ſæculum, vereor ne propediem & lugeat & luat. Tu verò tum luxiſſes, cum inauditâ audaciâ Salmaſius homo privatus, extraneus, nullâ injuriâ laceſſitus, in univerſam Anglicanam Remp. atque Senatum fœdiſſimis contumeliis bacchatus eſt: tum luxiſſes, cùm probroſus ille anonymus Clamorem Regii ſanguinis in nos eructavit, nec acerbiſſimis modò verborum contumeliis ad rabiem uſque furit ac ſævit, ſed nobiſcum ſic agi oportere, decere, convenire, rationibus & argumentis, ut ipſe putat, Chriſtianis defendere conatur. Cognoſce nunc, ſi potes, tuam ipſe iniquitatem: cùm externi, ad quos noſtra nihil pertinent, nobis vel acerbiſſimè maledicunt, ledicunt, & maledicentiam ipſam defendunt, vis omnes legant : cùm ego & pro meo in patriam officio, & Magiſtratuum juſſu meos cives ac populares, me denique ipſum probris omnibus læſum defendo, vis omnes lugeant. Tum cavere Lectorem jubes, ne me credat Hiſtoricum. At neque tu Albertus es Crantzius; & hoc tibi edico caveas, ne ego antequam peroravero te citiùs Mendacem, quàm tu me Fabulatorem coarguas. Quis & qualis ſit iſte Miltonus, inquis, ignoro. Non diſplicet; neque enim tanti eſt tuum noſſe aut non noſſe: Ego verò te ſtatim novi & morbum tuum. Quis ſit, inquis, ignoro; libelli ejus ſatis docent. Indocilis ergo Crantzius, qui ignorat; temerarius item atque injurius, qui ignotum illæſus lædis, qui per calumniam ac maledicendi præproperam libidinem ex libro de divortiis, loco non citato, verbis aut non plenè aut perperam adſcriptis, Blaſphemiæ falſò inſimulas. Tu antè, quiſquis es Crantzi, in malam peſtem abieris, quàm dixiſſe me Doctrinam Evangelii & Dom. noſtri Jeſu Chriſti de Divortio eſſe Diabolicam, uſquam inveneris. Quòd ſi dixi fortaſſe, quam inde conficiunt vulgares interpretes doctrinam, quâ poſt divortium neceſſariò factum, omne aliud matrimonium interdicunt, eſſe Diabolicam, id eſſe Blaſphemiam quo tu pacto evincis? niſi ſi fortè Theologorum dictatis quibuſvis contradicere, nunc primùm Blaſphemia eſt credenda. Quod autem affirmas Doctrinam de Divortiis ab omnibus patribus à Theologis veteribus & hodiernis, ab omnibus Academiis & Eccleſiis Britannicis, Hollandicis, Gallicis eodem modo explicari, ſcito te vehementer hallucinari: & ignorantiam Doctori tibi & præſertim reprehenſori turpem prodere: quam ſi vacat, in eo libro, qui à me Tetrachordon eſt inſcriptus, exues. Poteris ibi, ſi libet, diſcere, quam ego tueor ſententiam, eam & Patrum aliquot, & ſummorum poſtea Theologorum Buceri, Fagii, Martyris, Eraſmi fuiſſe; quorum hic juſto tactatu Phimoſtomum quendam Doctorem, tui comparem, eademque ferè blaterantem refellit. Interea non miror laborare te tantopere de inhibendis divortiis, cùm animadverto etiam domi tuæ haud leve accidere divortium ſolere; nimirum ſenſûs communis ab loquacitate tua. Quis enim mentis compos aut ſententiæ ſuæ ſic loquitur? In Salmaſio vix ipſi inimici aliud requirunt, quàm quod fuerit iracundior, & male conjugatus. Patere te doceri, doctorcule, quod pueruli ſciant. Non requirebant illi quod fuit, ſed quod non fuit. Ais me Eunuchum dixiſſe Salmaſium, quod nunquam dixi: duos tantummodo verſus ex Eunuchi Terentiani prologo deſumpſi, ut Scenicum plorantis exordium, & lamentabile ridiculum riſu, ut par erat, exciperem. Nihil minus quam Eunuchum fuiſſe affirmas: id meâ nihil refert. Tu tamen, quid hac in parte ſolus tam audacter pronuncies, cave. Adeòne legum neſcius ac rudis es, ut ullam rem difficiliùs probare te poſſe ſine duobus teſtibus arbitreris? Sed minitaris deinde; ſiquando prodibit viri ſummi poſthumus liber, Miltonius ſentiet mortuos quoque mordere. Vos ipſi exiſtimare poteſtis, qui vivum non pertimui, eundem mortuum quàm non reformidem.

Si mordacem in me mortuum emiſeritis, ſcitote neque melle neque mulſo placatum à me iri. Cognoſcetis an & ego λόγον ἐπιτάφιον commodè poſſim ſcribere. Dii boni, inquis, quam niger eſt Miltonius, ſi fides Salmaſio? at ipſam inferorum fuliginem ſi ſecum trahat, me, Deo benè juvante, denigrare non poterit. Tu Salmaſii in me convitia ut lætè nunc refers! quaſi pulmentum ægroto tibi hòc eſſet: contra illa convitia cùm ego me, ut par atque æquum eſt, defendam, tunc tuum illud triſte & querebundum rurſus audiemus, Lege & luge; & illi Dii boni tui tunc rurſus fortaſſè implorabuntur. Sed dic, quæſo, Sacroſanctæ Theologiæ doctor, quos tu Deos bonos colis? vereor ne Catechumenus hìc potiùs, quàm Doctor dicendus ſis. Docent ſacræ literæ unum eſſe bonum Deum. Tibi ſi Dii boni ſunt, erit fortaſſis & bona Dea; cujus tu Sacerdos & Myſtagogus Corybantem in me nunc agis. Ego quæ in Morum attuli, quanquam tu falſiſſima eſſe præfidenter affirmas, ſciunt illi eſſe vera, qui rebus omnibus interfuere, quique nullum Genevæ Crantzium eo tempore cognoverunt. Hoc ſanè miretur quiſpiam ſi hæc Mori fides publica eſt, quo pacto, quóve nomine tua iſta privata fides huc nobis ex grabatulo in præfationem irrepſit. Iniquitas certè in me tua fidem de illo quam infercis hìc tuam in dubium vocat, qui me accuſas, quòd innocentiſſimo Typographo parcere non potuerim. Ergo Vlaccus, qui me ſibi prorſus ignotum petulantiſſimis convitiis adſcripto nomine palam appetivit, tibi innocentiſſimus eſt. Audi ergo iterum, Theologe, cui tu ſacræ ſcientiæ vix initiatus mihi videris, audi quàm te tuóſque mores Theologia ſacra & ſapientiſſimus præceptor dedoceat: Qui abſolvit improbum, & qui condemnat juſtum, abominationi Jehovæ ſunt æquè ambò. Verùm haud ſcio utrum in me ex ignoto factum modò inimicum iniquior, an in amicum ipſum ineptior ſis Morum: cujus prædicatas virtutes tot vitiis interpunctas, & propè alternas introducis, ut non ornatum, ſed maculis tantummodo variatum, non Morum, ſed morionem demiſiſſe abs tuis laudibus videaris. Pictor ſanè eximius primam laudis lineam cum litura ducis; ſemper magnas inimicitias exercuit cum æmulis. Vitium narras, Crantzi, in miniſtro evangelii quam minimè tolerandum; præſertim cùm iis inimicitiis ipſe, quod fateris, nimiâ loquendi libertate, locum ſæpe præbuerit. Deinde eſt arrogans & Gallicè Altierus, & Spanhemii judicio & tuo. Hactenus nigro lapillo; nunc vario: Fœlix ingenium, niſi crabrones irritaſſet. Æmulos nimirum ſuos, non ipſe aquila, ſed ut muſcas olim ſcarabeus ille veſpæ filius. Nullum novit Salmaſius nobiliorem genium, ſi laboris tolerantior fuiſſet: Ignavus igitur Morus; & tamen ſemper genio ſatis indulſit. Addítque ipſe Salmaſius variè læſiſſe uxorem ſuam: Unde protervus in matronas etiam Morus; præter inconſiderationem quoque tali homine indignam: Salmaſio itaque judice, quid eſt Morus niſi morus? Hìc autem fateor ſatis cauſæ fuiſſe, cur ægrum te ſubſcriberes; manifeſtò enim febricitas. Qui ſic tibi dixiſſe Salmaſium ais, ſiquid in Pontiâ peccavit Morus ego ſum leno & uxor mea lena. Feſtivè tu quidem in hoc dramate perſonarum numerum auxiſti, & uberem ridendi anſam, ſicui otium eſſet, porrexiſti. Verùm ſiquid hujuſmodi Salmaſius amico tibi & privatim, ſiquid incommodius de ſe vel de uxore familiariter locutus eſt, id tu, niſi planè delirares, amicitiam ſaltem reveritus & arcanum domeſticum, non tam ſtolidè hoc in loco effutiſſes. Sed redis ad laudes, acutum judicium Mori; adjunge inconſiderationem illam tali homine indignam, res duas inter ſe conjunctiſſimas. Fœlicitatem in concionando; & infœlicitatem in ſcortando: par alterum in Mori laudibus appoſitiſſimum. Accedit corollarii loco trium linguarum peritia: quæ profeſſorem hunc tandem conſummat nobis trilinguem; id eſt, cum ſupradictis virtutibus paulò plus quàm triobolarem. Cum voto denique finem facis ineptiendi; ut Deus Chriſtianorum (modo enim reliquiſſe Deos bonos tuos videris) hanc mentem inſpiret Poteſtatibus, ut hanc ſcripturiendi licentiam Chriſtianis infamem compeſcant. Vos itaque priores compeſcant, à quibus hæc omnis licentia primò exorta eſt: mihi mei defendendi jus ac poteſtatem adverſus contumelias veſtras, uti ſpero, non eripient. Intelliges tum ipſe, quàm ego libens omni hoc genere contentionum ſuperſedeam. Atque tibi jam, ut puto, ſatisfactum eſt: ídque eò ampliùs feci, quòd Doctorem te Sacroſanctæ Theologiæ cum ampliſſimo phylacterio agnoſcerem; Doctoribus autem mirificè delector.

Nunc Vlaccum paucis dignemur: nam & Vlaccus reſponſar, Typographus meus, & neceſſarius jam factus. Reſponſa hominis breviter colligam, ut perſpiciatis quàm bellè quadrent. Es veterator, inquam, Vlacce. Sum bonus, inquit, Arithmeticus. Et tamen queruntur, qui tibi expenſum tulerunt, peſſimè te numerare. Ego ad probitatis normam te exigo. Hem tibi, inquit, canonem Logarithmicum! Sophiſtica hæc eſt, Vlacce, non Logiſtica: perinde quaſi idcirco ſolùm Arithmeticam didiciſſes, quod in ea falſi regulam doceri audiveras. Clancularius es, inquam, & obæratus aufugiſti. Tu mihi Sinuum tabulas, & Tangentium, & Secantium crepas. At quibus tecum ratio eſt, expenſi tabulis te urgent: ídque ipſum eſt quòd ſinuoſum te nimis, & alieni cupidiùs tangentem, & malè ſecantem queruntur. Trigonometriam, inquis, converſis Sinubus in Logarithmos artificialem abſolvi. At artificia interim tua & verſutias Creditores luunt: Non trigonometram, ſed tetragonum ſine fraude cum illis te eſſe oportuit; non angulos & obliquitates, ſed ſuum cuique metiri ac reddere. De cætero, ad tuam te confeſſionem ipſam rejicio. Londini. Pariſiis, iniqui Librarii, iniquum judicium, iniqui Judices; tu ſolus integer & caſtus: at illi contra te unum omnes cùm audientur, vera eſſe ea quæ de te dixi, nemo non fatebitur. In me autem quàm ſceleſtus fueris, facilè evincam. Primùm ſcripſiſti ad Hartlibium, petens, ut mea, ſiquid haberem, poſſes excudere; & ſimul de mea oculorum calamitate, eſſémne omnino orbus luminum, ſedulò & quaſi dolens quæſiviſti: mox proditoriè, cùm intelligeres nihil tibi à me excudendum venire, cæcitatem mihi, quam quaſi ſollicitè modò & dolenter inquirebas, eam ſtatim ſcelerate inſultans palam exprobraſti. Nam Typographus, inquit, ſum; quid ad Typographos tam magnæ controverſiæ, niſi ut operam ſuam? Acutum ſanè & typographicum! Non alius quiſquam typographis plus hac in parte quàm ego conceſſerim. Num ergò tu famoſiſſimo libello tuum ſubſcribere profeſſum nomen quaſi author eſſes, debuiſti? & cujus ex libris lucrari cupiebas, neque nunc primùm, ut audio, lucratus es, ejus nomen turpiſſimis contumeliis maculare, cum privilegio ſcilicet, licere tibi exiſtimaſti? Bellum, inquis, erat; & ſimul miratur tua vaſtitas, quòd, factâ pace, bacchationes in me privatim tuas & ſingularem inſolentiam impunè tibi eſſe noluerim. Neſcis enim, vappa. quid belli ratio, in cauſa etiam longiſſimè diverſa, ab temulenta tua rabie diſcrepet. An ſiquis exiſtimationem meam privatus per cauſam belli famoſo libro violaverit, ea mihi injuria devoranda eſt, ut ne poſſim, cùm viſum erit, me juſta & expectatâ defenſione vindicare? Non me puduit, inquis, quanquam ignominiosè accuſatum, alteram editionem adornare. At non omnes tibi ſimiles ſunt Vlacce, ut non pudeat fidem, pudorem, omnia lucro poſtponere; cujus fœda cupiditas adeò vilem tibi & abjectum animum ingeneravit, ut tuis ipſe typis teipſum graphicè nebulonem depinxiſſe non erubeſcas; eodémque tempore mihi maledicere, & meis ex libris quæſtum facere. In quo quid cani ſimilius fieri abs te potuit? cujus ego allatrantis capiti, cùm os illud vehementer inflixiſſem, exclamas tu quidem & quæritaris; mox ut eſculentum eſſe comperiſti, reverſus blandulè, rodis ſimul & liguris. Tu verò mea aut non omninò attigiſſe debuiſti, aut non corrupiſſe; nunc inimicus librum meum non ſolùm excudiſti, ſed ultione viliſſimâ deformatum ac mutilatum & adverſariis hinc inde obſeſſum expoſuiſti: quorum alterum rapaciſſimam lucelli cujuſvis aviditatem tuam, alterum & tuam ſingularem malitiam & tuarum mercium improbitatem declarat. Hæc tua ſunt, Vlacce. Nunc remoto te circumpede Herum tuum aggredi tandem ab latere aperto liberiùs licebit. Qui quamvis non modò intus turpis, & ſibi conſcius, ſed foris jam penè omnibus manifeſtus atque perſpicuus ſit, tamen cùm in audacia poſitam. ſibi eſſe ſpem unicam ſtatuerit, abſterſo ore, ut in proverbio ſacro ſcortum illud, & aſſumptâ non ſolum viri ſancti oratione atque perſonâ, ſed ſapientiſſimi quoque titulo Eccleſiaſtes novus cum malâ cruce, & ſacrarum literarum. Profeſſor profanus incedit. Adeò ut mirentur omnes in quo ſumma eſſe tot vitia reperirentur, in eo illa omnia potuiſſe ab impudentia tam longè ſuperari.

Ego verò eorum quæ de te ſcripſi, More, cùm affinxerim ſanê nihil, affirmaverim autem ea quæ & creberrimâ paſſim famâ, & mihi privatim teſtibus idoneis eſſent cognita, utrius hoc noſtri ad ſempiternum dedecus futurum ſit, non id tuum, quod tamen tibi arrogas, judicium erit, ſed, Dei voluntate, hominum integrorum ſententiis dirimetur. Tu interim præfationes mihi ( quid enim tui præfatio ſit nondum aſſequor ) vel vaniſſimi vel mendaciſſimi, quanquam uberrima tibi mendaciorum copia eſt, mitte comparare. Teſtimonialium ut ſis tibimet callidiſſimus æruſcator, præfationum tamen coactorem te mihi nolo. Nam quod ais, quæ de te protuli ejuſmodi eſſe, nemo ut ſit eorum quibus paulo propius innotuiſti, quamvis iniquior eſſet, quin falſitatis perpetua coarguat, id uſque eò veritati planè contrarium eſt, ut eorum qui te propius norunt multi nuntiis, non nemo literis queſtus mecum ſit huic me argumento facinorum tuorum tam uberi & copioſo parùm ſatisfeciſſe; tantum abeſſe, quicquam ut finxerim, ut permultas præclaras etiam, tuas res geſtas ſilentio præterierim: ſe, ſi adfuiſſent, quod & optabant quoq; nonnulli, largiore me palmarum tuarum acceſſione & copia facilè fuiſſe inſtructuros. Tuum ergo illud miſerere, quo tu & operarius tuus, par bipedum odioſiſſimum, miſereri meam vicem vultis ridiculè videri, vobis veſtriſque vicibus moneo reſervetis, ego à me procul arceo: miſerationes improborum cujuſmodi ſint, didici. Nam quid eſt, obſecro, quod miſerationem hanc veſtram inhumanam tandem commoverit? quòd in te nempe hominem immeritum graſſatus ſim. At ô gemina impudentia, & conſciorum par calloſiſſimum! véſne ut audeatis vos immeritos aſſeverare, niſi fortè vocis ambiguo colluditis, quorum alter Clamorem illum infamem atque infandum edidit, alter excudit, uterque divulgavit? Diſcant omnes, quæ vos cum bono Deo affirmare ſoleatis, quàm ſint pro nihilo habenda. Nec precationem felicius, quàm miſerationem adſciviſti; aut ad juſtam nominis tui defenſionem aggredienti veram & verecundam ſuggerat tibi Deus orationem, ab omni mendacio & obſcœnitate prorſus abhorrentem: Alterum enim nunquam es præſtiturus, ut mendaciis abſtineas; alterum iniquiſſimè precaris, ut cum tua facta obſcæniſſima ſint, orationem ſuggerat tibi Deus factis abhorrentem: quod contrà precari debuiſſes, ut ſuggereret tibi Deus non verecundam, ſed obſcœnam: ſic enim tua facta verbis ſaltem propriis & non mendacibus Deo atq; hominibus confeſſus eſſes; ſic non hypocritam egiſſes; quod Deo longè gratius fuiſſet. Nunc non Deus te, ſed tua illa Dea audit Cotytto, ſive ea Laverna, ſive utraque eſt, labra tacitè moventem:

> Da mihi fallere; da juſto ſanctoque videri:

Quæris quî ſciam quæ tu tecum? dicam. Vocale quiddam, ſi neſcis, omnis, totúſque homo eſt: non lingua, non vox hominis ſola loquitur; vita ipſa, mores, facta, quid quiſque velit, tacente ſæpiùs linguâ, clamant atque teſtantur. Tu itaque hæc tacitè; illa clarè; Orationem videlicet ob omni mendacio & obſcœnitate prorſus abhorrentem, hoc eſt inquis diſſimillimam tuæ. De hoc utroque ſigillatim à me tuo ordine reſpondebitur. A mendaciis exordiris: nam ut hinc, inquis, ordiar, quid mendacius ipſa fronte libelli tui? quem, neſcis quare, Defenſionem ſecundam pro populo Anglicano vocem; re quidem verâ inquis teterrimam contra me Satyram & ventoſiſſimum Panegyricum à te dictum tibi. Næ tu mendacia jejunus admodum & eſuriens, ſed inani morſu captas, ſi toto libro nihil mendacius ipsâ fronte invenire potes: Quam ego & veracem eſſe, & per omnia libro conſentaneam facilè demonſtrabo; quid enim appoſitius, quid accommodatius ad defenſionem Populi Anglicani, quàm ſi ejus vitam & mores turpiſſimos eſſe convincam qui probroſiſſimo libello edito Populum Anglicanum tantâ injuriâ laceſſiſſet? eum te eſſe confirmo. Quid ſi digreſſus aliquoties eſſem, & in materiâ præſertim tam tritâ & ſæpe triſti Lectoris nonnunquam recreare animum aliunde experirer? Túne adeo preſſus & minimè laxus homo es, ut latum unguem ab argumenti cancellis diſcedere quoquam licere non putes? quæ lex Rhetorum tuorum digreſſiones iſtiuſmodi reprehendit? Ego ſi exemplis, quod poſſem, Oratorum illuſtrium explicarem quid hac in parte liceat & uſitatum ſit, efficerem ut appareret ſtatim facili negotio, quàm tu harum rerum rudis atque ignarus ſis. Nec ſolam Satyram, quod ais, in te ſcripſi, ſed ut perſpicerent omnes, libentiùs me & multo ſtudioſiùs bonos collaudare, quàm malos vituperare, clariſſimorum aliquot nominum laudes qui vel patriam armis & conſilio egregiè liberaſſent, vel mihi ſaltem facta eorum defendenti faviſſent, (cum id etiam cauſam cohoneſtaret) & paſſim admiſcui, & pleniùs introduxi. Atque adeò ne hoc quidem, quòd ſereniſſimæ Suecorum Reginæ grates potiùs, quàm laudes perſolverim tu unquam oſtenderis à Defenſione Pop. Anglicani, cui illa impensè exiſtimata eſt faviſſe, alienum fuiſſe. Quid ſi, quod objectas, me denique laudaſſem aliquantiſper digreſſus? quis ea tempora, eas perſæpe cauſas incidere non fateatur, ut propriæ laudes etiam ſanctiſſimis modeſtiſſimíſque viris indecoræ non ſint, nec unquam fuerint? hunc etiam locum uberrimum exemplorum illuſtrare copiâ ſi vellem, equidem me omnibus facilè probarem tu obmuteſceres. Sed me nuſquam laudavi; nec, quod criminaris, Panegyricum à me mihimet dictum uſquam invenies: Singulare quidem in me divini numinis beneficium quòd me ad defendendam libertatis tam fortiter vindicatæ cauſam præter cæteros evocaſſet, & agnoviſſe fateor, & nunquam non agnoſcere debere: & præclaram hinc miniméq; culpandam, ut ego quidem arbitror, exordiendi materiam ſumpſiſſe. Petitus deinde ab illo Clamore Regio convitiis omnibus atque calumniis, & infimorum numero habitus, non me laudibus, quanquam id nefas non erat, contra adverſarios deſpectores, ſed nudâ ac ſimplici rerum mearum narratione contentus, tuebar: id Populi Anglicani quem defendebam, quanti intereſſet, uti ego meam exiſtimationem non planè abjicerem nec obtrectandam quibuſvis & obculcandam relinquerem, præfatus antequam mei facerem mentionem ſedulò oſtendi: offenſionem denique ſicujus fortè hac in re incurriſſem, haud negligenter ſum deprecatus. Hæc tu ſi propter invidentiam & livorem aut non legere aut meminiſſe non vis, quid eſt reliqui niſi ut crepes? nullum enim in fronte libri mendacium, niſi abs te per malitiam atque calumniam conflatum reperietur. Quanto mendacior Alexandri Mori fides publica? an te omnia in illo libro ex fide publica ſcripſiſſe audes dicere? atqui aut hoc tibi neceſſariò dicendum, aut libri illius fronti nulla fides eſt. Ita tu dum in titulo tuo putidus, in meo malitioſus es, aut fides publica frontem per te, aut tua frons fidem perdidit. Pergis de mendaciis. Alterum eſt, inquis authorem eſſe me libri, cui titulus, Clamor ſanguinis Regii. Quod cum ego verum eſſe firmiſſimis teſtimoniis jam ſuprà demonſtraverim, téque illius libri certiſſimum curatorem atque editorem omnium jure gentium & legibus pro Authore habendum eſſe, ſequitur ut quæ mei fallendi ſpe nixus hoc loco vociferaris, quaſi author non eſſes, tametſi infirma per ſe, atque inania ſunt nunc fundamento illo fallaci ſubruto, ſuâ ſponte corruant atque ſubſidant: ſimú'que ut totum illud mendacium, illa omnis temeritas, imprudentia, immanitas, quâ me per ſummam impudentiam hinc oneras, in teipſum recidat. Exclamantem itaque & frigentem & tuo laqueo impeditum, te hîc prætereo: nugas autem quaſdam tuas ſine riſu non poſſum; per quas acutiùs & miſerabilius exclamare te putas. Nam licet, inquis, ea crimina quæ in me conjicis vera eſſent, tamen contra jus & fas omne eſſet, quod nullius in nos authoritatis, quoddam tribunal excitas, criminationes publicè ſpargis. An neſcis ergo, hominum ineptiſſime, idem hoc tribunal eſſe, eandem ſellam atq; authoritatem, jus idem criminandi & judicandi, quod ego veſtro primùm Salmaſio, mox Clamatori Regio defenſione juſtiſſima eripui? veſtrum ego nunc exemplum atque judicium in vos converto, veſtro jure utor; veſtrum ipſum tribunal, veſtra ſubſellia, quæ in nos paraſtis, de veſtris erepta manibus in vos juſtiſſimè ſtatuo. Deinde, inquis, tametſi libri author illius eſſem, non tibi tamen integrum fuiſſet tot ſcommata nihil ad cauſam pertinentia huic propinare ſæculo. Videte, quæſo, æquitatem hominis: Sibi & Salmaſio licere vult omnia, calumnias, mendacia, contumelias; nobis vera in illos crimina retorquere, quaſi ad cauſam ſcilicet minùs pertinentia, non licebit. Sanè qui res, rationéſque rerum recto judicio ponderare ſolent, non dubito quin mecum ſentiant, nihil vehementius ad cauſam pertinere, quàm quali quis vitâ atque moribus ſit qui eam acerrimè defendat. Ego cauſam Regiam, qui vehementiſſimè defenderit, ſi aut corruptum eſſe aut facinoroſum arguo, haud levi argumento impugnâſſe me cauſam Regiam ſatis intelligo: Si mendacem, ſi turpem, ſi perfidum per omnem vitam criminatorem noſtrum eſſe oſtendo, eundem quoque in nos eſſe eò faciliùs fidem facio. Tu interim cùm duo tibi propoſueris; alterum, ut oſtenderes nec eſſe te libri autorem illius, nec id fuiſſe mihi perſuaſum; alterum, falſa eſſe quæ in te conjecta ſunt probra, nihil horum efficis; ſed diſſolutus ac fluens, modò huc, modò illuc vagando, tum eadem inculcando, ignarus quàm in propinquo tibi effuſè nunc, pabulanti latens à tergo atque intactus hoſtis inſtet, dum neſcire me putas quid ſit libelli authorem eſſe, aut quid tu feceris, in eadem perſtas vel futilitate vel fallacia. Quid commerui? quid peccavi? quando Populum tuum læſi? Cavillaris etiam; quando boves tuos aut equos abegi? Non tu boves meos abegiſti, Cacus paſtor ut ſis; ſed alienas oves abduxiſti, tuam deſeruiſti Phryx novus Alexander, vel etiam Cataphryx Morus. At ſciſcitari ex amicis credo poteram, quos iſthic apud nos habes, nec paucos nec vulgaris notæ. Quaſi verò ego, qui divinus, ut ais, non ſum, tuos amicos quinam eſſent, ſcirem, qui ante hunc Clamorem belluinum abs te editum, ne vagiiſſe quidem adhuc te aut infantem natum ſciebam. Aut tu planè ſenſu, vel ſaltem logicâ deſtitutus es, aut ejus rudimenta non ſic dedidiciſſes, relationes in ſenſum non incurrere. Itaque & inimicos eſſe tibi tam multos eóſq; tuâ non pietate, ſed turpitudine quæſitos necdum audieram; neq; ut ludibriis tam eſſes opportunus, neque ut tu Veneris nepos, Junonem ſic iratam tibi haberes: quæ tibi eſſent infenſa numina æque ignorabam, & qui eſſent Crantzio Dii boni. Anni duo ſunt, inquis, ex quo tuum hoc drama exornas. Quanquam hoc perridiculum eſt, quod optaſſes nunquam editum, id ſerò editum queri, & ſum ego qui elaboratum rectè atque limatum ſiquid eſt, id diu accuraſſe ſi dicor, non reprehendendum me magis quàm Scriptores quoſque optimos putem, qui tarditatem ſcribendi imputatam ſibi à ſciolis facilè contempſere, tamen & hoc eſſe falſiſſimum ex procemio ſuperioris libri intelligitur, ubi cur maturiùs non reſpondiſſem cauſam reddidi, & errare te vehementer ſcito, ſi operis tam ardui fuiſſe credis vel inanem clamorem refutare, vel te cuivis obnoxium ludos facere. Nec mihi tot ſubciſivis horulis dicta illa Floralia, quæ vocas, quot tibi furtivis noctibus atque dieculis facta illa Feſcennina ſtetere. Et periiſſet ſanè, hic enim tecum ſentio, paradiſus ille tuus, & ficus & morus & ſycomorus, quibus nequitiam tuam, quantum potuit fieri, honeſtè adumbratam, quoniam ſunt qui rem oculis non viſam, factam credi nolint, iſtius defenſionis inanitatem ridens, vel argutè vel contemptim expoſui: periiſſent, inquam, illi omnes non ſanè floſculi, ſed arbuſculæ, niſi tu in horto mœchatus eſſes: ex hortenſi & ſuburbana cultione tua, non ex urbanitate meâ amœnitas iſta omnis effloruit. Quod autem in frontiſpicio Satyræ in te mea ( quæ non magis Satyra eſt, quàm quæ eſt Marci Tullii in Vatinium quemvis oratio ) tanquam propylæum operis illuſtre collocaſſe me ais, quid Morus Græcè ſignificet, fruſtrà tu quidem propylæa ſomnias; non ita eram decori neſcius, ut ſublime quicquam aut tragicum in hiſtoria tua ponerem: Ego tuguriolum illud tuum in horto, tu Palatium illud vetus, in quo hortus ille erat, fortaſſe cogitabas; & in illa olitoris cellula, haud dubiè Palatinus adulter tibi videbaris. Id ipſum autem Græcè ſignificare te dixi quod etſi lingua nulla eſſet, reipſâ te eſſe nunc dico. Illud tamen negaverim, quoties te tuo nomine Morum appello, invidiam me velle, quod quereris, ex nomine facere, & moriam tibi objicere; mihi enim id ferè in mentem non venit: ſed Profeſſori Græcæ linguæ Græcum etymon Mori ita perpetuò ſalire per cerebrum tibi ſolet, ut nemo ſalutare te poſſit More, quin tu ab eo te ſtultum appellari moroſè admodum ſuſpicêris. Hæc ſunt & hujuſmodi quæ tu paginis paulo minùs viginti, cùm Authorem te non eſſe Clamoris Regii probare debuiſſes, nugatus es: in quibus ſingulis ſi otiari tecum diutiùs & morari vellem, ipſe Morus eſſem. Nunc tandem ſeriò videris velle agere. Non rumores, non ſermones, ſed literas teſtes dabis, admonitum me fuiſſe ne in hominem innoxium incurrerem. Literas ergo inſpiciamus, quas in medium affers ampliſſimi viri D. Nieuportii Fœderati Belgii Legati ad te ſcriptas; quas tu, ut videtur, literas non ad probationis vim, quam nullam habent, ſed ad oſtentationem ſolùm legendas propoſuiſti. Is, quod ſingularem viri ampliſſimi humanitatem declarat ( quid enim is non viri boni, qui tui indigniſſimi cauſâ tantopere laboraret? ) ad Dom. Thurloium Secretarium adit, tuas literas communicat. Cùm nihil ſe proficere videret, ad me duos viros nobiles, amicos meos, cum literis iiſdem tuis allegat. Quid illi? Literas illas Mori recitant, rogant, & Legatum Nieuportium idem rogare aiunt, uti literis tuis, quibus authorem Clamoris Regii negares te eſſe, fidem haberem. Reſpondi non eſſe æquum quod poſtularent; neque tantâ fide Morum, neque id fieri ſolere, ut contra famam communem & rem alioqui ſatis compertam negantis de ſe rei & adverſarii ſolis literis crederetur. Illi, cùm aliud è contra nihil quod dicerent haberent, pugnare deſinunt. Si hæc non credis, tute percurre Legati literas, quibus ego nunc teſtibus in te utor. Optabat eum non invulgare librum: verùm id mei juris erat & poteſtatis. Ne tibi hanc injuriam facerem, ut illud tibi opus imputarem: At liquere ſibi, aut unde ſibi liqueret, injurium tibi hoc eſſe quòd imputaſſem, non ſcribit. Saltem ut nihil vellem inſerere, quod te tangeret. Quidni verò te tangeret quod ad te pertinet, niſi id ad te non pertinere demonſtraſſet? demonſtrare autem non potuiſſe, argumento firmiſſimo eſt, quòd cùm Dom. Thurloio Secretario idem denuò perſuadere vellet, nihil habuit quod mitteret, præterquam idem illud exemplum literarum tuarum; ex quo & illud facilè perſpicuum eſt, rationes illas ad me allatas ob quas optabat, ne vellem eum librum evulgare, nihil conjunctum cum Reipubl. rationibus habuiſſe. Noli itaque tu literas Legati corrumpere: nihil illic de hoſtili ſpiritu, nihil de importuno tempore; tantùm dolere ſe ſcribit noluiſſe me rogatu ſuo tantillum moderationis oſtendere: id eſt, noluiſſe me ſuo privatim rogatu tibi adverſario publico rem gratam facere; opus excuſum & jam penè editum revocare & de integro retexere. Excuſatum me habeat vir ampliſſimus, & præſertim Legatus, ſi injurias publicas privatis interceſſionibus condonare noluerim, nec ſanè potuerim; multóque minùs eas injurias Clamoris Regii, quæ neque ad bellum neque ad pacem recens factam ullo modo ſpectarent. Bellum illud contra Anglos, non contra Rempubl. fuit: bellum veſtrum non contra Anglos, ſed contra Rempubl. eſt. An ſiquis Regiarum partium per bellum Regium quicquam in nos commiſit, id per pacem Batavicam à nobis non erit vindicandum? ſiquis in Rempubl. noſtram contumelioſè quid ſcripſit, id poſt pacem cum Batavis factam non erit refellendum? an per alienum bellum plus Regiis in nos, quàm per noſtram pacem nobis in Regios licebit? At non nos cum Regiis aut eorum Clamatoribus, ſed cum iis Provinciis pacem fecimus, à quibus cauſa Regia longiſſimè ſejuncta eſt; eámque pacem in qua de hoſtibus noſtræ Reipubl. non modo non favendis, ſed ne tecto quidem recipiendis nominatim exceptum eſt. At enim hoc intempeſtivum & ἀπειρόκαλον fuit, quod alieniſſimo tempore cùm omnia hic & iſthic feſtis ob pacem ignibus collucerent, tu ſolus gelidâ perfunderis. Equidem non in eo poſitam ἀπειροκαλίαν exiſtimabam.

Tu lautus homo iſta meliùs: doleo non ſatis perpenſa à me officii momenta in te mei. At graviter peccatum eſt: tum enim latis clamoribus noſtrum veſtrúmque cœlum conſonabat. Quaſi verò te ardelione & incendiario benè multato, non multo lætiùs illi ignes pacifici & ſociales relucerent: quaſi etiam veſtrum noſtrúmque cœlum fauſtis clamoribus non mulò lætiùs conſonet; cùm infauſtus & feralis inimicorum clamor compeſcitur. Quod tu itaque alieniſſimum tempus; id ego opportuniſſimum fuiſſe contendo: nec obſtrepuiſſe me, quod ais, Pacis articulis, ſed acclamaſſe & plauſiſſe. Poſtremò & me prorſus ignoras, & tibimet intra paucos verſiculos manifeſtò mendax deprehenderis. Abs te, inquis, quo factum ſit animo non interpretor: Et ſtatim, quòd depoſitis armis, animum retineres armatum. Mirum ni ex eo bello quæſtum feci, aut ſtipendium aliquod navale, qui factam pacem uſque eò moleſtè tulerim. Dicam igitur quod me dicere neque ullum obſequium, neque neceſſitas cogit. Falleris tu quidem magnoperè, ſi quenquam eſſe Anglorum putas, qui Fœderatis Provinciis me uno ſit amicior, aut voluntate conjunctior; qui præclariùs de Republ. illa ſentiat; qui eorum induſtriam, artes, ingenium, libertatem aut pluris faciat, aut ſæpiùs collaudet; qui bellum incœptum cum iis minùs voluerit, ſuſceptum pacatiùs geſſerit, compoſitum ſeriò magis triumpharit; qui denique obtrectatoribus eorum minùs unquam crediderit. Unde tu nullam in me calumniam mendaciorem aut minùs congruentem affingere potuiſti. At illum rerum cardinem aucupatus eſſe videor, ut prodeuntibus demum articulis pacis obſtreperem. Tu ſcilicet cardo rerum; in te pacis articuli vertuntur; hunc ſi attingas, actum de pace eſt. At quem hominem? quo numero? civem credo egregium, Senatorem primarium, ornamentum curiæ: immò ne civem quidem, ſed inquilinum, alienigenam, & Scoto-Gallum impuriſſimum, odioſum omnibus atque offenſum, Reipubl. hoſtem, qui ſi quò expulſus, ejectus, & in rem malam amandatus eſſet, ne tantillum quidem articulis pacis noceretur; immò ſatisfieret potiùs. Tu itaque deſine, ſi ſapis, politicari; & pacis articulos cave dehinc muſſites, nequis te ex pacis articulis Regii Clamoris editorem ad ſupplicium poſcat. Pollicitus ſum, inquis, Legato, nihil indecens exiturum è calamo meo. Neque fefelli; vel ſiquid omnino illa in parte commiſi, in me ſolum commiſi, dum tuos excutere putores, tua tractare inquinamenta ſuſtinui: &, quòd illic etiam præfatus ſum, non tam quid me magis decuiſſet, quàm quid te dignum eſſet ſpectabam. Nec tamen indecentiùs aut acerbius in te ego, quàm olim viri graviſſimi in improbum quemque ac perditum & concionibus honeſtiſſimo quoque civitatis in loco atque conventu habitis, & ſcriptis palam editis invecti ſunt. Verùm ad illud nunc venio quod virum ſanctiſſimum & hujus ætatis longè caſtiſſimum offendit Morum; illoto ſcilicet ſermone utor, verbis nudis & prætextatis. Propudium hominis & proſtibulum! Téne illota verba reprehendere qui facta turpiſſima patrare non erubuiſti? Jam non pœniteret profectò, ſiquid in hoc genere liberiùs paulo dixiſſem; etiamſi aliud inde nihil aſſequutus eſſem, niſi ut elicerem ex te diſſimulationem hanc improbiſſimam, téque perſonatum omnibus vel hinc palam educerem hypocritarum omnium deterrimum. Quod autem tu mihi dictum libro toto oſtenderis, quod verbum illotius, quàm hoc ipſum Morus? ſed non in verbo neque in re, ſed in te vitium omne atque obſcœnitas tota eſt. Tu Fauno quovis aut nudo Satyro turpior, bona verba uti nuda eſſent tuis moribus effeciſti. Tuam nulla umbra, ne ficus ipſa quidem, velare turpitudinem potuit. Qui te dicit, tuáque flagitia, eum neceſſe eſt obſcœna dicere. Itaque ſi in tuum opprobrium vel nuda verba exeruiſſem, facilè me etiam graviſſimorum Authorum exemplo defendiſſem. Qui ita ſemper exiſtimarunt, verba nuda atque exerta cum indignatione prolata, non obſcœnitatem, ſed graviſſimæ reprehenſionis vehementiam ſignificare. Quis unquam Piſoni Annalium ſcriptori, qui propter virtutem & pudicos mores Frugi dictus eſt, vitio vertit, quòd in Annalibus queſtus eſt adoleſcentes peni deditos eſſe. Quis unquam Salluſtium Scriptorem graviſſimum reprehendit, quòd etiam in Hiſtoria dixit;

Quid Herodotum, Senecam, Suetonium, Plutarchum, Authores omnium graviſſimos adducam? quos tu ſi negas verba etiam pluſquam prætextata, réſque ſatis turpes rebus gravioribus aliquoties immiſcuiſſe, ſatis declaras te iis in Authoribus verſatum non eſſe. Hoc ſi omni tempore & loco indecens eſt, quoties tu Eraſmo doctiſſimo qui Roterodami ſtat æreus, quoties Thomæ Moro noſtro, cujus tu nomen tuo commaculas, quoties denique ipſis Eccleſiæ patribus antiquis, Alexandrino Clementi, Arnobio, Lactantio, Euſebio, dum obſcœna veterum religionum myſteria vel denudant, vel deridemt, indecentiæ & obſcœnitatis dicam ſcribere debebis? Verùm tu fortaſſè, ut ſunt ferè hypocritæ, verbis tetrici, rebus obſcœni, ne ipſum quidem Moſen iſtâ noxâ immunem abs te dimiſeris; cùm alibi ſæpiùs, tum etiam ubi Phiniæ haſta quâ parte mulierem transfixerit, ſiqua fides Hebræis, apertè narrat. Ne ipſum quidem Iiobum pudentiſſimum ac patientiſſimum, dum meretricem ſibi uxorem nudato & priſco ſermone imprecatur, ſi ipſe alienæ uxori inſidiatus unquam fuiſſet. Non te Salomonis Euphemiſmi cenſorem, non Prophetarum ſcripta tuam turpiculi immò nonnunquam planè obſcœni cenſuram effugerint, quoties Maſorethis & Rabinis, pro eo quod diſertè ſcriptum eſt, ſuum libet Keri adſcribere. Ad me quod attinet, fateor malle me cum ſacris ſcriptoribus εὐθυῤῥήμονα, quàm cum futilibus Rabinis εὐσχήμονα eſſe. Túque fruſtra Marcum Tullium inclamas; qui ſi in aureo illo quem citas, de Officiis libro, illud jocandi genus elegans, urbanum, ingenioſum, facetum arbitratur, quo genere non modò Plautus & Atticorum antiqua comœdia, ſed etiam Philoſophorum Socraticorum libri referti ſunt, id quod illic legiſſe poteras, non ille mihi quidem nimis anguſtos, non nimis ſeveros decori ſtatuiſſe fines videtur, ut cuiquam difficile ſit intra eos fines ſeſe continere; nedum ut ego me non continuerim. Noli itaque tu mihi homo inquinatiſſimus, de honeſto & decoro ineptire; non eſt tuum, mihi crede; immò tu ſic habeto, nihil minùs decere, nihil ab ratione ipſa decori magis abhorrere, quàm te talem, qualis es, lautum ſermonem uſurpare, aut illotum reprehendere. Sed videris nunc velle rem omnem in pauca redigere: Non ſum, inquis, autor Clamoris. Non ſuades. Res patet, dilucet, eámque pluribus argumentis affirmare tam ſit ineptum, quàm in clariſſimum ſolem mortale lumen inferre. Deſine ampullas; dic tandem aliquid. Ipſe ego quantum poſſum reclamo. Nempe nunc denuò; minacitèr modò & regiè; nunc miſerè. Amici non tacent. Ex ore tuo. Eccleſiaſtæ admonent. Fide tuâ. Legati confirmant. Ex literis tuis. Quid hoc omne aliud eſt, niſi illa initio tua ſingularis negatio, Non ſum author? Verùm tu, antequam ad hunc locum perveniſti, jamdiu intelligis miſer quo loco res tuæ ſint; quos in laqueos te indueris; quibus à me vinculis obſes tenearis: nunc quantum voles clama, Te non authorem Clamoris eſſe; cùm omnium gentium leges atque jura, Præconem te mihi pro Clamatore, Procuratorem pro Authore tradiderint. Quid nunc Authore fiat, aut ubi terrarum degat, nihil moror: vixerit ſanè in Gallia, & ſimul in Hollandia jucundum fuerit videre, quod narrat ipſe, quibus ludibriis, quibus periculis Legati noſtri eo tempore conflictarentur: ſit vel Satanicæ miniſter Synagogæ, non laboro; hoc ſaltem unum benè fecit, quod te tam diligentem ſibi támque fidelem diaconum, non Evangelii, ſed infamiſſimi libelli miniſtrum reliquit. Age nunc triumphos de me iſtos, quos ego flebiles tibi efficiam: profer in medium, ſi potes, mea illa mendacia, meam illam imprudentiam, temeritatem, audaciam, pertinaciam & impudentiam, meum illud ingens piaculum quòd te Regii Clamoris affirmaverim authorem. Clama quantum potes è longinquo ad Populum Anglicanum quem illo anteà nefario Clamore edito tam indignè læſiſti: nam accedere non audes. Vociferare, inquam, ſi ſatis in tuto es; Quantum te, Popule Anglicane, tua de Miltono fefellit opinio! Hæc enim ipſa dum clamas, dum plaudis tibi, & tanquam elapſo gratularis, neſcis me luſtra tua, & ſylvas anonymas indagaſſe, neſcis in plagis te meis eſſe: ſentit Pop. Anglicanus me non pœnitendum vel defenſorem juris ſui, vel venatorem ferarum ſuarum. En ego te reluctantem obtorto collo, traductum per ora omnium, peſtem populi, in Eccleſia verrem, caudâ non minus, quàm obliquo dente maleficum, in conſpectum omnium protraho. Téque belluam Pop. Anglicano inſpectandam, non Ædilitatis, ſed Defenſionis meæ gratiſſimum munus edo. Tu interea, nequid deſit ad triumphum, quem de me, ut putas, deluſo atque decepto agis, quòd authorem Clamoris te dixerim, adhibes, ut ſolet, jocos. Et frontem, inquis, immeritò perfricare diceris, tota enim jamdudum frons tibi periit. Noli nunc de me queri; noli ſarcaſmos, & ſannas & ſcommata, ſimulatâ rurſus gravitate, reprehendere: memineris ut hi ludi à teipſo inſtaurari & introducti nunc ſint; ut reprehenſos modò & damnatos ipſe nunc revoces. Facetus eſſe cupis; non ſuccurrit in præſentia: ſuggeram itaque ego tibi jocos quoſdam tuos; & quod triumphum maximè deceat, militares: quíque admoneant te temporis cujuſdam, in quo frons tua tam validè perfricta eſt, ut tibi tum multo maluiſſes totam frontem periiſſe. Meminiſti fortaſſe illius diei, immo verò diei, credo, & horæ & loci meminiſti, cùm tu Pontiam in domo Salmaſii ultimùm, ut opinor, conveniſti: tu illam, ut copulæ renunciares; illa te, ut nuptiis diem diceres. Quæ ubi è contrario pactum ſtupro conjugium diſſolvere in animo tibi eſſe videt, tum verò tua innuba, non enim dicam Tiſiphone, impatiens tantæ injuriæ in faciem tibi atque oculos, non ſectis unguibus, furens involavit. Tu qui teſte Crantzio ( præſtat enim non ſine tua fide publica tantum certamen exordiri ) qui teſte, inquam, Crantzio Gallicè Altier, Latinè feroculus eſſes, teſte, Deodato, terribiles ungues ad tui tutelam haberes, pro virili tua parte ad fœmineum hoc genus pugnæ te comparas. Stat arbitra certaminis Juno Salmaſia. Ipſe Salmaſius in conclavi proximo decumbens pedibus æger, ut prælium commiſſum audiit, riſu penè moritur. At heu nefas! imbellis noſter Alexander, & Amazoni congreſſus impar, ſuccumbit. Illa inferiorem nacta, in frontem & ſupercilia naſúmque hominis tum primùm ſupernè peccat: miris capreolis & Phrygiano opere totum jacentis vultum percurrit: nunquam tibi More lineamenta Pontiæ minùs placuere. Ipſe plenâ jam utrâque margine genarum, ſcriptus & in mento necdum finitus, ægrè tandem ſurgis: ſed ne pœniteat te, homo ad unguem factus; non jam Profeſſor, ſed tamen Doctor Pontificius: jure enim poteras tanquam in picta tabula ſcripſiſſe, Pontia fecit. Quid autem? Doctor? immò codex jam factus, in quo ultrix Pontia ſua adverſaria exaravit ſtilo novo. Senſiſti puto Vlacci tabulas Tangentium & Secantium ad radium Cifrarum neſcio quot lugubrium in pelle tua excudi. Tu tum More facie non integrâ domum te proripuiſti; fronte quidem exporrectâ, quam vix contrahere jam poteras; ſupercilioſus tamen & caperatus, quippe derepentè multò literatior; & quantum potes, abdis te quoque, reconditæ ut poſſes dici homo literaturæ. Eho noſter Eccleſiaſtes! ubi es? quid lates? expectant te jam nunc, qui tibi aures è ſuperiore loco dicenti accommodare ſolebant. Sed tibi miſero nunc Pontia è ſuperiore loco dixit, tuíſque auribus ungues accommodavit. Redde nunc tuum vultum nobis, Eccleſiaſtes, antiquum ſanè & rugis venerandum; cur apocryphus vis eſſe? cùm ipſâ Pontiâ Pontifice canonicus jam maximè ſis & rubricatus. Quin etiam hinc Critici, inde antiquarii ad fores te inclamant; tui videndi deſiderio ardent. Emanavit, neſcio quo pacto, novas quaſdam inſcriptiones Gruterianas apud te eſſe; alii Arabicas, alii Copticas aiunt; qui veriùs, Ponticas ex terra Taurica. Omnes uno ore conſentiunt pulcherrimas eſſe oportere, utpote in ære frontis tuæ tam graphicè, Pontiano præſertim onyche, inſculptas. Nemini reſpondet Morus, omnibus negatur, ſpernit omnium deſideria, & delibutus unguentis domi, literas dediſcere Pontianas mavult. Hæc habui, More, quoniam te mecum jocandi cupidum animadverti, quo ego tuum de me triumphum velut militari carmine exornatum volebam. Quidni enim pugnas tuas tum maximè commemorarem? quanquam palma quidem erat Pontiæ; illa tibi lemniſcos tantummodo reliquit. Etenim quod tuum non eſt, tibi non attribuo; tametſi tu id toto libro, quaſi abſurdum meum inſectaris, oblitus te procuratione & chirographo tuo fidejuſſorem mihi factum; oblitus, quod æs alienum tu eſſe dicis, id nunc legitimè non minus tuum eſſe, quàm cujum tu eſſe dicis. Tu itaque cœcitatem cyclopeam mihi exprobrâſti; & quod impudentius eſt, dum id negas feciſſe, iterum facis: Qui nulli tum fuerant oculi, nunc exemptiles & Lamiarum ſunt. Narciſſus nunc ſum; quia te depingente nolui Cyclops eſſe; quia tu effigiem mei diſſimillimam, præfixam poematibus vidiſti. Ego verò ſi impulſu & ambitione Librarii, me imperito, Scalptori, propterea quòd in urbe alius eo belli tempore non erat, infabrè ſcalpendum permiſi, id me neglexiſſe potiùs eam rem arguebat, cujus tu mihi nimium cultum objiciis. Tu itidem is es, qui clariſſimum virum, Conſilii Statûs tum Præſidem, contumeliis inceſſiſti; de quo iratior, quàm de meipſo, quæſivi ex te quid aliud eſſet calumniari perpetuò bonos, quàm eſſe Diabolum. Hinc tu pulchram nactus hypocritandi occaſionem ex Crantziana videlicet calumnia, quaſi ego Chriſti Doctrinam de Divortio quemadmodum à Theologis explicari ſolet, diabolicam dixiſſem, qui ater modò eras & maledicentiſſimus, nunc albus repentè factus, & mitis & patiens agis gratias, quòd te communi cum cœleſti doctrina convitio honeſtem. ——— Hyæna! aut ſiqua alia eſt bellua, tam tetrâ fraude noxia atque infamis! túne cœleſtem doctrinam tot tuorum facinorum aſylum atque perfugium ſperas fore? Sed perge quò tendis: ſi enim Theologorum quaſvis explicationes pro cœleſti doctrina amplecteris, toto cœlo, ut te dignum eſt, erras. Quin & Apoſtoli glorioſum illud cum beſtiis pugnandi martyrium tibimet tribuis nequiſſime; qui nuper non homo cum beſtia, ſed ipſe beſtia cum homine, id eſt cum fœmina, de fide connubiali abs te rupta pugnam tam inhoneſtam pugnâſti. Reverſus deinde ad mores priſtinos, ſolitámque jactantiam, dicendo me provocas. Neque verò, inquis, mihi tantum derogo, quanquam nihil arrogo, ut te commodiùs aut faciliùs quàm me putem poſſe dicere. Concedo equidem, ſi tibi iſtum in modum furari licet: hæc enim ipſa verba, quibus copiam tuam venditas, ex oratione Marci Tullii pro Roſcio Amerino apertiſſimè furatus es. Atque hinc puto eſt, quòd Francofurtanas nundinas librorum tuorum Catalogo tam copioſo nobis obtrudas cùm editorum tum edendorum: ex quibus aliqui ſunt quos videre geſtiam; & imprimis illum de gratia & libero arbitrio, ad amicam præſertim illam ſi ſcriptus eſt, cujus tu nunc gratiam, rejectâ pro arbitrio Pontiâ, accommodato forſitan argumento ambis: tum illum de Scriptura ſacra, quorum Scriptores multa humanitùs & imprudenter ſcripſiſſe ferunt te affirmare: illam deinde pro Calvino, quem tu veluti Prophetam extructo monumento Phariſæus exornas, vitâ & moribus jugulas: nam quæ prodibunt opera tua, quæ premis & retractas, & ad umbilicum ſpectantia moliris, ea meritó ſuſpicantur omnes eſſe turpiſſima. Illam de piis fraudibus diſſertationem ſanè expecto: nam de impiis abs te factis fraudibus abundè audivimus: enim verò Commentarius ille tuus, quinam ſit in quintum Evangelium futurus demiror; nam illa quatuor priora jamdudum factis abnegâſti: unde & Theoremata illa practica mirè deſidero, nam tu in practicis egregius homo ſine controverſia es; id quod de te tot fabulæ non fabulæ teſtantur. Ad illa autem loca novi fœderis, & axiomata quibus ex veteri novum fœdus illuſtratur, Pontiæ quoque notas vellem ſimul ederes. Et poſtremò iſthuc memineris, te alterum volumen operum tuorum, quod Genevæ in Bibliotheca publica etiamnum extat, totum omiſiſſe: uti etiam inſcriptiones illas, cum frontiſpicio mirabili, quas quamvis opus Pontianum, in tua tamen membrana tuas eſſe, adſtipulante etiam Juſtiniano, rectè dixerim: nam Noctes tuas, neſcio an Atticas cum Pontiâ, ſive dialogum morillum, alii ſpurium, alii duntaxat embryonem, qui ſubtiliùs non inter libros, ſed inter liberos tuos numerandum exiſtimant. Sed properabas credo ad alteram inſtituti operis partem, calumnias meas. Nam mendacia, id nempe unicum, quòd te authorem Clamoris dixerim, partem tui operis longè maximam tandem aliquando confeciſſe te ſignificas. Cùm autem leve hoc merito cuiquam videri poſſit, etiamſi falſâ aliquâ perſuaſione imbutus attribuiſſem tibi librum iſtum, alioqui nec improbatum tibi, nec tua exiſtimatione indignum, cur unum tantummodo noxam tam verboſè tam iracundè ſumma cum invidia rei per ſe leviſſimæ ſic exaggeres atque exagites, perinde quaſi in ſe omnes impietates & crimina complecteretur, niſi jam antea docuiſſem, id magis mirandum poſſit cuiquam videri. Sed ea nimirum arx erat unica, in qua ſpem omnem collocaveras; ſi perſuaſiſſes pleriſque te authorem Clamoris non eſſe, méque mentitum, in altera parte quam de calumniis vocas, de quibus quod pro te dicas nihil prorſus habes, ſperabas te facili defenſione uſurum contra me ſcilicet mendacem jam antea compertum, téque omnes vitæ maculas apud longinquos & ignotos hâc arte gratis eluiturum. Verùm ego cum præter ſpem opinionémque tuam te authorem Clamoris tergiverſantem licet & reclamantem legitimè arguerim, non dubito quin ad flagitia quoque tua, & quas tu calumnias dici mavis, accuratiùs prout res feret exequendas apud omnes rerum æquos æſtimatores fidem integram attulero. Nunc quàm frigidè, quam invitè, quàm planè ſontis in morem vafri ac vetuli has abs te dictas calumnias tractes, quámque infœliciter amoliri abs te coneris, reliquum eſt ut oſtendam. Primùm cunctabundus, & incerto pede à prioribus caſtris in hæc altera cum multis impedimentis ægrè & ne vix quidem tranſis: quippe à mendacio non ad alterum mendacium, id enim non audes dicere, ſed ad calumnias duntaxat & rumuſculos. Itaque ad mendacium illud toties jactatum, modò dimiſſum atque præteritum perpetuò recurris, cum præſens arguere, ſiquod eſſet, deberes: & adverſarii quod miſerum eſt, quàm tui ſecurior, in illo errore, quemadmodum credi vis meo, quam in tua nunc apud te recta conſcientia multò plus repoſitum tibi ſpei atque præſidii declaras. Atqui non meo, ſiquod fuit, mendacio, ſed tuâ te veritate, ſiqua fuit, munire debuiſti. At enim authoritate propria meras calumnias intento, quas nullo argumento probo, nullo teſte confirmo. Vis igitur dicam apertius rem ipſam? nam te, ut video, præ iſta mollitie frontis non perfrictæ, ſed inſcriptæ modò, pudet dicere; qui ne ſtuprum quidem aut adulterium toto reſponſo nominare homo prudentiſſimus & flos caſtitatis auſus es, ne vaniſſimam fabulam ſcilicet & obſcœnam, id eſt tua facta retexeris. Dicam ergo, & quia non abnuis, rerum ordinem ſequar.

Eſt Claudia Pelletta quædam, pellicem poſthac nominemus licet, neſcio an tuam ſolùm; quæ, cum ancilla in eâdem domo honeſtiſſimi viri Genevenſis eſſet, in qua tu hoſpes eras turpiſſimus, cum calone & rhedario communis tibi fuit. Eâ mulierculâ, poſtmodum nuptâ, quod ſtupri tecum habuerat commercium adulterio continuavit. Cedo teſtes, inquis, & argumenta. Nugator! quid tu teſtes ex me ubi non ſunt, quæris, quos ubi erant, fugiſti? Genevam revertere, ubi horum criminum jamdiu reus factus es. . Dic velle te modò abolendæ calumniæ causâ judicium his de rebus legitimum fieri; invenies qui tecum libentiſſimè his de criminibus experiri lege velint; qui vadari, qui ſponſionem facere non recuſent. Nec teſtes deerunt. Aderit imprimis Hortulanus ille qui te vidit, cùm in illud tuguriolum cum fæmina ſolus intrares; vidit, cùm illa Claudia tua clauderet fores; vidit poſtea egreſſum te, amplexantem palàm cùm muliere impudica, & uſque eò petulantem ut illum veterem hortorum cuſtodem obſcœnum, non ex ficu, ut olim, ſed ex moro factum conſpexiſſe exiſtimaret. Aderunt & alii quos viri graviſſimi, qui tuum nomen detulerunt, teſtes in promptu habent. Cujus tu teſtimonii vim veritus cùm dimanâſſe rem illam ſentires quam in occulto patraſſe te arbitrabaris, ut infamis ille reus Sicilienſis, non jam quid reſponderes, ſed quemadmodum non reſponderes, cogitare cœpiſti: & paulo ante ferox judiciique cupidus (nam de aliis quoque multis rebus & antea & tum etiam deferebaris) demiſſus repentè & conſternatus abeundi licentiam (id quod plerique maximè volebant, ne in rem tam fædam de Paſtore ſuo inquirere cogerentur) quaſi jamjam abiturus petîſti. Per hanc tu rationem liberatus judicii metu, cùm alibi non haberes quò te reciperes, omni munere cùm Eccleſiæ tùm Scholæ, omniq; ſtipendio privatus, octo circiter vel decem menſes in eadem urbe fœdis factis notatus detrectatâ cauſæ dictione vixiſti: quo nullum majus argumentum contra te eſſe potuit. Nunc poſteaquam oblatum tibi certamen defugiſti, tuíſque commodis carere omnibus, quam judicium de illa re pati maluiſti, poſteaquam tuo ipſius judicio temet ipſe damnâſti, à me homine longinquo teſtes & argumenta ridicule ſanè quæris. Quinimmò, ut dixi, Genevam revertere; & quando vadimonium illud tam malè obiiſti, I ſodes ad ſupplicium quod te illic manet adulterio debitum; ſi priſtina illius urbis religioſiſſimæ diſciplina nondum refrixit. Ad illa verò ſponſalitia ſtupra tua quod attinet cum Pontia, quæ te ubique decantatum & digito monſtratum inſignem hominem illis in Provinciis reddidere, multo minus eſt cur à me teſtes & argumenta poſtules. Famam ipſam communem, conſtantem, & illa centum vel potiùs mille ora, ſi vis, in judicium voca hæc totidem ſunt teſtes quibus ſi in foro ſæpe creditum eſt, cur ego de adverſario publico non crederem? cur ego ſolus quæ in ore omnibus & ſermone ſunt, adverſarius tacerem? ſed nec teſtes hic mihi, nec juſto numero nec literæ deſunt; in quibus literis & libidines tuæ & illa perjuria quorum ope elapſus ex judicio es, cum horrore ac deteſtatione maxima narrantur. Sunt & muti teſtes qui etiam ſine voce teſtantur; illa nocturna itinera quæ toties Hagacomitis Leidam cucurriſti; illi nocturni & furtivi congreſſus cum Pontia; cum qua tu muliere per cauſam, ut aiunt, impudicitiæ divortium feciſti. Si tu eam parùm pudicè verſatam interdiu cum aliis credidiſti, cur alii te continentiorem noctu cum eadem conſueviſſe crederent; an expectas dum ſervulum tuum in te producam, nequitiarum tuarum diu conſcium, donec nondum planè amiſſo pudore, auſugere abs te in bonam frugem conſpectæ ipſis oculis libidines tuæ pudefactum coegerunt? Opus utique non erit ſervum illum ad quæſtionem poſcere: Ipſe deteſtatus tanta in Eccleſiaſtico homine flagitia latè prædicat. Tu interim ut lectorum, ſi non aures, at ſaltem oculos invitare poſſis, oratiunculam neſcio quam infercis hîc putidiſſimam, Hiſtoricorum more, lunulis adnotatam, quaſi acutiſſimam nimirum & lectu digniſſimam: non orationem, ſed chorum quendam Battologorum introductum abs te aliquis putet; amicorum ſcilicet tuorum, hortantium ut teipſum reverearis; ut ungues tuos, quos tibi fatentur non deeſſe, ad neceſſaria magis tempora, Pontianam credo alteram dimicationem, velis potiùs reſervare: mecum ne velis in arenam deſcendere. Sed perdunt ſuam operam amici verboſiſſimi, ſua monita præclara, tot curta adagia, triviorum ſymbola, oleum nempe tuum Battologiæ profeſſor: illis poſthabitis me potius uſus es conſultore adverſario, ut reſponderes cum tuo magno malo. Non ut tuum ego ſilentium in conſcientiam ne verterem, ſed ut conſcientiam tuam ſuo, quod optat, ſilentio frui ne ſinerem. Nam attendite quæſo, & cognoſcite nunc, ſi unquam aliàs, hypocritam numeris omnibus abſolutum. Videt neceſſe ſibi eſſe aliquid pro ſe dicere; ſe intuetur, quamvis invitus; videt in turpi præter turpe nihil eſſe quod poſſit reſponderi; circumſpectat ecquid foris propè ſe refugii ſit, ecquid adminiculi quo inniti poſſit; ecquid quo ſe tegere, ſub quo latitare; ecquos in ſocietatem & communionem ſcelerum ſuorum poſſit attrahere, ecquem ordinem aut genus hominum ſuis privatis rationibus illigare, ut cauſam ſuam quaſi communem communi periculo & aliorum exiſtimatione defenderet; nihil magis idoneum invenire potuit, in quod omne ſuum dedecus transferret, nihil in quod deonerare ſpurcitiam ſuam commodiùs poſſet, quàm ipſam Eccleſiam Dei: Si mea, inquit, propriè tantum res ageretur, imponere fibulam ori meo & obmuteſcere poteram exemplo Domini mei: ſed univerſus ordo noſter, & Eccleſia Dei per meum petitur latus. O ſcortum & ganearum Antiſtes! cujus non ori magis, quàm inguini fibulam impoſitam oportuit; quanto tibi præſtitiſſet obmutuiſſe, exemplo Domini tui, cui Chriſtus Dominus ſilentium cum capiſtro imperavit, quàm Eccleſiam Dei hâc tantâ ignominiâ affeciſſe? Ais univerſum Ordinem veſtrum à me licèt obliquè ſtigmate notari. A me ais? dic ubi; recita, ſi potes, locum; niſi fortè quòd ego in mercenarios, id tu in Miniſtros Evangelii dictum putas. Erras More; & aliud fortaſſe multo juſtiùs haud abſimile conqueſtus eſſes; non ego veſtrum Ordinem obliquè, ſed te extra ordinem tua Pontifex & obliquo & directo & tranſverſo ſtigmate notavit. Eccleſia, inquis, Dei, cui mea omnia tempora conſecravi, per meum petitur latus. Per tuúmne latus turpiſſime? qui tantum abeſt, ut omnia tua tempora Eccleſiæ conſecraveris, ut ipſa Eccleſiæ tempora, omiſſo nonnunquam matutino concionandi munere, furtivis libidinibus conſecrâſſe haud ſemel dicaris. Ne repetam quid etiam temporis famoſis libellis Eccleſiaſtes conſecraveris. Per tuúmne latus? at nihil omnino eſt quod graviore cum vulnere Eccleſiam petat, quàm tuum ipſum impuriſſimum Eccleſiæ tam malè contiguum latus. Hoc ſi vis intelligi per tuum latus, id eſt, per tuam turpitudinem propter tua ſcelera Eccleſiam opprobriis impiorum peti, maculâ aſpergi, infamiam contrahere, hoc quidem verum eſſe non diffiteor. Itaque univerſus ordo tuus, & Miniſtri præſertim Gallici, qui te optimè norunt, ne tuo illo peſtifero latere diutius periclitentur, teipſum quantum poſſunt, tuíque contagionem amovere ab ſe atque depellere conantur: cauſam ullam aut rationem tuam communicatam ſibi nolunt; ne ſcelerum tuorum atque dedecorum participes fiant: ejectum te ex ſuo ordine, & exturbatum, ut meritus es cupiunt; & illam, quam ais fibulam ori tuo impudiciſſimo affigere conantur. Macte eſtote integritate veſtra atque conſtantia, viri Eccleſia digni; proſpicite, ut inſtituiſtis, Eccleſiæ puritati, exiſtimationi, diſciplinæ exemplo: amovete à lateribus veſtris immundum illud & verrinum latus, cujus non ſolùm ictu Eccleſia læditur, ſed affrictu etiam polluitur. Nolite hanc indigniſſimam contumeliam pati, ut is cùm flagitiorum ſuorum nomine meritis conviciis atque infamia petitur, non ſe peti, ſed quaſi is, quia cœnum hominis eſt, idcirco murus & munimentum Eccleſiæ eſſet, per ſuum latus Eccleſiam peti dicat. Abigite procul ab Eccleſiæ ſeptis concionantem lupum; vocem illam hircinam tot ſtupris & adulteriis impuratam, populo verba dantem, imò vendentem, ídque è ſuperiore, quod jactat, loco, ne ſiveritis in ſacro cœtu ampliùs audiri. Profectò ſi Ethnicorum legibus, verbi gratia Solonis cautum eſt, nequis Rhetor turpitudine vitæ notatus, civilem concionem habendi ad populum, ne Atticorum quidem ſi diſertiſſimus fuiſſet, jus haberet, additáque præclara ratio eſt, plus exemplo nocere turpem, quàm oratione quamvis caſtiſſimâ atque ſanctiſſimâ prodeſſe, quo etiam nomine Timarchus, vir inter primos illius Reipub. accuſante Æſchine, damnatus eſt, quanto eſt indignius ſcortatorem adulterum tanquam Dei nuntium & miniſtrum, ad Chriſtianum Populum ſacras habendi conciones jus in Eccleſia pernicioſiſſimum obtinere. Nolite committere, ut Magiſtratus Ethnicus, Deique expers, religioſior atque ſanctior in foro fuiſſe quàm Chriſti ſacra ſynodus in Eccleſia eſſe videatur. Nolite vereri, quem iſte ſcrupulum callidus injecit, ſi eum quem approbâſtis, cui ſanctas manus impoſuiſtis, cui gregem Dei commiſiſtis, perſpectum nunc adulterinum & ſpurium ejeceritis, nequis veſtrum judicium aut prudentiam deſideret; neque enim Paulus hac in parte, ut nôſtis, vidit omnia: illud veremini, ſi Paſtoris in munere talem retinueritis, ne omnes non judicium modò & prudentiam, ſed religionem quoque & pietatem & gregis denique curam in vobis requirant. Hæc ad paſtores de te, More; nunc ad gregem pro me pauca dicam. Patriæ, inquis, meæ greges qui paſcuntur inter lilia, neſcio quam in invidam vocas. Utinam ne iſta lilia, ſpinas eſſe aliquando ſentiant; verùm non ego tuæ patriæ greges in invidiam, ſed tuus Clamor Regius ad ſocietatem ſui furoris vocare cupiebat. Quem enim non irritâſſent iſtiuſmodi opprobria? maximè omnium Galli noſtri reformati, non modo horrendo facto perculſi, ſed ejuſdem injuſta infamia preſſi, plurimum alloboraverunt, ut parricidium & parricidas cognoſcerent. Hæc & multa alia acerba quidem & planè hoſtilia. Clamor iſte Gallorum ſub nomine Reformatorum, in nos clamitavit: ad quæ omnia reſpondi ſolum, Gallis etiam reformatis impoſitam eandem olim neceſſitatem fuiſſe, ut ſuum quoque Regem hoſtis numero haberent. Verùm ego incogitantior (quid enim de me non fatear potius, aut non indictum velim, quod Eccleſias Galliæ Reformatas, quas eſſe ſcio nobis omnibus chariſſimas, in invidiam vocare poſſit) incogitantior, inquam, fui, qui iſti inſaniſſimo Clamori vocem ullam Eccleſiarum aut fratrum interjectam eſſe credidiſſem. Scimus eos quo ſub regno vivant, quibus in periculis, quibus in anguſtiis evangelii causâ verſentur; & tamen amplum hoc ſibi eſſe, ſi tueri ſua queant. Nos [illegible]t vel minimam noſtra cauſa invidiam apud ſuos Reges aut offenſionem ſuſciperent, nunquam petivimus; ut de noſtris factis aut conſiliis ſuum ſenſum declararent, tametſi fratrum judicia plurimi ſemper fecimus, tamen ne hoc iis periculum crearet, nunquam poſtulavimus; preces eorum, non ſententias aut ſuffragia prodeſſe nobis cenſuimus, ſuam autem erga Reges fidem ex ſuo in nos odio verborúmque acerbitate perſpici aut probari non arbitramur. Multa deinde præteris, quæ nimis meum in religione animum produnt; & ſapis: fac & illud quoque prætereas, quòd te hominem ſácris addictum Cotyttiis, credo, aut Iſiacis, non Evangelicis (niſi addictum ita ut devotum intelligis) adverſarium, quod ego mihi honeſtiſſimum duco, nactus ſum. At enim illi qui diverſum à nobis in religione ſentiunt, ſic enim tibi proſpiciens, Eccleſiæ proſpicere videri velles, ex iſta fabula Eccleſiis noſtris inſultandi anſam arripiunt, quaſi patiantur ipſæ qualia vulgò turpia dictu ſacrificulis objiciuntur ſuis: & meritò quidem, ſi patiantur, verùm ſpes eſt, non eſſe paſſuras: ſalus certé unica rerum eſt, ſi pati noluerint. Si enim patiantur, quæ tu in me tela leviſſima conjeciſti, ea in té ego acutiſſima retorqueo. Satanæ triumphus paratur, ſcandalum infirmioribus creatur, inimicis gaudium, ſociis dolor, fidei damnum. Hæc vera ſunt non me accuſante, ſed te impunito. Talem eſſe quenquam in Reformata videlicet Eccleſia Miniſtrum adverſarii gaudent: accuſat aliquis? multum, mihi crede, de iſto gaudio protinus remittunt: damnatur is incorruptis & integerrimis Eccleſiarum ſuffragiis? Nihil æquè dolent: nam qui Presbyterum Reformatum flagitiorum incuſat, accuſat idem ſacerdotes omnes & ſacrificulos eorundem facinorum ſibi conſcios: qui illum abſolvit, hos multo faciliùs abſolvat neceſſe eſt. Fruſtra nos quidem opinionum quarundam & dogmatum, fruſtra etiam fidei reformationem gloriamur, niſi morum ſancta cenſura pariter quoque vigeat. Non doctrinam tantùm reformatum, ſed Doctores reformatos eſſe convenit; ſi ereptam ſacrificulis, ereptam Satanæ inſultand[illegible]nſam cupimus. Magnum, ais, honorem habere me Ordinibus Fœderati Belgii, quos indigere putem notore me: monitore opinor volebas dicere. Immò verò tu illis quem honorem habuiſti? quorum exiſtimatio graviſſima tam apud te parum potuit, ut eorum de te opinionem fallere turpiſſimè malueris, quàm flagitioſam vitæ tuæ licentiam refrænare; quíque ejuſmodi homo cùm ſis, arrogare tibi tantum potes, ut exiſtimes tot viros graves atque prudentes te notore, etiam è ſuperiore loco indigere; tuo admonitu poſſe unquam ſapere; ut idcirco os tuum è ſuggeſto importuniſſimum tantæ graviſſimorum hominum frequentiæ, & præſertim ſacræ concioni offerendum ſit. Qui denique apud quos tanto te in pretio eſſe dicis, iis nihil aliud niſi aut minimum judicium, aut maximam doctorum penuriam relinquis. Minimum profectò ipſi ſibi honorem habent, qui abs te Doctore & Eccleſiaſte meliores diſcedere ſe poſſe crediderint. Verùm tu nihilominus buccam inflas: Quid nunc, inquis, memorem tot illuſtres ac principes viros, tot proceres, tot Eccleſias, tot Acade- mias, quæ me fovent & ornant, vel optant & exambiunt. Et ego, quid, inquam, nunc memorem tot agyrtas, tot empiricos, tot ſeplaſiarios, tot circulatores, quos Romæ aut Venetiis iiſdem penè verbis ſuas pyxides & pharmaca vendentes, præteriens audivi. Atqui dum hæc ſcribo, inquis, literas accipio quibus ad Eccleſiaſtæ ordinarii munus & ſacræ Theologiæ profeſſionem invitor in urbe nobiliſſima. Nam hoc certè habes, in quo omnes Doctores circumforaneos venalitios ambitione ſuperas. Primùm per amicos tui ſimiles occultam das operam, ut quot potes ex locis inviteris: poſteaquam id difficile repertum eſt, ex quo jam paſſim notus es, hoc ſolum (quæ tua animi egeſtas atque mendicitas vera eſt) miſerè contendis, & nonnunquam perficis ut omnino inviteris, quamvis ea diſerta lege & pactu interpoſito, ut omnino ne venias. Hoc modo invitatum te nuper in Galliam, & ni fallor, Montalbanum, invitatum & Franekeram, vel Groningham intelligo: Harum utram in urbem ſanè neſcio, in alterutram ſat ſcio: de loco enim fateor nondum mihi ſatis liquere, de re ſatis. Hanc demum rationem excogitare coacti ſunt homines importunitate tuâ fatigati & victi, quâ & abs te ſimul tanquam à peſte ſibi caverent, & tuæ miſeræ gloriolæ multo cum riſu vela panderent; téque erraticum ſophiſtam & planum tuiſmet ventis ludibrium commendarent. Sed ne cui fortè vanior quàm mendacior eſſe videaris, in illud nunc incidimus uſitatiſſimum tibi & impudentiſſimum artificium quoddam tuum maledicendi ſimul & maledicentiam vituperandi. Quoties enim ſtrenuè conviciando vel ad inopiam vel ad ravim, quaſi ad incitas redactus es exhauſto penu, dum novum virus colligis, ſubitò bonus & bellus abhorrere te fingis à conviciis omnibus: nolle te ſcilicet luto ludere, nolle ſordes mihi regerendo manus tuas coinquinare; non placere tibi de cane latrante victoriam; malle te omittere latrantem caniculam. Quid hæc quæſo niſi convicia ſunt? quæ dum deponere te dicis, totis viribus intorques; ita caudam atterere & ſimul ringere idem tibi eſt: idque ipſum agis, dum agere te negas; uſque eò totus ex mendacio conflatus, ut ne verax quidem utrovis modo ſine mendacio eſſe poſſis: ſi enim negas te nunc maledicere, quod tu negas, verba ipſa, te invito, fatentur; ſi fateris, tua eadem verba id ipſum, quod fateris, negant. Quid eſt, ſi hæc non eſt maledicendi ars illa, quam tu Dæmonum Rhetoricam infamis libelli editor vocare te ais ſolere. Sic tu nimirum homo ſanctus & veriloquus, Chriſtum didiciſti & doces? id eſt, dum latrare te negas, mordes. Tibimet tam apertè mendax, in me ut ſis religioſior, non expecto: tentas, ut video, omnia, captas omnia; ſiquem fortè rumuſculum, aut ſuſurrum aquilones cum fugitivis famigerantibus ad vos perferunt, aures arrigis: Hinc illud, non is es, inquis, de quo mentiri fama vereatur; minùs quidem tu hîc ſubdolus es, quàm ſoles. Famam etiam mendacem mihi minitaris; dici nempe me aliorum ingenia ex moribus meis æſtimare, nulli non vitio quod inſequor obnoxium. Ergo ego ſcortator, ut fama mentitur, ergo adulter; hæc enim in te crimina inſector. Fac ſanè periculum famæ; age, inſimula, dic, ſiquid habes, audacter & clare; tempus, locum, nomina ſimul ede; quod ego in te facio. Dic cum qua Claudia Pelletta, dic cum qua Pontia, dic ſiquo in horto, ſiqua in domo, noctu an interdiu, ſiquod in judicium adductus unquam ſim, ſiquod unquam recuſaverim: hæc tibi omnia dicenda ſunt, hæc ego in te omnia demonſtravi. Invenies profectò me ad injurias meas tuáque crimina perſequenda attuliſſe hanc dicendi libertatem, & anteactæ vitæ meæ certiſſimum indicium atque fructum, & agendæ poſthac firmiſſimum propoſitum. Nunquam me libertatis hujus pœnitere audies, ut Lucium Craſſum pœnituiſſe olim ferunt, quòd Caium Carbonem unquam in judicium vocaviſſet; cùm hac ſua ſeveritate præciſam ſibi aut circumſcriptam in poſterum liberius vivendi veniam apud omnes arbitraretur. Is Caium Carbonem civem improbum in judicium Senatûs populíque Rom. vocavit: ego te, More, & meo & pop. Anglicani nomine, quem tu infami Clamore edito, prior laceſſiſti, illo Carbone multò nigriorem, judicia patria detrectantem ſæculorum omnium judiciis trado. Quid tui interim famigeruli de me muſſitent aut loquantur, unicè ſecurus. Tu ſenties eam eſſe vitæ meæ & apud me conſcientiam, & apud bonos exiſtimationem, eam eſſe & præteritæ fiduciam & reliquæ ſpem bonam, ut nihil impedire me aut abſterrere poſſit, quo minus flagitia tua, ſi pergis laceſſere, etiam liberiùs adhuc & diligentiùs perſequar, téque ſimul tuáſque etiam famæ quas meditaris corruptelas & perſpexero facilè & riſero. Interea, ne cui dubium ſit, quin tu omnia perveſtigando nihil prorſus in me habeas quod verum crimen ſit, aut ſi haberes, quin id cupidiſſimè ſtatim & malitioſiſſimè diceres modíſque omnibus amplificares, videamus quàm non crimina quæ ſint, des crimini; etiam rectè facta quàm odioſè calumnieris. Prímùm cur Clamori autoris anonymi reſponderim quæris, & non tot aliis qui nomen ediderunt ſuum. Quis adverſario tam aliena & inepta interroganti rationem redderet? ego tamen ut quàm æquanimiter tecum agam videas, reddam. Cur Clamoris authori reſponderim, rogas? quia juſſus, inquam, publicè ab iis quorum authoritas apud me gravis eſſe debuit; vix alioqui manum admoturus. Deinde quia nominatim læſus: nam & tu hîc, quamvis id minimè velis ut exiſtimationis aliquam meæ quoque rationem ducam, veniam vel invitus dabis, quam omnes boni dant, ſcio, libentiſſimè. At cur non aliis, inquis, reſpondiſti? Clamant & illi, nec minus fortiter: rurſus reſpondeo, ut prius, quia ad rationes publicas non vocatus non accedo. Deinde, quia non læſus; nam & hoc, quamvis tu id maximè velles ut impunè tibi quenquam lædere liceret, non eſt leve. Deinde quia ex veſtro ipſorum judicio tantum Salmaſio tribuimus (quem Defenſorem Regium, quaſi ſolus is eſſet & inſtar omnium, nominare ſoletis) ut poſt illum poſſe quenquam alium dicere quod momenti eſſet non exiſtimaremus. Vis plura? quia liberum erat; quia non vacabat; quia denique homo ſum, humana mihi latera ſunt, non ferrea, tu licet Alexander ærarius ſis. Aliud quiddam opus eſt, ut mihi videtur, quo tot importunis Clamatoribus ora meliùs obturentur. Quàm multa tuus ille Stentor anonymus clamitabat, quæ à Salmaſio clamata priùs & conclamata erant? quibus ego toties repetitis, quamvis cùm miſeriâ ac tædio ſæpiùs reſpondiſſem, tamen quia cum iſto vociferatore verboſo certare ubique non libuit, languet tibi ſcilicet oratio mea, quoties pro populo dico: tibi, inquam, cui Gallicâ nive frigidius eſt non eſſe tautologum. De me ſi accuratiùs dixi, non eò id feci, quo ego minùs populo quàm mihi ſtuderem, ſed propterea quòd tuus Clamor tum quidem novum aliquid ſuppeditabat, unde poſſem ab odioſa crambe veſtra nonnunquam reſpirare. Quod itaque facetè inquis non immeritò Defenſio pro populo ſecunda dicitur; quoniam id fauſtum eſt, ex ore præſertim adverſarii, omen accipio. Tu licèt novum quotannis clamorem edideris, rumpas te priùs licebit, quàm clamorem ſecundum edidiſſe dicaris. Alterum meum crimen eſt quòd in Laudes Reginæ Suecorum ſereniſſimæ per occaſionem ab adverſario ipſo datam, digreſſus ſum: & inter alia dixeram (ſatis modeſtè quidem ut opinor) nequid attribuerem mihi quòd Reginam contra Regiam, ut videbatur, cauſam, tam mihi faventem reperiſſem, neſcire me planè quâ meâ ſorte id eveniſſet: malebam ad ſortem, ad ſydera, ad, ſiquis eſt occultus vel animorum vel rerum, conſenſum aut moderamen, quàm ad meum quicquid erat, vel ingenii, vel accuminis, vel copiæ referre videri. Hanc tu calumniandi ſimul & paraſitandi materiam nactus, fremere extemplo, quaſi indignum hoc eſſet; & lutum illud in viſceribus tuis concretum, in ore mox tibi, ut frequentiſſimè ſolet fluitare. Age, deſpue; quid eſt? eam inquis propterea tam importune laudabas, ut cum ea te componeres lutum. Túne Morus es an Momus? an uterq; idem eſt? utro te nomine appellem dubito: quis enim præter Morum aut momum tam ſiniſtrè ac perperam interpretatus hæc eſſet? quod ullum dictum modeſtiſſimum hæc tanta malitia non depravaret atq; perverteret? Tum illud ſimul depromis ex peculio tuo ſervile & paraſiticum; neſciebat Chriſtina ſe tibi eſſe tam familiarem. Téne ſcabellum hominis ex tuis loculis & immunditiis Chriſtinæ ſuggerere quid neſciat aut quid dicat? atqui ſciebat ſe illa pro ſua ſingulari in literatos benevolentia Salmaſio familiarem; cui me tamen arbitrio ſuo liberrimâq; ſententiâ haud ſemel dicta eſt prætuliſſe. Sed hoc unum, inquis, Regina non meruit abs te laudari. Abs te ergo illaudatiſſime? concedo libens! quis enim obſtare poteſt, ſi tibi modò libeat vel invitiſſimi cujuſvis laudes contaminare? experire ſanè; perſequere modò iſtud, quod veluti ſpecimen laudationum tuarum egregium hoc loco inſeruiſti; quam ſupra mortalitatis modum inuſitata naturæ vis, & ſtupendum ingenii lumen evexit. Perge, inquam, & macte iſto ore: ab iſto exorſu quantumvis in ſublime evoles per me licet: iſto enim tenore, ſi perrexeris mirificum tu quidem faſtigium ac pròpe nubiferum tam altis ſubſtructionibus impoſiturus videris. Mihi, fateor, non placet ſic altè inſurgere; unde ſtatim neceſſe erit, vel ridiculè ruam, vel inter nubes frigeſcam. Attamen iis, inquis, dotibus inſignis es, quæ poſſunt etiam heroibus animum laxantibus placere. Eſto; ſunt & tuæ dotes & præſertim ſcripta, quæ heroibus placere quiddam aliud laxantibus, poſſint. Et in primis iſta tua quæ ſequitur ſapientiſſima & miniſtello te digna ad typographos conciuncula; quam idcirco prætereo: nam ad tertium jam crimen meum perveni; quòd dixerim nimirum, uno cum famulo me peregrè fuiſſe. Crimen grave; quo ego nomine haud uno in loco perſtringor: id ſcilicet nefas erat meminiſſe, ne verſificatores veſtri, qui ex egeſtate neſcio qua emerſiſſe me per hanc rerum apud nos converſionem verſificabant, ceciniſſe falſa reperirentur. Jocum verò hic tuum, quando hæc tam rara avis eſt, non poſſum prætermittere. Non equidem vobis Typographis litem unquam intenderim, non certè magis quàm illi ſervo qui Miltonum euntem peregrè comitabatur. O longè & miſerè petitum! quid hac capitis cucurbita facias, ex qua, ut id maximè labores, nullam ſalis micam potis es extundere. Sed quietus homo & fugitans litium es; itaque non meo ſed ne tuo quidem ſervo litem intendis, qui domeſticæ turpitudinis tuæ fugitivus, ſecretiora flagitia & nefarias libidines tuas divulgavit. Quartum eſt, ſiquidem id crimen dici meum debet, quod tuum eſt mendacium, in eodem ſcilicet libro, quem ſcatere, ais, diſcinctorum nepotum feſtivitatibus, auſum me cenſuram agere, & graviter concionari de Republ. deque civium officio. Quis non germanum te nunc dicat Epicureum? cujus neque in moribus honeſtas, neque in ſcriptis urbanitas ulla reperiatur. Mirum non eſt ſi hoc nomine facetiis omnibus infenſior ſis, cùm quia negantur tibi, tum quia te pungunt: non mirum eſt inquam, ſi tibi tam ulceroſo ſal omnis inimicus eſt. Id mirum, Profeſſor cùm ſis, cur mihi ſuccenſeas qui ſic diligenter ſalarium tibi curo. At verò quos tu jocos è luſtro popináque deſumptos falsò ais (niſi deſumptos ex luſtris idcirco dicis, quòd te illic latitantem extraxerint) eos ſi cæteri omnes non inhoneſtos aut illiberales, ſed honeſtos atque urbanos tuámque putredinem perfricanti ſales conceſſos non negaverint, tum quidem tua profeſſoris inſulſi ignorantia, ut perſæpè aliàs, hinc ſatis manifeſta eſt, qui id parum convenire dicas, quod Marcus Tullius in oratore ſummum eſſe ſtatuit, ubi de oratione L. Craſſi in Cn. Domitium ſumma cum admiratione ſic loquitur. Nec enim concio major unquam fuit, nec apud populum gravior oratio, quàm hujus contra collegam in cenſura nuper, neque lepore & feſtivitate conditior. Et paulo infra, id uni Craſſo contigiſſe ait, ut non ſolùm venuſtiſſimus & urbaniſſimus, ſed & omnium graviſſimus & ſeveriſſimus & eſſet & videretur. Quin etiam Platoni & Socraticis nihil magis convenire aut decuiſſe viſum eſt, quàm rebus interdum ſeveriſſimis intermiſtus atque inſperſus lepos. Hæc ego viris doctis & intelligentibus quin & ſupra & nunc denuò ſatis probaverim, non dubito. Te interim non reprehendo, qui mollior, inquis, debuit eſſe tranſitus à naſo ad ſupercilium: nam digitorum Pontiæ credo adhuc meminiſti, quàm iſte tranſitus abs tuo naſo ad ſupercilia minimè mollis fuerit. Fœlicem te quidem, ſi hoc tum mulierculæ perſuaſiſſes: ſed de oratorum tranſitionibus, More, judicium longè aliud faciendum eſt. At leges ſcribo, hoc quintum crimen eſt, quibus ſe teneat non populus modò, ſed illi etiam qui me præceptore nihil egent. Quid tu mihi quo quis egeat, homo leviſſime & arrogantiſſime? téne ſuperiore ex loco egent Fœderati Ordines concionatore, me ex inferiore, quod omnibus ex æquo civibus licet, noſtri non tam egeant libero hortatore? non eſt, More, cur ego me natum in mea patria tam inutilem exiſtimem, cùm te in aliena tam arrogantem videam; non eſt, quam ob rem te mercede concionantem, quàm me gratis monentem rectiora putem poſſe ſuadere. Hæc mea quinque ſunt peccata mortifera; nam illa ſeptem, opinor, conficere nequiſti. Ex quo intelligitur, inania quàm fuerint quæ condonâſſe mihi te dicis, cùm ſint tam levia, quæ crimineris. Niſi & illud fortè criminoſum mihi vis eſſe, quòd Deum teſtem invocarim; & certè parùm abeſt ut iſtud quoq; in criminibus meis numeres. Hinc illa, inquis, nimium ſane ſollicita proteſtatio. Quænam iſta fuit, More? audies vel invitus; nec illam nunc recito, ſed iiſdem conceptis verbis (neque enim pœnitet, & hic etiam peregrinationem meam calumniaris) rurſus Deum teſtem invoco, me illis omnibus in locis, ubi tam multa licent, ab omni flagitio ac probro integrum atque intactum vixiſſe, illud perpetuò cogitantem, ſi hominum latere oculos poſſem, Dei certè non poſſe. Hæc tibi nimium ſollicita proteſtatio eſt, More: cui non magis ſollicitum eſt, Deum teſtem invocare, quàm invocatum pejerare. Quàm multi & quàm multis de rebus te accuſent, non ignoras: aude modò, ſiquid in te integri, ſiquid incorrupti eſt, iiſdem quibus ego nunc præivi tibi verbis, teipſum defendere. Dic age in hæc verba: Deum teſtem invoco me ab omnibus illis flagitiis quorum inſimulor, integrum atque intactum ſemper vixiſſe; me neque Claudiæ, neque Pontiæ, neque ullius omnino fœminæ ſtupratorem eſſe aut adulterum.

Non audebis, opinor, tametſi facilè perjurus eſſe diceris, in hæc verba præeuntem me ſequi. Verùm ſi Dei non audes, hominum ſaltem fidem implora. Genevam, inquam redi, permitte te illic magiſtratibus & populo; dic illis ut caſtum & innocentem hominem, falsò inſimulatum, deceat: Viri Genevenſes, multorum apud vos & graviſſimorum criminum accuſor; ſi ita vixi, ſi inter vos ita verſatus ſum, ut hæc per idoneos teſtes & argumenta probari vobis poſſint, en ſiſto me; legitimum pati judicium, quod antea recuſavi, nunc non recuſo. Hoc multo minùs audebis, ſat ſcio: malis tergiverſari, ut ſupra dixi, malis aliunde perfugia & latebras & diverticula veterani ſcortatoris in modum quærere. Veruntamen honeſtam fuiſſe illam orationem meam fateris; ſed præcedenti parùm conſentientem. Cuinam præcedenti obſecro? vellem recitaſſes: ego enim aliquot retrò paginis pro certo habeo, ne minimum quidem obſcœni veſtigium inveniri poſſe, quia tanto intervallo de te nulla fit mentio. Quòd ſiquem alium locum intelligis, ubi in tua vitia ſalsè animadverſum eſt, velim te ſcire, quicquid tu ex Platone detorſiſti, neque alienum eſſe neque inverecundum eodem in libro cum acrimonia & ſale (profligati enim pudoris verba nuſquam illic reperies) & turpia inſectari, & de Deo cogitare. Sanè ſi oratoris præceptum hoc verum atque honeſtum eſt, in eodem vultu convenire & pudorem & acrimoniam, quidni itidem in eodem ore conveniant? Nullius enim pudentis pudorem minuit vehemens & ſalſa turpitudinis exprobratio vel etiam irriſio, ſed pudorem, in quo prius non erat, impudenti reo nulla res efficaciùs incutere videtur. Tu vide ut cum pudore & cogitatione Dei tua ſtare perpetua poſſint mendacia, Eccleſiaſtes adulterine; qui ſcripſiſſe me ais Romæ martyrii fuiſſe candidatum; ſtructas ab Jeſuitis vitæ meæ inſidias. Ad quod utrumq; mendacium diluendum opus eſt nihil aliud, niſi ut quis locum ipſum libri inſpiciat: & cur ea de re aliquid omnino ſcripſerim, conjecturâ per ſe aſſequi nemo facilè non poterit, cui id modò credibile non ſit eum ob flagitia in Italiam profugiſſe, qui religionis ibidem confitendæ periculum toties adierit. Nugaris deinde multa; & machæras & legiones garris Pontiæ maſtigia. Verùm hæc ſatis riſimus: nunc luculentam & inſignem hominis calumniam quæſo attendite; ut cognoſcatis qua fide vel in ſacris etiam literis, quas cum ſumma Eccleſiæ ignominia profitetur, verſari ſoleat; quàm nulla iſti falſario Eccleſiaſtæ religio ſit verbum ipſum Dei ſacroſanctum corrumpere, ſi id commodum ſibi fore crediderit. Ego ut refellerem eos, qui Grammatiſtæ aut Critico Magni titulum & cognomen largiri ineptiſſimè ſolent, ſic ſcripſeram: Is ſolus magnus eſt appellandus, qui res magnas aut gerit aut docet, aut dignè ſcribit. Quis hac veriſſimâ ſententiâ offendatur, niſi Grammatiſta? Quid hîc noſter profeſſor? id eſt, inquit, qui res magnas docet, ut Miltonus de divortiis, aut dignè ſcribit ut Miltonus idem pro Populo, bis magnus. Lepidum ſanè interpretamentum, More! & ejuſdem planè artificii, quo Evangelii etiam locum illum de divortiis non verbo, ſed factis interpretatus es. Licet ob ſcortationem dimittere vel uxorem vel ſponſam: Morus cum deſponſata ſibi Pontia ſcortatus eſt; ergo, licet Moro ſponſam ob ſcortationem dimittere. Vos O tot Principes, tot Proceres, tot Eccleſiæ, tot Academiæ, quæ hunc hominem fovetis & ornatis vel optatis & exambitis, evocare nunc certatim hunc vobis, quâ ſacrarum, quâ profanarum literarum interpretem tam fidum & religioſum; ut ſacras profanare literas apud vos quà factis, quà commentis ſuis poſſit. Vel ſi id minimè vultis, nam Doctorem hunc commentitium longè latèque olfeciſſe jamdiu videmini, date ſaltem & concedite hoc palpum tumori hominis & gloriolæ: evocate quæſo per literas quàm honorificas Ludionem hunc cathedrarium; ſed cum hac cautione, ſi ſalvi eſſe vultis, clam interpoſita, cum hoc urbaniſſimo interdicto, ut nullo modo accedat. Miros profectò reddet ludos inter tot Cathedras, dum profeſſiones & prælectiones & murmura & plauſus & Pontias novas ſibi ſomniat. Sed dimitto nunc hominem, quia me prope dimittet. Aliò ſe vertit; imò verò quò ſe vertat, non habet. Simulat velle nunc de vita & moribus ſuis cauſam pro ſe dicere. Exordiri jam putares hominem, & velle aliquid præfari; cùm in ipſo ſtatim præfationis veſtibulo, eluſâ omnium expectatione perorat. Tam tenue ſe eſſe argumentum, tam turpe etiam dum reperit, vel ipſa rerum inopia ſubitò exareſcit, vel ipſa fœditate perculſus & quaſi ſyderatus obmuteſcit: Vultus, vox, latera deficere videntur; animus tamen veteratorius, & ut dixi antea, indurati utroq; jamdiu foro veteris & crebri ſontis artes non deficiunt. Quò me vertam? quò te vertas, miſelle? quis unquam nocens reus demiſſà barba ſordidatus & ſqualens tam miſerabili procemio deprecatus unquam judices eſt? quò te, ſi innocens, ſi inſons, ſi tutus undique tibi eſſes, quò te, inquam, niſi ad te verteres? tecum loquerere, te conſuleres, extra te ne quæreres? Sed heu miſerum te! diſcordia tibi tecum graviſſima jamdiu eſt. Nihil tibi inviſum magis, quàm tecum habitare, apud te eſſe; neminem libentiùs, quàm teipſum fugis. Fruſtra: tecum enim fugis miſer, te ſequeris: Quod agitat intus eſt, intus & flagellum & tortor Argus ille tuus, qui te ſemper non Junoniis, quod quereris, artibus, ſed piaculorum tuorum Oeſtro agitatum, cinctus mille oculis ac teſtibus perſequitur. Quid nunc agas? nam æſtuantem te miſerè & pendentem video. An tuas ipſe laudes veſanus decantares? veſanus profectò ſis, ſi id ſuſcipias; veſanus, ſi id unquam cogitabas. Vitámne conſcribas & facinora omnia tua? pervellem equidem; ſed vereor ne non Morus, ſed Florus nimiùm in tuis floralibus, id eſt, multo brevior quàm par eſſet, futurus ſis. Vereor ne invideas nobis tot lepidas fabellas, qui unam ſolùm retexere, hortenſem nimirum illam, tantopere gravatus ſis. Sanè qui illas lites Junonias omnes, qui illa jurgia Salmaſii prætermiſeris, qui prælium illud nobile Pontianum mihi tantis rebus parùm idoneo reliqueris, qui denique totam illam Pontiæ Seſtiada ſicco pede præterieris, præteribis opinor ſilentio Tibaltianam quoque illam, & illius nuper domus calamitatem, ubi tu procax in ancillam, proditor in herum extitiſti: nam ancillis, ut videtur, quocunque vadis, nullum abs te refugium eſt. Tacebitur & vidua illa, quam tu, ſolatii tum plenus, nunc inops, cùm de marito recèns mortuo velle conſolari præ te ferebas, ejus pudicitiam tentaſſe diceris: Nec dices credo quâ domo egredientem te cum ſcorto intempeſtâ nocte Amſterodami illa mulier vidit; quæ delinita primùm pollicitationibus tuis, mox decepta, noviſſimè nomen tuum ad Presbyteros detulit; qui tuum nomen recipere, quod ob priora facinora ejiciendum ex ſuo ordine & circumſcribendum ſtatuebant, ne aucto ſcelere, cùm augeri pœna tua non poſſet, augeretur ordinis infamia, recuſarunt. Quid ergo? an quæ feciſſes uno cum ſervo itinera nocturna illa nempe Haga Leidam poſteris narrares? ne hoc quidem ſat ſcio, voles: verùm illa ſervus ipſe paſſim copioſè narrat, & permulta alia præclare abs te geſta: cætera jam tritiſſima plurimíſque per ea loca teſtibus confirmata. Age verò; poſt dubitationem ſané miſeram quæ te perplexum tamdiu atque ſuſpenſum tenuit, poſt tui fugam, quò tandem fugis? quò ad extremum te recipis? fidei, inquis, publica monumenta conſulamus. Acta tua credo jam publica, quæ in Bibliotheca Genevenſium enumerata centum prope articulis tuorum ſcelerum monumenta poſteritati ſervantur. A Geneva exorſus, inquis, fabellam neſcio quam poetarum authoritate ſubnixam inſtituis. Ferax tu quidem ſæculum poetarum dicis, qui tot una in urbe, tibíque omnes infeſtos quæraris; nigrum te aliquem oportet eſſe, ipſóque moro nigriorem, quem tot poetæ oderint; feſtivum quoque hominem, qui quorum authoritas teſtium te jugulavit, eorum nunc poeticam iniquiorem in te cauſeris. Verùm iſta te feſtivitas nihil in hoc tempore adjuvabit. Permulti ſunt in illa civitate viri honeſtiſſimi nonnulli Presbyteri, Doctores, Miniſtri, neſcio an Poetæ, qui fabellam tibi hanc in foro agere cupiunt; qui non ſua carmina recitare, ſed tua crimina pro teſtimonio dicere parati jampridem ſunt. Nemo ſic unquam poetam recitantem, ut tu hos omnes contra te teſtantes & fugiſti & fugies. Adeóne verò ſingulari impudentiâ occaluiſti, ut inſtitutam in te legitimè accuſationem teſtatiſſimam, cujus vim atque authoritatem cùm ſuſtinere non poſſes, diſcedendi, & veluti in exilium abeundi licentiam exorâſti, hanc tu quaſi fabellam neſcio quam eludere & uno verbo leviculo ſic amoliri abs te poſſe exiſtimes? At permulti ſunt, inquis, in hoc Belgio, qui me Genevæ familiariter uſi optimè omnium norunt quàm non ibi nullo in pretio fuerim. Audi igitur quæ ſint honeſtiſſimorum hominum de te judicia primò Genevæ, deinde in Belgio. Duorum verba ipſa ex literis deſumpta, in medium proferam.

Litera Genevæ data pridiè Id. Octob. 1654.

Mirari certè noſtrates ſatis non poſſunt, ita te interiora ignoti aliàs hominis noſſe, tam nativis coloribus depinxiſſe, ut ne ab illis quidem, quibus familiariſſimè uſus eſt, tota hominis hiſtrionia vel certiùs vel feliciùs potuiſſet adumbrari: unde hærent meritò & ego cum illis, quà fronte ἀναίσχυντος licet homo & oris improbi, in publicum rurſus theatrum prodire ſit auſurus. Illud enim ſummum fœlicitatis tuæ hac in parte compendium, quod non vel ficta vel ignota aliàs hominis ſcelera attuleris, ſed quæ omnium & amiciſſimorum etiam ore decantata, integri cœtus authoritate & aſſenſu, immo plurium adhuc ſcelerum acceſſione luculenter poſſint corroborari.

Et infra. Credas velim vix ullum hîc reperiri amplius, ubi multos annos publico munere, ſed cum ſummo hujus Eccleſiæ dedecore fructus eſt, qui proſtituti pudoris homini patrocinium ſuum vel audeat vel ſuſtineat amplius commodare.

Hæ ſunt eorum voces, qui penitiſſimè te nôrunt: quam turpem tui memoriam Genevæ reliqueris, hæ literæ, aliæque benè multæ ſi proferrentur, docerent. Nunc in Belgio aliíſque locis quâ famâ ſis, quo in pretio cognoſce. Viri probatiſſimi tibíque noti non literas ſolùm, ſed quoniam abs te priùs nominatus, ídque in tua cauſa, atque laudatus eſt, nomen quoque edam. Is eſt vir graviſſimus Joannes Duræus; qui dum Ottoni ſola fide nixus interponit ſe, mecúmque agit, ut innocentem te ſcilicet miſſum facerem, non poteſt non fateri ſimul quàm longè alia de te cæterorum pænè omnium exiſtimatio, aliúſque ſermo ſit.

Ex Literis Duræi Baſilia, Octob. 3. 1654.

Quod ad Mori vitia improbitatémque attinet, non videtur Ottonus ita de eo ſentire: ſcio tamen alios peſſimè de eo loqui, manus ejus in omnes penè manus omnium in eum eſſe, pleroſque etiam Gallicæ Synodi miniſtros dare operam ut ei Paſtoris munus abrogetur. Neque hîc aliam Baſileæ reperio de eo hominum opinionem, quàm quæ in Belgio eſt eorum qui eum minimè amant.

O pulchrum elogium! quo tu omnium penè mortalium judicio Iſmaeli hoſti Eccleſiæ, quàm Miniſtro pacis & Evangelii ſimilior judicaris. Hunc tuæ ubique gentium exiſtimationis teſtem integerrimum, ſi potes, rejice. Mihi credulitatem deſine objectare: Nemo omnes, neminem omnes fefellerunt, tua tibi verba regero. Hæc cùm ita ſint, perficiam haud multo negotio, ut intelligas, quàm exiguum tibi in aliis præſidium ſit, cùm tam exiguum tibi in teipſo fuerit. Quod enim poteſt aliena fides teſtimonium de te aliis perhibere, cùm tua fides perhibere nullum quod juvet aut cui confidas, de temetipſo poſſit tibi? Et videte quæſo quàm diſſoluto animo, quam abjecto deſertor ſui & perſuga ad patrocinium alienæ fidei ab ſe transfugiat. Neque vero, inquit, tempus teram in eorum ſollicita refutatione, quæcunque tu garris. Laudo te læti animi atque jucundi, nihil tu magis ſollicitè, quàm ſollicitudinem ipſam vitas. Mea modò nimis ſollicita tibi fuit ad Deum proteſtatio: nunc tuam non minùs ſollicitam putas tuorum criminum refutationem. Atqui ego ſi duntaxat garrio, haud multam ſanè ſollicitudinem tua refutatio deſiderabit. Ignaviſſimus profectò ſis, aut malè conſcius neceſſe eſt, cui tam facilis tuimetipſius defenſio, tam gravis & ſollicita videatur: ineptus planè & ridendus, qui nullum tempus inutilius terere te putes, quàm in eo ipſo quod ad rem, ſiquid vides, & ad cauſam maximè pertineat. Nam quid proficiam, inquis, ſi fabulam hanc penitus retexuero? ſtatim aliam ordieris. Sanè quidem difficile id eſſet nemini: neque de nihilo te urit iſta ſuſpicio. Tanta enim tu ſolus fabularum ſylva es, ut ex tuis unius rebus geſtis atque nequitiis ſuppeditare centum triviis atque circulis unde multos in dies rideant ſatis fabularum unus poſſis. Atque adeo hujus fabulæ actum jam quartum peregimus: exit Morus; aliam credo vult perſonam induere. Ut ſemel inquit defungamur, quod fuerit Eccleſia Genevenſis, quod civitatis illius de me judicium hæ docebunt literæ Teſtimoniales, alia occaſione datæ. Ita eſt; ad elogia nunc tranſit ſua; actus quintus incipit: nova planè perſona, ſed eodem tamen ſubtus latente Moro, prodit cornicula, ſed & ea quoque perſonata: miris neſcio quot repentè plumis adſcititiis atque coloribus ita indutus, ut Phœnicopterus neſcio quis potiùs, & exornati quiddam monſtri ſimile videatur. Aves Ariſtophanicas expoliaſſe hominem diceres; ſed malâ ave, ni fallor; cum ſe non jam fabulam agere, ſed apologum Æſopicum in ſe verum demonſtrare nudatus intelliget. Cùm enim haſce plumas nec tuas eſſe, More, & partim obſoletas, quæque ſuâ ſponte mox defluant, partim falſis coloribus fucatas, partim dolo, maliſque artibus ſurreptas docuero, dubium non eſt, quin deluſus abs te olim grex avium, nunc factus certior qui ſis, de repetundis plumis jure tecum ſit

actturus; & ablato quiſque ſuo, obſcœnam ſub phœnice upupam non deplumem te modò, ſed depygem demum relinquat: Primæ omnium literæ Genevenſium Teſtimoniales criſtam tibi erigunt: quas illi multò mallent, ſat ſcio, aut nunquam tibi datas, qualis poſtea evaſiſti, aut abs te nunquam prolatas. Semper ego quidem de Genevenſi Civitate, pro eo ac debeo, honeſta omnia & ſentire ſoleo & loqui: religionis cultum purioris, primúmque ſtudium, in Republica deinde prudentiam, æqualitatem, moderationem, conſtantiam propè admiror; quâ ſe tam arctis finibus, inter vicinos hinc inde potentiſſimos & imminentes, ſummâ in pace ac libertate per tot jam annos conſervat & tuetur: rectiúſque in re vix mediocri & meliùs id agit quod civilis vitæ omnis principium atque finis eſt, idque populo ſuo fœliciùs præſtat, quàm ſummis opibus inſtructi, ſummis opinione hominum adjuti conſilijs reges maximi ſervientibus præſtant ſuis. De Genevenſibus igitur, quod eorum laudem, & exiſtimationem poſſit imminuere, non eſt ut quicquam velim aut queam dicere, etiamſi de his literis Teſtimonialibus ea dicerem, quæ & ab aliis dicta olim ipſi fatentur, & ad me recentiùs allata ſunt. Sed neceſſe non eſt; non dicam igitur qua occaſione ſint datæ; propterea quòd ipſe non hâc, ſed aliâ occaſione datas eſſe ait. Non quæram, utrùm ſumma Eccleſiæ Senatúſque voluntas honorarium hoc Moro teſtimonium ſua ſponte conceſſerit, an impudentiſſima hominis poſtulatio, cùm accuſatus graviſſimorum criminum nequiſſet ſe defendere, ab iis duntaxat abſtulerit qui Eccleſiæ Paſtorúmque communi exiſtimationi perperam metuentes, amandare ab ſe hominem quoquo modo malebant, quàm hæc publico judicio ſeveriùs perquiri, nec ſine offenſa fortaſſis infirmiorum palam agitari. Non dicam, id quod multi tamen dicunt mihíque confirmant, nec conventu frequenti, nec ſolito conveniendi die datas haſce literas: ne id quidem dicam ſcribenti adſtitiſſe Morum; unde illud fortaſſe tralatitium, & exambire ex elegantiis Mori ſelectioribus tam in promptu erant; & rupta concionante Moro ſubſellia, gemmaque illa clariſſima; quæ omnia uſque eo vel cupiditatem ſcribentis vel judicium non grave ſignificant, ut non ſolùm nimio laudandi ſtudio laudes ipſas corrupiſſe, quod vitium ab eo qui totius nomine Eccleſiæ ſcripſit, quam maximè abeſſe debuit, ſed indigniſſimum ornare dum ſtudet, non tam vivum decorare, quàm mortuum & putentem illis odoribus differtum funeraſſe videatur. Non dicam denique illa nomina in conventu ſubſcripta non eſſe, circum vicos curſaſſe Morum, & paſtores domi ſingulos adortum, quo ſibi faciliùs haſce ſubſcriptiones expugnaret; Propterea quòd erant in conventu qui reclamare, qui intercedere, qui obſiſtere non deſinebant, qui ſeſe non audiri graviter conqueſti ſunt. Nihil horum dicam; quod nonnulli tamen dicunt, etiam qui illo tempore Genevæ rebus illis omnibus interfuere; multi aliis in locis Deûm hominúmque fidem implorantes atque jurati nulla ſe ſimultate, ſed officii religione commotos, hæc dicere; adeóque illis literis fidem ſe adjungere non poſſe; quorum inter primos virum ſanctiſſimum Fredericum Spanhemium, Theologiæ profeſſorem & paſtorem reverendum fuiſſe intelligo: Hoc ſolùm dico, haſce literas, quod idem de literis reverendiſſimi viri Joannis Deodati eſt dicendum, ante ſexennium datas, multis poſtea maleficiis ab ipſo Moro obliteratas jampridem eſſe & antiquatas. Nondum increbuerat Claudia, nondum hortus, & illa, ad Claudiam neſcio an cum Claudia, Mori ſuaviſſima cohortatio:

—— Poma alba ferebat,
Qui poſt nigra tulit Morus: ——

Id quod viris proculdubio integerrimis & honeſtiſſimis, harum literarum ſubſcriptoribus, quin impoſuerit non dubito. At poſtquam illá cum muliere, primò ancilla, deinde nupta, occultari diutiùs conſuetudo iſtius nefaria non potuit, factus iterum reus, cùm honeſtam rationem defendendi ſui nullam inveniret, & manifeſtis in rebus teneretur, fractus jam animo, atque id maximè veritus, ſi judicium fieret, nequid in ſe gravius conſuleretur, quo ipſo die pronuncianda de ſe ſententia Presbyterorum, deinde Magiſtratuum erat, judicium declinat, licentiam abeundi petit. Illi neceſſitatem hanc rati ſe hoc modo effugiſſe, quam impoſitam ſibi minimè volebant, ut Eccleſiæ Miniſtrum tantorum ſcelerum damnare, & in homine Eccleſiaſtico tam triſte exemplum ſtatuere cogerentur, libenter aſſenſere. Petit inſuper literas impudentiſſimus homo commendatitias. Id verò poſtulare ab judicibus ſuis reum indignè ferentes, prorſùs ſùs recuſant: ita bonus ille tabellarius permanere ſine literis illa in urbe, omni munere exutus, circiter decem menſes coactus eſt: Eteſiis credo ſacrificans, ut aliquam ſaltem auram commendatitiam impetrare aliquò poſſet: Donec multi graviſſimi viri ne moram quidem ejus illa in urbe ferendam rati, rurſus rem adducere in judicium cœperunt. Id autem cùm ad novas lites, &, ut ſupra dixi, offenſionem infirmorum ſpectare videretur, conſultius tandem viſum eſt, quoquo modo hominem ablegare: rurſus itaque dant literas; non frigidulas, quod antea dixiſſe me queritur, ſed, quod nunc dico, frigidiſſimas; non ut commendare cuiquam mortalium, ſed amandare ab ſe hominem planè viderentur. Hoc ſi ita non eſt, More, poſtulo mihi reſpondeas, cur ſuperiores illas Genevenſium literas, haud uno nomine jam obſoletas, quæque recentiora facinora tua à me tibi potiſſimùm objecta, ne attingunt quidem; quæ ego vix attigi, ut minùs mihi comperta, blaſphemias nempe tuas in Spiritum ſanctum, aliáque opinionum monſtra uberiùs commemorant, cur & illas in quibus parùm ſibi de te credi à pleriſque ſubſcriptores tui queruntur, cur, inquam, illas utraſque in medium protuleris, has noviſſimas de medio removeris? Cedo proximas haſce literas poſt alteram in te accuſationem illam graviſſimam ab aliis ægerrimè, ab aliis facilè, ſed eodem tui removendi animo ab omnibus conceſſas. Sapies opinor, non exhibebis; non delectant te iſtæ literæ: ex quibus mutatam de te Genevenſium opinionem, refrigerata amiciſſimorum ſtudia manifeſtò perſpicere poſſimus; eóſque his literis non te laudatum, ſed ab ſe, dummodo longiſſimè remotum, quaſvis in terras exportatum cupiiſſe. Hæc Mori fides publica eſt; quâ ſe in Eccleſiam credere, quàm in Spiritum Sanctum planius facit. Quæ reliqua à me dicta in eum ſunt neque diluit, neque refellit, ne oppugnat quidem. Sed quoniam, Vlacco fidejuſſore, tomum inſuper alterum fidei publicæ promittit, in quo virorum aliquot inſignium, Senatúſque & Eccleſiæ Midelburgenſis, & Amſtelodamonſis teſtimonia dicentur, dum volumen illud, cudendum, puto, in Gallia, excudendum Hagæ-Comitis à Vlacco expectamus, aut ne expectamus quidem, viſum eſt de toto hoc genere teſtimoniorum pauca diſſerere.

Magnum ego ornamentum quidem virtutis teſtimonium publicum eſſe fateor; argumentum perinde certum atque firmum longè abeſt ut exiſtimem; nam ut illud omittam quòd virtutis multo difficilior quàm nummorum ſpectatio eſt, hoc ſanè conſtat, privatorum privatos mores, & præſertim vitia ad aures graviſſimas, tot alioqui negotiis occupatas, rariſſimè perferri. Et teſtimonium publicum tam qui petunt, quàm qui dant, boni juxta malíque ferè ſunt; & petunt quidem mali ſæpiùs quàm boni, falſâ ſpecie proborum induti. Ut quiſque optimus eſt, ita minimè teſtimonio eget alieno: neque enim fecit quicquam vir bonus ut naſcatur, ſeipſo contentus. Si commendato eſt opus, virtutem ſemper apud ſe habet commendatricem optimam; ſi defenſo, obtrectationibus nimirum & calumniis haud raro appetitus, eandem circundat ſibi integritatem ſuam, & invictam rectè factorum conſcientiam; quo veluti munimento atque præſidio firmiſſimo, improborum hominum & impetus vanos excipit, & tela fruſtratur. Contrà hic noſter omnia: non enim virtutem, ſed opinionem duntaxat ejus integumentum vitiorum, ſibi comparaverat: ut retectus, ut deprehenſus, abſcondere diutiùs, improbitatem ſuam non poteſt, exors ipſe fidei & naufragus ad alienam fidem ſe confert: quorum oculis antea ſervierat, eorum nunc manus commendatitias implorat; & ſingulari quadam atque inauditâ hactenus impudentiâ, quorum judicium experiri non audet, eorum poſtulat teſtimonium. Propterea quòd meamet ipſius ſententia damnatus turpiſſimè diſcedo, quòd ſententias veſtras horreo atque defugio, literas quæſo date innocentiæ, pietatis, pudicitiæ apud vos meæ teſtimoniales. Si hæſitatur, ſi ambigitur, ſi ab aliis denique reclamatur indignitate rei vehementiſſimè commotis, quò non demittit ſe? quo non deſcendit? circumcurſare, ambire, prenſare, obteſtari, & quò adire non audet, eò amicorum allegationes dimittere. Aguntur fortunæ hominis, agitur caput, exiſtimatio, immò Eccleſiæ totius & ſacri ordinis exiſtimatio agitur. Expugnantur multi, partim fatigati, partim inducti, partim veriti nequid iſtius ignominiæ in publicum redundaret, partim delictis ignoſcere, literato parcere, laboranti conſulere ſuæ bonitatis eſſe arbitrati. Ita tandem victor iſte laureatas literas aufert; ita emendicata quovis tempore vel occaſione, non jam teſtimonia de ſe publica, quæ ſi fuiſſent ipſe abolevit, ſed ſua de publico reportata ſpolia ad coronam venditat; nec tam laudes videtur ſuas, quàm pœnitentiam publicam circumferre. Quem enim non pœniteat præconem ſeſe laudum ejus fuiſſe, qui ad omnes poſtea libidines tam turpem ſui auctionem fecerit: nunc ejuſdem ſeſe mangonem fieri, qui ſervus omnium nequiſſimus miniſtrum ſe licitanti cuivis Eccleſiæ ex hac laudum cataſta vendibiliorem, & ſacrarum literarum miſeris emptoribus venalem ſe pretii quantivis profeſſorem profitetur. Nam viderint per Deum immortalem, qui ex iſtius vel commendatione vel impunitate ignoſcentes & bonos haberi ſe poſtulant, ne iſta bonitas in malum deſinat; viderint ne ipſis bonis fraudi ſit. Cùm neceſſe ſit, ſerpat latiùs, ſerpat ocyùs iſta contagio paſtoris in gregem, doctoris in ſcholam; atque in ipſos fortaſſe bonorum iſtorum liberos, qui ſophiſtæ huic errabundo & infami in diſciplinam traduntur. Viderint ne tot pigmentis illita atque ornata turpitudo, tanta bonarum laudum jactura atque diſpendio dealbata labes, ſpem faciat & aliis, eámque mentem injiciat, poſſe ſe quoq; tutiſſimo hoc exemplo, eandem ſcholis, eandem eccleſiis inferre perſonam, ſine ſuo periculo cum ſumma etiam commendatione improbiſſimam. Cogitent, qui celari adverſarios noſtras maculas putant oportere, non celando ſed eluendo maculas purgari: celando apparere multo manifeſtiùs, & majorem indies fœditatem contrahere. Poſtremò viderint, ne Eccleſiaſtas hujuſmodi amovere ab Eccleſia tamdiu negligant, donec ipſa Eccleſia cum Eccleſiaſtis unà amoveatur. Sanè cùm Apoſtoli præceptum de Epiſcopo notiſſimum ſit, eum ab extraneis etiam bonum habere teſtimonium oportere, quid adverſariis lætius aut triumphandum magis poteſt accidere, quàm cùm legerint atque audierint, qui non levi atque incertâ, ſed conſtante famâ, ſumméque conſentiente, multis teſtibus, multis in locis flagitioſus atque nefarius compertus ſit, eum quaſi Eccleſiæ lumen unicum & ornamentum collatitiis Presbyterorum laudibus, & multiplici commendatione publicâ decorari. Quod hoſtibus noſtris gaudium ne diuturnum ſit, provideri non aliâ ratione poteſt, niſi ſiquis poterit exemplo, réque ipſâ demonſtrare, nullum eſſe peſtibus hujuſmodi in Eccleſia reformata conſiſtendi locum: hæc teſtimonia, has laudes tum olim datas, cùm is, cui dabantur longè alius affectaret videri, atque eſſe nunc perſpicitur, ipſum nunc irritas & nequaquam ſuas uſurpaſſe ſibi fraude peſſimâ; & amicorum de ſe elogia ſuo ipſius vitio abrogata, non ad viliſſimas merces involvendas, quo fato mala ſcripta ſolent ferè perire, ſed ad fœdiſſimas flagitiorum ipſius ſordes integendas, pro involucris abuſum eſſe. Ego certè in priore illa defenſione, & publicè juſſus & privatim læſus, niſi ſiquam dicendo peperiſſem mihi honeſtam exiſtimationem, eam ſilendo amittere, & quaſi vacuam poſſeſſore, occupandam mendaciis & opprimendam relinquere maluiſſem, & patriæ, & mihi ſimul, cùm una eadémque cauſa eſſet, communem operam ſummo ſtudio impendi. Nunc accuſatus graviter ab eodem quaſi immeritum & innoxium hominem per calumnias & mandacia infamaſſem, ut impudentiam illius redarguerem, innocentiam tuerer meam, & ſiquid vel antea jam dixi commodè, vel in poſterum quod ex uſu ſit dicturus ſum, ſi non doctrinæ & ingenii laudem, famam ſaltem integram, & colendæ veritatis fidem afferre poſſem, ad contentionem hanc per ſe minimè gratam, ſed neceſſariam tamen, denuo deſcendi. Neque verò eſt, ſi hæc non eſſent, cur hujus operæ aut pœnitere me, aut pigere quenquam alium, niſi conſcium ſibimet, debeat. Sanè improbos vituperare, & bonos laudare, quandoquidem hoc præmii nobiliſſimi, illud pœnæ graviſſimæ rationem habet, & æquè juſtum & juſtitiæ propè ſumma eſt: quin & ad vitam benè inſtituendam par ferè momentum utriuſque cernimus. Ita denique cognatæ inter ſe hæ duæ res ſunt, unóque & eodem opere abſolvuntur, ut improborum vituperatio, proborum dici laudatio quodammodo poſſit. Verùm ut jus & ratio atque uſus utrobique par ſit, non itidem eſt par gratia: nam qui alterum vituperat, duarum is uno tempore graviſſimarum rerum onus atque invidiam ſuſtinet, & accuſandi alterum, & de ſe benè ſentiendi. Itaque laudant facilè nunc boni, nunc mali dignos juxta atque indignos; accuſare nemo liberè atque intrepidè, niſi ſolus integer, vel audet vel poteſt. Nos qui adoleſcentes tot ſub magiſtris exudare in umbra eloquentiam ſolemus, vímque ejus demonſtrativam in vituperatione haud minùs, quàm in laude arbitramur eſſe poſitam, tyrannorum antiqua nomina fortiter ſanè ad pluteum concidimus. Et Mezentium, ſi ſors ferat, putidis rurſum antithetis enecamus; aut Agrigentinum Phalarim triſti enthymematum mugitu, quàm in ſuo tauro, exquiſitiùs torremus. In xyſto nimirum aut in palæſtrâ, nam in Republica plerumque tales adoramus potiùs & colimus, & potentiſſimos & maximos & auguſtiſſimos appellamus. Atqui oportuit aut non in ludicro primam ferè ætatem umbratiles tiles conſumpſiſſe, aut aliquando cùm patriæ, cùm Reipublicæ eſt opus, relictis rudibus, in ſolem ac pulverem atque aciem audere; aliquando veros lacertos contendere, vera arma vibrare, verum hoſtem petere. Parte aliâ Suffenos & Sophiſtas; aliâ Phariſæos & Simones & Hymenæos & Alexandros, veteres quidem illos, multo mucrone inſectamur: hodiernos & in Eccleſia redivivos collatis elogiis laudamus, profeſſionibus & ſtipendiis & cathedris, incomparabiles videlicet & doctiſſimos & ſanctiſſimos viros, ornamus. Ad cenſuram ſi fortè ventum eſt, ſicui fortè perſona & ſpecioſa pellis detrahitur, ſi turpis introrſum, immò verò ſi palam atque apertè facinoroſus arguitur, ſunt qui hunc malint, neſcio quo ſtudio, quóve metu adducti, teſtimoniis publicè defenſum, quàm animadverſione debita notatum. Mea ab his fateor, quod aliquoties res ipſa jam docuit, ſatis longè disjuncta ratio eſt: ut ſiquid adoleſcens in illo otio literarum vel præceptis doctorum vel meis lucubrationibus profeci, id omne ad uſum vitæ generíſque humani, ſiquid tam latè poſſem, pro infirma parte mea conferrem. Quod ſi etiam ex privatis nonnunquam inimicitiis delicta publica animadverti & ſæpè corrigi ſolent, & adverſarium nunc non modò meum, ſed penè omnium communem, hominem nefarium, reformatæ religionis & ſacri maximè ordinis opprobrium, literatorum labem, juventutis pernicioſiſſimum præceptorem, immundum in ſacris Eccleſiaſten, impulſus omnibus cauſis juſtiſſimâ vituperatione proſequutùs ſum, eo nécne cum fructu, quo oporteat, viderint illi, quorum potiſſimùm intereſt exemplum in iſto edere, me quidem ſpero (cur enim diffidam?) rem neque Deo ingratam, neque Eccleſiæ inſalubrem, neque Reipublicæ inutilem præſtitiſſe.

RESPONSIO.

Hanc ego Defenſionem meam cùm ante duos menſes hactenus paraſſem, ne conſumptum fortè biennium alterum in ſe profligando clamitet Morus, tanto cum deſiderio Supplementum illud Fidei publicæ contra me promiſſum expectabam, ut nihil mihi longius videretur. Didiceram enim ex Vlacco perorante, receſſiſſe quidem in Galliam Morum, non tamen quieſcere: ſed vel diffiſum viribus Genevenſium attritis, vel quòd manu tam exiguâ vix ſatis ſibi inſtructus ad decernendum uno prælio videretur, novum contra me exercitum, & quod mirandum ſit, Medioburgicorum & Amſterodamenſium in Gallia conſcribere: Conſules etiam & Scabinos magna cum manu ſigniſque infeſtis adventare. Serò tandem erepſere novæ copiæ; ſine quibus prima acies, opinor, labare atque dehiſcere videbatur. Sed cur tam ſerò, cur ab extemporali homine tam tardè advenerint ſiquis miratur, erant ſcilicet literæ quædam mortuorum longo ſitu eruendæ; erant quoque ſubſidia hæc conſularia tam gravis armaturæ, mirâ itinerum ratione ex Gallia, teſte Vlacco, tranſmittenda: Quid ſi etiam ibidem conficienda? quibus cùm ipſe Vlaccus, homo æquiſſimus, ut habeatur fides non poſtulet, ſed quod equum & juſtum cuique videbitur, id ut judicetur, ſic omnino faciamus. Sufficit Vlacco, Supplementi hujus collectitii Legato, Lectorum curioſitati, non incredulitati ſatisfeciſſe: nempe fidei publicæ, ex Gallia in Hollandiam, quaſi poſtliminio quodam reverſæ, fidem defore uniuſcujuſque privatam, haud ab re ſanè ſuſpicabatur. Primùm hoc velim unicuique in mentem veniat, quod ſuprà demonſtratum eſt, publica teſtimonia quâ ambitione ferè comparentur ; in re privata quid valeant; quàm ſæpe hallucinentur : me deinde non ficta crimina in Morum, non ignota, non obſcura, ſed vera, ſed jam vulgata atque teſtata, in foro denique & judicio agitata haud ſemel, atque verſata protuliſſe. Non igitur calumniatores nos, non teſtes in ſe, ſed ſuos eſſe judices intelligat Morus: id jure æquiſſimo; quoniam ipſe in nos prior has partes ſibi ſumpſit; nos ipſe prior judicavit; ſuam in nos ſententiam iniquiſſimam edidit. Prolatis autem utrinque teſtimoniis cur ſecundùm eos meritò pronuntiemus, qui Morum graviſſimè accuſant, in cauſa eſt cùm ipſius comperta in nos audacia atque improbitas ſingularis, tum ipſius teſtimonii quamvis publica, tamen ambigua fides; quæ conſuetis atque tritiſſimis laudandi formulis proſequitur Morum, objecta illi crimina ab accuſatoribus tam multis non diluit. Quid enim affert vel hoc ſupplementum, More, quod ad rem pertineat? Accuſabant te Genevæ graviſſimi viri Theodorus Troncinus paſtor & Theologiæ profeſſor, duo alii paſtores Mermilliodus & Pittetus multis opinor teſtibus adductis; accuſabant multorum criminum, & commiſſi præſertim in horto quodam probri turpiſſimi. Tu hìc contrà literas producis Deodati ſenis; qui venire in conventum jamdiu deſierat; nec quid ibi gereretur, neſi ex te tuíſque fautoribus audire conſueverat. Literas deinde Sartorii, ne non ſarſiſſe omni ex parte cauſam tuam viderere; tum Gothofridi Juriſconſulti, ne non ſatis caviſſe; has omnes literas jam ante ſcriptas, quàm hæc tua flagitia vel ad Eccleſiam delatâ, vel amicis, ut ſolet, omnium ultimis, credibilia eſſent. Quæ igitur à me tibi objiciuntur, horum nihil negant. Fac autem diſertis verbis negâſſe: haud quaquam tamen iſtorum negatio affirmatione potior tot hominum probiſſimorum erit, quorum præſertim teſtium vim ac veritatem cùm ſuſtinere non poſſes, petitâ ſubitò abeundi licentiâ, non abſolutus judicio, ſed elapſus, evaſiſti. Literis deinde Genevenſium non ſine multorum gravi interceſſione atque etiam indignatione, ut ſupra dixi, conceſſis, tu quaſi Rheno amne luſtratus (quo devectum te in Belgium ais) & noxâ omni ablutus, utcunque commendatus, mirum non erat ſi, convocatâ illic fortè Synodo Gallo-Belgicâ, tanquam Mercurius quidam novus Gallo-Belgicus, non tu quidem illuminatus, ſed combuſtus, ut fit, in Synodo, ad tempus latuiſti. Eas autem literas cùm ſuprà dixerim fore, ut in medium nullo modo proferres, ne prioribus hìc poſitis quanto eſſent frigidiores perſpiceremus, lepidè tu quidem exemplar earum nanciſci te non potuiſſe cauſaris. Quod autem dixi ad tempus, non ſemper latuiſſe te, id facilè conſtat, primùm quòd in illa ipſa Synodo Trajecti ad Moſam habita quò primùm appuliſti rumores quoſdam contra doctrinam tuam & converſationem illis in Regionibus jam eſſe ſparſos, & ſuſpiciones haud leves de te paſſim vel novas haberi, vel veteres recruduiſſe, neque ita te iis abſolutum, quin ad alteram poſtea Synodum novâ rurſus commendatione opus tibi fuerit, declarat, quæ ſequitur Eccleſiæ Medioburgenæ ad Campenſem Synodum Epiſtola, declarat etiam illius Epiſtolæ ſubſcriptor primarius Joannes Longus ejuſdem Eccleſiæ paſtor, qui tuâ tum quidem larvâ inter alios deceptus, perſpectis nunc demum & exploratis moribus tuis, nunquam te niſi maximæ contumeliæ deteſtationíſque causâ dicitur nominare. Immò verba ipſa tua declarant quibus fateris poſt ſeditionem Midelburgi ortam, in qua amicus quidam tuus potentiſſimus dignitate excidit, eos qui poſt eum rerum potiti ſunt, in te non æquè propenſâ fuiſſe voluntate: id tu eorum ignorantiæ aſſignatum vis, quibus tu Theologiæ profeſſor celeberrimus non æquè familiariter innotuiſſes; cùm ad ſuſpectos jam mores tuos revera ſit referendum. Quid enim ad te advenam ſeditio? qui ſuffragiis omnium publicè accerſitus non ſtudiis partium, ſed bonâ famâ ac diligentiâ in iſto munere Theologico tueri exiſtimationem tuam notus æquè omnibus debebas. Hìc tamen quereris quòd ejectum te dixerim ab Eccleſia illa. Ego verò non ejectum te dixi, ſed tantummodo ablegatum; idque non de ipſa ejiciendi vel ablegandi formula, ſed de voluntate eorum abs te jam alienata intellectum volui. In hoc non admodum erraſſe me teſtis eſſe poteſt vir, ut audio, probatiſſimus, quem ſuprà appellavi, Joannes Longus ejuſdem Eccleſiæ paſtor, qui nunc, inquam, longè ſecus de te ſentit & loquitur, atque primò ſentit, cùm in tuam commendationem omnium nomine ſubſcripſit; Teſtis eſt vir ſpectatiſſimus Joannes Duræus, qui non unam Eccleſiam Midelburgenſem ejeciſſe te, ſed univerſam penè Synodum Gallo-Belgicam ejectum velle ſcribit. Fruſtra igitur Synodi Goudenſis actum illud ſubjungis, quod factis recentioribus irritum feciſti; fruſtra, inquam, actum illud quod apertiſſimi te mendacii coarguit: etenim illius Synodi authoritatem idcirco adhibuiſſe te ais, ut ſciam omnia ritè & ſolemniter in Synedrio Midelburgenſi de te acta: ipſa Synodus non ritè, non ſolenniter hæc eſſe acta, ſed nonnullos defectus in modo agendi notat. Vellem ſcire illos defectus cujuſmodi fuerint, cur tu Midelburgenſium teſtimonia ſine nonnullis defectibus in modo agendi auferre non potueris. Illud interea tenendum memoriâ eſt, quibus cum defectibus Genevenſium teſtimonia adeptus ſis: quanto reverà cum dedecore, quanto in ſpeciem cum honore illi te dimiſerint. Prorſus, quaſi id unum ſibi reliquum neceſſariò decreviſſent, laudandum te eſſe atque tollendum. Verùm, ut dixi, laudes illas qualeſcunque perſpecta poſtmodum & cognita vitæ tuæ turpitudo antiquavit jamdiu atque delevit: ut ad infamiam potiùs tuam hæc omnia conducere videantur, qui tam præclaram de te olim hominum opinionem, admiſſis in te poſtea tot probris, tam fœde fefelleris. Ventum tandem ad Pontiam eſt; quam ſic à me falsò nominatam contendis. Ego verò authorem Batavum & notiſſimum illud de te diſtichon, quo me facilè defendam, recito:

Galli ex concubitu gravidam te Pontia Mori,
Quis benè moratam morigerámque neget?

Bontiam, fateor, aliud apud me manuſcriptum habet. Sed prima utrobique litera, quæ ſola variat, ejuſdem ferè apud vos poteſtatis eſt. Alterum ego nomen ut notius, ut elegantius ſalvo jure Criticorum præpoſui. Satis de nomine; nunc rem ipſam conſideremus. Quis tam eſt reus, quis tam omni genere criminationum oblitus, qui, ſi ſolus audiatur, cauſam ſuam vel Caſſianis judicibus probare non queat? Tu quam attuliſti hujus rei narrationem, ejuſmodi eſt, ut nemo ſit, modò integer atque attentus accedat, quin te, etiam inauditis accuſatoribus tuis, vel planè condemnandum, vel ſuſpicione graviſſimâ non abſolvendum arbitretur. Uxorem ais Salmaſii graviter tibi infenſam, & ob eas rationes quas commemorare non vis, nihil intentatum reliquiſſe, ut te in naſſam infauſtiſſimi matrimonii compingeret. Primùm illud ſuſpicioſiſſimum eſt quod celas; illud nempe arcanum quod tibi tam modeſto homini & miniſtro uxorem amici ſic inimicam potuit reddere. Mirum deinde inimicitiæ genus narras, quo impulſa uxor amici tui famulam ſibi dilectiſſimam nuptum tibi dare cupiebat. Naſſa autem illud matrimonium quî potuit dici? niſi túte eam vel ſponſione aliquâ tibi induiſſes, vel eſcam avidè nimis appetiſſes, atque ita meritò infauſtiſſimum, quod ſtupro auſpicatus eſſes, matrimonium reddidiſſes. Nihil, inquis, intentatum reliquit. Quid ergo inter alia tentaverit tu ipſe nobis divinandum relinquis; immò ipſe non taces, ipſe effutire non erubeſcis; & illud ſuprà dictum à Crantzio, paulò infra quaſi palmarium quiddam pro te ex ore Salmaſii repetis; Siquid in Pontia peccavit Morus, ego ſum leno, & uxor mea lena. Hanc ſcilicet pulcherrimam fore defenſionem tibi apud omnes amens crediditi, ſi oſtendiſſes lenone Salmaſio, ejuſque uxore lenâ, te non ignobile ſtuprum feciſſe; & non niſi dominis perductoribus ancillam vitiaſſe. Hoc vulgo innotuit; tu verò palam vehementiſſiméque reluctari. Euge corculum pudoris, deliciæ caſtitatis! Túne reluctari verò? virginali, ut videtur, verecundiâ homo naſſâ muliebri indutus. Nam piſcis, niſi captus, non reluctatur: illa profectò mulier niſi thunnum te perſpexiſſet, niſi facilem, niſi opportunum, niſi obnoxium ancillæ ſuæ deprehendiſſet, nunquam tibi iſtos laqueos ita elimaſſet, nunquam tibi Vulcanios illos caſſes tua Juno tam facilè adaptaſſet; nunquam in virum gravem, Eccleſiaſtem, doctum, celebrem, qui mariti domum inter amiciſſimos frequentaſſet, nunquam niſi in mulieroſum & notæ incontinentiæ hominem tale quicquam moliri aut tentare auſa eſſet. At, inquis, cum factione quadam ſe conjunxit, quæ qualis fuerit, aperire tibi nolo. Ergo hoc etiam non minùs ſuſpitioſum nobis relinquis, quòd tuâ multùm interfuit aperuiſſe, quæ iſta factio, quo in loco te tot Eccleſiarum, tot Synodorum, tot Magiſtratuum teſtimoniis ac ſigillis loricatum hominem & cataphractum tam acritèr oppugnarit. Si ob vitæ ſanctimoniam, concionandi aſſiduitatem, profeſſoriæ facultatis præſtantiam te odio habuiſſet, nihil æquè tibi laudi ac defenſioni eſſe potuit: nunc cùm in re omnium potiſſimùm explicanda tectus atque aſtutus eſſe malueris, credendum eſt non factionem, ſed benè magnum bonorum virorum numerum ob impuros mores tuos, vitámque offenſam meritò te odiſſe. Deinde, ſi Midelburgi, ſi Amſterodami, ubi tanto in pretio atque honore apud omnes fuiſſe te prædicas, tam numeroſa te factio adorta eſt, claudicare tua fides publica videtur; eóſque demum eſſe factionem qui te tantopere laudarunt. Sin Hagæ aut Lugduni primùm iſta factio in te tam acriter eſt concitata, nihil profectò obſtat quò minùs appareat deſeruiſſe te tandiu & Paſtoris & Profeſſoris munus utrobíque ſacrum, ut Hagæ libellos famoſos miniſterium tui Evangelii miniſtrares; Lugduni Pontiam ancillam, id eſt Naſſam ipſe tuam ſectarere; tuóſque illos, poſt diurnum ſæpe diſceſſum, tot nocturnos ad eam vicina ex urbe reditus, tot cum ea furtivos, inſcientibus dominis, congreſſus vicinitati notiſſimos, tantum in te odium plurimorum commoviſſe. Hos tu admiſſarios uxoris Salmaſii vocas; & ignominiam defuncti amici tui matronæ, ejúſque propinquis non ferendam inuris. Hæc ſcilicet cum Ruffino & factione illâ, horrenda criminationum tonitrua diſploſit, & totum inſanis clamoribus Belgium implevit. I nunc, & à me conficta hæc eſſe clamita; dic meas has eſſe calumnias; quas ego non calumnias, ſed criminationes ab univerſo penè Belgio, te confitente, accepi. Has ego tacerem? his non crederem? próque tua in nos noſtrámque Rempubl. injuriâ, ſcelere, audaciâ veras eſſe non judicarem? quam tu factionem, eam ego probiſſimorum hominum multitudinem, teſtimonium, judicium eſſe non arbitrer? Hoccine divinâ animadverſione factum non putem, ut dum aliis famoſos libellos tam diligenter adornares, famoſus ipſe paſſim libellus fieres? Tu verò cùm exiſtimationem tuam hærere, ut ais, ad metas videres, & linguis omnium vapulares, haud inſolito audaciſſimi cujuſque conſilio, potentiorum ſtudiis fretus, quos affectatis concionibus, & Corinthii æris tinnitu illo tibi fortè conciliaveras, prior Pontiam in jus vocas. Contrà Salmaſius, non inſaniam, ut tu appellas, ſed cauſam ſe uxoris deſtituere non poſſe per amicos tibi denuntiat. Quod eum fuiſſe facturum niſi juſtam quoque cauſam crediđiſſet, tibi veriſimile eſſe non debet. Tu, non ſine conſilio ſummorum & ſapientiſſimorum totius Belgii capitum, quorum nimirum patrocinium vel adulando, vel ſuppliciter ambiendo ad omnes nequitiarum tuarum eventus tibi comparaveras, litem in ſuprema Hollandiæ curia proſequeris. Quo in loco potentiam quorundam, ut dixi, non innocentiam tuam præſidio tibi maximo fuiſſe, ſi vel teipſum audiamus cauſam hîc tuam quanto potes cum artificio & cautione dicentem, obſcurum non eſt. Deſperabant adverſarii fore ſe illa in curia ſuperiores: tuam afflicturos ſe eſſe famam non deſperabant. Quid ita? quia paucorum vim atque opes in foro dominari, cæteros pænè omnes favere ſibi videbant. At verò non tuam, ſed ſuam ipſi famam accuſatores tui afflixiſſent, ſi tu æquo judicio ſuperior ipſorum opinione futurus videbaris. Omnes, inquis, omni ope me unum oppugnabant; non defuiſſe tamen amicos tibi agnoſcis: paucos igitur & potentes fuiſſe illos neceſſe eſt: id quod etiam miratos & conqueſtos eſſe inimicos tuos uſque eò non diffiteris, ut ne noceret tibi iſta gratia tam aperta ac manifeſta veritus, haud ſemel ſubiraſci te ſimules amicis tuis, cúmque iis expoſtulare, quaſi parùm prudenter tibi & non ſatis cautè faviſſent. Itaque ſuprema capita, quæ tibi ſuum in hac cauſa præſidium obtulere, enixè rogaſti, ſiquid valeres gratiâ, ne quid eorum autoritas de victoria innocentiæ tuæ delibaret. Illius judicii exitus qui demum fuerit, non dicis; Adverſarii certè, tantum abſuit ut jure aut æquitate victos ſe eſſe arbitrarentur, ut quos tu reos modò feceras, hi nunc petitores ad Synodum provocarent; & quod obtinere à magnatibus jus ſuum non poterant, id impetrare per Eccleſiam facilè ſe poſſe ſperarent. Verùm & in illa Synodo nimis multùm valuiſſe gratiam gratis, ut aiunt, id eſt nullis omnino meritis tuis datam, etiam ex iis quæ pergis ipſe narrare, ſatis conſtat. Adſunt Delegati Lugdunenſes; ſaccum producunt opletum fœdiſſimis criminationibus: ſatis amplum, opinor, ſi tua omnia flagitia contineret, ut induendo etiam tibi, ſi egiſſes fortè pœnitentiam, ſufficere potuerit. Urgent Delegati, ut prælegerentur omnia, quæ ſecum ſacco illo gerebantur: vel ut latiniùs dixiſſes, portabantur in ſacco; à te enim puto, gerebantur in ſindone. Sed Synodi pars magna reluctari, famoſos eſſe libellos. Animadvertite quæſo novam ac ſingularem judicum æquitatem atque prudentiam; qui criminationes cum teſtimoniis in judicium allatas, neque dum perlectas, tanquam famoſos libellos, rejiciendas eſſe contendunt. Horum vicit ſententia: excurrit confeſtim unus eorum, gratulabundus Moro, & bonum factum inquit; nihil contra te legetur. En iterum ſeveros judices! quorum ſententia in Mori gratiam ſic manifeſtò lata eſt, ut unus eorum pati non poſſet quin ex ipſo judicio de ſella proſiliret, gratulatum reo. Puduit Morum ipſum tam diſſolutæ ſententiæ: perturbari denuò ſe ſimulat, & ægrè ferre, non perlegi illa volumina criminum ſuorum. Objurgatus itaque bonus ille Judex & acriter ab ipſo reo increpitus, redit in cœtum; cæteríſque facile perſuadet, ut mutatâ priore ſententiâ ſtatueretur omnia legenda eſſe. At verò, quæ iſti Judices primùm legenda non eſſe, ad arbitrium deinde Rei, converſis eâdem horâ ſententiis, legenda eſſe decreverant, de iis tandem perlectis quàm non attentè, quam non ſeverè, quam denique in reum propensè judicaverint, intellectu difficile non eſt. Conſurgunt judices; reum frequentes adeunt; amplectuntur; & cui palam modò gratificari, ei nunc apertè gratulari non dubitant. Quamquam ego in hoc toto judicio non tam Mori, quàm ejus perſonæ atque ordinis habitam eſſe rationem crediderim. Synodi præſes ipſe Riverius complexus te, nunquam Æthiops, inquit, ita dealbatus eſt, quemadmodum hodiè tu fuiſti. Túne verò adeò obesâ nare homo es, ut irriſum te potiùs, quàm abſolutum hoc proverbio non ſentias? Riverius cùm Æthiopem te lavando & operam & laticem fruſtra perdidiſſet, dealbavit. Tu jam ſalve nobis, Æthiops, aut, ſi mavis, paries dealbate; quandoquidem quo Paulus Ananiam eodem te Synodi præſes titulo decoravit. Nunc ipſum decretum Synodi perpendamus. Lectis chartis iis quæ allatæ fuerant à Delegatis Lugdunenſibus circa litem illam quæ in ſuprema Hollandiæ curia mutilabatur, nihil in iis repertum eſt, quod valeret adimendæ Eccleſiis libertati, quâ Morum ad ſacras conciones habendas cum occaſio ſe dabat, invitare ſolebant. Hæc etiamſi tuâ ſola fide accipiamus, quàm obſcûra, quàm tepida, quàm ægrè abſolvant reum, aut ne abſolvant quidem, quis non videt? qui te olim maximis cumulare laudibus ſolebant, nunc multis criminibus inſimulatum, ne uno quidem verbo tenuiſſimo purum aut inſontem pronuntiant. Non commendant te Eccleſiis; libertatem tantummodo iis non adimunt quâ te, non ad Paſtoris aſſiduum munus, ſed cum occaſio ſe dabat, ad concionandum fortuitò invitare ſolebant. Iſta autem occaſio ſi ſe nunquam daret, id ſibi diſplicere aut detrimenti quicquam inde capturam eſſe Eccleſiam, haudquaquam oſtendunt. Tibi interim pro ara pulpitum eſt; illa in aula te jactas buccâ notiſſimâ; & quo turpior domi, eò clamoſior in cœtu es: quicquid in occulto, quicquid in ſacco illo peccas, hîc tua cymbala, tua æra concrepare ſtrenuè non deſinis; & tuum illud roſtrum nuſquam impudentius, quàm in roſtris offers. I nunc, inquis, & ſtupra & ſpurios tibi finge. Immò, ito tu, inquam, & ſtupra tua ſi audes vel uno verbo diſertè nega: id quod toto hoc libro facere non es auſus. Conſulantur acta publica; immò conſulantur acta privata, acta furtiva, acta nocturna tua, quæ vulgatiſſima iſtis regionibus jamdiu innotuere. Unde ſpurii ſi non extiterint, non continuò tu caſtus, ſed eò fortaſsè nequior fuiſti. Hactenus quæ tu teſtimonia attuliſti aut malè parta, aut jam exoleta, id eſt aliquanto priùs data, quam patefacta ea fuerint facinora quæ à me tibi potiſſimùm objiciuntur, oſtendi. Quibus teſtimonis ſi ab innumeris paſſim viris bonis quos nunquam nominatim læſeras non eſt creditum, id quod ipſi Subſcriptores tui queruntur, de me noſtríſque hominibus, quos injuriis maximis ultrò irritaſti, ſi non credamus, non eſt meritò quod queri quiſquam poſſit. Poſtremas omnium literas Amſterodamenſium Conſulum & Rectorum, neſcio cujus operâ, quóve pacto comparatas, ex Gallia tranſmittis: neque ad tempus omni ex parte ſatis accommodatas, & ad rem certè minimè appoſitas. Ego quæ tu ipſe flagitioſa feceris, coarguo; tu quid magiſtratus in te non fecerit hoc teſtimonio duntaxat oſtendis. Scripſi equidem, &, quod tum palam teſtatus ſum, non pro certiſſimo, ſed ut nuper audiveram, ídque etiam per literas fide dignas, magiſtratum Amſterodamenſem tibi pulpitum interdixiſſe. Tu literas fateris per omnes gentes contra te ab adverſariis tuis miſſitatas. Et eos adverſarios nunc ſcribis eſſe tuos; ego & bonos viros eſſe eos acceperam, & te adverſarium ſciebam eſſe meum. Ex ipſis quæro Magiſtratibus Amſterodamenſium, num iſtiuſmodi quippiam allatum ad ſe de adverſario non tantum ſuo, ſed civitatis etiam ſuæ, ſilentio prætermittendum cenſuiſſent? Hoc igitur ſi verum non ſit, eſt quoque leviſſimum; de quo & ego minimè laborare, & tu minimè exultare debeas. Numquid eſt aliud quod teſtentur tibi hæ literæ? eſt aliud. Te ex quo tempore apud ſe in publico munere verſatus es, nihil admiſiſſe quod juſtum prædictis calumniis locum dare potuerit. Quid ſi antè admiſeris, quàm ad eos veniſti? Nam quibus Conſulibus admiſſa abs te quæque fuerint, cujus in ſcabinatum pruritiones tuæ inciderint, ſi ex ratione faſtorum non habeo dicere, id non dices, arbitror, ita magni referre. Quid, inquam, ſi ante admiſeris? quod ego quidem pro certo habeo. Tum ſanè & hoc quoque teſtimonium, ancile tuum, haud multò plus ponderis, quàm alterius cujuſquam habuerit; ut, quod de iis, quæ auditione ditione tantum acceperat ab aliis, teſtificetur. Quod autem adjungitur te extra culpam notámve fuiſſe, id adeò liquidò non ita ſe habet, ut etiam reliqua in dubium vocare videatur. Non alium igitur atque teipſum tuis Conſulibus opponam; qui te culpatum, notatum, vexatum, linguis omnium toto Belgio vapulaſſe, haud ſemel, pluribúſque verbis confeſſus es. Commodùm itaque interſerunt, ut ad nos relatum eſt. A quibus autem? nam & ad nos longè alia & à plurimis relata ſunt: utrorum qui hæc tam variè referunt anteponenda fides ſit, ipſi noſtram æquè ac ſuam exiſtimationem eſſe ſciunt. At verò non ad ſe omnia quamvis conſules, relata eſſe ut doceam, reſpondeant mihi rogo libellus iſte in nos famoſus, à Moro editus, relatúſne ad ſe fuerit? quem libellum edidiſſe in noſtram Rempubl. non miniſtri erat Evangelici, ſed ardelionis & calumniatoris, & nebulonis maledicentiſſimi. Si negant de hoc libello quicquam ſibi perlatum, poſſe & multa alia etiam improbiſſima non perferri ad ſe de hoc Moro velim exiſtiment. Sin fateantur allatum ſibi eſſe illius libri editorem fuiſſe Morum, ſuum tamen illi teſtimonium tanquam homini reverendo, probo, inculpato perhibuerint, ſciant nos iſtiuſmodi teſtimonium etiam Conſulum & Scabinorum tanquam leviſſimum, & nullius planè authoritatis repudiare. Horum, inquis, Rectorum gravitatem, fidem, autoritatem ſi noſſes, ſexcentis millenorum Miltonorum libellis retundendis parem agnoſceres. Ego verò, mi homo, id neſcio an ita facilè agnoſcerem; quandoquidem & id neſcio, ἀριστείνδην, an πλουτίνδην virtute an cenſu magiſtratum illum in civitate ſua obtineant. Neque me latet Conſules, Prætores, illuſtriora longè quàm nunc ſunt nomina, etiam verrem, reorum omnium Romæ perditiſſimum, ſtudioſè defendiſſe, cum provincia tota, viríque boni univerſi graviſſimè accuſarent. Hoc ſummum fidei tu publicæ propugnaculum, eadémque baſis & firmamentum maximum, quàm nullo tamen negotio labefactetur & corruat vides. Sequitur Eccleſiæ Amſterodamenſis Gallo-Belgicæ teſtimonium, ſubſcriptore imprimis Hottono, Mori intimo, & quod ſuprà demonſtravimus, Regii Clamoris conſcio. Valde nobis probatum ſit neceſſe eſt hujuſmodi teſtimonium, cujus ſubſcriptionis princeps eſt Hottonus. Sed tamen quid afferat, vi eamus. Tantum abeſſe, ait, ut eorum criminum eum reum eſſe ſciamus aut agnoſcamus quorum à quodam Miltone Anglo accuſatur. — Hujus fidei vis maxima, ut video, in ignorantiæ profeſſione poſita eſt. Quid hoc teſtimonio faciamus? quid hac fide? quæ ſuâ ſe potiſſimùm ignorantiâ commendat. Reum eſſe neſcimus, non agnoſcimus: hoc quis præterea toto propemodum Belgio ignorat, quæ illi præcipuè crimina objicio, eorum ipſum in utroque foro, non reum modò diuturnum fuiſſe, ſed plurimorum judicio damnatiſſimum; nec niſi potentium quorundam ſtudiis, útque ſacro potiùs ordini quàm ipſi conſuleretur, fuiſſe abſolutum. Tantum abeſt ut reum eſſe ſciamus, ut contrà potius ab illo aliquoties conciones ſacras rogaverimus. Contenti nempe hoc forenſi judicio, ubi gratia plus juſto potuit; & ſuadente præſertim Hottono, quoties ipſe reſpirare & ſuis parcere lateribus decreviſſet. Verum hoc quid efficit? aut quis eſt neſcius multos in concionibus ſatis eſſe placitos, ſatis ſuaves ac tinnulos, qui in omni vita reliqua offenſioni maximæ fuerint? Etenim qui ſuis libidinibus explendis dat operam, quid obſtat quo minus idem titillandis alienis auribus commodè ſervire poſſit. Quod reliquum eſt, index potiùs operis, quàm teſtimonium dici meretur: quando enim aliud quod dicat non habet, ſatis ſupérque teſtantur, inquit, de ipſo aliarum Eccleſiarum in quibus vixit diutiùs quam apud nos, publica documenta ad qua nos iis conſentiendo referimus. Quæ vos detrectantium penè, & libenter hoc negotio expedire ſe cupientium prorſus videtur; facítque ut non immeritò ſuſpicemur, teſtimonium hoc, tametſi planè friget, non ſine ſudore tamen Mori, allaborante etiam Hottono, multis repugnantibus, impetratum ægrè fuiſſe. Epilogi loco eſt Curatorum ſchola teſtimonium. Verùm in ſchola quid tu declamites, quid recites, aut quemadmodum te geras, neque tanti eſſe reor ut cognoſcere curemus, neque ad hanc cauſam pertinet. Vitam & mores tuos excutimus: quos cum iſti vix attingere, & ad literas ſuperiores malle nos remittere videantur, quod ad eorum teſtimonium infirmandum ſatis ſit, ſuperiùs quoque dictum putemus. Ad finem aliquando pervenimus tuæ Fidei publicæ; quæ ex Gallico ferè ſermone in Gallico-latinum tralatitia inaniſſimi libri maximam partem occupat. Copias jam omnes tuas cum ſupplemento etiam luſtravimus: peramplas quidem eas, ſed ad pompam ſanè potiùs, quàm ad verum robur comparatas. Hæ ſunt plumæ tuæ, ſub quibus corniculam latitare te dixi. Hæc veſtis illa multicolor quâ Morum revera, id eſt morionem te induiſti: his tu phaleris ne populum quidem feſelleris: túque ſi ſapuiſſes, aut ullo rerum uſu præditus fuiſſes, nullius fore uſus tibi hæc omnia, quod ad tuam attinet cauſam, facilè intellixiſſes. Poteſt fortaſſe quiſpiam, cujus nomen alioqui nunquam audiſſemus, tam ſui venditandi causâ quàm tui, phalerata verba tibi dediſſe: poteſt aliorum pudor & bonitas flagitanti ac ſudanti, & agi jam tuam exiſtimationem miſerè querenti, hoc tantulum non denegaſſe. Potes tu per interpretes Hottonos multa confeciſſe? & tamen poſt hæc omnia ſcito te nihil quod ad rem pertineat in medium protuliſſe. Quid juverit, quæſo, vel in foro teſtimonia generatim dicta, quid elogia de tuis dotibus, quid incertas blandientium amicorum laudes proferre, ſi ego te certorum criminum accuſo? Accuſarunt te adulterii Genevæ olim viri graves; tempus, locum, adulteram nominarunt: multorum præterea criminum te detulerunt. Quid ſi iſtam faraginem pro teſtimonio Judicibus tum tuis oſtendiſſes? accepturóſne putas fuiſſe eos, téque abſolvendum iſtis criminibus fuiſſe continuò judicaturos? immò verò juſſiſſent te, ablatis hiſce nugis, appoſitè reſpondere; ullámne cum [illegible]a fœmina rem, rationémve habueris; illo in horto eámne conveneris; illo in tugurio, clauſis foribus, ſolúſne cum ſola fueris. Hæc & hujuſmodi multa ex te requiſiſſent; ad quæ ſingula, neque in illo tum judicio, quod te jure abſolvere vel ſuſpicione poſſet (judicium enim illud petitâ abeundi licentiâ commodùm prævertiſti) neque in hoc libro, tot alioqui ineptiis refertiſſimo, quicquam reſpondes. Facis idem prorſus in cauſa quoque Pontiana: quid in foro tranſactum ſit, quantopere tua gratia ad præjudicium miſeræ mulierculæ poſt Salmaſii obitum valuerit, ſuſpicioſè admodùm ipſe narras. De illis nocturnis Hagâ Leidam itineribus, de illis cum Pontia clandeſtinis atque nocturnis congreſſibus, quanquam hæc & multò plura hujuſmodi omnibus in ore ſunt, nullum verbum facis. Quid hæc prorſus alieniſſima nobis obtrudis? immò quid omnino hanc tantam literarum ac teſtimoniorum congeriem tibi ullo tempore comparaſti? an quod tuæmet ipſe conſcientiæ ſatis probatus apud te non eras? an quod de te nec tibi ipſi, nec ſpontaneis hominum ſermonibus credere audebas, niſi tot coactis nominibus ac teſtimoniis tibimet confirmatum hoc eſſet atque teſtatum, id quod alioqui nunquam crediciſſes, te virum bonum aut tolerabilem poſſe cuiquam videri? An verò tot criminibus accuſatus, cùm de te homines ubique peſſimè loquerentur, commendationibus totidem ſanare illa vulnera poſſe te exiſtimaſti? atqui vides quo ſæpius ex mala valetudine ad inanem medicinam, ex novis maleficiis & rumoribus inde natis ad novas perpetuò commendationes recurris, earum authoritatem eò ſemper minorem abs te reddi atque indies leviorem: ægrotare nimirum exiſtimationem tuam & morboſiſſimam eſſe, quæ tot purgationibus, tot medicamentis indigeat commendationum quis eſt quin ſuſpicetur? Sed fortaſſè longinquas in urbes quemadmodum prædicas, ad Profeſſiones ampliſſimas perſæpè invitatus, hoc te quaſi commeatu, iter facturus, inſtruxiſti. Optimè: quæro itaque an proficiſci in animo tibi fuerit ad eos homines qui te ignoraſſent, an qui ſatis noſſent? ſi ad illos, venuſtus profectò homo neceſſe eſt tibi fueris, qui ab illis invitatum iri te unquam credideris, qui te ignoraſſent: Si ad hos qui te jam ſatis norant, quid hoc tanto commendationum inſtrumento ac ſarcinâ ad eos opus erat, quibus jam antea commendatiſſimum te eſſe ex eo ipſo, quòd invitaſſent, ſciebas. Perſpicuum igitur eſt, nullam ob rem aliam, tantam vim teſtimoniorum commendatitiam ſic te ſtudioſè congeſſiſſe & in promptu ſemper habuiſſe, niſi vel ad oſtentationem quandam circulatoriam, ad quam artem factum te præcipuè atque natum exiſtimarim, vel impendentis ignominiæ metu, quam ex flagitiis nondum patefactis certiſſimam tibi expectabas. Ut haberes nimirum ſpecioſum aliquid & publicum & foris partum, quod privatæ atque domeſticæ erumpenti interdum ex latebris opponeres infamiæ; utque Procerum atque Doctorum ſplendidis teſtimoniis in quibus conſequendis gratia atque ambitio nunc ferè plurimum poſſunt, contra populi veras voces te communires. Verùm iſta te ſpes ut dixi, & fruſtrata jam eſt, & fruſtrabitur; cùm quia tuam obtegere improbitatem atque nequitiam, neque lux ulla neque tenebræ poſſunt, tum quia hoc ipſum quicquid eſt munimenti, quo te circumſepſiſti, per ſe ſatis infirmum atque rimoſum eſt. Id planius adhuc fiet, ſi teſtimonia hæc tua, quemadmodum per ſe ſingula conſideravimus, ita nunc poſtrema primis, prima mediis conferamus; & doctores procereſque tuos inter ſe paulisper committamus. Ut intelligi tandem poſſit, quæ fides illius fidei publicæ, illorum teſtium ſit, ubi aut alii ab aliis tam longè diſſentiunt, aut plerique tam multa vel diſſimulant vel neſciunt, quæ ſuâ ſponte alii fatentur. Illud imprimis exemplo ſit, quod in iis literis occurrit quæ Genevenſis eſſe Eccleſiæ dicuntur. Nihil utique illi, id eſt Moro, vel ab infenſiſſimis hoſtibus meritò objici queat, quod juſtæ ſit reprehenſioni obnoxium. Ego contrà non quæ hoſtes objiciunt Moro, ſed quæ amici ejus, quæ teſtes ejus & juſtæ reprehenſioni obnoxia fatentur, & ipſi in eo reprehendunt, ex his iiſdem teſtimoniis depromam. Quid enim Deodatus? Non provocat quidem Morus, ſed terribiles ungues habet ad ſui tutelam. Quos ungues? nam iſtiuſmodi quicquam inter Evangelici miniſtri arma non reperio; & eloquentiam nolim à viro dicto atque humano, tam truci metaphorâ ſignificari: Reliquum eſt, ut ungues illos, feritatem atque ferociam hominis interpretemur, quos non ad tutelam ſui, ſed ad injuriam aliorum, in nos certè nimiùm expeditos atque acres feræ ſimilior quàm paſtori exercuit. Apertiora haud paulò ſunt quæ Georgius Crantzius, Alberti æmulus, ne ab avunculo fortè ſuo hiſtoricâ fide ſuperetur, & quantò ægrior tantò fortaſſe veracior ultrò nobis largitur. Ego Mori notitiam habui & Geneva & in Belgio; semp[illegible]agnas inimicitias exercuit cum æmulis, quibus ipſe locum ſæpe præbuit nimia libertate loquendi. Et hoc teſte, contra quàm ab altero dictum modò eſt, & ungues habet & provocat Morus. Ferox atque fidens, crabronum irritator infeſtiſſimus: Beelſebubem prope alterum dicas, niſi quod ille muſcas: Laboris alioqui intolerantior, teſte etiam laudatore Salmaſio; cujus & uxorem varie læſerat, & alia quædam commiſerat inconſideratione tali homine indignâ. Hæc ab amicis ac teſtibus tuis vis ipſa veritatis expreſſit; quæ quamvis favore & ſtudio dicentium in molliorem partem flectantur, ejuſmodi tamen ſunt quæ ingenium tuum palam omnibus faciant, & hujus teſtimonii totius fidem infirmare haud mediocriter atque infringere videantur: cujus altera pars probum, inoffenſum, ſanctum, omni labe ac vitio carentem, altera contentioſum, turbulentum, arrogantem, garrulum, ignavum, injurium, inconſideratum denique & ſtultum nobis exhibet Morum. Sic fuit tua fides publica, id eſt, nulla: reverteris nunc iterum ad privatam, quæ nullâ minor eſt. At vides interea, inquis, quàm non tralatitio me dignentur affectu, quos tu vis mihi furcas comparare. Immò tu vide, ſi potes, irâ atque amentiâ impeditus, quàm vehementer hallucineris, quàm nihil attentè agas. Non ego hoc de Batavis, ſed Genevenſibus intelligi volebam; nec quid hi ſtatuiſſent, ſed quid tu meruiſſes. Verba, inquis, tua recognoſce, Oreſtis æmule. Recognoſco, inquam, Oreſtis æmule! Cujus flagitia ſi pro meritis excepiſſet Magiſtratus, jamdudum adulteria patibulo pendens luiſſes: nimirum Genevæ, ubi adulterii delatus eras; ad alios magiſtratus cognitio illius facti pertinere non potuit. Quæ ſequuntur porrò & luiturus propediem videris, & hæc non iratus tibi ominor, ſed duntaxat jus dico, facilè demonſtrant, non tum prædixiſſe me quid ſis paſſurus, ſed pronuntiaſſe quid eſſes meritus; ídque (cùm de nobis ipſe prior judicaſſes) pari jure meo feciſſe. I nunc non conſcientiæ integritate, non juſtâ defenſione, ſed ſcelerum impunitate quod facis effer te & gloriare. Hinc, inquis, fungo, nuper è terra nato quem aut quos oppoſui? Erras More, & me non noſti: mihi lentè creſcere, & velut occulto ævo ſatius ſemper fuit. Tu ille fungus qui ex ephebis modò Genevam profectus, Græcarum literarum profeſſor ſubitò emerſiſti; & tot viris natu grandioribus Eccleſiaſtis, Jureconſultis, Medicis, illa ingenii tunc primùm efflorescentis gratia, ut tu ſatis fungoſè narras, palmam præripuiſti:. mox inter fungos, & olera, & armamenta olitoria, fungo recens tuberante, non tu quidem Claudium extinxiſti, ſed Claudiam ſupinaſti. Nunc conciliare me jubes mea dicta, ſi poſſum, & fabulas cum Magiſtratuum dictis atque judiciis abs te ſcilicet emendicatis: Ego verò mea dicta cum tuis factis facilè conciliavero; de ipſorum dictis atque judiciis ipſi viderint: nos ut non porticibus, ita nec iiſdem judiciis fruimur. Tu tecum ſi potes temetipſum concilia; qui totum illud Genevenſe negotium, & graviſſimum in te crimen adulterii, quaſi fabulam refutatione prorſus indignam prætermiſiſti; hîc alteram fabulam de infenſo erga te Magiſtratuum animo, ſummâ curâ, ſummóque ſtudio refellere conaris. Cur illam quæ vehementiſſimè ad te pertinuit, tam facilè prætermittis, hanc quæ te minimè attingit corrogatis tot teſtibus tantâ mole refutare contendis? Sanè ſi ipſe tibimet conſtare vis videri, nóſque tuum inſtitutum & reſpondendi rationem intuemur, qui fabulas confutatione indignas eſſe cenſes, aut illud in te verum crimen, aut hoc de te non verum Magiſtratûs judicium credamus oportebit. At non omni ex parte vituperandus eſt Morus; habet ſuas laudes; magna vitia magnis virtutibus compenſat; facit quod in homine Eccleſiaſtico laudatiſſimum ſimul & rariſſimum eſt, ut gratis concionetur. Nullo, inquit, ſtipendio actuoratus gratuitam Eccleſiæ operam rogatus præſto: immò verò fortuitam; ex quo videlicet ampliore mercede propoſitâ, relicto Paſtoris munere, ſacrarum Hiſtoriarum Profeſſor factus es; id eſt reverà, ex ſacrario in ſcholam ad ſtipendium uberius emigraſti: tum ſi cujus rogatu fortè concionaris, hoc tanquam beneficii loco imputas; cum aſſiduum Paſtoris miniſterium deſerueris, ut hanc ſubciſivam operam deſertæ abs te Eccleſiæ non ſine maximo compendio tuo gratis impertire videaris. Tu verò More ſi Eccleſiam Medioburgenſem, quæ te, ut ais, tam honorificè invitaſſet, tanto cum fructu audiſſet, tam ægrè dimiſiſſet, ſine graviſſima cauſa reliquiſſes, & ad alium gregem, idémque munus Paſtoris te contuliſſes, reprehendendum meritò & levitatis arguendum exiſtimarim. Nunc cùm Attalicis, ut ipſe ais, conditionibus non Chriſtianis, & emolumenti fructu longè uberiore adductus, non de grege in gregem deſultorius tantummodo Paſtor tranſieris, ſed illo munere longè potiore poſthabito, ex Evangelii miniſtro mutatus in Profeſſorem & Hiſtoricum, ex ipſis Eccleſiæ adytis ad pomœria regreſſus ſis non mercenarii ſolum, ſed defectoris propè numero habendum te eſſe, ſi habenda veteris & ſanctiſſimæ diſciplinæ ulla ratio eſt, affirmare non vereor. At concionaris tamen: & ſtrenuè quidem, nunquam majore cum fructu Attalico, ad Pergamenos putà, non tuum ad gregem; quibus ſi fortè aures vix ſatis teretes pruriunt, tu, vitio cantorum planè converſo, rogatus nunquam deſiſtis: & velut ſacerdos Phrygiæ matris nondum exſectus, aut Curetum aliquis, moves libenter tua crotala; non ut vagitum quempiam fabuloſum, ſed ut rumores flagitiorum tuorum plus nimio veraces fanaticâ vociferatione obruas. Hoc tu ſeptenario ſtrepitu & doctrinâ fortuitâ, ut quivis olim cyclicus aut ſophiſta, ſi rogatus recitas, deſertum Paſtoris munus aſſiduum explere te putas? At concionator eſt bellus & facundus. Ita, credo, ut eſt orator; cui proverbia ſi demas, & inſultos verſiculorum centones, orationis ipſo filo atque contextu nihil inornatius, nihil incompoſitius, nihil verboſius atque putidius; nihil ubi venuſtatem, numerum, atque nervos paulò diſertiore homine dignos magis requiras. Unum eſt in quo graviter titubatum à me eſſe fateor: Græcarum literarum profeſſorem dixi, quem ſacrarum Hiſtoriarum dixiſſe debui: enimverò incredibile mihi prorſus, & portento ſimile videbatur, Hiſtoriarum ſacrarum eum eſſe Profeſſorem, qui tot profanarum argumentum ipſe atque materies eſſet. Tu verò mihi rectiùs, More, non Hiſtoriarum, ſed Calumniarum Profeſſor deinceps nominaberis. Quod ne quis à me ſecus atque res ipſa ſe habet dictum arbitretur, mea ipſa verba abs te prolata in medio ponam; tuam deinde horum interpretationem, quam dico eſſe Calumniam: ut quàm impudenter & malitioſè agas, quod & ſuprà idque ſæpius demonſtravi, & hinc qualem te ſacræ etiam literæ tortorem proculdubio ſentiant, præterire neminem poſſit. Reſtat jam tibi ſola Græcarum literarum profeſſio: ergo hoc ego crimini tibi do, quòd Græcas literas es profeſſus: ergo ego Græcas literas, earúmque profeſſores cogo in ordinem: Ergo ego Græcas literas ad ima ſubſellia relego. Quis horum quicquam ſequi præter te dixerit? ipſa malitia ſi operam tibi ſuam locaſſet, tale quippiam ex meis verbis ullam in partem torquendo exprimere quî tandem potuiſſet? tu hoc non ſolum pro veriſſimo tibi ſumis, verum etiam ut non naſutum minus conjectorem te quàm navum eſſe Calumniatorem intelligamus, cur Græcas inquis literas, earumque profeſſores cogas in ordinem, niſi me fallit animus, olfeci fucum: Nempè Salmaſius cùm eſſet Græcæ linguæ callentiſſimus, & hujus ego authoritatem elevare ſtatuiſſem, id ut quoquo modo poſſem, Græcas literas, ejus, ſi diis placet, regna, ad ima ſubſellia relegavi. Quis calumniari ſolertiùs, quàm hariolari te nunc dicat? Atqui non meus ille fucus, vir ſagaciſſime, ſed tuus mucus quem olfeciſti, tantummodo erat. Mihi enim cum Salmaſio de Græcis non magis literis quàm Calendis conteſtata lis erat; non illum literis vel Græcis vel Latinis ſed authoritatum & rationum ponderibus affligendum atque ſternendum eſſe intelligebam. Hinc tu, propterea quòd omnes cupidè ambages quæris, nequid ad rem dicere cogaris, ut olim paupertatis, ita nunc Græcarum literarum in laudes ridiculè ſanè tranſcurris. Quas ego cum neque neſciam, &, ſiquis alius, plurimi faciam nihil profectò ineptius, nihil alienius fingere potuiſti, quàm deſpectas à me eſſe Græcas literas: cùm non tibi illas, ſed te illis probro eſſe dixerim.

Sed hæc tua perpetua ferè ratio eſt; ubi non fictis criminibus urgeris, ut ne obmutuiſſe planè videaris, data tibi eſſe à me crimini quæ libet fingis, aut abſurda quævis & falſiſſima de me inſeris eaque in primis quæ dicta nunquam ſunt, reſutanda arripis: Hîc ſtrepis, hîc tumultuaris, hîc te jactas. Si adulterii te poſtulo, paupertatem ſcilicet contemno; paupertas tibi contra me toto penu loculorum tuorum defendenda eſt: Si ſtupri arguo, Græcas literas nimirum vellico; Græcarum literarum obtrectatòr oppugnandus tibi ſum: Sic tu vera fictis eludere conaris, ut hoc fumo excitato occultare turpem fugam & convictiſſimi ſontis pudorem atq; ſilentium poſſis. Vide autem, dum Græcas literas tam veteratoriè laudas, ut iraſcantur tibi Literæ Latinæ; tuumque jecur latinum, ut ſatis ſanum non ſit. Quota pars hac, eſt inquis, ſputorum & alaporum? Næ tu maſculum tibi alapum hoc ſolœciſmo meruiſti; nam fœmineas eſſe alapas quas tot ſenſiſti, mirum non eſt ſi invitus agnoſcas. Verùm hæc miſſa faciamus; levia ſunt, vetera ſunt; alius repentè homo jam factus eſt Morus; ad ſanitatem jamjamque eſt rediturus; gradum unum atque alterum fecit; paulò veracior, paulò candidior ab Rhetorica Diaboli (ſic enim calumniam ſuprà nominat) ad Rhetoricam tranſit Juliani. Viciſti, inquis, Miltone. Hanc nempe vocem, ut ille olim (ne non Apoſtata ſatis germanus per omnia videaris) veritate victus emiſiſti. Sed vide, ne ſincerum quod eſt, cauponum more, mendacio ſtatim diluas. Confitentem, inquis, habes reum. Ego verò reum quidem habeo; confitentem non habeo: niſi ſi id pro confeſſo eſt habendum quicquid tu ſilentio præteriiſti: ſic enim & libellum in nos famoſum edidiſſe, & hoſti noſtro dicaſſe, & Anglicanam Rempubl. indigniſſimis modis, méque nominatim illæſus læſiſſe, totam denique fabulam Genevenſem confiteris. Ab hac prævaricatione ad precationem quandam artificioſè compoſitam te confers; ſive ea tuæ fidei publicæ extrema confeſſio dicenda eſt; ad quam Deum teſtem invocas, tremendum fateor & teſtem & judicem. Multa confiteris, multa ploras, peccata quidem longè graviſſima, ſed quæ ad nos nihil attineant, quia penitùs latent, & etiamnum inconfeſſa nobis ſunt. Et iſta quidem ſi in occulto, clauſiſque foribus, ut peccare anteà, ita nunc precari in animum induxiſſes, laudaſſem equidem te, déque benignitate & clementia divina benè ſperare juſſiſſem: nunc cum in platea media orantem te hîc reperiam, ad homines potiùs quàm ad Deum concinnatas has eſſe preces, & quaſi ultima jacentis tuæ fidei publicæ ſuſpiria judicarim. Te Deus, te teſtem invoco, an non videant homines in corde iſto qua tu non vides. O confeſſionem claram atque ſimplicem! immò verò quid obſcurius, quid cautius, quid jureconſultius compoſuiſſe poteras, ut decem cauſidicos vel adhibuiſſe viderere, vel pertimuiſſe? Nam quid hoc eſt, obſecro? an non videant homines in corde iſto. Quid vident homines in corde? Urinatore hîc opus eſt Delio. Verùm quid quis in corde videat, viderit. Ego facta palam, audita, viſa, teſtata refero: quas nemo meas eſſe calumnias ſine maxima calumnia dixerit. Longè turpior ſum, inquis, re quidem vera quàm illi fingunt; ob illa tot abſcondita, quorum apud te reus verè ſum. Sic tu nota ignotis, clara abſconditis delere atque eluere conaris: occulta, incerta, latentia confiteris, ut explorata, certa, manifeſta eò impudentiùs negare poſſis: ad extremum eò deſcendis, ut confeſſionem hanc, quaſi libellum famoſum de temetipſo conſcribas, quò faciliùs veram accuſationem aliorum poſſis evadere. Tu hæc atque hujuſmodi valere apud Deum cave exiſtimes; apud homines certè vel mediocriter ſagaces, minimè valebunt. Quod ſi linguis, ut ipſe ais, atque conviciis omnium jamdiu verberatus, reſipuiſti aliquando revera, & ad bonam frugem revertiſti, gaudeo. Nos te ſic veram egiſſe pænitentiam arbitrabimur, ſi tuarum in nos injuriarum & maledicentiæ famoſæ pœnituiſſe tandem intelligemus.

CONtra famoſum Anonymi cujuſdam Libellum, in quo Senatus Populuſque Anglicanus turpiſſimis convitiis lacerabatur, quem jam vulgo notum eſt, Salmaſii Grammatici infame opus fuiſſe, prodiit nuper Joannis Miltoni Angli pro Patriâ ſuâ defenſio. Liber ſanè probus, omniumque doctorum virorum judicio domi foriſque multùm approbatus. Qui cùm talis eſſet, expectabatur quidem vel Salmaſii ipſius, vel alius alicujus viri literati reſponſio. Illarum certè partium magni intererat electum aliquem & deſertum virum ad cauſſam ſuam jam diu laborantem & ruentem adhibuiſſe. Cùm ecce demum ex omnibus illis rumorum montibus, quos aſſiduè fama noſtras ad aures afferebat, tandem prorepit exiguus iſte mus, qui miſerè ſtridens rodit tantummodò, aliud quidem nihil agit; vel, ut veriùs dicam, inanes quaſdam mortiunculas captat, dentemque in dente fatigat, authorem certè non lædit, ejus autem argumentorum vim & acumen nè aſſequitur quidem. Mirati primùm ſumus quis eſſet; nomen enim ignobile, futilitatis certè ſuæ conſcius, celat. Cùm verò libellus ejus, macri neſcio cujus & jejuni ingenii indicium, perlectus eſſet, in eo ſtatim, tanquam in ſpeculo, virum conſpeximus. Quis igitur ſit, pòſt videbimus. Hoc verò jam tacere non poſſum, hominem quendam valdè obſcurum, & vilem eum eſſe apparere; qui tamen arrogantiâ ſuâ mendaciiſque fretus, ut morientem & penè defunctam regis ſui cauſſam aliquantulum reſuſcitare videretur, hominúmque animos jam ſedatos, & judiciis Dei ſtatim acquieturos iterum commoveret atque irritaret, Dei Omnipotentis voluntati, ſummæque juſtitiæ ſe opponere ( quam ille tàm inſignibus & mirandis iræ ſuæ exemplis in regem, regíſque fautores editis, omnibus vult eſſe notam) & ſupremos reipublicæ noſtræ Magiſtratus accuſare, convitiiſque indigniſſimis infamare auſus eſt. Veruntamen ita obtorpeſcit, tam inſulſus eſt, támque ſomniculoſum ſe glirem præbet, ut certiſſimum cauſſæ ſuæ jam languentis, & in totum penè perditæ omen præ ſe fert. Omnium enim debiliſſimam atque iniquiſſimam certe cauſſam illam neceſſe eſt eſſe, quâ in defendendâ fautores ejus non ſolùm armis, verùm etiam ratione & argumentis inferiores ſint. Meritò igitur cúm talis eſſet, ab ipſo Miltono neglectus & contemptus eſt. Multo enim indignior ab omnibus exiſtimabatur, quam ut ſpectata jam facundia limati illius atque culti authoris ad eruenda ſterquilinia, rabidámque loquacitatem tam effrænis atque ſtulti blateronis refutandam deſcenderet. Verùm nè inter ſuos perfugas inanis iſte rabula ſe venditaret & aliquid magnum, vel quod uno ſanè prandiolo dignum ſit, ſe ſcripſiſſe crederet, equidem cùm in Patriam pietate, tum inſtauratæ nuper Libertatis apud nos amore ductus, necnon illi etiam viro mihi ſemper obſervando, quem iſte inſectatur, multis officiis devinctus, pati non poteram, quin hujus ineptiſſimi nebulonis petulantiam retundendam mihi, nè rogatus quidem, ſuſciperem. Quemadmodum igitur Romani olim Tirones in palum ſe primo gladiis & pilis excercebant, ita ego in hunc caudicem ſtylum acuere & ingenii vixdum pubeſcentis rudimenta deponere haud incommodè me poſſe confido. Cum adverſario enim tam inſipido & vulgari, exiguo ſaltem quivis ingenuo, & eruditione quantumvis leviter imbutus, etiam de improviſo congredi ſine periculo poterit. Priùs igitur quàm opus ipſum aggrediar, operæ ræ pretium videtur, authorem hujus Apologiæ illuſtrem, ſi diis placet, & diſertum, in occulto tamen latentem inveſtigare. Sunt qui dicunt nomen illi Jano eſſe, obſcuro homini & bonarum literarum rudi, ex illo grege legulejorum quos pragmaticos vocant. Verùm cùm meminiſſem bifrontem eſſe Janum, alterum ſincipitium in ejus occipitio quærendum mihi eſſe ſtatui. Itaque alteri ſincipitio nomen, uti ego indiciis quibuſdam comperi, Brammalo eſt. Is librum nuper ſtylo atque ſenſu huic penè geminum ſcripſit Anglicè in Εικονοκλάστῃ, cujus & hunc fœtum eſſe haud temerè plures autumant. Virum igitur, quanquam & hic vultum in occipitio gerit, ſi libet, cognoſcite. Nam, ut ipſe profitetur, Theologiæ doctor eſt, & Epiſcopus Hibernienſis. Is cùm ab ineunte ætate homo diſcinctus & ebrioſus, epiſcoporum, qui tunc in Angliâ dominabantur, luxum, opes, ambitionem ante oculos haberet, inediâ preſſus & latrantis ſtomachi inſtinctu, nihil ſibi utilius eſſe duxit, quàm ut ſacerdotis munere indutus, Eccleſiam, tunc quidem lupis omnibus patentem, invaderet; & conciunculis aliquot ad illorum temporum pravitatem compoſitis inſtructus, quas de ſcripto recitandas circumferre ſolebat, nobilium hominum menſas, & ſacellani pinguem aliquam mercedem, ſiqua ejuſmodi offa ſe obtuliſſet, ambiebat; ubi cœnis quàm lautiſſimis precibus quàm breviſſimis uterentur. Inter alios Derbiæ comiti ſe clanculùm offerebat. Tandem verò nequitiis coopertus, benevolentiam & favorem comitis Straffordiæ, proregis in Hibernia, quem multiplicis nomine perduellionis totus populus ad ſupplicium tandem poſcebat, aſſentationibus & impudentia turpiter aucupatus eſt. Ille hominem ſe nactum eſſe ratus ad omnia facinora paratum, quíque populum adulatoriis & aulicis concionibus ſuis ad ſuſcipiendum ſervitutis jugum paratiorem redderet, Epiſcopum eum Derrienſem in Hibernia creavit. Jam verò poſt expulſos Reges & Prælatos, ad priorem vitæ inopiam redactus, rurſus eſuriens, Curium nunc ſimulat qui Bacchanalia modò vixit; utque pietatis obtentu cunctam rabiem in eos effunderet, qui & ipſum & cæteros iſtiuſmodi latrones ovilibus Eccleſiæ opimis expulerunt, ſpe etiam nonnulla ampliorem aliquem Epiſcopatum, mendaciorum ſuorum & audaciæ premium ſub minore Carolo devorandi, pellem ovinam induit, nil præter pietatem & ſanctimoniam præ ſe fert; ita tamen, ut oblonga Lupi cauda infra inſtitam Sacerdotalem facilè appareat.

En virum egregium præ cæteris qui apologiam pro Rege & Populo Anglicano ſcribendam ſibi ſumit! Age verò, pro rege ut libet. Sed quid tu pro Populo Anglicano, qui Dominum tuum Straffordium, hoſtem Populi acerrimum meritis pœnis affecit, téque peſſimum ejus in Eccleſia Hibernienſi ad omnia ſcelera miniſtrum pari ſupplicio affeciſſet, niſi aut fuga aut obſcuritas tua eorum manibus, qui Dominum plectebant, te furem eripuiſſet. Cur etiam apologiam pro Populo? An pro iis qui Regem puniverunt? haud credo; dices, pro iis qui regi favebant periodus? At illi id non requirunt, ut qui, factâ pace, modicè multati, ſua jam bona ſecurè poſſideant, ſuámque fidem Reipublicæ noſtræ obſtrinxerint. Unde tua iſta Apologia aut abſurda planè eſt, aut nimiùm intempeſtiva. Verùm tu is homo es, qui titulum iſtum libri tui, utpote ſpecioſum, vel cum maxima quavis abſurditate arripere voluiſti. Contra Joannis ſcilicet Polypragmatici defenſionem. Sic ejus nimirum contra Claudium Anonymum, ſatis concinnè quidem dictum, ſi Claudium cum Anonymo conjunxeris, inſulſè imitaris. Verùm non is Polypragmaticus eſt, qui libertatem laudat, tyrannos damnat, civium ſuorum rectè & decorè facta defendit; ſed tu potius, tuique ſimiles verè ſic dici debent, qui cum Eccleſiaſticos eſſe vos profiteamini, & Eccleſiam veſtrâ Polypragmaticâ perdidiſtis, & rerum civilium adminiſtrationem nihil ad vos pertinentem perpetuò conturbatis. Sed cauſa ſuberat gravis cur ſcriberes, credo, contra defenſionem Miltoni deſtructivam.

Cognoſcite jam hominem in illa nempe barbarie Scholaſticorum quàm in clarorum authorum puritate & ſapientia verſatiorem, quorum lucem verſpertilio iſte ferre nunquam potuit. Unde demum prodeat Apologia iſta videamus. Antverpiâ; hoc enim ſolum præclarus iſte Proteſtantium Epiſcopus, aſylum, ut videtur, invenire ſibi potuit, inter Jeſuitarum & Monachorum catervas, quibuſcum tales pſeudepiſcopi libentiſſimè eſſe ſolent. Rectè igitur meo judicio & ſe dignè faciunt Proteſtantes exteri, qui turbatores iſtiuſmodi errabundos ſuis cœtibus abigunt. Saltem non auſus eſt apud ullam Batavorum civitatem hoc ſuum opuſculum typis mandare, veritus ne Illuſtriſſimi Fœderatorum Ordines, ut Salmaſii nuper ſui libellum publicè damnarunt, ita ſe quoque extorrem & erraticum nebulonem multò ſeveriùs punirent. Quod illis quidem in laudem atque honorem, huic meritò in opprobrium cedere debet.

Jam ad lectorem quædam præfatur, & pauca ſanè, ſed quæ ſtultitiam hominis & ignorantiam illiteratam plus nimio prodant. Queritur unam tantum Salmaſii impreſſionem, idq; magna cum difficultate in lucem erupiſſe; ejus autem libri quem Miltonus ſcripſit tot eſſe exemplaria, ut neſciat cui lectorem remitteret. Itaq; nihil hic reperio, cur non amico noſtro gratulemur, Salmaſium ſalsè rideamus. Annon hæc ſatis ad arguendam cauſæ tuæ fœditatem viſa ſunt? Miltonum omnes cum favore & plauſu te ipſo teſte legunt; Salmaſium abjiciunt, nihili faciunt. His tua pervicacia adeò non movetur, ut omnes idcirco mortales veritatem odiſſe, mendaciorum & convitiorum amore flagrare, impudentiſſimè accuſes, ipſe interim non Apoſtolus, non Propheta, neque Evangeliſta, ſed ſcortator & heluo ſatis notus, & ganeonum duntaxat Epiſcopus. Vos verò lectores, quos non humaniter appellat, ſed in ipſo exordio tam petulanter perſtringit, tam docti reprehenſoris veſtri imprimis ſenſum, deinde literas vereri jam diſcite; primùm enim ait Miltoni defenſionem invidiosè elaboratam, deinde tot excuſis exemplaribus approbatiſſimam eſſe fatetur; hæc ſanè apud omnes qui Latinè intelligunt pugnantia ſunt. Tum tot ſunt, inquit, illius exemplaria, ut neſcio cui lectorem remitterem. Satiùs tu quidem, qui vel primâ paginâ ſolœciſmos evitare non potes, ad Orbilii cujuſvis flagra remittendus es, apud quem nulla poteris apologiâ uti, quin omnes te pueri virgis & ferulis pulchrè depexum atque ornatum dimittant. Verum te jam primò auguror hac in parte haud rarò peccaturum, qui tam rem manè incipis. Neque lectorem ſtultè alloqui ſatis habes, ſed eò etiam ulterius audaciæ proceſſiſti (quo vitio ignorantia maximè laborare ſolet) ut Leidenſi Academiæ celeberrimæ ineptias tuas fœtidiſſimas Epiſtola etiam ſtultiſſimè ſcripta dedicare auſus ſis. Alumnum te Academiæ quondam fuiſſe affirmas. Tune verò Academiæ ullius unquam alumnus, cujus infantiæ propemodùm illiteratæ quemlibet vel in agris ludum literarium puderet? Leidenſem autem alumnum fuiſſe unquam te dicere audere, dubium tibi ne ſit, quin illa Academia vehementiſſimè indignetur; majori enim contumeliâ urbem illam afficere non potes, cujus te quondam alumnum fuiſſe prædicas; quanquam illud quondam, ſi unquam fuit, multorum poſtea annorum crapulâ in luſtris atque popinis jam diu proluiſti. Sed & tu eorum tutelam expetis. Hominum ſtupidiſſime, tutelam tu tuæ barbariæ in Muſarum domicilio quæris, quarum hoc ipſum munus eſt, vinctam barbariem catenis in terras ultimas exterminare: neſcis medios dilapſus in hoſtes. Saltem dum Academicos alloqueris, ſimula te literatum quempiam eſſe, vel ad punctum temporis, ſi potes. Salmaſius, ais, mibi anſam prabuit qui tamen omnibus arripuit: quænam iſti balbuties eſt? Fac modo Academia, quam interpellas, te intelligat alumnum ſuum, vix credo annotinum. Nec calamum, inquis, in manum ſumere auderem (ſapuiſſes tu quidem ſi auſus non fuiſſes) niſi Miltoni amentia me invitum provocâſſet. At ille te non magis provocavit, quàm qui prætereunt importunum & improbiſſimi oris canem, quem inani latratu inſequentem ita contemnit, ut vix fuſte te dignetur aut calce. Quid vero, inquis, ab extero qui inter inhoſpitales Caucaſos vitam degit, expectari poterit? Nihil ſanè: Expectationem tu noſtram minimè fefelliſti: neque certè erat opus ut te inter Caucaſos vitam degere faterere, lingua te tua ipſíque mores barbarum clamitant; Tuáque illa Caucaſea poma ſi dare velles, ſcito omnes Alcinoos magnoperè aſpernari. Ad Academiam quereris inter alia, quòd Banauſi & Mechanici in pulpitam aſcenderunt. Perdoctus tu quidem & idoneus, qui Banauſos, & Mechanicos in pulpitum aſcendentes inſecteris, qui pariter atque illi Grammaticæ rudis, haud illis magis pulpitum declinare potes. Poſtremò Alienigenam te Anglum appellas. Id quidem rectiſſimè: Aliena enim ſentis, aliena loqueris, quidni alienigenam te Anglum eſſe dicas, id eſt ſpurium, quem Angli veluti purgamentum ſuæ Patriæ atque piaculum jure quidem ad Caucaſos ablegârunt.

In Præludium ad PRÆFATIONEM.

IN præludiis eſſe ſe exiſtimat vir gravis; ludos ut videtur Epiſcopales mox editurus. Favete ſpectatores Ludioni Epiſcopo. Verum putaret quis hominem non prologum agere, ſed in ipſo Procemio Oreſtem inſanum aut Athamanta ſaltare. Ne inſaniens Cacodæmon Joannes Miltonus, &c. O mitem & manſuetum! quàm non iracundè, quàm humaniter exorditur! quod aliis, quamlibet furentibus, extremum maledicentiæ eſt, id huic pro levi tantùm præludio habetur. Sed hoc novum non eſt: Sic enim Phariſæi olim, veri ejus progenitores, Chriſtum ipſum à Cacodæmone agitari dicebant; ut nemo vel hoc vel pejus in ſe dici, præſertim ab hoc Epiſcopo verè Diabolico, moleſtè ferat. Offenditur imprimis quòd Miltonus Reipubl inſignia, quemadmodum Salmaſius regis in fronte Libri poſuit. Hæc ille poſita ibi ait tanquam fœnum in cornu, ut cuncti ſibi caverent; quid hoc ad alios neſcio. Te verò Brammale non miror fœnum in cornu uſque adeò horreſcere, quoties tot tua adulteria animo revolvis. Omitto deinde quæ de cruce furcifer atque etiam de lyra ſtultiſſimè deliras: & certè præludia profeſſus, nihil aliud niſi nugas agis. Parlamentum & Concilium ſatis ætatis habent ſeipſos armis defendere. Atqui tuum erat potiùs cogitare, ſatíſne ætatis haberes Latinè ut poſſis id ipſum ſcribere. Sed ringit illum Salmaſius, vel ut poſteà perdoctè ſanè emendavit, ringit ille pro Salmaſio (menda an emendatio vitioſior ſit, lectorum eſto judicium) peregrinos veretur: num tu credis quòd tot neſanda, &c. Væ tibi Priſciane! nam ſolæciſmos hîc non ſingulos, ſed turmatim effundit. Quàm verò Peregrinos vereatur Miltonus, & imprimis illum Thraſybombomachidem Salmaſium, qui libros ejus perlegerit abundè nôrit. Ego, inquis, libertatem peto à libero ſuo populo Anglicano, ut quod in re tanti ponderis liberè proferre poſſim. Tune ut quicquam quod liberum ſit liberè proferre poſſis, mancipium aulæ fœdiſſimum, Straffordii famulus & miniſter, gulæ etiam atque inguini turpiſſimè ſerviens Epiſcopus? Quem populus opinor Univerſus de libertate concionantem veluti obſcœnum portentum abominaretur; vel etiam lapidibus obrueret, aut ſiquid mitius, ecquis huc vincula & compedes, exclamarent; ut Romani olim, Claudii quodam aulico ad concionandum miſſo, Io Saturnalia repentè clamabant: Nam ſervis Romæ, niſi feſtis Saturnalibus, liberè loqui non licebat. Nos, inquis, ſuper dejectos cantando epiniceia triumphamus. Rectè quidem ſuper hoſtes qui propter commoda quædam ſua cum tyranno conjurati, patriam ad ſervitutem redigere conabantur: & epinicia nos quidem minimè omnium ſuperbè cantamus, Deo ſemper gloriam tribuimus. Verùm quid ſibi volunt epiniceia tua, Bardocuculle? An quia tam ſtrenuè pergræcari ſolitus es, Græcè idcircò intelligere te putas? Angit Miltonum, inquis, quòd Salmaſius extraneus aliquam notitiam caperet illarum rerum, quæ nunc fiunt in Anglia: non quòd notitiam caperet, ſed quòd rerum nihil ad ſe pertinentium arbitrum ſe faceret, veritatem turpiſſimis mendaciis perverteret, quos non nôrat, in eos convitiis & contumeliis inveheretur. Fures, inquis, lucem timent. Tu igitur fur omnium peſſimus qui lucem times & nomen celas. Sacra etiam impuris manibus attrectas. Prov. 29. Cùm boni regnant, populus gaudet; cùm mali dominantur, populus dolet: eâ de cauſſâ cùm Carolus dominabatur, populus dolebat. Quod omnes ſatis meminerunt. Neque leve ſignum eſt, eos jam gaudere, bonis remp. gerentibus; Carolum enim Filium, etiam cum exercitu jam venientem, & libertatem, quâ incedit, omnibus pollicentem, tanquam hoſtem averſantur ubique, & fugiunt, vi etiam & armis cum ſumma alacritate propulſant.

Quàm autem ſis ineptus nunquam clariùs perſpicitur, quàm cùm de te loqueris, ut hîc. Fateor, inquis, ut huic veteratori reſpondeam, me multò inferiorem bonis omnibus & adjumentis vita ſpoliatum. Quibuſnam bonis? Si bonis animi, doctrinâ & ingeniò ſis inferior, cur non parem tibi congreſſum potiùs quæſiviſti? Sed is puto es, qui eſſe doctum, eſſe eloquentem nihil aliud niſi eſſe divitem exiſtimes: ut bonis externis & vitæ adjumentis ſpoliatus ſi ſis, Doctrinâ quoque & ingenio ſpoliatus tibi videare. Ain' vero tu bonis omnibus ſpoliatum te eſſe? Callidus nimis es & vafer, cupis celare divitias tuas, verùm non potes. Indicabo ego te & facultates tuas. Præter illa bona, quæ erepta tibi eſſe dicis, reſtat adhuc tibi, non enim celabis, ingens, eóque ingentius, quòd nemo tibi eripiet, ſolœciſmorum peculium; in eo genere divitiarum, neminem te locupletiorem cognovi. Extorrem præterea te eſſe queritaris; Vah quàm indigne! Ut perſpicias igitur quàm ſum pro te ſollicitus, eſt in Cilicia oppidum Soli, antiquum, ut perhibent, & ſatis amplum; illuc omnes qui ſolœciſmos tam ſtrenuè facere ſolent, coloniam ducunt; Sarcinas igitur quàm primùm collige, eò enim te, tuáſque omnes facultates ſuadeo transferas. Permagna ibi te latifundia, mihi crede, manent, immò niſi fallor, Solœcorum omnium principatum facilè unus obtinebis. Verùm quod nullum tibi unquam fuit (ſi ingenium dicis quo inferiorem te factum fateris) id tibi nos ſcilicet eripuiſſe inſimulas. Cùm te contrà ab adverſario multas dictiones, & aptè uſitata ab eo verba ineptè ſuffurari non pudeat. Superbire Miltonum ais, nominibus ſuis & titulis in Frontiſpicio ſuſpenſis. Quæ ille nomina præter ſuum, quos ille titulos in Fronte Libri ſuos poſuit; An ideo ſuperbus, quia ſe ſui neque nominis neque cauſæ pudebat? Hæccine tibi Phylacteria ſunt? Salmaſium, inquis, Miltonus, tanquam anonymum convitiis & ſcommatibus ſcurrilibus perſequitur. Multò certè ſermonis lepore & facetiis in hominem jocatur, tu ſcurrile quicquam ab eo dictum nequis oſtendere. Sed ſeculo venturo omnes Miltoni hoc nomine miſere vapulabunt, ne fortè (id eſt ejus loquelâ, niſi fortè) judicet mundus, &c. Quicquid de Miltonis ſeculo venturo fiat, tu vates ventriloquus & infantiſſimus fide nullâ es dignus. Sed nil novi viros optimos nomina ſua reticuiſſe. Nempe quia tu ità facis. Sic ſanctus Paulus ad Hebræos; ſcripſit enim ad Nationem ſuo nomini infenſiſſimam, de rebus admodum novis & parum creditis; tu verò Populo Anglicano, tu exteris tibi & cauſæ tuæ, ut ipſe ais, minimè iniquis, de re notiſſimâ, & apud omnes gentes, ut idem ais, receptiſſima, & tamen malè tibi conſcius nomen occultas. Sic Beza. Rectè meminiſti, ſcripſit enim Vindicias contra tyrannos, quas tu inter veritates illas, quæ, ut nunc temporis, vix hiſcere audebant, recenſes. Virtus, inquis, apud nos vitio vertitur. Quia Brammali ſcilicet virtutes, ebrietas, voracitas, alea, ſcortatio vitia habentur. Sed Cantabrigia & Oxonium ſuis invictis declarationibus ſe ab hoc crimine liberârunt. At invictæ illæ Declarationes fatuitatis & væcordiæ facilè evincuntur: Academiarum enim non erant, ſed Prælatorum factionis, quæ ibi reliqua erat. Rectiùs nunc ſapiunt Academiæ. Genevam, inquis, Deodatus hoc crimine liberavit. Solus fortaſſe ſenſum ille ſuum, non totius Academiæ judicium explicavit. Leydam quoque Salmaſius. Non Leydenſis tamen, ſed externus. Leydenſes libertate priùs recuperatâ, quàm literis clari erant.

Tot ergò doctorum & bonorum agmine circumvallatus, vix uno videlicet atque altero, faciam rem non difficilem, cauſam Dei omnipotentis dicturus, Dei nimirum tui, hoc eſt ventris, aut Bacchi, qui tibi omnipotens eſt; cujus auſpiciis Brammalus

Grammaticus, Geometra, Miniſter, Alipta, Sacerdos,
Augur, Scœnobates, Medicus, Magus, omnia novit.

ſed eodem credo ſucceſſu, quo Grammaticatur. Nam in tantam crevit audaciam, ut quicquid libet dicere, licet: hac ejus ſyntaxis eſt. Sed Miltonius monarchiam è mundo tollere laborat. Dic ubi? Omnibus enim populis ſemper hoc liberum reliquit, ſive monarchiam vellent, ſive aliam regiminis formam; tantummodò nolentibus imponi noluit. Ad ſolæciſmos tuos redeo, qui jam vix intermittunt; Quidni Salmaſio non pepercit rabula? Videtur tamen ſua canina ferocia catenis vinctus vel potiùs vinciendus, qui omnes undique mordit. Unde tibi iſti nitores Orationis & lumina, Brammale? Fieri non poteſt, quin omnes obſcurorum virorum epiſtolas & loculos expilaveris. Crimini das Miltono, quod is in partem adjutorii (ejus enim Barbariſmis utor) Deum vocet. Facis ut te decet Epiſcopum atheum & prophanum. Sed miraris quâ fronte Miltonus auſus eſt dicere, ſe hac, jubente Parlamento, evulgâſſe. Primum Miltonus hoc nuſquam dicit; ſed dixiſſe finge, ut certè fingis, quid tu contra? Si vera, inquis, narrat, ubi Brown vel Elſing, vel Scobel, Clerici Parlamentariorum? Næ tu homo verè minutulus es, & nullius pretii: Nihilne putas jubente atque etiam libente Parlamento prodire in lucem poſſe, niſi cui nomen Clerici Parlamentarii adſcribatur? Mirum eſt tot tibi nugas cogitanti non hoc etiam in mentem veniſſe, quod vulgò dicitur, —— præſertim cujus tu farinæ clericus es, qui mediocriter ſaltem latinè non intelligis; ſi enim intellexiſſes, non hæc ejus verba, qua authoritate Parlamenti ſcripta & declarata ſunt, de ejus libro dicta exiſtimares, verúm de publicis Parlamenti ſcriptis, & declarationibus paſſim editis. Neque te quicquam ex verbis ejus lucratum eſſe cenſiſſes, quamvis quod dixiſſe eum falsò accuſas, factionem rempubl. dixiſſet; factionem enim tam in bonam quàm in malam partem olim dici vel pueris notum eſt. Progrederis deinde, Una factio erat & armis ſe tuetur ( non jure ) tui. Quid tù hic tibi velis? Si capis ipſe, bene eſt, ego quidem non capio. Ut nec ſequentia tua de Parlamento ſupremo, Concilio ſummo, de Grammaticâ denique comparandi gradibus laborante. Id te angit potius quòd Hierarchia tua gradibus laborat. Hunc, inquis, honorem Deo ceditis, ut dum vos veſtris mundanis gaudeatis, nè minimam Religionis aut animarum curam ſuſcipere velle, palàm profitemini. En iterum fœde ſolœcum! Sed ſane dignum eſt, ut tu, qui animarum cura quid ſit, nunquam ſciviſti, eam civili gladio commiſſam crederes. Nos verò, ais magno impetu proſternimus veræ religionis cultores. Hoſtes quidem civiles & proditores, Religionis autem cultores Religionis causâ non proſternimus. Salmaſium deinde crepas: tace de Salmaſio, ille ſuos patitur manes, & in Suecorum aulâ jam diu friget. Sed Miltonus, ut omnes reſpublicas & Illuſtriſſimos etiam Hollandiæ Ordines in partes ſuas pelliceret, Illorum principi oblatrat. Advertite Hollandi, Principem nuper mortuum, veſtrum principem appellat; nec vos quidem liberos eſſe patitur. Cavete, dum licet, ne pervagante hujuſmodi aulicorum doctrina elatus, alter quiſpiam apud vos princeps ac Dominus ſuccreſcat. Tandem Præludium hoc grandi ſolœciſmo penè claudit, hæreditarium regis imperium, cui totus populus per multos annos juratus conſentierunt. Vos lectores eruditi, quotquot literas humaniores amatis, præſantem hunc Bavium, immò barbarum, odio quo dignus eſt, & ſibilo proſequimini.

CAP. I.

PRæludiis amotis fabulam expectabamus, promiſſas nimirum illas Miltoni confutationes. Et certè hoc ſenſu reverâ fabulam agit; eorum enim quæ promiſit, nihil præſtat; ſed partim maledictis, partim inſulſis regiæ fortunæ miſerationibus totum hoc caput exhaurit. Non ſum, inquit, tam audax Phormio, ut Salmaſio me compararem, quàm Miltonus, qui ſe Salmaſio opponere auderet. Næ tu Phormio quis fuerit in Comœdia parùm videris intelligere. At quid ais? Miltonum Salmaſio opponere ſe audere, Grammaticorum Pyrgopolynici? Facinus ingens narras. Nam ſi authoritate, inquis, dirimenda lis ſit, plus fidei uni Salmaſio, quàm mille millenis Miltonis omnes ingenui & docti darent. At verò qui authoritatem vel Salmaſio vel Miltono dant, niſi quam eorum alteruter ratione & argumentis ſibi acquirit, ipſi neque docti, neque ingenui ſunt. Miltonum exteris antehac ignotum veritas & ratio commendavit: Salmaſium inane nomen, & multæ lectionis opinio commendare ſine ratione non valuit, quin ab amicis etiam ejus, & fautoribus longè inferior in hoc certamine ſit judicatus. Tu totam de patribus diſputationem ſatis callidè abs te amoves, ut quos nunquam conſulueris. Miltonum in plurimis Salmaſio caſtigandum relinquis. Munus profectò ſatis arduum Salmaſio reliquiſti, qui Miltoni reſponſum cùm legeret, ita, ut videtur, perculſus eſt & quatefactus, ut, ſolutâ alvo, in latrinam putem confugiſſe: Unde ſcripſit ad amicos, cacabundus in hæc verba: Ego iſtum Miltonum permerdabo & perminugam. Baliſtam ſatis validam in poſtico geras oportet, Salmaſi, qua merdas tam longè contorquere aut explodere te poſſe putas. Hinc eſt quòd tam fœtida meditantem jam diu in Aula Sueciæ fœtere te dicant: Neque mirum eſt, ſi Sueciæ regina, quamvis opinione vulgi primùm decepta, nunc ſuo acri judicio compertum te & cognitum tam olentem Mœvium à ſe abjecerit. Ferunt alii, cùm paginam unam atque alteram reſponſi illius percurriſſet, furore correptum ſic ſubitò rodomontari cœpiſſe. Ego perdam iſtum nebulonem & totum Parlamentum. Hæc verba ipſius ad nos delata retuli; & ſanè ſi iſtiuſmodi homo eſt, non is idoneus qui caſtiget alios, ſed qui ipſe caſtigetur, in Phreneticorum potiùs gymnaſium deportandus. Progredere, Prætermiſſis, ut ais, Oratoriis & veriſimilibus ex Cicerone, Ariſtotele, Euripide, Sophocle, & aliis Ethnicorum ſcriptis. Non enim Chriſtianis neceſſariò recurrendum eſt ad Ethnicos. Neſcis ergò Salmaſium tuum hanc priùs affectâſſe viam? Miltonus eò tantùm adverſarium ſecutus eſt provocantem. Tu verò interim hypocrita ignaviæ tuæ conſulis, qui cum nullum ſanè bonum, aut facundum authorem unquam attigeris, id ſtudio pietatis non feciſſe te ſimulas. Miltonus aiebat, pater nos genuit, non Rex. Tu inde nomen patris à ſpecie ad numerum detorques, ut captiones hinc quaſdam & amphibolias frigidiſſimas conſuere poſſis; quas ne recitatione quidem dignas exiſtimo, adeo ſunt ineptæ & mucoſæ. Si verò, inquis, rex juvenis uxorem ambiens Papam Patrem ſanctiſſimum appellaverit, non tam acri cenſura perſtringendus. Sic Zimri juvenis Moabiſſam uxorem ambiens à religione vera defecit; an excuſatior idcirco eſt; Probabile, verò, ais, eſſe quòd literam ſecretariis ſuis ſcribendam commiſit. Eò magis culpandus, qui rem tanti momenti, quæque religionem atque honorem ſuum in dubium vocare poterat, Secretariis tam minimè probis commiſerit. Verùm & nos Regem Hiſpaniarum Regem Catholicum appellamus. Iſtarum literarum exemplar æquum eſt te proferre, ſi potes, ſicuti nos Regis ad Papam protulimus. Et quidni, inquis, Papam Patrem ſanctiſſimum appellaveritis, ſi in politicis vobiſcum ſentiret. Sic ſcurræ ſolent deprehenſi; quod ſe feciſſe conſtat, id alios facere velle calumniantur. Hos mores ſcurrarum lepidiſſime depingit Plautus:

> Nihil eſt profecto ſtultius atque ſtolidius,
> Neque mendaciloquius, neque perjurius,
> Quàm urbani aſſidui cives, quos ſcurras vocant;
> Qui omnia ſe ſimulant ſcire, nec quicquam ſciunt,
> Quod quiſquam in animo habet, aut habiturus eſt, ſciunt.

Si hos vermes, ais, Regum auribus inſidiantes, & velut intus exiſtentes, prohibent allenum, ut neminem ſibi fidelem audire poterat, Rex radicitus extirpaſſet, &c. Credo iſtos vermes & auribus & cerebro tuo inſidiantes, Grammaticæ rudimenta, ſiqua tibi inſculpta erant, penitùs exediſſe. Rurſus Deodatum affers, qui regem noſtrum unicum Reformatæ Religionis defenſorem inſignivit. At, inquam, longius abſuit Deodatus, quam ut Carolum in cute nôſſe poſſet; ne dicam clauſiſſe oculos, ſi poſt Rupellenſes Reformatos tam à Carolo præclarè defenſos hoc dixerit. Sed pergis, vobis qui Carolum è mundo ſuſtuliſtis, tandem redeundi patet via in Ægyptum, ex quo ægrè detinemini. Eja Solorum decus, quàm te jam in municipio tuo Solenſi oblectas, à quo nemo te poſſit detinere, ne ſi furcâ quidem expelleret. Miltonus, ais, nec locum, nec librum, ubi à ſe prolata, è ſummorum Theologorum libris inveniemus, exhibet, At iſta loca Miltonus facilè protuliſſet, niſi ipſe Salmaſius adverſos ſibi pleróſque reformatos Theologos haud uno in loco faſſus eſſet; quæ tamen loca eorum ſcripta legentibus ita paſſim occurrunt, ut hinc tua potiùs ignorantia conſtet, qui neque illos, neque ipſum Salmaſium prælegiſſe videris. Jam Davidis exemplum omnibus notum narras. Rationes autem illas, quas attulit Miltonus; cur exemplum illud ad cauſam hanc non pertineret, non attingis; tantummodò Unctum Domini, Unctum Domini ingeminas. Dic ſodes ergò, Eſtne omnis Rex unctus Domini? Omnis, ais præſertim Chriſtianus. Cur ergò dux Joſua quinque unctos Domini uno die ſuſpendit? Nam Chriſtianos ſi dices non fuiſſe, ridiculum eſt; quandoquidem Chriſtianum profiteri, cùm ſit maleficus, neminem ſupplicio debito eximere poteſt. David, inquis, viam nobis monſtravit tolerantiæ, ut Deo judici relinquetur, qui impœnitentem percutiet, ut morietur. Quid me cogis? defeſſus jam penè ſum, Solenſes tuas delitias perambulando. Ad Davidem recurris; Salmaſio reſponſum erat eadem inculcanti, Davidem privatum privatas injurias ulciſci noluiſſe. Tu Parlamentum omne privatum eſſe dicis, Regem Carolum, unctum Domini fuiſſe; nihil tamen horum probas, nihil ab adverſario dictum cum ratione oppugnas. Si ex aura populari, inquis, diademata regibus auferenda, quis non vellet ſe ex infima plebe terræ filium potiùs eſſe quàm regem? Id noli timere; utcunque non deeſſent reges.

Neque te, credo, hoc deterrebat, quò minùs Epiſcopatum turpiter ambires, quamvis populo inviſum. At Miltonus, ais, dum poteſtatem populi in reges ſuos imprudenter prædicat, reges omnes eſſe tyrannos inſtruit. Sic ſanè ut lex inſtruit homicidas, quia vetat.

> —— Jam Troja maneret, ais, > Conſilio Priami ſi foret uſa ſenis.

At verò noſter Priamus, vel Paris potiùs, non Trojæ uſus conſilio, ſed Helenæ ſuæ, & ſe perdidit & regnum ſuum. Jam ordine perrupto ad nonum puto vel decimum caput excurris. Miltonum, ais, aſſeruiſſe, nullum membrum Parlamenti abſque proprio conſenſu in judicium vocari poſſe, Regem autem tu ſaltem membrum Parlamenti eſſe dicis. Præpropere tu quidem id ibas petitum, quod nuſquam erat, neque à quoquam, quod memini, unquam dictum. Hoc etiam reſponſum tuliſſe Regem, cùm quinque Membra poſceret, falſiſſimum eſt, quòd ex illa re geſta ſatis liquet. Noſti, inquis, quod niſi à ſicariis veſtris impeditus populus eſſet, regem è veſtris manibus eripuiſſent. Verùm quos tu populum, eſſe exiſtimas, nos non putamus. An verò Regiorum gregem illum perditum, totiéſque domitum, populum appellas? Nos ita non exiſtimamus: victi bello, quod ipſi intulerant, jus populi amiſerunt. Miltonum graviter accuſas, quod dixerit, Salmaſium Regis mortem ineptè plorantem, legentium neminem pilo triſtiorem reddidiſſe. Non ergo in Miltonum, ſed in ſtolidiſſimas Conducti ploratoris nænias culpam conferre debes.

> Men' moveat quippe, & cantet ſi naufragus, aſſem
> Protulerim. —— Verum: nec nocte paratum
> Plorabit, qui me volet incurvaſſe querelâ.

Majori patientia, inquis, ferunt Epiſcopi convitia tua. Epiſcoporum ſanè patientia omnibus nota eſt. Hic verò quaſi interno dolore perculſus, magno fervore & conatu, Epiſcoporum cæremonias & ambitiones aſſerere contendis. Unde apertiùs licet conjicere, te Brammalum lurconem illum, quem antea diximus eſſe, qui Epiſcopos combibones, & commeſſatores tuos, belli civilis faces, tam gnaviter defendis. Quod duxerit Hippia mœchos, inquis, innumerabiles ſunt. At multò magis innumerabiles, quot Brammalus fecerit mœchas. Sed Rex noſter, ais, Templa noſtra decenter ornavit, & honoravit in honorem Dei, nunquam in equorum ſtabulos convertebat. Nunquam, mihi crede, Templa veſtra tàm decenter ornavit, quàm tu Solorum Templa egregiis tuis ornaſti ſolœciſmis, quorum monumenta ſane ſempiterna nunquam interibunt. Te Deum omnis ſolœci, te patronum tam præclare de illo municipio meritum colent poſthac in ſecula, & invocabunt; in memoriam etiam eloquentiæ tuæ tam aſininæ, non Scholas diſcipulis tuis, ſed ſtabulos dicabunt. Regem autem veſtrum aio minimè omnium Templa ornaſſe, ſed ipſum potius in equorum ſtabula, atque in haras etiam convertiſſe, dum tot immundos prælatos, tot porcos Epiſcopos, te denique ſpurciſſimum in Eccleſiam introduxit. Regias jam partes agi dicis, ſi Presbyterianos graviùs incuſemus. Nec tamen Chriſtus ipſe & Apoſtoli, falſos Evangelii Doctores, fratres ſubdititios, Religiones prætextu Eccleſiæ inſidiantes, mitiùs olim increpabant. An ergò dicta eorum aut ſcripta digladiari in ſe invicem dices, quòd ſuos vel libentes, vel deficientes à fide atque integritate liberrimè reprehenderent? Ubi mutatur forma reipublica ex Monarchia in aliam, non datur ſucceſſio, &c. Non hunc Miltonus ſolùm, ſed Salmaſius obicem Carolo ſecundo poſuit; ejus enim verba ſunt ſi advertiſſes. Verùm tu, aut coecus aut demens, in ſocios pariter ac hoſtes incurris. Tantâ, inquis, illorum aſtutiâ omnia obliterata ſunt, ut conclamatum eſt de viribus humanis; ſed nos qui per fidem in Deum expectamus reſurrectionem futuram, &c. Apage ſis temulente. Quid tibi aut vinolentiis tuis cùm fide, quem ſi pocula tua majora ita conſopirent, ut reſurgere nunquam poſſes, feliciùs profecto conſultum tibi foret. Scires libenter quid per populum vellimus Scirem ego viciſſim, quid Romani per Senatum Populúmque Romanum voluerit. Quæris quod remedium reſtat populo contra tyrannidem Parlamenti. Tum id quoque dicam, cùm cauſæ quid erit; nunc ſupervacua ne quære.

CAP.

CAP. II.

DEfinierat Salmaſius regem Deo ſolo minorem, legibus ſolutum; ſi noſtram rempub. ſic definiret aliquis, conſenſuros nos eſſe ais, qui tamen regis illam definitionem oppugnavimus. Inſtitutum hoc tuum eſſe video, cùm refutare nihil poſſis, poſſe ſaltem calumniari. Et qui penetrabit Miltoni ſcripta, inquis, nil præter barbariem & inſaniam inveniet. Dirumpi ergo neceſſe eſt te, qui tot viros doctos & probos de Miltoni ſcriptis longè aliter ſentire, invitus quotidie cernis. Barbariem verò tu cuiquam impudentiſſime? quem præter linguæ fatuitatem, cùm ſenſus belluini & ſtupor, tum etiam mores in ipſa vaſtitate barbariæ natum atque nutritum clamant. Utcunque tamen ſiquid affers audiamus. Petrus ſupremum vocat Regem. Supereminentem quidem vocat; ídque vulgari potiùs loquendi more, quàm verè politico, pro eorum captu ad quos ſcripſit. Sic Conſul Romanus ὕπατος eſt vocatus, id eſt ſupremus, quô modô & Poloniæ Rex, & Dux Venetiarum ſupremus vocari poteſt; qui tamen, ſi politicas rationes accuratiùs inire volumus, & multorum inſtituta regnorum, ſupremi non ſunt. Ita igitur ſupremum vocâſſe regem Apoſtolus cenſendus eſt, ut tamen leges cujuſque gentis, & jura, & reipub. formam inviolatam eſſe vellet. Et certè non tam ſupremus quis ſit, docet aut diſputat, quàm quas ob cauſas & quatenus obedientiam ſive ſupremis, ſive præſidibus præſtare debeamus: id Miltonus copioſè explicuit; tu neſcio an tuæ conſcientiâ væcordiæ, conſultò prætermittis. Quaſi, inquis, triginta Athenis tyranni non plus poterant in damnum populi, quàm unus ſi maximè tyrannus eſſe voluerit. At inquam ego contrà, nullus unquam fuit unus, ſi maximè tyrannus eſſe voluerit, quin tyrannos non triginta ſolùm, ſed trecentos, atque etiam multò plures in damnum populi conſtituere ſoleret: fruſtra igitur ſub uno, ſive Monarchiâ, tyranno melius populo fore ſperas: nullus enim in republica tyrannus unquam unus fuit, quin plurimos ſibi adſciſcere tyrannos neceſſe habuerit. Rex ſi abutetur, inquis, poteſtate ſua in regni detrimentum, à ſuis ſubditis impediri poteſt & debet. Rectè concedis: ſed quouſque impediri poſſit ac debeat non dicis. Poteſt enim tyrannus eouſque procedere in detrimentum regni, ut niſi vim vi repellamus, eumque pro hoſte habeamus, impedire nullo modo poſſimus. Concedis igitur ipſe, & fruſtra contendis veritate victus, ſed videri concedere non vis, pertinaciæ ſtudioſior, quam veritatis; nam quod impediri ais tyrannum debere, non in judicium trahi & capite plecti vel ab uno vel ab omnibus, ſed Dei judicio relinquendum eſſe, nugæ ſunt, & gratis dictæ; quæ ſingula, non affirmanda, ſed probanda tibi reſtant. Vis Monarchiam reipublicæ formâ eſſe perfectiorem. Id nos in præſentia non agimus. Tua tamen argumenta, quoniam vacat, videamus. Introductam à Deo dicis in ultimum & præſtantiſſimum remedium populo toties ab inimicis ſubacto ſub judicibus. Primùm cur illud præſtantiſſimum remedium non primò potiùs, quàm ad ultimum adhibitum fuerit, cùm Deus Rempub. ſuam quam præſtantiſſimis legibus formaret; deinde cùm Iſraëlitæ Regem peterent, pòſt annos circiter quadringentos ſub judicibus exactos, ſi Monarchia præſtantiſſimum illud remedium Deo viſum eſt, cur ab ea diſſuaſerit populum ſuum ac deterruerit, ſolum. Cur denique petentes eos peccati graviſſimi reos fecerit, fac quæſo intelligamus: quòd Theocratiam, inquis, rejicerent, nempe ſub judicibus. At verò illi non minùs in Monarchiâ Theocratiam retinere poterant, ac debebant: ſin minùs, tu Monarchiam dum præſtantiſſimam eſſe dicis, non Theocratiam, ſed Atheocratiam cave dixeris; in qua Deus tàm præſens regere ſuum populum quàm ſub judicibus non potuit. Certè ſi gubernantibus illis Theocratiam in Republica fuiſſe dicis, ut certe fuit, haud aliam gerendæ Reipublicæ formam præſtantiorem, ut ſunt res mortalium, invenire quiſquam poterit. Reſpondeat mihi, inquis, tuus Populus Anglicanus, utrùm ligneo Caroli jugo excuſſo, aliquam miſeriarum relaxationem inveniant. Reſpondet itaque jugum ſe Caroli ferreum à conſcientiis ſuis depuliſſe, jugum idem Epiſcoporum; ſua vectigalia, ſuoſque cenſus non nunc aulicæ luxuriæ, & libidinibus, ſed vincendis hoſtibus & propagandis imperii finibus ultrò ſe impendere. Leges, ais, Moſi & regibus à Deo datas quibus regant populum; num populo lex data, ut Reges regeret? Immò apertè leges tàm Moſi & regibus, quàm cætero populo ſunt datæ, ut tam ſe, quam populum regerent; ſin minùs, ita ut regerentur ab aliis, ut ne lex Dei cuivis mortalium fruſtra daretur. Quis geret, inquis, gladium? populus? Immò populus per Magiſtratum, quem ſive unum ſive plures ex omni ſuo numero elegerit. Neque ullas propterea confuſiones, quas metuis, excitari neceſſe erit, Si vel pedem, inquis, figeres, de regibus actum erit, δὸς ποῦ στήσω καὶ τὴν γῆν κινήσω. Utinam pedem ipſe tandem figeres Silene, ſi Brammalus es. Nam nos locum, ubi ſtes ebrius, dare non poſſumus, quin ea quæ fixiſſima ſunt & firmiſſima, tibi in gyrum moveri, & cum cerebro tuo ſemper madente circumnatare videantur. Quis te, inquis, juramento Regi præſtito liberare potuit? Juramentum ipſum, quo Regi non propter Regem, ſed reipublicæ cauſâ obſtricti fuimus; quam cùm perditum iret, & ſuum ipſe priùs jusjurandum violavit, & noſtrum ſolvit. Nihil enim naturæ, nihil rationi aut gentium juri contrarium magis eſſet, quàm ſi Regi jusjurandum ſuum violare ad libidinem liceret, populus ſervare fidem ad perniciem ſuam teneretur. Ut dicto audientes Moſi fuimus, ita erimus tibi, modo Deus tecum ſit, quemadmodum fuit cum Moſe. Sic Reubenitæ ad Jehoſuam. Conditionem hîc nullam vides expreſſam. Ad Anticyras ergò naviga, aut domi crapulam edormiſce; cras, mihi crede, nihil expreſſius videbis, neque tam ſtultè interrogabis quid ſi Deus Joſuam deſereret, ſed quid ſi Joſua Deum deſereret: Tum enim quid facturi eſſent Reubenitæ, tibi reſpondebimus. Nutare mihi crede jus Regium videtur. Hoc de jure regio, prout Salmaſius deſcribit, dictum eſt. Neque eſt hoc Monarchiam legitimam in Carolo trucidare, quod tu toties invidioſè & paraſiticè vociferaris. Nunc quod minimè es, vatem ſcilicet & concionatorem piiſſimum multis deinceps verbis agere cupis; dúmque adulterum videri te metuis, profers adulterinum. Digitum Dei agnoſcimus & veneramur punientem ingratum populum. At populo benè eſt & proſperè, quem tu nequicquam ingratitudinis accuſas; tu potiùs Dei digitum agnoſce, te tuoſque unà cum omnibus tyranni fautoribus inſigniter punientem. Nondum, ais, Hiſpania & Pontificii velum abduxerunt. Quid nobis Hiſpaniam & Pontificios toties immeritò objicis; qui non ignoremus Carolum tuum minorem in Belgio commorantem legatos ad Papam miſiſſe, ut vel ab ipſo Antichriſto Rex reformatus contra patriam & reformatos auxilium imploraret. Perſecutio, inquis, jam in Anglia maxima eſt, quæ fuerat à tempore quo populus aliquis inhabitabat. An major eâ quam Brammalus in Hiberniâ nuper excitavit, qui curiam Inquiſitionis conſcientiis hominum tàm infeſtam & tyrannicam, primus omnium in Hiberniam introduxit. Te verò illum ipſum fuiſſe ſequentia clariùs oſtendunt. In hoc enim jam totus es, ut Eccleſiaſticam tyrannidem defendas. Nam quod tanta, inquis, jam patimur, hæc eſt ratio præcipua, quod in aliquibus Anabaptiſtarum & cæterorum omnium ſciſmaticorum clamoribus viam concedentes, uno dato abſurdo ſequuntur infinita. Ipſiſſimus hic Brammalus ille antiquum obtines, qui reformatis omnibus ſciſmaticorum nomine infamatis omnem conſcientiæ libertatem adimere perpetuò ſtudebas. Nunc illorum importunitati, id eſt, conſcientiæ, etiam nonnulla unquam conceſſa fuiſſe graviter doles. Reges Anglorum judicari poſſe à ſuis ſubditis Miltonum ais docere, exemplo pravorum temporum, & jure à ſapientibus damnatis chartis obſoletis, & ob multas corruptiones meritò exploſis. Quid illo hominum genere abſurdius aut impudentius? quærunt modò quo jure, quâ lege factum quidque à nobis ſit, ſi leges non recitamus, contra eas feciſſe nos judicant; ſi leges noſtras proferimus antiquas, ratas, atque notiſſimas, hi ſtatim obſoletas & meritò exploſas eſſe aiunt: nec tamen quo tempore exploſæ aut abrogatæ fuerint, uſquam oſtendunt. Ita, dum tyrannidem ſine authoritate aſſerere cupiunt, & vetera & nova pariter rejiciunt. Quidni, inquis, Uzzias Rex leproſus à Sacerdotibus templo deturbaretur, cum Deus lepræ probandæ, & leproſi omnis excludendi poteſtatem & mandatum ſacerdotibus dederat. At verò idem Deus, lex eadem omnis malefici puniendi poteſtatem & mandatum magiſtratibus dederat, neque magis tamen leproſi regis exturbandi, quàm malefici regis puniendi vel hîc vel illic mentio facta eſt. Si lepræ judicio regem eximi non vis, quia nominatim non excipitur, eâdem certè ratione neque ullis aliis legibus aut judiciis regem exemeris. Sed video quid agitis, ut regem quamvis veſtrâ ſententiâ ſupremum, vobis tamen ſacerdotibus ſubjiciatis, utque rex in populum abſoluto atque ſupremo dominaretur imperio, vos ſacrificuli ſupremo ſuperiores eodem imperio dominaremini in regem. Conſenſus, inquis, populi & inauguratio tantùm adjuncta neceſſaria fuêre. Hoc in Saule, Davide, ejúſque poſteris concedo, de quibus nominatim creandis Dei mandatum præceſſerat: Tu idem de Carolo aut ullis ejus majoribus oſtende. Rex, ais, nunquam pepigit cum populo ut illi eum caſtigarent ſi aliter quàm bene regeret. Neque populus cum rege pepigit, ſe illi quicquid collibitum eſt facienti, in perniciem ſuam obtemperaturos. Neque verò in privato quovis ſyngrapho, ullus unquam pepigit ut creditoribus liceret, ſi is debitum non ſolveret, lege in eum agere, & in carcerem conjicere, ejúſque bona poſſidere, quoad plenè ſibi ſatisfactum eſſet. Hæc & iſtiuſmodi quæ accidere nollemus, in pactionibus & fœderibus vel honoris causâ vel boni ominis conſulto non exprimimus; quia cùm paciſcimur, talia nunquam eventura optamus; quæ etiam ſine monitis intelligere per ſe quiſque & cavere debet. Tu hic tritum illud ingeris; per me reges regnant; fatemur, ſicut & per eum ſunt, agunt, & moventur omnia: Tu modo peculiari, inquis. Tu, inquam, de tuo hoc dicis, autoritatem verbi divini nullam affers. Subjicis, alioqui cui fini illa pracepta obedientię in novo Teſtamento. Quoties tibi reſpondebitur obedientiam abſurdam & irrationabilem in novo Teſtamento non præcipi; ſed qualis ea, & quibus, & quam ob cauſam præſtanda ſit, luculentiſſimè doceri. Qui habet aures, audiat. Qui repugnant, inquis, damnabuntur, quod proculdubio nunquam minaretur Apoſtolus, ſi privatorum tantum rationem vel paucorum habuerat. Quaſi verò multi privati ſine Magiſtratuum authoritate ſeditioſi eſſe non poſſint; quid hoc ad populum cùm Magiſtratibus & Parlamento contra tyrannos arma ſumentem? Hoc honore Deus dilectos ſuos decoravit, ut Gentium Reges vinculis coercerent, &c. Id fieri dicis Evangelicis non legalibus catenis. Inſipidè prorſus. An vindicta ergò ſic exercetur in gentes? An ferreæ compedes Evangelii vincula ſunt, quas Pſalmus ille regibus & proceribus minatur? Tu hoc, ut ſoles, de Sacerdotibus, non de bonis Magiſtratibus & populo intelligi vis, qui pontificale quoddam regnum tuorum in omnes Laïcos futurum ſomnias. Iſraelitę, inquis, quia regem rejicere, à Salmanſore in Captivitatem ſunt abducti. Judai, qui regi Rehoboamo fideles manſerant, ſub illius tutela ſecuri vivebant. Hiſtoriam ſacræ Scripturæ ſi conſuluiſſes, non neſcires Hieroſolymas ſub ipſo ſtatim Rehoboamo à Seſako Ægyptiorum rege captas, & Theſauris ſuis ſpoliatas, longè priùs quàm Iſraëlitæ in captivitatem abducerentur. Jeroboamo Deus decem tribus aſſignavit, quod de veſtra repub. nobis non conſtat. Tam nobis, inquam, de noſtra repub. quàm vobis de veſtro Carolo: Immò longè plùs. Veſtros, inquis, Capnomantes & Entheos pro Dei vatibus non recipimus. Neque nos te præſertim aleatorem, ebrioſum & Scortatorem Epiſcopum: cujus vaticinia hoc capite ſolœcorum floribus ornatiſſima in gratiam tui ſtudioſorum, nequid tàm emuncti authoris deſideraretur, huc in fine congeſſimus. Ariſtocratia nonnunquam cachiſtocratia dicenda. Tàm orthographicè hoc abs te quàm etymologicè eſt dictum, ſiquidem duo contraria ſimul vera eſſe poſſunt. Spes nulla reſtat ut in priſtinam felicitatem reſtituamur. Nec dubitamus quin plus apud Deum valebunt miſerię noſtrę. Regibus potius mandâſſet Apoſtolus populo obedire ne ſolio ſuo dejiciantur. Non dicimus quin Reges tenentur. Velut defeſſi reformata Religionis; In aliquibus illis viam concedentes, uno dato abſurdo ſequuntur infinita, &c.

C A P. III.

D*Uobus capitibus à tergo relictis.* Etiamne à fuga incipis, tergiverſator? At nos non tergum, ſed frontem, ſed nomen etiam tuum fronti inſcriptum maluimus. Manedum igitur, obverte faciem illam inſignem Brammaleam, non ferri, ſed vini vulneribus ſauciam, gemmulis cæruleis, rubeolis, purpureis & purulentiſſimis bullatam atque diſtinctam; nam quibus te quiſquam telis, niſi ſi raphanis fugientem inſequatur mœchum, neſcio. Sed fortaſſe more Parthico fugiens ſoles tela conjicere: Conjice ergo. Qui populo, inquis, poteſtatem gladii aſcribit, populum impunem relinquere neceſſe habet; quis enim populum puniret leges tranſgredientem? Fateor, ſiquidem univerſus peccat, nam univerſum punire populum, ne Rex quidem aut ſolet aut poteſt. Non magis ergò neceſſe eſt populum impunem relinquere, ſi populus, quàm ſi Rex poteſtatem gladii ſolus habeat; cùm in ſtatu populari pœnis æquè obnoxius quiſque ſit atque in Monarchiâ. Liturgiam profligavimus. Miſſale ſcilicet Papiſticum, paucis admodum mutatis, ex Latino duntaxat Anglicè editum, unà cum Epiſcopis qui tam fraudulenter eam & Papiſticè concinnârunt, quid ni profligaremus? nam & aliam, ut ſateris ipſe, ſubſtituimus, magis videlicet Orthodoxam, & verbo Dei conſentaneam, ut, qui requirit, habeat, ſi neceſſe eſt, quâ ſalubriter poſſit uti. Subjecti eſtote propter dominum, quamobrem? quia conſtituitur poteſtas à Deo ad ultionem facinoroſorum, &c. At Rex, cui ſubjecti eſſe jubentur, erat Nero vel Claudius. Generalem doctrinam de Magiſtratu, quis ſit aut eſſe debeat, tradit Apoſtolus, déque obedientia, quare Magiſtratui præſtanda ſit, quod tibi ſatis ſit. Nero an Claudius regnaverit, nihil refert; deſine tandem nugis iſtis nos obtundere. Judæorum, inquis, caremoniis & lege judiciaria liberamur. Incaſsûm igitur tu tantoperè laboras, ut nos regii apud illos imperii exemplo in ſervitutem regibus addicas. Utcunque, inquis, de Dei inſtinctu gloriamini, ad tribunal divinum ſiſtendi, reſpondebitis, &c. Quid alii tunc reſponſuri ſint, ne ſit tibi curæ. Tu, quid de alea, de ſcortis, de ebrietate Epiſcopali reſpondebit Brammalus, ipſe cogita. Poteſtates non legitimas, ſed quaſcunque intelligi, ais, ab Apoſtolo, quia Deus præfecit Saulem & cæteros malos Reges Judæis. At verò Paulus de poteſtate loquitur, quam & ſummè legitimam deſcribit; non loquitur de viro, qui, à Deo licet electus, ſi poſtea nequiſſimus evadit, & poteſtatem exercet longè aliam, atque à Deo accepit, & cui duntaxat nos illic obedire jubemur, id ſibi, non Deo imputandum erit. Veriſimilius, inquis, quòd Anglia Carolo filio debellandi, tandem in crepitum putidiſſimum & ridiculum erupturi ſint. Videſne jam ut Deus, omnium rerum arbiter, omen hoc tuum, ventriloque, in te tuóſque avertit? Vidéſne ut ipſe tuus Carolus in crepitum evanuit, immò ipſe crepitus fieri putidiſſimus optaret, dummodò ex hoſtium manibus hoc pacto elabi queat. Supponemus, inquis, tuam rempubl. in tyrannidem degenerare, non teneris obedire illorum poteſtati? Concede tu priùs, ſi Rex in tyrannum degeneraret, non teneri te Regi obedire; tum nos ſatis maturè tibi de republica reſpondebimus. Potuit, inquis, Apoſtolus dixiſſe bonos Magiſtratus. At verò ita dixiſſe, ex deſcriptione Magiſtratûs quam ibi poſuit, apertè liquet. Sed nullo, inquis, argumento fortiùs evincitur regis poteſtas, quàm quod Apoſtoli mandant nullis conditionibus limitatam. At rurſus inquam, ipſa poteſtatis deſcriptio, quæ copioſiſſima ibi eſt, conditiones ſapienti abundè ſuppeditat. Rex, inquis, à Deo miſſus quantumvis malus ferendus, cætera mala in pœnam veniunt. Quaſi verò Rex etiam malus in pœnam non veniret, quod tibi toties in ore eſt, remediis idcirco vel tuo judicio auferendus. Multum, inquis, Miltono debent Orthodoxi, quòd tam ridiculam opinionem iis aſſignaret, populum ſcilicet univerſum Regi ignaviſſimo eſſe parem. Magno ſanè acumine mendacium hoc vibras; ſed parum inde lucraris. Miltonus enim populum non ſolùm parem Regi, ſed ſuperiorem ſemper affirmavit. Hoc loco ſententiam ſuam non profert, Salmaſium tantummodo perſtringit, quod ex Sorboniſtarum ſcriptis populum Regi vel parem eſſe negaverit, quem ſuperiorem dixiſſe oportuerit. Verùm ità miſerè cœcutire ſoles, ut in Salmaſium pro Miltono impetum ſæpiuſculè facias. Hæc præter ineptias denſiſſimas, quas infra omne reſponſum eſſe judico, confutationum tuarum in hoc capite ſumma eſt; unde otium nobis hîc etiam tàm pingue accidit, ut rurſus vacet elegantias hominis nitidiſſimas gleba Solorum ubere natas ad ornandas Solœcorum porticus & ſpatia decerpere. Tuba ſonitum incertum edit, ut nemo ſe ad colendum Deum præparare poteſt. Non dubitamus quin multi Religionem Chriſtianam amplexi ſint. Tanquam nulla erat malorum principum poteſtas. Non quin Deus omnia ita diſpoſuit. Si enim ad populum provocandum (ut vos primò feciſtis ut omnia confundaretis) nemo per diem integrum imperare poterat. Omnes patres nullius æſtimat. Sed utinam tam humaniter cùm Carolo agere voluiſtis. Populum contra Regem defendere ſuſcipis. Et alia hujuſmodi.

CAP. IV.

I*N præcedentibus Miltonus Leo rugiens, qui Reges omnes devoraret, hic Draco occultè inſidians, & vulpeculam agit, nam quo lapidem non poteſt, vota jacit.* Aut inſanit hic homo, aut verſus facit, novas chimæras, novas metamorphóσεις fingit ſibi lymphatus. Certè Miltonus ſi Leo rugiens vobis eſt viſus, facitis haud abſurdè, ut id ſponte fateamini. Te contrà Aſinum rudentem primâ voce agnovimus, téque riſu perinde & fuſtibus excipimus. Semper, inquis, populum in adjutorium vocat Priapus in horto. Quod Priapus in horto, id Brammalus in Sacello. Veriſſimum hoc eſſe tota ferè Hibernia non ignorat. Quos Populus, inquis, creat ſi nulla Dei ratio habeatur, potiùs obedientiam ab iis poſtularet, quàm illis præberet. Præter illa quæ priùs reſpondi, qualem requirat obedientiam Apoſtolus, ſcias inſuper, Apoſtolos non toti Romano Senatui & Conſulibus, neque magno ullius gentis Concilio, aut ullius Regni Ordinibus conventus legitimos peragentibus obedientiam præcepiſſe, ſed privatis & ſingulis. Rex verò, ut noſti, ſingulis quidem major, univerſis verò minor eſt. Beneficia deinde Caroli in Populum enumeras, quæ nulla unquam extitere, ſed damna potiùs & detrimenta, & ſumma planè dedecora. Vnctum Domini, inquis, vel Chriſtum Domini ſi dicas Chriſtianum non tam intereſt. Atqui Salmaſius Saulem Chriſtum Domini nuncupaverat. Tibi ut videtur. Saul non ſolùm inter prophetas ſed inter Chriſtianos eſt. Dicitur autem, 1 Reg. 11. Salomon obdormivit, & Rehoboamus regnavit loco ejus. Et hoc, inquis, dicitur, antequam Populus Sechem venit ut illum Regem facerent. Hoc verò non aliter dictum fuiſſe, quàm ut Hiſtoriæ ſeries maniſeſtior eſſet, ex primo ſequentis capitis verſu apparet. Populus enim Sechemum venit, ut Rehoboamum Regem conſtituerent, vel regnare facerent, ut eſt Hebraïcè; ergo antea certè aut non regnavit, aut in Judæa tantùm. Populum, inquis, per incendiarios fuiſſe incitatum, videlicet Jeroboamum & Comites ſuos. At verò Jeroboamus non populum, ſed populus illum incitavit. Jeroboamus enim, audita Salomonis morte, adhuc in Ægypto morabatur. Sed Iſraëlitæ mittentes accerſiverunt eum, 1 Reg. 12. Miraris impudentiam ejus qui affirmaret, non vocari rebelles qui in Roboamum arma ſumpſerunt. Tuam potius non impudentiam ſolùm, ſed impietatem demiror, qui eos rebelles appellare auſus ſis, quos Deus eo ipſo loco fratres ſui populi nominavit. At inſtas, ibidem etiam dictum eſſe, ſic rebellavit domus Iſraël à domo David. At verò verbum hîc rebellavit mitiùs intelligi pro quacunque defectione, neque in malum ſenſum rapi debet. Propterea vertunt alii defecit, non rebellavit; cujus enim defectionis authorem ſe Deus ipſe profitetur, ſcriptura malam & illicitam proculdubiò non dicit. Sic Ezechia verbo non minùs duro rebellâſſe in Regem Aſſyriæ dicitur; quod tamen ejus factum Deus etiam auxilio cœlitùs miſſo approbavit. Deus Iſraëlitis Regem petentibus graviter iratus eſt quamvis regis petendi, ſi vellent, ex lege Moſis jus habuerit? Tu, num iraſcitur Deus, inquis, Populo petenti quod ad illos jure pertinet. Id, inquam, facilè poteſt fieri; nihil enim obſtat quo minus id ad populum jure pertineret, & tamen iraſci Deus illis meritò potuit, quod cùm in eo quod optimum erat acquieviſſe penes ipſos eſſet, deterius quod erat anteponebant. Affirmas Deum graviore pœna puniiſſe rebelles Iſraëlitas, quippe veram ſui cognitionem ab iis abſtuliſſe. At ubi id unquam legiſti, nugator, Iſraëlitas illam defectionem Idololatria luiſſe, cùm Deus ipſe Jeroboamo mox rebellaturo bona omnia pollicitus ſit, ſeque illi Iſraëlitas traditurum eſſe, ſi ejus præceptis auſcultaſſet, 1 Reg. 11. Sed Orthodoxi, inquis, ſemper cùm Carolo fuere, nam quicquid moribus peccant nonnulli, inopia coacti, Religionem tamen reformatam non deſeruerunt. Num verò veſtros Orthodoxos, cum Rege ſuo, inopia coëgit gentes vicinas ebrio agmine, blaſphemo, libidinoſiſſimo ac ferociſſimo oberrare, omnique impietatis genere omnes Anglos, tanquam ſui ſimiles, infames reddere? Nobiſcum tuâ ſententia vitula aurea; vobiſcum menſa dominica, oratio dominica, ſymbolum Apoſtolorum, decem mandata. Atqui ea ipſa ſacra quæ apud vos ſolos eſſe inaniter jactas, vobis, pro more veſtro ſuperſtitioſè & hypocriticè abutentibus, nihil aliud profectò quàm vitulæ aureæ ſunt. Deum, inquis, ſibi contrarium ſtatuimus. Quidni? An quod Argumentum Salmaſii nihil valere oſtendit Miltonus, idcircone Deum ſibi contrarium ſtatuit. Dixerat Salmaſius, omnes Reges eſſe à Deo; Miltonus non omnes Reges, ſed omnes regendi formas, ſalutis cauſâ adhibitas, cujus etiam cauſâ populi conventus, comitia, & conſilia habentur. Ergo vel ipſius argumento non magis Regi licet reſiſtere populo propter Rempubl. convocato, quàm populo licet reſiſtere Regi à Deo ordinato, quandoquidem & populi conventus legitimi à Deo quoque ſunt ut Sechemi olim contra Roboamum fuiſſe teſtificatur ipſe Deus. Vtrum, inquis, ille tyrannus, qui viginti tribus annis regnans, neminem pro ſua voluntate mori coegit; An vos qui inter decem annos Regem ipſum & plus quàm quingentos mille hominum trucidaſtis? Quid ais, mille quingentos? numerum ſane perexiguum narras; neque ullus unquam, credo minori jacturâ bellum tàm ſævum confecit. Profectò ſi tam ſcires latinè quàm ſcis malitioſè loqui, non quingentos mille, ſed quingenta millia, opinor te dicere voluiſſe. Quis verò Carolo pejor tyrannus, quis pœna dignior, qui per tria regna plus decies centena hominum millia partim Laniená illa Hibernica, partim bello iniquiſſimo occidit. Negas quod ſuperiore argumento dictum eſt, regem non debere populo reſiſtere: negas populum quicquam poſſe in Regem, quia populus inferior eſt, Rex ſuperior. At memineris Regem naturâ ſuperiorem non eſſe, ſed conſenſu tantùm & ſuffragiis populi ad eam eſſe dignitatem evectum, publicæ ſalutis causâ; quo ab officio ſi planè deſciverit, ſuperior eſſe deſinit; quia cur eſſet ſuperior cauſa nulla ampliùs eſt. Cùm munus Regium perperam adminiſtraverat, ob quod munus duntaxat, cùm unus è multis primò fuerit, ſactus omnium ſupremus eſt. Ad id quod dixerat Miltonus, non quod Deus juſſit tyrannum interimi, ideo bonum erat, ſed quod bonum erat, idcirco Deus juſſit, tu reſpondes, Cujus contrarium verum eſt. Nam quicquid Deus jubet, bonum eſt, & ideo bonum, quòd Deus jubet. Doctum verò neminem hoc latet, bonum in poſitivum & morale diviſum eſſe. Poſitivum eſt, quod antè indifferens, bonum tunc incipit eſſe, cum à Deo jubetur. Morale verò bonum, æternum & immutabile manet, ſive Deus juſſerit, ſive non juſſerit; bonum hujuſmodi eſt tyrannum perimi: ad quod facinus præclarum ducem illum Jehu, tum fortè nihil tale cogitantem, præ cæteris incitavit. Quod autem ais, bonitatem à divina voluntate pendere, erras, ut cætera; bonitas enim non minùs de eſſentia Dei eſt, quàm ipſa Dei voluntas. Verùm de his nimis multa cùm ſtolido & idiota. Percurrimus in hoc capite quicquid argumenti vim ullam in ſe habere videatur, ut bonis viris & intelligentibus quàm maximè ſatisfiat: cæteris ejus ineptiis & nugamentis qui movetur, eum neque moramur, neque retinemus quo minùs in caſtra adverſarii noſtri tàm diſerti atque eruditi tranſire poſſit; his etiam floribus, ſapientiæ & judicii ejus causâ, coronatus, quos Hortorum Solenſium cuſtos iſte ficulneus ſuorum fautorum capiti nectendos largiter paravit. Olfaciant modo priùs quàm ſuave olent. Nil tam horrendum excogitari poſſit quin laudabile fiet. Populi conventus, comitia, plebiſcitus pariter à Deo. Non dicimus quin tyrannus impedire debet. Tu ad Antipodas ablegandus, Londini Conſtantinopolim. Coronam ad ſe jure pertinentem popoſciviſſe. Paſſa marem, miramur hyænam. Quos tamen rectius ſentiiſſe judicas, cum multis aliis.

CAP. V.

OMiſſis quæ initio hujus capitis trita jam & toties refutata ſtupidiſſimè regeris, venio nunc ad id, in quo levitatis arguis qui dixerit, jus ſucceſſionis naturâ nullum eſſe, eo quod lex Dei primogenituræ legem tulit; cùm divina autem lege conſentire legem naturæ dictum eſt. Tuum verò erat, non neſciviſſe quantum inter ſe differant ſucceſſio in regnum, & ſucceſſio in patrimonium: principio enim regnorum, regnandi ſucceſſio non filio ſed digniſſimo cuique ſemper delata eſt; mox regum uſurpatio, non populi conſenſus filios regum dignioribus prætulit. Hoc etiam turpe & ſervile eſt, libera hominum capita inter poſſeſſiones numerare, qui profectò dum liberi ſunt hæreditate nemini obvenire poſſunt. Túque jus hæreditarium, quicquid garris, ex lege Dei nunquam oſtenderis. Nam quod ſoli teſtatur Deus Davidi ejuſque poſteris dediſſe ſe, id univerſis accommodari regnis aut regibus nullo jure poteſt. Jus, inquis, ſucceſſionis pacem & concordiam inter homines nutrit; eſt maxime naturale, ne continuis litibus mundus flagraret. Hiſtorias ergo omnium gentium percurre; invenies in Monarchiâ diſcordias tetriores, bella ſæviora, idque ſæpius accidiſſe, quam in Rebuſp. Haud raró ipſi regum filii de ſumma rerum inter ſe bello acerrimo, mutuáque cæde contendunt. Unde apud Turcas ubi jus ſucceſſionis abſolutiſſimum eſt, nihil ad pacem publicam magis conducere putatur, quàm filio natu maximo regnum ineunte, cæteros fratres interfici. Nonnunquam de ſucceſſionis jure manifeſtò non conſtat, hinc etiam bella ſæviſſima & maximè diuturna, quarum ſub Regno calamitatum noſtra imprimis Anglia teſtis eſſe poteſt. Ità neque Monarchia per ſe neque Reſpub. concordiæ parens eſt; ſed moderatus ubique civium animus & ambitione vacuus. Sed ſumma authoritas uni contigit ordinis ſervandi gratiâ. At ſi tyranno, peſſimus ille ordo qui omnem ordinem, jura omnia divina & humana pervertit. Chriſtus, inquis, ſuos deputatos & vicegerentes in terris Reges poſuit. Fatemur, ſi bonos, Tyranni autem quo poſſunt modo Chriſti vicem gerere? Interea non nos contumaciæ, quod ais, ſed tu impietatis tuæ Chriſtum vindicem expecta; qui regnum Chriſti in terris violentum & tyrannicum blaſphemus audes exiſtimare: Vicarius enim, non Chriſti, qui ejus exemplum non imitatur, ſed diaboli eſt. Quod regem deinde confers cum patrefamilias, ſatis clarè oſtenſum eſt à Miltono, jus patris diverſiſſimum eſſe, & longè antiquius. Cùm autem non ſolum Reges mali, ſed mala omnia in ſcelerum pœnam, vel ad probandam patientiam noſtram à Deo data ſint; eáque omnia juſtis remediis ab hominibus ſumma cùm prudentiæ laude amoveri & poſſint & debeant, ſolos Reges vel pœnæ causâ, vel patientiæ ferre, & turpe & ridiculum & extremæ eſſet inſaniæ. Sed variis morbis laborantibus Rex manus impoſuit & ſanavit; Angelum aureum cuilibet ægroto dedit. Sive ſanavit, ſive excantavit nihil nunc refert; medendi enim dono nunc infideles, ut Veſpaſianus olim, ſæpiùs hypocritæ præditi fuêre. Illum angelum aureum, quem ſingulis ægrotis dedit, non illum fuiſſe, qui Betheſdæ aquas commovit; nec ſanandi vim ullam habuiſſe, ſat ſcio; quo te aureo ſcilicet angelo ſic opinor ſtupere, ut ante te Salmaſius cœlum Caroli illud aureum & ſericum obſtupuit, neque hoc cœlo quicquam altius cernere uterque videmini, aut de eo quicquam ſublimius cogitare, quàm aureum eſſe. Florentiſſima, inquis, Romanorum reſpubl. exactis regibus, nunquam ſubſiſtere potuit donec in Monarchiam redintegrata fuerit. Quod contra omnium Hiſtoriarum fidem planè eſt; quæ teſtantur omnes, Romanam Rempub. ſub Conſulibus & Senatûs authoritate ad illam magnitudinem creviſſe: ſub imperatorum verò luxuria, tyrannide, atque inertia ſtatim conſenuiſſe, Imperiúmque ſimul & gloriam belli atque juſtitiæ in illa libera civitate olim partam ſub imperatoribus citò amiſiſſe. Sed quod Anglia, inquis, nimio luxu & libertate perdita fuit, non Caroli tyrannidi, ſed veſtræ nequitiæ attribuendum eſt. Immo aulæ fœdiſſimæ regíſque voluptarii atque ignaviſſimi exemplo rectè attribuimus, ad cujùs vitæ rationem quamplurimi ſeſe compoſuêre. Jam regem defendis, qui Ducem Buckinghamiæ veneficii ſuſpectum legibus eripuit; quaſi, inquis, hoc regibus crimini daretur, quod omnibus natura concedit, ut ſuos familiares amarent. Itane Carnifex? ſatiſne regem excuſari putas, quod familiarem illum & amiciſſimum habuerit, qui patris ejus veneno ſublati à ſupremo Regni Concilio poſtulatus eſſet? At quid poteras in Regem atrocius dixiſſe? Sed credibile non fuit Ducem Buckinghamiæ Jacobo inſidias ſtruere velle, qui illum in tantam poteſtatem evexit. Quin immo ſatis notum eſt, mores Buckinghamii Jacobo tandem graviter diſplicuiſſe, unde is magnum malum ſibi metuens, duas maximè res deinceps agere inſtituit, ut & patri necem ſtrueret, & filio os ſubliniret, ejúſque gratiam omni ſtudio captaret; quod ſanè, objectis juveni molliſſimo voluptatum omnium illecebris, ſtatim perfecit. Reprehendis, quòd Carolus Neroni collatus ſit. Nam, inquis, Metropolim veſtram non diripuit, ſcilicet quia non potuit; At qui nunc Scotis, nunc ſicariis ſuis, morem ſibi modò gererent, haud ſemel diripiendam obtulit. Reſtat ut roſarum hujus Solenſium faſciculum in fine exhiberem; & poſſem quidem ubertim, ſed cum viàm jam toties digito monſtraverim, ubi germinant, ubi creſcunt, jucundius fortaſſe cuique erit proprio ungue decerpere.

CAP. VI.

R*Egum & bonorum omnium hoſte proſtrato (ſuis telis in faciem ſuam reſilientibus) recurrere coactus eſt ad elumbes aliquot argutias, & trita argumenta.* Proſtrato hoſte, quis ſodes eſt coactus, egregie ſolœciſta? nomen enim licet attuleris nullum, cognomen certe hoc apud omnes in poſterum reportabis. Ain' verò ſuis telis in faciem reſilientibus? Si ſua ſponte, Dedalèa pro facto narras, aut Vulcania quædam nova automata? An vero, te retorquente, reſiliunt tela illa? Téne ergo illum proſtraviſſe hoſtem, aſine, cujus argumentum vel leviſſimum omni mole concutere, aut movere loco non vales? Exultantem Aſinum in Apologo herus verberibus malè multavit, quid triumphante hoc Aſino faciamus? præſertim qui neque purpuram indutus, neque pellem leoninam, ſed propria palam ſcabritie notus, rictu iſto Aſinino, iſtóque miſerrimo clangore, atque ridiculo triumphum canere audeat. Omnes, inquis, in ſuis regnis Monarchæ abſoluti παμβασιλείας exercent, quòd & Galli de ſuo Rege multum gloriantur. Ad ſcriptores Gallos ſi recurriſſes, Girardum, Hottomannum, Seſellium, plurimóſq; alios, nunquam id affirmares. Galli liberos ſe, & verè Francos paſſim gloriantur: ab omni memoria penès ſe fuiſſe, Regum ſalutis omnium cauſâ, vel eligere vel abjicere. Hac ratione Pipino, necnon poſt eum aliis imperium Galliæ delatum: quod vulgo notum eſt. Hac etiam ætate cum multæ civitates, tum etiam Burdegalenſes idem ſentire ſeſe factis oſtenderunt, dum vi & armis vel ſui Regis vel ejus præſidum παμβασίλειαν & tyrannidem ſtrennè propulſant. Si cui Deus vult, inquis, populus Regnum tradit, jam dic aliquid de tribus capellis, unde tot quæſtiones & lites? Unde niſi à te, tuique ſimilibus, qui id perpetuo contenditis, ut Regnum iis tradatur, quibus populus non vult, ac proinde nec Deus. Deus enim, ſi cui Regnum vellet, facilè perficeret, ut Regnum illi traderet populus. Jam tu dic aliquid de tribus capellis. Quantumvis, inquis, nummi nobis deſint, nunquam tamen deerunt parati ad tuendam veritatem. Nummi quidem vobis & merito deſunt, & tamen longe major apud vos virtutis, honeſtatis, ſapientiæ, pudoris penuria eſt, quàm nummorum. Id quod mores veſtri perditiſſimi exteris jam paſſim graves & odioſi teſtantur. Deeſſe autem non magis nummos quàm ad cauſam veſtram tuendam paratos, argumento ipſe maximo es, qui homo indoctiſſimus cum ſis & inertiſſimus, primus omnium & adhuc ferè ſolus, ad hoc te munus accinxeris. Dixerat Salmaſius, quamvis id falſo, Regiminis Anglorum formam non popularem ſed militarem eſſe. Tu hoc Miltonum concedere coactum eſſe dicis*: nec tamen ab Ariſtotele talem regiminis formam recenſitam uſquam meminiſti.* Vel hinc conſtat te neque Miltonum attentè ſatis, neque Ariſtotelem omnino forſan legiſſe. Apud Miltonum enim conceſſionem illam nuſquam invenies. Apud Ariſtotelem στρατηγοῦ ἀϊδίου, id eſt ducis perpetui, qui in quibuſdam civitatibus ſummæ rerum præficeretur, mentionem ſæpè factam eſſe meminiſſes. Jam de diabolo porcos tondente ſtolidè nugaris, ubi ingens clamor, ſed nulla lana; parciùs itaque diabolus porcos ſuos tondebat, quàm Brammalus oves Hibernicas deglubere conſuevit; à quibus & lanam & pellem multo cum clamore populi detrahere ſolebat. Scoti, inquis, inaudito oſtraciſmo Montiſroſſanum interfecère. Inauditus ille quidem oſtraciſmus qui patibulo homines affigit. Nam vel ſciolos non fugit oſtraciſmum non mortis, ſed relegationis genus fuiſſe. Reges, inquis, ſub poteſtate populi collocatos pejori conditione nobis repræſentas, quam ex populo univerſo perditiſſimos. At vel iſta conditione noli metuere ne qui Reges in poſterum eſſe velint; utcunque enim non deerunt Reges. Cætera hujus capitis, quà ſeria, quà ludicra, inſulſa adeo & inficeta ſunt, ut quamvis nihil mihi tribuam, quod non admodum exiguum ſit, pœniteat tamen nonnunquam & penè ſuppudeat, cum adverſario tam nihili manus conſeruiſſe. Poſtremò caſus ſui Regis graves ſanè & Tragicos ad Comœdiam redigit. Jovem adulterum, Amphytrionem maritum, Mercurium & Soſiam ſervos, ſuper mundi Theatrum agit. Nil poſſum rectiùs facere quam ut iſtiuſmodi phraces prætercam: nam in hominem tàm ſtultum & nullius pretii quicquid aut ſeriò dixeris aut joco, & operam perdideris & ſalem. Præſtat tamen hunc vel incaſſum defricare, quam reſponſione licet indignum, noſtro tamen ſilentio tumentem & jactabundum dimittere.

CAP. VII.

HActenus opuſculi tui futiliſſimi dimidium percurrimus, & quamquam te plùs ſatis indoctum, inſipidum, ſolœcum, arrogantem, & languidum jamdudum invenimus, tamen quò longiùs procedimus, eo inanior, eóque jejunior ſemper occurris, & præter adagia quædam & diſticha vulgata, quæ memoriter, credo, elementarius puer didiceras, quæque ne negent forte Lectores vel ſemidoctulum te eſſe, per fas & nefas inſerere laboras, cæteram omnem Argumentorum, ſensûs, latinitatis perpuſillam annonam exhauſiſſe videris. Nihil eſt igitur in hoc capite quod agam, quàm ut captiunculas quaſdam tuas, & gryphos diſſolvam, quibus dum adverſarium capere te exiſtimas, teipſum capi oſtendam. Dixerat Miltonus jure naturali Regem quemq; bonum Senatum vel Populum habere ſibi ſemper & parem ſuperiorem. Ad hæc tu, quis unquam, inquis, talia ἀσύστατα audivit? Si par eſt, non eſt ſuperior; ſi ſuperior, non par. Quis plumbeo potuit gladio quicquam acutius? At neſcin' quid Lælius ille ſapiens apud Ciceronem? Maximum eſt in amicitia ſuperiorem parem eſſe inferiori. Quin hîc quoque vociferare, quis unquam talia auriculis audivit? Diſputatum eſt à multis, ſitne par Regi Populus vel Senatus. Infit Miltonus, utrumlibet Regi & parem eſſe & ſuperiorem. Cur iſta negas poſſe conſiſtere? Certè ſi juxta regulam, omne majus in ſe continet minus, ſuperior qui eſt, nihil obſtiterit quò minus idem par ſit. Jam eccum tibi nodum hunc ſine Oedipo ſolutum, Dave. Nunc ad ſecundam hominis tendiculam venio. Si Davidi privato non licuit Saulem tyrannum interficere, quomodo jam cuivispiam concedis, ſi viribus plus valet. Somnis quæ nemo eſt largitus, tyrannum fuiſſe Saulem. Non enim qui facta quædam tyrannica in unum atque alterum per iram aut libidinem perpetrat, is ſtatim eſt tyrannus; ut nec injuſtus, qui injuſta quædam. Sed qui conſilio, inſtituto, viribus, dolis hoc ſolum ſtudet atque molitur, ut potentiam legibus majorem ſibi arripiat, jus omne populi & libertatem ſubvertat, vindicare ſe contendentibus vim atque bellum inferat, is verè atque propriè tyrannus eſt; quo in genere nullus unquam Carolo pejor fuit. Qui igitur Davidem privatas adverſum ſe Regis injurias ulciſci noluiſſe dixit, potuit idem nihil ſibi repugnans dicere, tyrannum interficere cuivis licere qui viribus plus valeat. Dixerat Miltonus ad ſervitutem natas iſtas nationes quæ talem dominum agnoſcant, cui ſe ſine aſſenſu ſuo hæreditate obveniſſe credant. Ergo, inquis, tu ad ſervitutem natus qui Carolum hereditarium multos annos agnoſcebas, aut cum multis aliis diſſimulabas. Hanc tu ſententiam detruncas, ejus loco ſubdititia ponis, quæ Regem hereditarium agnoſcunt. Parlamenta autem Angliæ, prætereito ſæpè hæreditatis obtentu, Diadema, cui viſum eſt, ſuis liberis ſuffragiis, imponere conſueverunt; quod multis exemplis demonſtrari poteſt. Non ergo Angli ad ſervitutem nati, quod tu nequicquam probare niteris, Verna Canopi. Quartum hoc eſt, in quo adverſarium cepiſſe te ſomnias. Ob eam cauſam affirmaverat ille, homines in unum primò conveniſſe, non ut unus omnes inſultaret, ſed ut quocunque alterum lædente, ne lex deeſſet neve judex inter homines, quo læſus defendatur, aut vindicetur. Ad hæc tu. Nemo, inquis, à te plus petiit quàm tu per lucida intervalla tua ſponte concedis. Lucidum certe intervallum vel ad punctum temporis contigiſſe unquam tibi vix reor, ita ſemper falleris. Quæ enim petis, non regibus ſolùm ſed Magiſtratibus omnibus conceſſimus; quorum nihil eſt quod in tyrannum convenire poſſit. Legem enim primo conſtituimus, deinde judicem ex lege rectum & incorruptum. Horum quodcunque petis & impetraveris, tuam cauſam minimè juvabit.

CAP. VIII.

QUod ſuperiùs prædixi fore, ut poſt tritas argutias quaſdam potius quàm argumenta & aulicorum velitationes toties profligatas, ad ſummam inopiam homuncio iſte redigeretur, neque reliquum ei quicquam fore præter maledicta & rabiem, id hoc capite manifeſtiùs liquet. Et ſanè ad priora illa quæ attulit, quamquam primò ſtatim conſpectu ſenſûs & ingenii inaniſſima ubique apparuêre veſtigia, tamen quia quandam rationis & argumenti ſpeciem præ ſe ferebant, utcunque paucis reſpondimus. In hoc autem capite cùm Miltonus antiquas Anglorum leges ac monumenta regiæ cauſæ paſſim tàm adverſa diligentiſſimè protuliſſet; iſte è contrà, cùm neque doctrinam, neque antiquitatem, neque acumen, neque authoritatem ullam, quâ ſuam tueatur cauſam, afferre poſſit, hoc tantùm habet quod reſpondeat, miſerè balbutiens jura illa noſtra notiſſima, vetuſtiſſima, & maximè rata, obſoleta jam & nimis vetuſta eſſe. Verùm non tam dubito quin omnes docti & intelligentes viri huic fatuo non reſponderi oportere judicent, quàm vereor ne reprehendant, ſi inſipienti & rabioſo operam dedero. Qui verò hujus mendacis & maledicentis à veritate abduci ſe patiuntur, eos profectò tam parvi pendimus, ut quamcunque ad partem acceſſerint, ſúſque dèque nobis ſit; immò contra nos iſto animo quàm nobiſcum ſtare malumus.

CAP. IX.

HUic etiam Capiti prioris haud abſimili reſponſum prorſus idem conveniet. Nam qui contra legem Dei & naturæ dilucidè explicatam, contra rationes evidentiſſimas, juráque gentium plurimarum, tum noſtræ etiam firmiſſima, contra teſtimonia denique optimorum virorum uberrima nihil præter commenta tantùm ſua, atque deliria opponere, aut in medium proſerre poteſt, ejus profectò ita diſputantis rationem ullam ſiquis habuerit, certè non doctus, non diſertus, non diligens, non acutus, ſed malè feriatus duntaxat meritò videatur. Quod autem nos impudentiſſimè accuſare non dubitat, quaſi Papæ authoritatem in Angliam reducere meditemur, à quo & dictis & factis abhorruiſſe ſemper nos tam palàm omnibus exiſtit, id ſanè & ridendum maximè eſt, tum etiam oſtendit quantâ cæteroqui cum malitia, quàm nulla cum fide in accuſandis nobis verſetur, qui crimen omnium judicio à nobis alieniſſimum, cunctis abſolventibus, imputare atque affigere non vereatur.

Ad CAPP. X. XI.

DE duobus quæ ſequuntur capitibus, idem quod de præcedentibus duobus dicendum eſt. Tenuiſſimus modò & inaniſſimus qui fuit, nunc eſt planè nullus, aut ſiquid nihilo minus eſt: hujus igitur inanitati reſpondere ſi vellem, reſponderem certè nemini: quidni igitur conticeſcam?

CAP. XII.

JAm ad metam enervis & languidus properans ſolœciſta, tamen ut ultimo conatu erigere ſe paululùm videatur, ad priorem verborum ſine rebus prolixitatem & tædium redit. Quare ne quis nos propter virium aut rationis defectum priora capita tantâ brevitate percurriſſe exiſtimet, aut per ignaviam quicquam remiſiſſe, quæ alicujus modò momenti videantur, non ſum arbitratus prætereunda eſſe, Parlamentum, inquis, perpetuum eſt inſtar nullius Parlamenti; hoc enim eſt funditus Parlamentum tollere. Ecquem tu jam niſi Carolum ipſum criminaris? Qui ipſe Parlamentum hoc perpetuum eſſe juſſit, & facto gloriatus, inter ea quæ vocare acta gratiæ ſolebat, ſæpiſſimè recenſuit, non ut populum beneficio aliquo afficeret, ſed arte quadam tyrannica dum perpetuum eſſe juberet, ut quod ex temetipſo jam accipimus, funditùs tolleret. Cùm autem catharticum remedium ſit, quemadmodum ais, tolli certè aut diſſolvi non debet; donec morbi, quorum remedium eſt, tollantur, & libertati ſua firmitas bonáque valetudo redeat. Siquid nos Carolum peccâſſe dicimus; tu verbis totidem, velut amœbæa canens lyturgica, paria commiſiſſe Parlamentum accuſas, déque Carolo nihil non verum eſſe concedis, dummodò idem de Parlamento occinere tibi liceat: verùm hoc non eſt Carolum purgare, aut noxâ eximere, quò minùs meritas pœnas dederit. Sed antequam Parlamentum hoc incœpit, nè verbum, inquis, vel minima ſcintilla de Caroli ſcilicet malefactis eluxit. At verò populi clamores, gemitus & ſuſpiria, partim propter graviſſimas tributorum exactiones, partim propter Epiſcoporum perſecutiones, tam acerbas, ut multi patriam deſerere cogerentur, Regia item conſilia, edicta, facta, ab ipſis Regni ejus initiis, & Parlamentorum omnium quæ convocavit intempeſtiva ſemper & infenſa diſſolutio rem longè aliter ſe habere declarant; adeo ut hac de cauſa populus, ſive prudentiæ Regis, ſive voluntati diffiſus, unicam ſibi in Parlamento ſpem, præſidium, refugium, ſalutem reliquam eſſe palàm teſtaretur; unde Rex irâ & livore prorſus tyrannico exardeſcens, ut populi gemitus per vim etiam comprimeret, crudeliſſimo edicto ſanxit, nequis Parlamenti convocandi mentionem faceret, donec tandem metu populi ob hæc minimè quieſcentis Parlamentum invitiſſimus convocaret. Multa, inquis, à vobis fingi quis non credet ut crimen veſtrum in Regem exonerare poſſitis, numquid tale apparet in ejus libro divinitus ſcripto? Malo te libri illius admiratorem eſſe, quàm me; quid enim habet præter fucos & jactationes inaniſſimas? Diceres & tu idem, ſi Epiſtolas ejus prælio Naſibienſi captas, manu propria ſcriptas & obſignatas, incorrupto & integro judicio perlegiſſes, ubi ſe ſuaſque artes tyrannicas non celat. Independentes Jeſuitis ſimiles eſſe ais, Qui Regem abrogârunt, ſtatum Reipub. mutârunt, & tamen profeſſi ſunt nunquam ſibi in animo fuiſſe hæc facere. Quid ad nos Jeſuitæ? Quaſi verò prudentiæ non eſſet, non Jeſuitiſmi, poſteriora ſæpè Conſilia prioribus anteferre, ſiquidem meliora eſſe poſtmodum didiceris. Primò nobis prodire tenus aliquid viſum eſt, immo magnum tam ad Eccleſiæ quàm Reipub. reſtitutionem; cum à Deo ultra dari ſentiremus, an ejus nos præſentiam, & providentiam ad facta tam egregria præeuntem aſpernaremur, aut ſequi nollemus, ne progreſſus noſtros felices & planè inopinatos, hoſtis & invidus levitatis & inconſtantiæ nomine perſtringeret? Sæpè arguis quod Parlamentum pro corpore ſolo ſine capite ſumamus. Verùm ſi metaphoras amovere malles, rectiùs continuò ſaperes, ſcireſque Parlamentum ejuſmodi corpus eſſe, cui caput adjungi non ſit neceſſe; neque enim vel caput vel cauda, ſed commune ac liberum gentis Concilium facit, ut Parlamentum ſit atque dicatur. Vi, inquis, hanc infamiam & calumniam apud exteras Nationes nobis exulantibus amoveam, ſcilicet eorum ex numero non eſſe qui cauſam Regiam latinè ſciret defendere, huic fabulæ reſpondeo. Egregium ſanè reſponſorem! Tune vero lucifuga verberabiliſſime præ cæteris electus, qui nos ex latebris aggrederere, & pro tuis omnibus unus reſponderes? Doctum proculdubio gregem, præclara ingenia neceſſe eſt eſſe, quorum tu doctor es, tam grandis non Arcadicus aut Reatinus, ſed ſolœcus Aſinus. Latinè tu ut reſponderes, cujus barbariſmis & ſolœciſmis omnes paginæ, ut priorum capitum, ſic hujus ultimi refertæ ſunt? Tam caſtus ut exemplum præbuit. Tu hæc refricas ut Regi convitiare. A famulis rimari.. Niſi fulcientur. Tanta caligine, ut juſtitiam cauſæ metiuntur. Ne milleſima pars petitionum ad eum deferrerentur. Toties purgatum ut nil præter nomen manere poteſt. Tanto acumine ut maxima pars mundi mirantur ac ſtupent. Tanto ſtrepitu ut cætera Theatra pro tempore ſilent. Non quin indies precamur. Nec mitius eorum Conſilium interpretarer. Carolum Filium reum cauſatis. Digni profecto Regii tam ſtupido propugnatore, qui, cùm cauſam nequiſſimam ſuſceperis tuendam & literas profeſſus, tam illiteratus ſis, ab ipſis clientibus tuis quos tui pudeat, ad illa gurguſtia & tenebras, unde tam ſtolidè emerſiſti cum ſibilo & flagris reducendus es; aut certè Carnifici potiùs in diſciplinam crucis tradendus, ut cum nihil aliud percipere poſſis, elementa diſcas patibularia. Quicquid, inquis, erravero in hac Apologia mea tenuitati imputandum eſt. Ita prorſus exiſtimo: at peſſimè interim meo quidem judicio conſuluit tibi tenuitas tua, quæ te impulit, ut cui par non eras, oneri ſuccedere auderes, ſub quo prætumidum & inflatum eo faciliùs comminui te & frangi neceſſe erat. Ego certè tenuem te magis an craſſum dixerim vixdum ſcio, ita omni planè dimenſione & formâ rudis indigeſtáque moles, vacare mihi videris. Jam te aulici, qui Regis auro veſcuntur, ſi priùs neglexerint, quod miſerè quereris, & fame perire ſinant, poſt cauſam eorum tàm malè & ridiculè abs te defenſam multo juſtius oderint, atque contempſerint; niſi fortè periſcelide illa regia, quam tanti facis, fauces tuas de rege tam nequiter meritas elidendas potiùs quàm offis aulicis, quas eſuris, farciendas putant. Jam præſertim cum à regis laude ad regis & regiorum gravem vituperationem tranſeas, & nobis ex adverſario percommodus repente homo factus ſis; teſtis enim ipſe novus accedis, regem ſuo officio vel imparem fuiſſe, vel minimè intentum, quod petitiones nimirum ſubditorum raro legeret. Quod nemo auſus eſſet de proditoribus queri, proditorum metu, quibus maximè auſcultabat: quod Camerariis & famulis omnia crederet, otio ipſe deditus. Unde libet profecto exclamare cum illo ſane in fabula.

Ita me dii amabunt ut hunc ego auſculto lubens;
Nimis lepidè facit verba de regiis ſuis.
Neque compellare volo illum, ne deſinat
Memorare mores regis & regiorum.

Eorum enim plurimos qui quidem regis gratia maximè pollebant, eos ſatetur fuiſſe qui commodorum potiſſimum ſuorum & libidinum cauſâ regem ſequerentur, vel mente captum potiùs, quo vellent, ducerent. Sinam itaque & præteribo, ut & regis perjuria haud minori impietate atque inſcitiâ excuſantem, & ſtatim tam acriter damnantem. Neque occurrit præterea quod refutatione illa indigeat. Ad ultimum enim, conſumptis in nos maledictis, diris, execrationibus, charitatem neſcio quam ſuam oſtentare cupit. Verum nos cujus convitia & imprecationes non veremur, etiam vota pro nobis & preces haud pluris æſtimamus. Finiam itaque certamen hoc, haud libenter quidem à me cum iſto nugigerulo ſuſceptum; ſolum hoc eſt in quo ſi non aliis, at mihimet ſaltem aliqua ex parte placeo, eam mihi ſcribendi occaſionem primam oblatam eſſe, ex qua & patria in ſe rectum atque pium, & amici gratum ſenſerint.

Senatus Populuſque Anglicanus Ampliſſimo Civitatis Hamburgenſis Senatui, Salutem.

QUàm diù, quámque multis de cauſis inſtituta à majoribus noſtris cum ampliſſimâ veſtrâ civitate amicitia in hunc uſque diem permanſerit, & vobiſcum una libenter agnoſcimus, & ſæpiùs etiam recolere non eſt moleſtum. De eo autem quod ex literis veſtris 25 Junii datis intelligimus, homines quoſdam noſtros non eâ quâ ſoliti ſunt fide ac probitate in ſuis apud vos negotiis verſari, nos quidem ad certos ejuſmodi rerum peritos ſtatìm retulimus, ut in lanarios, cæteroſque panni opifices acriùs inquirerent; eamque porrò operam daturos nos eſſe pollicemur, ut & æqui boníque ſtudium apud nos, & noſtra omnia erga vos officia conſtare ſentiatis. Verùm & quiddam eſt quod etiam à vobis viciſſim non nos duntaxat, ſed ipſum jus & fas omne poſtulat; ut noſtræ gentis mercatoribus, veſtris hoſpitibus & ſua privilegia conſervare, & eorum vitam, atque fortunas, prout eâ civitate dignum eſt, veſtris opibus defendere velitis. Quod, ut prioribus literis enixè petivimus, ita nunc etiam ut vehementiùs efflagitemus, faciunt quotidianæ mercatorum querelæ, quas ad nos deferunt; ſuam nimirùm ſalutem atque rem omnem rurſùs apud vos in dubio eſſe. Quamvis enim literarum noſtrarum quas pridem ad vos dedimus fructum aliquem ad tempus percepiſſe ſe fateantur, & ab injuriis nefariorum hominum aliquantùm reſpiraſſe, nunc tamen poſt adventum Cochrani illius in urbem veſtram ( de quo etiam priùs queſti ſumus ) qui mandatam jam ſibi à Carolo defuncti nuper Regis filio Legationem neſcio quam prædicat, ſe omnibus contumeliis, minis, armis etiam Sicariorum petitos ſolitâ veſtrâ defenſione atque tutelâ caruiſſe. Adeò ut cum unus atque alter è mercatoribus cum ipſo etiam Societatis Præfecto, in navem quandam prædatoriam per inſidias abducti eſſent, cæterique veſtram fidem implorarent, à vobis tamen nullum auxilium impetrare potuerint, donec ipſi ſuo Marte mercatores, non ſine magno ſuorum diſcrimine captos in eo flumine, cujus veſtra urbs domina eſt, ex latronum manibus eripere cogerentur. Quos cum illi bonis auſpiciis domum reduxiſſent, & ab indignâ ſervitute veluti manu aſſeruiſſent, captos etiam piratas ipſos in cuſtodiam dedediſſent, Cochranum illum perſugam & perduellem eò audaciæ proceſſiſſe accipimus, ut & prædatores dimitti liberos, & mercatores tradi ſibi vinctos poſtulet. Vos autem etiam atque etiam hortamur & obteſtamur, ſi pactiones, & fœdera, & pervetuſtum utriuſque gentis commercium, id quod petitis, inviolatè ſervari ſtudetis, ut noſtri certum aliquod atque firmum ſibi præſidium in veſtrâ fide, prudentiâ, authoritate collocare demum poſſint; Vos autem uti eos his de rebus benignè audiatis; tàm de Cochrano, cæteriſque ſcæleris, illius ſociis, quàm de iis qui nuper in Concionatorem, impunè adhuc, impetum fecerunt ſupplicium ſumere velitis, aut è finibus exire jubeatis. Neque pulſos atque exules Tarquinios amicitiæ atque opibus Populi Anglicani anteferendos exiſtimetis. Si enim per vos non ſteterit quo minùs Reipub noſtræ hoſtes quidvis licere ſibi contra nos in urbe veſtrâ confidant, quàm non tuta aut honeſta amplius noſtrorum ibi commoratio ſit, vos cum animis veſtris cogitate. Hæc veſtræ prudentiæ & æquitati; Vos ipſos Divino Numini commendatos volumus. Valete.

Senatui Hamburgenſi.

PErſpecta nobis æquanimitas veſtra dubiis in rebus noſtris, facit nunc ut ſanè proſperis, ac benè geſtis, de veſtrâ voluntate, & amico in nos animo nequaquam dubitemus. Nos quidem, confecto jam pœnè bello, & profligatis ubique patriæ hoſtibus, nihil æquius, aut ad pacem, remque publicam ſtabiliendam firmius eſſe duximus, quam ut illi qui vel libertatem, ductore ſemper Deo, per nos adepti ſunt, vel vitam atque fortunas poſt belli civilis facinora, noſtro dono atque gratiâ receperunt, nobis viciſſim ſuis Magiſtratibus fidem & officium, ſolenni, ſi opus eſſet, more teſtarentur, atque præſtarent. Præſertim cum tot homines inquieti & inimici, ſemel atque iterum in fidem accepti, nullum neque domi neque foris perfidioſè agendi, novaſque turbas excitandi finem faciant. Itaque formulam quandam ſponſionis perſcribendam curavimus, quâ omnes qui aut munus aliquod in Repub. ſuſtinerent, aut legum præſidio muniti incolumitate, otio, cæteriſque vitæ commodis fruerentur, conceptis verbis ſe obſtringerent. Hanc etiam per omnes Colonias & quacunque gentium noſtri cives negotiandi causâ agerunt, mittendam cenſuimus; ut eorum quibus præficimur, fidem, prout decet atque neceſſe eſt, exploratam & cognitam habeamus. Quo magis mirari ſubit quod ex urbe veſtrâ mercatores noſtri ſcribunt, ſibi mandata noſtra per unum atque alterum veſtri ordinis exequi non licere. Sanè quod potentiſſimæ Fœderatorum in Belgio Provinciæ, ſuarum rerum & rationum conſultiſſimæ, nihil ad ſe pertinere exiſtimaverunt, ſi peregrini ſcilicet Angli debitam ſuis domi magiſtratibus in hæc vel illa verba fidem aſtringant, id quo pacto veſtræ Civitati ſuſpectum aut moleſtum eſſe poſſit, fatemur planè nos neſcire. Verum hoc à privato quorundam ſive ſtudio ſive formidine profectum, quos errabundi quidem & pulſi patriâ Scoti, minis dicuntur impuliſſe, ut mercatores noſtros a fide ſuâ nobis obligandâ deterrerent, Civitati non imputamus. Interea tamen ſummo vos opere hortamur atque etiam rogamus (non enim mercatura jam, ſed Reſpub. ipſa agitur) ut ne quenquam apud vos patimini, cujus hoc nihil poteſt intereſſe, authoritati quam nos in noſtros populares, non Exterorum arbitrio aut judicio, ſed jure patrio obtinemus, ſuam quamcunque authoritatem interponere. Quis enim non ægrè ferat, ſi nos veſtris hîc Hamburgenſibus ſua erga vos fide interdiceremus. Valete.

Sereniſſimo ac potentiſſimo Principi Philippo Quarto Hiſpaniarum Regi, Parlamentum Reipub. Angliæ, ſalutem.

A*Ntonium Aſcamum* Virum probum, eruditum, & luculentâ familiâ ortum, de rebus in commune, tam Hiſpanorum, quam Anglorum genti, ut ſpes eſt, valde utilibus, ad Majeſtatem Veſtram legamus. Quamobrem ut ei honeſtum iter, atque tutum in Urbem Regiam, ſicut moris eſt, necnon & reditum concedere, & præſtare velis, parem referre gratiam parata, officioſè petimus. Sin id minùs placuerit, ut quæ veſtra hac in parte ſit voluntas, ei quam primùm ſignificetur, utque tutò quo volet abeundi poteſtas fiat.

Dat. Feb. 4. 1649.

Sereniſſimo ac potentiſſimo Principi Philippo Quarto Hiſpaniarum Regi,
Parlamentum Reipub. Angliæ, ſalutem.

QUis rerum noſtratum ſtatus ſit, quamque atrocibus injuriis ſubacti, ſumptis tandem armis, capeſſendæ libertatis conſilium cepimus, conſtitutâ quâ nunc utimur Reipublicæ formâ, neque Majeſtatem Veſtram poteſt latere, neque alium quemvis, qui evulgata ſuper hac re ſcripta noſtra æquo animo perlegerit. Nobis profecto fidem noſtram, æquitatem, patientiam, teſtatam cunctis & probatam reddere, authoritatem etiam, honorem, & decus noſtrum adverſus infames exulum & perfugarum linguas tueri, apud idoneos rerum æſtimatores difficile non debet eſſe. Nunc quod exterarum nationum magis intereſt, deletis, aut depreſſis Patriæ hoſtibus, Deo nempe mirificè adjuti, ad pacem & amicitiam omni imperio potiorem cum vicinis gentibus habendam, paratos nos eſſe palam atque ex animo profitemur. Has ob cauſas ſpectatæ ſolertiæ & probitatis Virum Antonium Aſchamum in Hiſpaniam ad Majeſtatem Veſtram miſimus; qui de amicitiâ deque ſolito inter utramque gentem commercio cum Majeſtate Veſtrâ agat; vel etiam ad novas pactiones, ſi ita viſum fuerit, de integro ſanciendas viam muniat. Huic igitur Veſtræ Majeſtatis adeundi copiam ut faciatis, ejuſque incolumitati, necnon etiam honori, quoad iſto apud vos munere perfuncturus eſt, velitis proſpicere rogamus: ut & ea quæ à nobis mandata habet, utrique genti, ut ſperamus, profutura, liberè exponat; & mentis Veſtræ qui ſenſus his de rebus ſit, nos quam primùm certiores faciat.

Sereniſſimo Principi Joanni Quarto Luſitaniæ Regi,
Parlamentum Reipub. Angliæ, ſalutem.

MUlta nos & infidæ pacis, & inteſtini belli mala ultima perpeſſos, eò demùm loci redactos fuiſſe, ut ſi ſalvam Rempubl. vellemus, ejus adminiſtrandi ratio magna ex parte immutanda eſſet, ex iis quæ à nobis hac de re ſcripta publicè & declarata ſunt, Majeſtati Veſtræ jam pridem notum eſſe arbitramur. Quibus, ut par eſt, ſi fides potiùs haberetur, quàm improbiſſimis perditorum hominum calumniis, ſanè qui foris de rebus noſtris peſſimè jam ſentiunt, iis fortaſſe multò æquioribus uteremur. Nam quod nos jure noſtro, proque gentilitiâ Anglorum libertate, rectè & majorum more fortiter feciſſe contendimus, de eo pravas & obſtinatas nequiſſimorum hominum opiniones ex animis evellere, humanæ opis aut ingenii certè non eſt. ## Reſponſum Concilii Status ad Replicationem Dominorum Legatorum Extraordinariorum ſereniſſimi Regis Daniæ & Norwegiæ, Commiſſariis Concilii traditam, ad Reſponſum illud quod reddidit Concilium ad quatuordecim eorum poſtulationes.

PRædictis Dominis Legatis ut ſatisfiat de reſponſo Concilii ad quintum, ſextum, ſeptimum, octavum, & nonum articulum, aſſentitur Concilium huic ſequenti clauſulæ ſuo reſponſorum fine adjiciendæ. Videlicet, Præter illas colonias, inſulas, portus & loca in partis alterutrius ditione, ad quæ loca ne quis negotiandi aut commercii habendi causâ accedat, lege cautum eſt, niſi impetratâ prius ejus partis Licentia ſpeciali ad quam illa colonia, inſula, portus, aut loca pertinuerint.

Receptio cujuſquam in navem quæ in flumina, portus, aut ſinus alterutrius partis compulſa erit navem illam ulli exhibendæ moleſtiæ aut perſcrutationi ex reſponſo Concilii ad articulum undecimum obnoxiam non faciet, quemadmodum prædicti Domini Legati in replicatione ſua videntur intellexiſſe, præterquam ubi illa receptio contra Leges, Statuta, aut morem illius loci eſt, in quo illa navis portum capeſſerit, qua in re videtur Concilio nihil ſtatui quod durius ſit, ſed quod utriuſque Reipub. Saluti ſit æquè conducibile.

Quod ad probandum cujuſnam propriè naves & bona illa erunt quæ in naufragio ejici acciderint, Concilium exiſtimat neceſſe eſſe jusjurandum dari in illis curiis quæ ad hujuſmodi cauſas aut jam ſunt conſtitutæ aut erunt conſtituendæ, ubi qua illa ſibi vendicant audiri ſinguli poſſint & cujuſque jus cognoſci ac dijudicari, quod ſcriptis teſtimoniis, quæ vulgo Certificata nuncupantur, tam clarè atque diſtinctè fieri non poteſt, unde multi ſcrupuli ac dubitationes exiſtere poterunt, multæ etiam fraudes ac doli in illud genus probationis irrepere, quod ne eveniat utriuſque partis intereſt providere. Concilium etiam æquum eſſe arbitratur, definiri certum tempus ante quod tempus qui juſtum earum rerum dominum ſe eſſe non probaverit, excludetur ad evitandas ſine fine lites. Quod autem ad modum venundandi ea bona quæ ejecta in naufragio facile corrumpuntur, viſum eſt Concilio eum modum proponere qui ad lucernam dicitur, ut qui ſit modus maximè probabilis verum bonorum pretium eliciendi ad dominorum emolumentum; tamen ſi prædicti Domini Legati inventam aliam rationem attulerint quæ huic fini magis conducere videbitur, per Concilium non ſtabit quo minus id fiat quod æquum erit: neque intelligitur ob hanc rem huic Tractationi moram afferendi occaſio ulla præbeatur.

Quod autem ad eorum ſupplicium qui propoſitum fœdus ruperint, Concilium id adjecit, cujus in reſponſo ſuo ad articulum quartum decimum fit mentio ad majorem ejus articuli efficaciam, ipſumque fœdus eò firmius atque diuturnius reddendum.

Ad clauſulam Articuli quarti decimi extremam quod attinet reſpondere, non expedire cenſemus illis fœderibus ac Societatibus, quarum in prædictis reſponſis facta eſt mentio, quæque generatim duntaxat proponuntur aſſenſum noſtrum exhibere antequam quales illæ ſint, exploratius nobis fuerit, de quibus cum Excellentiis Veſtris viſum erit Concilium certius facere, reſponſum expreſſius ad id reddere poterimus.

Replicatio Concilii Status ad reſponſum prædictorum Dominorum Legatorum quod ad ſenos articulos à prædicto Concilio nomine Reipub. Angliæ exhibitos eſt redditum.

CONcilium, inſpectis prædictorum dominorum Legatorum diplomatis quibus collata in eos poteſtas eſt tranſigendi cum Parlamento aut ejus Commiſſariis de iis omnibus quæ tranſigi expediverit, fœderaque vetuſta renovandi novaque jungendi, exiſtimabat quidem prædictos dominos Legatos ea authoritate eſſe præditos ut & reſponſa dare poſſent, & omnia tranſigere tam quæ à parte hujus Reipub. quam quæ à parte Regis Daniæ & Norwegiæ ferrentur, adeoque reſponſa quæ prædictis Dominis Legatis ad primam, ſecundam, tertiam & quintam Concilii poſtulationem dare libuit haud expectabat, quo factum erit ut huic præſenti tractationi neceſſario mora afferatur cum & in ſe æquiſſimum ſit & in Concilio deliberatum fœdus integrum tractando ſimul complecti tam de iis quæ ad hanc Rempub. quam quæ ad Regna Daniæ & Norwegiæ ſpectant. Quapropter Concilium enixè flagitat ut Excellentiæ Veſtræ reſpondere ad prædictum noſtrum primum, ſecundum, tertium, & quintum poſtulatum velint.

Ad quartum articulum de portoriis Gluckſtadii cum ea jam antiquata ſint, quemadmodum Excellentiæ Veſtræ in reſponſo meminerunt, inſtat Concilium uti eorum illa antiquatio etiam per hoc fœdus rata habeatur, ne forte in poſterum revocentur.

Quod ad ſextum articulum, qui de pyratica eſt, eum quidem inſeruit Concilium ut qui ad utriuſque commoda æquè pertineret, & ad commercium in commune ſtabiliendum quod à pyratis atque prædonibus perquàm turbatur atque interrumpitur; cumque reſponſum Dominorum Legatorum de hoc articulo ad hoſtes tantùm referatur, mentionem Piratarum nullam faciat, Concilium idcirco expreſſius reſponſum ad id petit.

Cumque prædicti Domini Legati in ſua replicatione ad reſponſum Concilii & decimum ſuum articulum, & ad eum Concilii reſponſum prætermiſerint, Concilio neceſſarium viſum eſt prioribus ſuis poſtulatis ſequentem hunc articulum adjungere.

Populum & incolas Reipub. Angliæ qui negotia aut commercium per ulla regna, regiones, aut ditionem Regis Daniæ & Norwegiæ habuerint portorii, tributi, cenſus, vectigalis aut ſtipendii cujuſvis plus in poſterum non ſolvere aut alio quovis modo atque populus fœderatarum Belgii Provinciarum, aliave quævis natio externa minimum illic ſolvens mercaturamque faciens, ſi ſolvit aut ſolutura eſt, parique frui & æquè amplâ libertate privilegiis & immunitatibus, cum in adventu, tum in reditu & quamdiu illic commorabuntur, in piſcatu etiam, mercatura, atque alio quocunque modo, quo ullius exteræ gentis populus in prædictis regnis totaque ditione dicti Regis Daniæ & Norwegiæ fruitur aut frui queat; quibus itidem privilegiis populares Regis Daniæ & Norwegiæ per omnes Provincias ac ditionem Reipublicæ Angliæ pariter fruentur.

PErſpectus ex literis tuis ad me datis Religionis amor tuus, & in Eccleſias Reformatas pietas eximia, ſtudiumque ſingulare, in iſtâ præſertim generis nobilitate ac ſplendore, eoque ſub Regno in quo deficientibus ab Orthodoxa fide tot ſunt nobiliſſimis quibuſque ſpes uberes propoſitæ, tot firmioribus incommoda ſubeunda, permagno me planè gaudio ac voluptate effecit. Nec minus gratum erat placuiſſe me tibi eo ipſo Religionis nomine, quo tu mihi dilectus atque charus inprimis eſſe debes. Deum autem obteſtor ut quam de me ſpem Eccleſiarum & expectationem eſſe oſtendis, poſſim ei aliquando vel ſatisfacere, ſi opus erit, vel demonſtare omnibus, quàm cupiam non deeſſe. Nullum equidem fructum laborum meorum, nullum hujus quam obtineo in Repub. meâ ſive dignitatis ſive muneris, nec ampliorem exiſtimarem, nec jucundiorem, quàm ut idoneus ſim, qui Eccleſiæ Reformatæ vel amplificationi vel incolumitati, vel, quod maximum eſt, paci inſerviam. Te verò hortor magnopere ut religionem Orthodoxam qua pietate ac ſtudio à majoribus acceptam profiteris, eâdem animi firmitate atque conſtantiâ ad extremum uſque retineas. Nec ſanè quicquam erit te tuiſque Parentibus religioſiſſimis dignius, nec quod pro tuis in me meritis, quanquam tuâ causâ cupio omnia, optare tibi melius, aut præclarius queam, quàm ſi ſic te pares atque inſtituas, ut Eccleſiæ, præſertim patriæ, quarum in diſciplina tam felici indole tamque illuſtri loco natus es, quanto cæteris præluces, tanto firmius in te præſidium ſuis rebus conſtitutum eſſe ſentiant. Sereniſſime Princeps, Redditæ ſunt nobis Genevâ, nec non ex Delphinatu aliiſque multis ex locis ditione veſtræ finitimis literæ, quibus certiores facti ſumus, Regalis veſtræ Celſitudinis ſubditis Reformatam Religionem profitentibus, veſtro Edicto atque authoritate imperatum nuper eſſe, uti triduo quàm hoc edictum promulgatum erit ſuis ſedibus atque agris excedant pœnâ capitis, & fortunarum omnium amiſſione propoſita, niſi fidem fecerint ſe derelictâ religione ſuâ, intra dies viginti Catholicam Religionem amplexuros: Cumque ſe ſupplices ad Celſitudinem veſtram Regalem contuliſſent, petentes uti edictum illud revocetur, utque ipſi priſtinam in gratiam recepti, conceſſæ à Sereniſſimis Majoribus veſtris libertati reſtituantur, partem tamen execitus veſtri in eos impetum feciſſe multos crudeliſſime trucidaſſe, alios vinculis mandaſſe, reliquos in deſerta loca monteſque nivibus coopertos expuliſſe, ubi familiarum aliquot centuriæ, eo loci rediguntur ut ſit metuendum ne frigore & fame, brevi ſint miſerè omnes perituræ. Hæc cum ad nos perlata eſſent, haud ſane potuimus quin, hujus afflictiſſimi populi tanta calamitate auditâ, ſummo dolore ac miſeratione commoveremur. Cum autem non humanitatis modo ſed ejuſdem religionis communione, adeoque fraternâ penitus neceſſitudine cum iis conjunctos nos eſſe fateamur, ſatisfieri à nobis neque noſtro erga Deum officio, neque fraternæ charitati, neque religionis ejuſdem profeſſioni poſſe exiſtimavimus, ſi in hac fratrum noſtrorum calamitate ac miſeria ſolo ſenſu doloris afficeremur, niſi etiam ad ſublevanda eorum tot mala inopinata, quantum in nobis eſt ſitum, omnem operam noſtram conferamus. Itaque à veſtra imprimis Celſitudine Regali majorem in modum enixè petimus & obteſtamur, ut ad inſtituta Sereniſſimorum Majorum ſuorum, conceſſamque ab iis omni tempore & confirmatam ſubditis ſuis Vallenſibus libertatem velit animum referre. In quâ concedendâ atque confirmandâ, quemadmodum id præſtiterunt, quod Deo per ſe gratiſſimum proculdubio eſt, qui conſcientiæ jus inviolabile ac poteſtatem penes ſe unum eſſe voluit, ita dubium non eſt quin Subditorum etiam ſuorum meritam rationem habuerint, quos & in bello ſtrenuos ac fideliſſimos & in pace dicto ſemper audientes experti fuiſſent. Utque Serenitas Veſtra Regalis in cæteris omnibus & benignè & glorioſè factis Avorum ſuorum veſtigiis optimè inſiſtit, ita in hoc nolit ab iiſdem diſcedere etiam atque etiam obſecramus; ſed & hoc edictum, & ſi quod aliud inquietandis Reformata Religionis causâ ſubditis ſuis rogatum ſit, uti abroget; ipſos patriis ſedibus atq; bonis reſtituat; conceſſa jura ac libertatem priſtinam ratam iis faciat; accepta damna ſarciri, & eorum vexationibus finem imponi jubeat. Quod ſi fecerit Regalis Celſitudo veſtra, & rem Deo acceptiſſimam fecerit, miſeros illos & calamitoſos erexerit & recrearit, & à ſuis omnibus vicinis, quotquot Reformatam Religionem colunt, maximam gratiam inierit; nobiſque potiſſimùm, qui veſtram in illos benignitatem atque clementiam obteſtationis noſtræ fructum arbitrabimur. Quod & ad omnes officiorum reddendas vices nos obligaverit; nec ſtabiliendæ ſolùm verum etiam augendæ inter hanc Remp. veſtramque ditionem neceſſitudinis & amicitiæ fundamenta firmiſſima jecerit. Neque verò hoc minus ab juſtitia veſtra & moderatione animi nobis pollicemur: quam in partem Deum Opt. EX literis veſtris ſexto decimo Novembris 1654. ad nos datis, ſingularem erga nos benevolentiam veſtram atque ſtudium perſpeximus; & Internuntius veſter qui illas nobis literas dedit de contrahenda nobiſcum ſocietate & amicitia voluntatem veſtram ampliùs coram expoſuit. Nos certè occaſionem hanc eſſe datam, unde noſtrum quoque erga vos animum, & quanti Celſitudinem veſtram meritò faciamus declarare atque oſtendere poſſimus, haud mediocriter ſanè gaudemus. Cum autem Veſtra in Rempublicam Chriſtianam præclara merita laboreſque ſuſcepti ad nos uſque famâ pervenerint & hæc omnia certiùs, & quæ amplius rei Chriſtianæ vel defendendæ vel promovendæ cauſa in animo habeatis Celſitudo veſtra ſuis literis communicata nobis amiciſſimè voluerit, ea uberiorem inſuper lætandi materiam nobis attulere: Deum nempe iis in regionibus excitaſſe ſibi tam potentem atque egregium ſuæ gloriæ ac providentiæ miniſtrum; qui, cum virtute atque armis tantum poſſit, de religione communi Proteſtantium tuenda, cui nunc undiq; malè & dictum & factum eſt, nobiſcum unà ſociare conſilia cupiat. Deus autem qui utriſque nobis tametſi locorum intervallo tam longè disjunctis, eundem Religionis Orthodoxæ defendendæ ſtudium atque animum injecit, dubium non eſt quin earum præcipue rationum author nobis futurus ſit, unde & nobis & inter nos & Reformatorum reliquis principibus ac civitatibus hac in re maximo eſſe adjumento atque uſui poſſimus, occaſionibus certè omnibus intenti, ſi quas Deus obtulerit, iis quod ad nos attinet, eodem Deo benè juvante, non deerimus. Interea Celſitudini Veſtræ ſine ſummo dolore commemorare non poſſumus quanta inclementia Dux Allobrogum ſubditos ſuos Alpinarum quarundam Vallium incolas Orthodoxam Religionem retinentes perſequutus ſit. Quos non ſolùm ſeveriſſimo Edicto quotquot Romanam Religionem ſuſcipere recuſarunt ſedes avitas, bonaque omnia relinquere coëgit; verùm etiam ſuo exercitu adortus eſt, qui multos crudeliſſime concidit, alios barbarè per exquiſitos cruciatus necavit, partem verò maximam in montes expulit fame & frigore abſumendam, exuſtis domibus, & ſiqua eorum bona ab illis carnificibus non ſint direpta. Hæc ut ad vos jamdudum nuntiata ſunt & Celſitudini Veſtræ tantam crudelitatem graviter diſplicuiſſe, & veſtram opem atque auxilium, quantum in vobis eſt, illis miſerrimis, ſiqui tot cædibus atque miſeriis adhuc ſuperſunt, non defuturum, nobis facilè perſuadetur. Nos literas Duci Sabaudiæ ad deprecandum ejus inſenſum in ſuos animum jam ſcripſimus; ſicut & Gallorum Regi, idem ut is etiam velit facere; vicinis denique Reformatæ Religionis Principibus uti de illa ſævitia tam immani quid nos ſentiamus intelligere poſſint: quæ quanquam in illos inopes primum cœpta eſt, idem tamen omnibus eandem religionem profitentibus minatur: eoque majorem illis proſpiciendi ſibi in commune ſuiſque omnibus conſulendi neceſſitatem imponit: quam & nos eandem rationem, prout Deus nobis in animum induxerit, ſemper ſequemur. Sereniſſime Potentiſſimeque Rex,

EX Literis Majeſtatis Veſtræ, quibus illa ad meas quinto & vigeſimo Maii proximi datas reſcribit, facilè intelligo nequaquam feſelliſſe me eam opinionem, quâ mihi quidem perſuaſum erat, cædes illas immaniſſimas, barbaramque eorum hominum ſtragem, qui Religionem Reformatam in Sabaudia profitentur, à cohortibus quibuſdam veſtris factam, neque juſſu veſtro neque mandato accidiſſe. Quæ quantum Majeſtati veſtræ diſplicuerit, id vos veſtris militum Tribunis, qui hæc tam inhumana ſuo ſolo impetu injuſſi perpetraverant, ita maturè ſignificaſſe, deque tanta crudelitate Ducem ipſum Sabaudiæ monuiſſe, pro reducendis denique iſtis miſeris exulibus unde pulſi ſunt, veſtram omnem gratiam, neceſſitudinem, authoritatem tanta cum fide atque humanitate interpoſuiſſe, majorem equidem in modum ſum lætatus. Ea nempe ſpes erat, illum Principem voluntati ac precibus Majeſtatis veſtræ aliquid ſaltem hac in re fuiſſe conceſſurum. Verùm cum neque veſtro, neque aliorum Principum rogatu atque inſtantiâ in Miſerorum cauſa quicquam eſſe impetratum perſpiciam, haud alienum ab officio meo duxi, ut hunc nobilem virum extraordinarii noſtri Commiſſarii munere inſtructum ad Allobrogum Ducem mitterem; qui tantæ crudelitatis in ejuſdem nobiſcum Religionis cultores, idque ipſius Religionis odio adhibitæ, quo ſenſu afficiar, uberiùs eidem exponat. Atque hujus quidem Legationis eo feliciorem exitum ſperavero, ſi adhibere denuò & adhuc majore cum inſtantiâ ſuam authoritatem atque operam Majeſtati Veſtræ placuerit; & quemadmodum fideles fore illos inopes dictoque audientes Principi ſuo ipſa in ſe recepit, ita velit eorundem incolumitati atque ſaluti cavere, ne quid iis hujuſmodi injuriæ & calamitatis atrociſſimæ innocentibus & pacatis deinceps inferatur. Hoc cum in ſe juſtum ac verè regium ſit, nec non benignitati veſtræ atque clementiæ, quæ tot ſubditos veſtros eandem illam Religionem ſequentes ubique ſalvos & incolumes præſtat, ſummè conſentaneum, à Majeſtate Veſtra, ut par eſt, non poſſumus quin expectemus. Quæ hac ſimul operâ, cum univerſos per ſua Regna Proteſtantes, quorum ſtudium erga vos ſummaque fides maximis in rebus perſpecta jam ſæpe & cognita eſt, arctiùs ſibi devinxerit, tum exteris etiam omnibus perſuaſum reddiderit, nihil ad hoc facinus contuliſſe Regis conſilium, quicquid Miniſtri Regii atque Præfecti contulerunt. Præſertim ſi Majeſtas Veſtra pœnas ab iis Ducibus ac Miniſtris debitas repetiverit, qui authoritate propria, ſuaque pro libidine tam immania patrare ſcelera ſunt auſi. Interea cum Majeſtas Veſtra factum hoc inhumaniſſimum, quo dignum eſt odio, averſari ſe teſtetur, non dubito quin miſeris illis atque ærumnoſis ad vos confugientibus, tutiſſimum in Regno ſuo receptum atque perfugium ſit præbitura; nec Subditorum ſuorum cuiquam, ut contra eos Duci Allobrogum auxilio adſit, permiſſura. Quaſi verò hanc præfecturam atque Provinciam Majeſtatis veſtræ dono accepiſſet, ut ſocios juxtà ſpoliaret, veſtraque edicta in eorum gratiam promulgata pro nihilo haberet. Quod enim Rex Galliæ, ſi maximè ab hoſtibus factum contra nos voluiſſet, facti tamen participes ſuos eſſe vetuit, id regius præfectus contra regium interdictum non modo fieri eſt paſſus, ut nos veſtris in portubus diriperemur, prædæque eſſemus, verum etiam ipſe diripuit, ipſe prædæ habuit, ſeque facti authorem palam profeſſus eſt. Sereniſſime potentiſſimeque Rex, Amice ac Fœderate chariſſime;

Literas Majeſtatis veſtræ ſexto decimo Februarii Hafniâ datas ab ornatiſſimo viro Simone de Petkum, Oratore apud nos veſtro, accepimus. Iis perlectis, & voluntatis erga nos veſtræ præclarâ ſignificatio, & ipſius rei, de qua ſcriptum erat, pondus uſque eò nos permovit, ut ſtatim ad Majeſtatem veſtram mittere qui mandatis noſtris inſtructus, noſtra conſilia vobis hac de re pleniſſime exponeret, in animo haberemus. Et quanquam idem nobis etiamnum animus manet, hactenus tamen idoneum aliquem cum iis mandatis dimittere, quæ graviſſimum hujuſmodi negotium poſtularet, non potuimus; quemadmodum jam brevi facturos non eſſe ſperamus. Interea non omittendum diutiùs exiſtimavimus Majeſtatem veſtram certiorem facere, præſentem rerum in Europa ſtatum haud mediocri nos curâ ac cogitatione ſollicitos tenuiſſe: cum ab aliquot jam annis ſummo cum dolore videamus Proteſtantium Principes ac civitatum Primores (quos ex communi Religionis atque ſalutis vinculo omnem ſeſe mutuò confirmandi ac defendendi inire rationem oporteret) inter ſe indies magis magiſque infirmè animatos, quid quiſque moliatur, quidve ſtruat, ſuſpectum habere; metum amicis, ſpem hoſtibus præbentes, inimicitias atque diſſidia potius hac rerum inclinatione portendi, quam firmum invicem animorum conſenſum, ad præſidium mutuum ac defenſionem. Atque hæc quidem ſollicitudo eo altiùs animo noſtro inſedit, quo magis in Majeſtate veſtra, Regeque Suecia adhuc aliquid reſidere mutuæ ſuſpicionis videtur; vel ſaltem non eam exiſtere voluntatum conjunctionem quam communis noſtrum omnium in Orthodoxam religionem amor ac ſtudium flagitaret; dum Majeſtati veſtræ injecta forte aliqua ſuſpicio eſt, fore ut ab Rege Suecia detrimentum aliquod ditionis veſtræ commerciis afferatur; ſuſpicante viciſſim Suecorum Rege, ne per vos & bellum, quod nunc gerit, difficilius, & contrahendarum ſocietatum ratio impeditior ſibi reddatur. Non præterit Majeſtatem veſtram, pro ea ſumma prudentia quam adhibere ſuis omnibus in rebus ſolet, quantum diſcriminis Proteſtantium ſummæ rei impendat, ſi iſtiuſmodi ſuſpiciones inter vos diu verſentur; quanto magis, quod Deus avertat, ſiquod hoſtilitatis indicium erumperet. Utcunque hæc ſe habeant, nos, quemadmodum & Suecorum Regem, & Fœderati Belgii Ordines ad pacem & moderata conſilia magnopere hortati ſumus (adeoque redintegrari inter eos pacem atque concordiam vehementer gaudemus, nam & capita quoque illius fœderis à Dominis Ordinibus tranſmiſſa ad nos ſunt) ita noſtras eſſe partes duximus, noſtræque amicitiæ quam maxime convenire, ut qui ſenſus noſter his de rebus ſit, Majeſtatem veſtram ne celaremus (præſertim cum ut ita faciamus, Majeſtatis veſtræ literis amiciſſimis tam ſtudioſe invitemur; id quod etiam benevolentiæ erga nos veſtræ pro argumento ſingulari ſanè habemus atque amplectimur) veſtræque Majeſtati ante oculos poneremus, quantam nobis neceſſitatem, qui Proteſtantium Religionem ſequimur, divina providentia impoſuerit colendi inter nos pacem, idque nunc maximè, cum hoſtes noſtri acerrimè, ſi unquam alias, rem gerere, & conjuraſſe undique in perniciem noſtram videntur. Valles Alpinas miſerorum nuper incolarum cæde ac ſanguine madentes commemorare nihil attinet; nec conquaſſatam per eoſdem dies Cæſareis proſcriptionibus atque edictis Auſtriam; nec denique contra Helvetios Proteſtantes Helvetiorum Papiſtarum infeſtos impetus. Quis neſcit Hiſpanorum dolos ac machinationes per hoſce aliquot annos hæc loca omnia incendiis, ruinis, cladibus Proteſtantium permiſcuiſſe? Si ad hæc mala Reformatorum Fratrum inter ſe diſſenſio velut cumulus accedat, inter vos præſertim qui noſtrarum virium tanta pars eſtis, & in quibus tantum præſidii ac roboris Proteſtantium dubiis temporibus comparatum atque repoſitum eſt; quod ad opem humanam attinet, peſſum ire Proteſtantium res, & in extremo diſcrimine atque occaſu verſari neceſſe erit. Quod contra, ſi pax conſtet inter vos vicinos, cæteroſque Orthodoxos Principes, ſi concordiæ fraternæ omni ex parte ſtudeatur, non erit cur, Deo bene juvante, vel vim vel verſutiam noſtrorum hoſtium pertimeſcamus; quorum conatus noſtra ſola conſenſio vel diſſipabit vel fruſtrabitur. Neque vero dubitamus quin Majeſtas veſtra ad hanc pacem beatam impertiri ſuam operam, quam poteſt maximam, & libens velit & velle deſitura non ſit. Qua in re ipſe etiam communicare conſilia cum Majeſtate veſtra atque conjungere paratiſſimus ero; utpote & veram amicitiam profeſſus, & cui non ſolum pactam inter nos tam auſpicatò ſervare pacem deliberatum omnino ſit, verum etiam neceſſitudinem hanc, quæ nunc intercedit, prout Deus facultatem dabit, arctiori vinculo conſtringere. Idem Deus interim Majeſtati veſtræ ſecunda ac proſpera omnia concedat.

AD literas Celſitudinis veſtræ non ſic altero pòſt anno, quod prope jam pudet, reſcripſiſſemus niſi nos admodum invitos permulta ſanè, eaque graviſſima, quorum curam, pro noſtro in Repub. munere, differre non potuimus, interpellaſſent. Quæ enim literæ debebant eſſe nobis gratiores, quàm quæ à Principe religioſiſſimo, majoribus quoque religioſiſſimis orto, de pace Religionis, deque concordia Eccleſiarum concilianda ſunt ſcriptæ; quæ etiam literæ eundem planè animum, idem pacis Chriſtianæ promovendæ ſtudium non ſolum ſuo, verum etiam univerſi ferè orbis Chriſtiani opinione ac judicio, & ipſæ nobis tribuunt, & univerſim attributum eſſe gratulantur? Et nos quidem per tria hæc olim regna quid hac in parte ſimus conati, quidque hortando, ferendo, præeundo, divino maximè auxilio, effecerimus, & norunt noſtri plerique, & in ſumma conſcientiæ tranquillitate ſentiunt. Eandem præſertim Germaniæ totius Eccleſiis, ubi acriùs ferè, jamque diu nimis diſſidetur, pacem optavimus; perque noſtrum Duræum hoc idem multos jam annos fruſtra molientem ſiquid eam in rem noſtrâ operâ conferre poſſet ex animo detulimus. In eadem nos etiamnum ſententia permanemus; eandem illis Eccleſiis fraternam inter ſe charitatem optamus: ſed quam ſit hoc arduum conciliandæ pacis negotium inter ipſos pacis, ut præ ſe ferunt, filios, ſummo cum dolore ſatis ſuperque intelligimus. Nam ut utrique Reformati nempe & Auguſtani, in unius Eccleſiæ communionem aliquando coaleſcant, ſperandum vix eſt; ſuam utrique ſententiam ne poſſit vel voce vel ſcriptis defendere, prohiberi ſine vi non poterunt; vis autem cum pace Eccleſiaſticâ conſiſtere non poteſt: hoc tantùm ſe ſinant exorari qui diſſentiunt, ut humanius ſaltem & moderatius velint diſſentire, nihiloque minus inter ſe diligere; utpote non hoſtes ſed fratres in levioribus licet diſſentientes, in ſumma tamen men fidei conjunctiſſimos. Hæc nos inculcando, hæc ſuadendo nunquam deſatigabimur; quod ultrà eſt, humanis neque viribus neque conſiliis datur: Deus quod ſuum ſolius eſt ſuo tempore perficiet. Tu interim, Sereniſſime Princeps, præclaram in Eccleſias declarationem animi tui, ſempiternum ſanè monumentum & majoribus tuis dignum & omnibus poſthac principibus imitandum reliquiſti. Nos Celſitudini veſtræ, pro eo ac merita eſt, felicitatem cæteris in rebus quantum ipſa cupit, mentem, ea quam nunc habes, haud meliorem (quid enim poteſt eſſe melius?) à Deo Optimo Maximo precamur.

Sereniſſime Potentiſſimeque Rex, Amice ac Fœderate auguſtiſſime;

MEminiſſe poteſt Majeſtas veſtra quo tempore inter nos de renovando fœdere agebatur; quod optimis auſpiciis initum multa utriuſque populi commoda, multa hoſtium communium exinde mala teſtantur, accidiſſe miſeram illam Convallenſium occiſionem, quorum cauſam undique deſertam atque afflictam veſtræ miſericordiæ, atque tutelæ ſummo cum ardore animi ac miſeratione commendavimus. Nec defuiſſe per ſe arbitramur Majeſtatem veſtram officio tam pio, immo verò tam humano, pro eâ quâ apud Ducem Sabaudiæ valere debuit vel auctoritate vel gratia: nos certè aliique multi Principes ac Civitates, Legationibus, Literis, Precibus interpoſitis, non defuimus. Poſt cruentiſſimam utriuſque ſexus omnis ætatis trucidationem, pax tandem data eſt, vel potius inducta pacis nomine hoſtilitas quædam tectior: conditiones pacis veſtro in oppido Pinarolii ſunt latæ; duræ quidem illæ, ſed quibus miſeri atque inopes dira omnia atque immania perpeſſi facilè acquieſcerent, modo iis, duræ & iniquæ ut ſint, ſtaretur; non ſtatur; ſed enim earum quoque ſingularum falſa interpretatione variiſque diverticulis fides eluditur ac violatur; antiquis ſedibus multi dejiciuntur, religio patria multis interdicitur, tributa nova exiguntur, arx nova cervicibus imponitur, unde milites crebro erumpentes obvios quoſque vel diripiunt vel trucidant: ad hæc nuper novæ copiæ clanculum contra eos parantur; quique inter eos Romanam Religionem colunt, migrare ad tempus jubentur; ut omnia nunc rurſus videantur ad illorum internecionem miſerrimorum ſpectare, quos illa prior laniena reliquos fecit. Quod ego per dextram tuam, Rex Chriſtianiſſime, quæ fœdus nobiſcum & amicitiam percuſſit, obſecro atque obteſtor, per illud Chriſtianiſmi Tituli decus ſanctiſſimum, fieri ne ſiveris: nec tantam ſæviendi licentiam non dico principi cuiquam (neque enim in ullum Principem, multo minus in ætatem illius principis teneram, aut in muliebrem matris animum tanta ſævitia cadere poteſt) ſed ſacerrimis illis ſicariis ne permiſeris; qui cum Chriſti Servatoris noſtri ſervos atque imitatores ſeſe profiteantur, qui venit in hunc mundum ut peccatores ſervaret, ejus mitiſſimo nomine atque inſtitutis ad innocentium crudeliſſimas cædes abutuntur: eripe qui potes, quique in tanto faſtigio dignus es poſſe, tot ſupplices tuos homicidarum ex manibus, qui cruore nuper ebrii, ſanguinem rurſus ſitiunt; ſuæque invidiam crudelitatis in Principes derivare conſultiſſimum ſibi ducunt. Tu verò nec titulos tuos aut Regni fines iſta invidiâ, nec Evangelium Chriſti pacatiſſimum iſta crudelitate fœdari te regnante patiaris. Memineris hos ipſos avi tui Henrici Proteſtantibus amiciſſimi dedititios fuiſſe; cum Diguierius per ea loca, quâ etiam commodiſſimus in Italiam tranſitus eſt, Sabaudum trans Alpes cedentem victor eſt inſecutus: deditionis illius inſtrumentum in actis regni veſtri publicis etiamnum extat; in quo exceptum atque cautum inter alia eſt, Ne cui poſtea Convallenſes traderentur, niſi iiſdem conditionibus quibus eos avus tuus invictiſſimus in fidem recepit. Hanc fidem nunc implorant, avitam abs te Nepote ſupplices requirunt: tui eſſe, quàm cujus nunc ſunt, vel permutatione aliquâ, ſi fieri poſſit, malint atque optarint: id ſi non licet, patrocinio ſaltem, miſeratione atque perfugio. Sunt & rationes regni quæ hortari poſſint ut Convallenſes ad te confugientes ne rejicias; ſed nolim te, Rex tantus cùm ſis, aliis rationibus ad defenſionem calamitoſorum quàm fide à majoribus data, pietate, regiaque animi benignitate ac magnitudine permoveri. Ita pulcherrimi facti laus atque gloria illibata atque integra tua erit, & ipſe Patrem miſericordiæ ejuſque filium Chriſtum Regem, cujus nomen atque doctrinam ab immanitate nefaria vindicaveris, eo magis faventem tibi atque propitium per omnem vitam experieris. Exempla etiam literarum vidimus quas Legati veſtri pacis jamdudum Pinaroliana hortatores atque teſtes ad Allobrogum Ducem illiuſque Taurinenſis conſilii Præſidem ſcripſerunt; in quibus ruptas eſſe omnes pacis conditiones, illiſque miſeris fraudi potiùs quàm ſecuritati fuiſſe ſingulatim, oſtendunt atque evincunt. Quarum violationem ab ipſâ ſtatim pace datâ in hunc uſque diem continuatam, & indies graviorem niſi æquo animo patiuntur, niſi ſe conculcandos planè & peſſumdandos proſternunt atque abjiciunt, religione etiam ejuratâ, impendet eadem calamitas, eadem ſtrages, quæ ipſos cum conjugibus ac liberis tertio abhinc anno ſic miſerabilem in modum attrivit atque afflixit, & ſubeunda iterum ſi eſt, funditus eradicabit. Quid agant miſeri? quibus nulla deprecatio, nulla reſpiratio, nullum adhuc certum perfugium patuit; res eſt cum feris aut cum furiis, quibus priorum cædium recordatio nullam pœnitentiam, aut ſuorum civium miſerationem, nullum ſenſum humanitatis aut fundendi ſanguinis ſatietatem attulit. Hæc ferenda planè non ſunt, ſive fratres noſtros Convallenſes Orthodoxæ Religionis cultores antiquiſſimos, ſive ipſam Religionem ſalvam volumus. Et nos quidem locorum intervallo plus nimio disjuncti, quod opis aut facultatis noſtræ fuit, & præſtitimus ex animo, & præſtare non deſinemus. Vos qui non modo fratrum cruciatibus ac penè clamoribus, verum etiam eorumdem furori hoſtium proximi eſtis, proſpicite per Deum immortalem idque maturè quid veſtrarum nunc partium ſit; quid auxilii, quid præſidii vicinis ac fratribus alioqui mox perituris ferre poſſitis ac debeatis, prudentiam veſtram ac pietatem, fortitudinem etiam veſtram conſulite. Cauſa certè eadem eſt Religio, cur iidem hoſtes vos quoque perditos velint, immo cur eodem tempore, eodem ſuperiore anno, fœderatorum veſtrorum inteſtino Marte perditos voluerint. Veſtra duntaxat in manu poſt opem divinam videtur eſſe, ne purioris ipſa ſtirps Religionis vetuſtiſſima in illis priſcorum fidelium reliquiis excindatur: quorum ſalutem in extremum jam diſcrimen adductam ſi negligitis, videte ne voſmetipſos paulo poſt proximæ vices urgeant. Hæc dum fraternè ac liberè hortamur, ipſi interea non langueſcimus: quod ſolum nobis conceditur tam longinquis, cùm ad procurandam periclitantium incolumitatem tùm ad ſublevandam egentium inopiam, omnem operam noſtram & contulimus & conferemus. Deus det utriſque nobis eam domi tranquillitatem ac pacem, eum rerum ac temporum ſtatum, ut omnes noſtras opes atque vires, omne ſtudium ad defendendam eccleſiam ſuam contra hoſtium ſuorum furorem ac rabiem, convertere poſſimus.

Jan.* poſt redditas Celſitudini veſtræ literas noſtras, veſtraque omnia humanitatis officia noſtris hominibus ultro delata, petentibus ut portus Ferrarii commoditate uti liceret, reſponſum eſt, id concedi non poſſe, ne Rex Hiſpaniæ ſcilicet noſter hoſtis offenderetur. Et tamen quid eſt quod princeps amicus amico præbere communius poſſit, quàm littoris ac portus aditum? quid eſt quod nos expectare ab hujuſmodi amicitia poſſimus quæ hoſtium noſtrorum animum ne offendat, incommodare nobis quàm commodare, aut vel minimis rebus ſubvenire paratior ſit. Et primo quidem ex ſingulis navibus duobus vel tribus nautis duntaxat excenſus in terram, ſive commercium (quam vos Practicam vocatis) eſt datum: mox ut auditum eſt in oppido, navem quandam Belgicam, quæ frumentum in Hiſpaniam portabat, à noſtris eſſe interceptam, quod erat antea commercii ſtatim adimitur; Longlandius qui noſtris illic Mercatoribus præſidet, claſſem adire non permittitur; aquatio, quæ omnibus non planè hoſtibus libera eſt, non niſi ſub armatis cuſtodibus iniquo pretio, & quidem egerrimè præbetur: tot noſtris Mercatoribus qui non ſine maximo veſtrorum emolumento illic verſantur, ſuos ne inviſant populares aut ulla re adjuvent interdicitur. Poſteriore ejus adventu ſub exitum menſis Martii, egreſſus ex navibus nemini datur: quinto poſt die cùm naviculam quandam Neapolitanam prætoria navis noſtra incidentem in nos fortè excepiſſet ducenta plus minus tormenta ab oppido claſſem verſus diſploduntur quorum nullum ictu nos læſit ne attigit quidem: quod argumento eſſe poteſt quàm longè hæc à Portu atque caſtelli ditione in alto gererentur, quæ veſtros quaſi portu violato ſic ſine cauſa irritarunt: confeſtim aquatorum noſtrorum ſcaphæ intra portum oppugnantur; una capitur, detinetur; repoſcentibus neque ſcapham neque homines redditum iri reſpondetur, niſi capta illa navis Neapolitana reddatur quam conſtat libero mari captam, ubi capi licuit. Ita noſtri multis modis incommodati ſine illo commeatu, quem numeratâ pecuniâ coemerant, abire denuo coguntur. Hæc ſi Celſitudinis veſtræ voluntate ac juſſu quod ſperamus non fiunt, petimus id oſtendat præfecti illius ſupplicio, qui amicitias Domini ſui violare tam facile in animum induxit: ſin eſt ut ſciente ac volente veſtra Celſitudine commiſſa hæc ſint, cogitet nos, ut benevolentiam veſtram plurimi ſemper fecimus, ita apertas injurias à benevolentia dignoſcere didiciſſe.

TAmetſi multa ſunt quæ ad Regem amicum & Reip. noſtræ conjunctiſſimum neceſſariò ſcribam, nihil eſt tamen quod faciam libentius quàm quod nunc facio, ut Majeſtati Veſtræ, Regnoque Portugalliæ inſignem hanc proximam de communi hoſte Hiſpano victoriam gratuler: qua non ad veſtram tantummodo, verum etiam ad Europæ totius pacem ac reſpirationem, permagnum, atque in multos fortaſſe annos, allatum eſſe momentum nemo eſt quin intelligat. Quod cur ſit factum non intelligo niſi ſi eorum judicio mercede dignior eſt, qui ſemel quàm qui bis meruerit. Vehementer itaque peto à Majeſtate Veſtra, ut huic uni Alexandro cui duplum debetur, debita navatæ operæ ſatisfactio ne deſiat; velitque pro authoritate ſua quàm breviſſimum ſolationis diem damnique ſimul ſarciendi Sociis Braſilienſibus conſtituere: quorum dilationibus effectum eſt ut datum inde mercatori damnum mercedem ipſam jam pene ſuperet. Vita. Libris duobus.

PRÆFATIO.

QUanquam Philoſophorum multi, ſuopte ingenio freti, contempſiſſe artem Logicam dicuntur, eorum tamen qui vel ſibi, vel aliis propter ingenium aut judicium natura minus acre ac perſpicax utiliſſimam eſſe ſibique diligenter excolendam judicarunt, optime eſt de ea meritus, ut ego quidem cum Sidneio noſtro ſentio, Petrus Ramus. Cæteri fere Phyſica, Ethica, Theologica Logicis, effrænata quadam licentia, confundunt. Sed noſter dum brevitatem ſectatus eſt nimis religioſe, non plane luci, ſed ubertati tamen lucis, quæ in tradenda arte, non parca, ſed plena & copioſa eſſe debet, videtur defuiſſe: id quod tot in eum ſcripta commentaria teſtantur. Satius itaque ſum arbitratus, quæ ad præcepta artis plenius intelligenda, ex ipſius Rami ſcholiis Dialecticis aliorumque commentariis neceſſario petenda ſunt, ea in ipſum corpus artis, niſi ſicubi diſſentio, transferre atque intexere. Quid enim brevitate conſequimur, ſi lux aliunde eſt petenda? Præſtat una opera, uno ſimul in loco artem longiuſculam cum luce conjungere, quam minore cum luce breviſſimam aliunde illuſtrare; cum hoc non minore negotio multoque minus commode hactenus fiat, quam ſi ars ipſa ut nunc ſuapte copia ſe fuſe explicaverit. Quam artis tradendæ rationem uberiorem ipſe etiam Ramus in Arithmetica & Geometria aliquanto poſt à ſe editis, edoctus jam longiore uſu, ſecutus eſt; ſuaſque ipſe regulas interjecto commentariolo explanavit, non aliis explanandas reliquit. Quorum cum plerique neſcio an nimio commentandi ſtudio elati, certe omnis methodi quod in iis mirum ſit, obliti, omnia permiſceant, poſtrema primis, axiomata Syllogiſmos eorumque regulas primis quibuſque ſimplicium argumentorum capitibus ingerere ſoleant, unde caliginem potius diſcentibus offundi quam lucem ullam præferri neceſſe eſt, id mihi cavendum imprimis duxi ut nequid præriperem, nequid præpoſtere quaſi traditum jam & intellectum, nequid niſi ſuo loco attingerem; nihil veritus, ne cui forte ſtrictior in explicandis præceptis exiſtimer, dum per pendenda magis quam percurrenda proponere ſtudebam. Nec tamen iis facile aſſenſerim, qui paucitatem regularum objiciunt Ramo, quarum permultæ etiam ex Ariſtotele ab aliis collectæ, nedum quæ ab ipſis cumulo ſunt adjectæ, vel incertæ vel futiles, diſcentem impediunt atque onerant potius quam adjuvant: ac ſiquid habent utilitatis aut ſalis, id ejuſmodi eſt, ut ſuopte ingenio quivis facilius percipiat, quam tot canonibus memoriæ mandatis, addiſcat. Multoque minus conſtitui, canones quidvis potius quam Logicos, à Theologis infercire; quos illi, quaſi ſubornatos in ſuum uſum, tanquam è media Logica petitos, depromant de Deo, diviniſque hypoſtaſibus & ſacramentis; quorum ratione, quo modo eſt ab ipſis informata, nihil eſt à Logica, adeoque ab ipſa ratione, alienius.

Prius autem quam opus ipſum aggredior, quoniam ars Logica omnium prima eſt ſuiſque finibus latiſſime patet, præmittam quædam de arte generalia, deque artium diſtributione; artem deinde ipſam perſequar: ad extremum, Analytica quædam exempla, ſive uſum artis, exercitationis cauſa, iis quibus opus eſt, & in eo genere exercere ſe libet, exhibebo: Quibus opus eſt inquam; quibus enim ingenium per ſe viget atque pollet, iis ut in hoc genere Analytico cum labore nimio ac miſeria ſe torqueant, non ſum author. Ad id enim ars adhibetur, ut naturam juvet, non ut impediat: adhibita nimis anxie nimiſque ſubtiliter, & præſertim ubi opus non eſt, ingenium per ſe jam ſatis acutum, obtundit potius quam acuit; ita plane ut in medicina remediorum uſus vel nimius vel non neceſſarius, valetudinem debilitat potius quam roborat. Quod autem Ariſtotelis aliorumque veterum auctoritatem ad ſingulas fere Logicæ regulas adjungimus, id quidem in tradenda arte ſupervacuum fuiſſet, niſi novitatis ſuſpicio, quæ Petro Ramo hactenus potiſſimum obſuit, adductis ipſis veterum authorum teſtimoniis, eſſet amolienda.

Artium omnium quaſi corpus & comprehenſio ἐγκυκλοπαιδεία Græce, i. e. eruditionis circuitus quidam in ſe redeuntis, adeoque in ſe abſolutæ atque perfectæ, vel Philoſophia dicitur. Hæc cum ſapientiæ ſtudium proprie ſignificat, tum vulgo artium omnium vel doctrinam, vel ſcientiam: doctrinam, cum præcepta artium tradit; ſcientiam, cum ars, quæ habitus eſt quidam mentis, præceptis illis percipitur, quaſique poſſidetur. Eodem modo & artis ſignificatio diſtinguitur: cum doctrinam ſignificat, de qua nobis potiſſimum hic eſt agendum, eſt ordinata præceptorum exemplorumque comprehenſio ſive methodus, qua quidvis utile docetur.

Artis materia præcepta ſunt: quæ qualia eſſe debeant, artis Logicæ, quam nunc tradimus, proprium eſt ſuo loco præſcribere.

Forma ſive ipſa ratio artis, non tam eſt præceptorum illorum methodica diſpoſitio, quam utilis alicujus rei præceptio: per id enim quod docet potius, quam per ordinem docendi, ars eſt id quod eſt: quod ex cujuſque artis definitione perſpicitur, ut infra oſtendetur.

Præceptorum artis tria genera ſunt: duo præcipua definitiones & diſtributiones; quarum doctrinam generalem Logica etiam loco idoneo ſibi vendicat; tertium, minus principale, conſectarium nominatur; eſtque proprietatis alicujus explicatio, ex definitione fere deducta.

Exempla ſunt quibus præceptionum veritas demonſtratur, uſuſque oſtenditur: ſuntque, ut ſcite Plato, quaſi obſides ſermonum: quod enim præcepto in genere docetur, id exemplo in ſpecie confirmatur.

Efficiens artis primarius neminem reor dubitare quin ſit Deus, author omnis ſapientiæ: id olim Philoſophos etiam non fugit.

Cauſæ miniſtræ fuerunt homines divinitus edocti, ingenioque præſtantes; qui olim ſingulas artes invenerunt. Inveniendi autem ratio eadem prope fuit quæ pingendi: ut enim in pictura duo ſunt, exemplum ſive archetypus, & ars pingendi, ſic in arte invenienda, archetypo reſpondet natura ſive uſus, & exemplum hominum peritorum, arti pictoris reſpondet Logica, ſaltem naturalis, quæ facultas ipſa rationis in mente hominis eſt; juxta illud vulgo dictum, Ars imitatur naturam.

Ratio autem ſive Logica, primum illa naturalis, deinde artificioſa, quatuor adhibuit ſibi quaſi adjutores, teſte Ariſtot. Metaphyſ. 1. c. 1. ſenſum, obſervationem, inductionem, & experientiam. Cum enim præcepta artium generalia ſint, ea niſi ex ſingularibus, ſingularia niſi ſenſu percipi non poſſunt: ſenſus ſine obſervatione, quæ exempla ſingula memoriæ committat, obſervatio ſine inductione, quæ ſingularia quam plurima inducendo generalem aliquam regulam conſtituat, inductio ſine experientia, quæ ſingulorum omnium convenientiam in commune & quaſi conſenſum judicet, nihil juvat. Hinc recte Polus apud Platonem in Gorgia, experientia artem peperit, imperitia fortunam, i. e. præcepta fortuita, adeoque incerta. Et Ariſtot. Prior. 1. c. 30. cujuſque rei principia tradere, experientiæ eſt: ſic Aſtrologica experientia, illius ſcientiæ principia ſuppeditavit. Et Manilius;

> Per varios uſus artem experientia fecit,
> Exemplo monſtrante viam ——

Et Cicero; omnia quæ ſunt concluſa nunc artibus, diſperſa quondam & diſſipata fuerunt, donec adhibita hæc ars eſt, quæ res diſſolutas divulſaſque conglutinaret & ratione quadam conſtringeret. Ea ars Logica eſt, vel hæc ſaltem naturalis, quam ingenitam habemus, vel illa artificioſa, quam mox tradimus: hæc enim præcepta artis invenit ac docet. Hactenus de efficientibus cauſis artium.

Forma artis, ut ſupra dixi, non tam præceptorum diſpoſitio eſt, quàm præceptio ipſa rei alicujus utilis, eademque eſt finis. Quemadmodum enim non tam præceptorum Logicorum methodica diſpoſitio quam ipſum bene diſſerere, & forma Logicæ & finis eſt, ut infra docebitur, ita in genere non ſolum præceptorum diſpoſitio, ſed ipſa rei utilis præceptio forma artis & ſimul finis eſt: quod autem præcipitur, id eſſe utile in hominum vita debere, quod Græci, βιωφελές vocant, omnes conſentiunt; indignamque eſſe artis nomine, quæ non bonum aliquod ſive utile ad vitam hominum, quod idem quoque honeſtum ſit, ſibi proponat, ad quod omnia præcepta artis referantur; adeoque formam artis eſſe rei alicujus utilis præceptionem, per quam ſcilicet ars eſt id quod eſt, neceſſario ſequitur. Verum ad hunc finem perveniri non poteſt, niſi doctrinam natura commode percipiat, exercitatio confirmet, utræque ſimul doctrina & exercitatio artem quaſi alteram naturam reddant. Sed ingenium ſine arte, quam ars ſine ingenio plus proficere cenſetur: proficere autem non admodum utrumque niſi acceſſerit exercitatio: unde illud Ovidii;

Exercitatio duplex eſt; analyſis & geneſis. Illa eſt, cum exempla artis in ſua principia quaſi reſolvuntur, dum ſingulis partibus ad normam, i. e. ad præcepta artis examinantur: hæc, cum ex artis præſcripto efficimus aliquid aut componimus.

Hactenus cauſæ artium: ſequuntur ſpecies. Artes ſunt generales vel ſpeciales: generales, quarum materia ſubjecta eſt generalis. Materia autem illa vel artificis eſt, vel artis. Artificis materia generalis generalibus cunctis artibus eſt communis; artis autem, ſingularum eſt propria: eſtque artificis quidem generalis materia, omne id quod revera eſt, aut eſſe fingitur; artis, quod in eo omni efficiunt ſingulæ. Id omne vel ratio complectitur, vel oratio: generalium itaque artium materia generalis, vel ratio eſt, vel oratio: verſantur enim in excolenda vel ratione ad bene ratiocinandum, ut Logica; vel oratione, eaque vel ad bene loquendum, ut Grammatica, vel ad dicendum bene, ut Rhetorica. Omnium autem prima ac generaliſſima, Logica eſt; dein Grammatica, tum demum Rhetorica; quatenus rationis uſus ſine oratione etiam magnus, hujus ſine illa poteſt eſſe nullus. Grammaticæ autem ſecundum tribuimus locum, eo quod oratio pura eſſe etiam inornata; ornata eſſe niſi pura ſit prius, facile non queat.

Artes ſpeciales ſunt, quæ materiam habent ſpecialem; nempe naturam fere vel mores: earum enim accuratior diſtributio non eſt hujus loci.

CAPUT I.
Quid ſit Logica?

LOgica eſt ars bene ratiocinandi. Eodémque ſenſu Dialectica ſæpe dicta eſt.

Logica autem, i.e. ars rationalis, ἀ λόγω dicitur: quæ vox Græcè rationem ſignificat; quam excolendam Logica ſibi ſumit.

Ratiocinari autem eſt rationis uti facultate. Additur bene, i. e. rectè, ſcienter, expeditè; ad perfectionem artis ab imperfectione facultatis naturalis diſtinguendam.

Logicam potius, quàm cum P. Ramo Dialecticam, dicendam duxi, quòd eo nomine tota ars rationis aptiſſimè ſignificetur; cùm Dialectica à verbo Græco διαλέγεσθαι, artem potius interrogandi & reſpondendi, i. e. diſputandi ſignificet; ut ex Platonis Cratylo, ex doctrina Peripateticorum & Stoicorum, Fabio, Suida aliiſque docetur. Et tamen Plato in Alcibiade primo idem vult eſſe τὸ διαλέγεσθαι, quod ratione uti. Prior ſignificatio ad rationis uſum nimis anguſta eſt; poſterior, ſi inter authores de ea non convenit, nimis incerta.

Ratiocinandi autem potius dico quàm diſſerendi, propterea quòd ratiocinari, non minus latè quàm ipſa ratio, idem valet propriè quod ratione uti; cùm diſſerere, præterquam quod vox non planè propria, ſed tranſlata ſit, non latius plerumque pateat, quam diſputare.

Addunt nonnulli in definitione ſubjectum Dialecticæ, i. e. de re qualibet: ſed hoc cum Grammatica & Rhetorica commune Dialecticæ fuit, ut in procemio vidimus; non ergo hic repetendum.

CAP. II.
De partibus Logicæ, deque Argumenti Generibus.

RAtiocinatio autem fit omnis, rationibus vel ſolis & per ſe conſideratis, vel inter ſe diſpoſitis; quæ argumenta etiam ſæpius dicta ſunt.

Logicæ itaque partes duæ ſunt; rationum ſive argumentorum inventio, eorumque diſpoſitio.

Secutus veteres Ramus, Ariſtotelem, Ciceronem, Fabium, Dialecticam partitur in inventionem & judicium. Verùm non inventio, quæ nimis lata eſt quocunque modo ſumatur, ſed argumentorum inventio, pars prima Logicæ dicenda eſt: diſpoſitio autem eorum, cur ſit ſecunda, non judicium, ſecundi libri initio reſpondebimus. Sed neque hæc partitio ſuis auctoribus vel iiſdem vel aliis caret: Plato, in phædro, diſpoſitionem inventioni addidit; Ariſtoteles τάξιν; Top. 8. 1. quod idem eſt. Et Cicero, de Orat. fatetur, inventionem & diſpoſitionem, non orationis eſſe, ſed rationis.

Argumentorum itaque inventio Topica Græcè nominatur; quia τόπους continet, i. e. locos unde argumenta ſumuntur, viámque docet & rationem argumenta bene inveniendi, ſuo nimirum ordine collocata; unde vel ad geneſin expromantur, mantur, vel in analyſi explorentur, inventorumque ſimul vim atque uſum exponit.

Argumentum eſt quod ad aliquid arguendum affectum eſt. Id eſt, quod habet affectionem ad arguendum; vel ut Cic. in Top. quod affectum eſt ad id de quo quæritur: id interpretatur Boethius refertur, vel aliqua relatione reſpicit id de quo quæritur.

Iſta affectione ſublatâ, argumentum non eſt; mutatâ, non eſt idem; ſed ipſum quoque mutatur.

Ad arguendum autem, i. e. oſtendendum, explicandum, probandum aliquid. Sic juxta illud tritum, degeneres animos timor arguit, Æneid. 4. & illud Ovidii; Apparet virtus, arguiturque malis. Explicare autem & probare etiam ſimplicis argumenti propria atque primaria vis eſt, unde aliud ex alio ſequi, vel non ſequi, i. e. uno poſito, alterum poni vel non poni primitus judicatur: quod de inductione quidem recte monuit Baconus noſter, de Augment. ſcient. l. 5. c. 4. uno eodémque mentis opere, illud quod quæritur, & inveniri & judicari: ſed hoc de ſingulis argumentis ſimplicibus non minus verum eſt.

Ex quo etiam ſequitur, judicium non eſſe alteram Logicæ partem, ſed quaſi effectum utriuſque partis communem & ex utraque oriundum; Ex ſyllogiſmo in re præſertim dubia clarius quidem at ſecundario tamen contra ac plerique docent.

Aliquid autem, eſt id quodcunque arguitur: quicquid enim eſt, aut eſſe fingitur, ſubjectum eſt Logicæ, ut ſupra demonſtravimus. Argumentum autem propriè neque vox eſt neque res; ſed affectio quædam rei ad arguendum; quæ ratio dici poteſt ut ſupra.

Tractat igitur Logica neque voces, neque res. Voces quidem, quamquam & ſine vocibus poteſt ratiocinari, tamen, quoties opus eſt, diſtinctas & tantùm non ambiguas, non improprias, ab ipſo uſu loquendi videtur jure ſanè poſtulare: res ipſas artib. quaſque ſuis relinquit; arguendi duntaxat inter ſe quam habeant affectionem ſive rationem conſiderat.

Ratio autem dicitur, voce à Mathematicis petita, qua terminorum proportionalium inter ſe certa habitudo ſignificatur.

Argumentum eſt artificiale aut inartificiale. Sic Ariſtot. Rhet. 1. 12. quem Fabius ſequitur, l 5. c. 1. Cicero in inſitum & aſſumptum dividit. Artificiale autem dicitur, non quo inveniatur arte magis quam inartificiale, ſed quòd ex ſeſe arguit, i. e. vi inſita ac propria.

Artificiale eſt primum, vel à primo ortum. Primum, quod eſt ſua originis. Id eſt, affectionem arguendi non modò in ſe habet, ſed etiam à ſe; quod infrà clarius patebit, cùm quid ſit à primo ortum docebitur.

Primum eſt ſimplex aut comparatum.

Simplex, quod ſimpliciter & abſolutè conſideratur. Id eſt, ſimplicem habet affectionem arguendi id quod arguitur, ſine quantitatis aut qualitatis cum eo comparatione.

Simplex eſt conſentaneum aut diſſentaneum,

Nam quæ ſine comparatione conſiderantur, neceſſe eſt vel conſentiant inter ſe, vel diſſentiant.

Conſentaneum eſt quod conſentit cum re quam arguit. Id eſt, ponit, ſive affirmat eſſe rem quam arguit.

Eſtque conſentaneum abſolutè aut modo quodam. Abſolutè, i. e. perfectè; abſolvere enim eſt perficere. Ariſtotelis quoque hæc diſtributio eſt. Quæ autem abſolutè conſentiunt, eorum alterum alterius vi exiſtere intelligitur; & ſic conſentiunt cauſa & effectus. Atque hæ ſunt argumentorum diſtributiones generales ex affectionum differentiis deſumptæ; ſuóque nunc ordine ſingulatim tractandæ: argumentorum autem omnium primum cauſa eſt; id quòd per ſe quivis intelligere poteſt.

CAP. III.

De Efficiente, procreante, & conſervante.

Cauſa eſt, cujus vi res eſt. Vel, ſi ex capite ſuperiore, quod intelligi memoriáque teneri poteſt, repetito eſt opus, cauſa eſt argumentum artificiale, primum, ſimplex, abſolutè conſentaneum, cujus vi, vel facultate, res, i. e. effectum, arguitur eſſe vel exiſtere. Nec male definiatur cauſa quæ dat eſſe rei.

Cujus autem vi vel facultate, i. e. à quo, ex quo, per quod, vel propter quod res eſt, id cauſa eſſe dicitur. Res etiam, idem quod aliquid in definitione argumenti, vox generalis adhibetur, quæ ſignificaret cauſam, ſicut & reliqua argumenta, eſſe rerum omnium quæ vel ſunt, vel finguntur: nam quæ revera ſunt, veras; quæ finguntur, fictas cauſas habent.

Hinc intelligitur cauſam ſine qua non, quæ vulgò dicitur, impropriè cauſam, & quaſi fortuitò, dici: ut cùm amiſſio rei alicujus dicitur cauſa recuperationis; quamvis amiſſio recuperationem neceſſariò præcedat. Neque enim cauſa ſic intelligi debet, id quod & Cicero docuit, l. de Fato, ut quod cuique antecedat, id ei cauſa ſit, ſed quod cuique efficienter antecedat; i. e. ita ut res vi ejus exiſtat. Hinc cauſa propriè dicta, principium quoque nominatur à Cic. 1. de Nat. Deor. ſed frequentiùs apud Græcos.

Cauſa autem eſt cujus vi res non ſolùm eſt, verùm etiam fuit, vel erit. Ut enim præcepta Logica de omni re, ſic omnium præcepta artium de omni tempore intelligenda ſunt; unde & æterna eſſe, veritateſque æternæ dicuntur.

Ex definitione autem cauſæ tertium illud artis præceptum, de quo in præfatione diximus, conſectarium hoc oritur: primus hic locus inventionis, fons eſt omnis ſcientiæ; ſcirique demum creditur cujus cauſa teneatur.

Neque aliud eſt Ariſtotelis decantata illa demonſtratio, quàm qua effectum arguitur, probatur, cognoſcitur, ponitur, ex cauſa poſita; quodcunque illud demum cauſæ genus ſit: ut cùm riſibile probatur ex rationali, quippe, omnis homo eſt riſibilis, quia rationalis: eóque erit clarior demonſtratio, quo cauſa certior, propior, præſtantior.

Cauſa eſt efficiens & materia, aut forma & finis. Cur ſic cauſa dividatur quaſi in duo genera anonyma, infrà in doctrina diſtributionis facilius intelligetur.

Quot autem modis alicujus vi res eſt, tot eſſe ſpecies cauſæ ſtatuendum eſt. Modis autem quatuor alicujus vi res eſt; ut rectè Ariſtot. Phyſ. 2. 7. & nos ſuprà diximus; vel enim à quo, vel ex quo, vel per quod, vel propter quod res unaquæque eſt, ejus vi eſſe rectè dicitur. His modis nec plures inveniuntur, nec pauciores eſſe poſſunt: rectè igitur cauſa diſtribuitur in cauſam à qua, ex qua, per quam, & propter quam, i. e. efficientem & materiam, aut formam, & finem.

Efficiens eſt cauſa, à qua res eſt, vel efficitur. Ab efficiente enim principium movendi eſt; ipſa tamen effecto non ineſt.

Ciceroni omnis cauſa efficiens nominatur: ſic enim in Topicis; primus eſt locus rerum efficientium, quæ cauſæ appellantur: & de Fato; cauſa eſt quæ id efficit, cujus eſt cauſa. Hinc fit ut cauſatum, à cauſis licet omnib. ortum habens, effectum tantummodo vocitetur: unde hoc ſolum intelligitur, efficientem eſſe cauſam præcipuam atque primariam; omnem autem cauſam aliquo modo efficere.

Sic pater & mater procreant; nutrix tuetur. Huc quoque omnium rerum inventores, auctores, conditores, conſervatores referendi ſunt. Procreare igitur & tueri duo ſunt modi quibus idem ſæpe efficiens efficere ſolet: procreando quidem id quod nondum eſt, ut ſit; conſervando autem id quod jam eſt, ut porrò ſit.

CAP. IV.

De Efficiente ſola, & cum aliis.

SEcundò, cauſa efficiens ſola efficit, aut cum aliis. Earúmque omnium ſæpe alia principalis, alia minus principalis, ſive adjuvans & miniſtra. Quam Cicero, in Partit. cauſam conficientem vocat: & cujus, inquit, generis vis varia eſt, & ſæpe aut major aut minor; ut & illa quæ maximam vim habet, ſola ſæpe cauſa dicatur. Hinc, Æneid. 9. Nyſus ab Euryalo ſocio transfert in ſe factæ cædis & culpam & pœnam; quaſi ſolus auctor fuerit, quia fuit præcipuus. Et ſolitaria cauſa cum pleriſque & principalibus & ſociis, pro Marcello, variè adhibetur. Sed hæc duo exempla vide poſt finem in praxi analytica.

Cauſa minus principalis (ut quidam volunt) vel eſt impulſiva, quæ principalem quoquo modo impellit ac movet, vel eſt inſtrumentalis.

Impulſiva duplex eſt Græciſque vocibus receptis, proegumena dicitur, vel procatarctica. Illa intus, hæc extrinſecus movet principalem: & vera ſi eſt, occaſio; ſi ficta, prætextus dicitur.

Sic cauſa proeg. quæ intus movebat infideles ad perſequendum Chriſtianos (exemplis enim receptis hîc utemur) erat eorum ignorantia aut impietas, cauſa procat. erant nocturni conventus, vel potius quævis conventicula Chriſtianorum. Olim interficiendi Chriſti cauſa proeg. erat Judæorum zelus ignarus; procat. objecta ſabbathi violatio concionéſque ſeditioſæ. Notandum autem eſt ubi cauſa proegumena, ſive interna, non eſt, ibi cauſæ procatarcticæ, ſive externæ, vim nullam eſſe.

Ad cauſam autem procatarcticam, ea ſæpe referenda videtur, ſi omnino eſt in cauſis numeranda, quæ ſuprà dicta eſt cauſa ſine qua non; ſiquidem quovis modo cauſam extrinſecus movere principalem dici poteſt.

Inſtrumenta etiam in cauſis adjuvantibus connumerantur. Quo argumento Epicureus, apud Cic. 1. de nat. deor. diſputat mundum nunquam eſſe factum, hoc etiam exemplum ad praxin retulimus. Inſtrumenta autem propriè non agunt, ſed aguntur aut adjuvant. Et qui cauſam adjuvantem nullam niſi inſtrumenta habet, poteſt rectè ſolitaria cauſa dici: quanquam lata admodum inſtrumenti ſignificatio admittitur; ut apud Ariſtot. Polit. 1. 3. inſtrumenta ſunt animata, vel inanimata. Quo ſenſu omnes ferè cauſæ adjuvantes & miniſtræ poſſunt inſtrumentales nominari.

Ad hunc locum referendus commodiſſimè videtur cauſarum ordo, quo alia dicitur prima, idque vel abſolutè, ut Deus, vel in ſuo genere, ut ſol, & ejuſmodi quippiam; alia ſecunda; & ſic deinceps, quæ à prima vel à prioribus pendet, & quaſi effectum eſt. Alia deinde remota dicitur, alia proxima: quò ſpectat illud vulgo dictum; quicquid eſt cauſa cauſa, eſt etiam cauſa cauſati. Quæ regula in cauſis duntaxat neceſſariò inter ſe ordinatis valet. Sed hæ cauſarum diviſiones in Logica non magnopere ſectandæ ſunt; quandoquidem tota vis arguendi in cauſa proxima continetur; déque ea ſola generalis definitio cauſæ intelligitur.

CAP. V.

De Efficiente per ſe, & per accidens.

TErtiò, cauſa efficiens per ſe efficit, aut per accidens. Tertium hoc par modorum efficiendi eſt, ab Ariſtotele etiam & veteribus notatum.

Per ſe efficit cauſa, qua ſua facultate efficit. Id eſt, quæ ab interno principio effectum producit.

Vt qua natura vel conſilio faciunt. Naturalis efficientia eſt elementorum, foſſilium, plantarum, animalium. Conſilii exemplum eſt illa Ciceronis de ſe ad Cæſarem confeſſio: nulla vi coactus, judicio meo ac voluntate, ad ea arma profectus ſum, quæ erant ſumpta contra te.

Naturæ, appetitum; conſilio, artem nonnulli adjungunt. Sed appetitus aut ad naturam, aut ad naturæ vitium; ars ad conſilium ſine incommodo referetur: ars n. & conſilium quatenus aliquid efficiunt, non illa ab intellectu, hoc à voluntate; ſed utrumque ab utroque proficiſci videtur: etenim ars ferè non invita, non proximæ ſaltem invita; & concilium prudens ſcienſque agit. Hi quatuor modi efficiendi per ſe, ad eundem nonnunquam effectum concurrunt: ut cùm quis loquitur, naturâ; hoc vel illud, conſilio ſimul & appetitu; eleganter, arte.

Videtur itaque huc propriè referenda etiam cauſa impulſiva, ſive ea proegumena, ſive procatarctica ſit, de quibus capite ſuperiore diximus; quæ non tam cauſæ ſunt principali ſociæ aut miniſtræ quam modi efficientis, quibus vel affectu aliquo impulſus, vel ex occaſione aliqua oblata, conſilio adductus hoc vel illud agit, ut ex allatis ibi exemplis intelligi poteſt.

Quæ autem naturâ neceſſariò, quæ conſilio libere agunt; neceſſariò agit quæ aliter agere non poteſt, ſed ad unum quidpiam agendum determinatur, idque ſolum ſua propenſione agit quæ neceſſitas naturæ dicitur; ex hypotheſi nimirum. Niſi Deus aliud voluerit, aut externa vis aliorſum impulerit, ut Lapidem ſurſum. Libere agit efficiens non hoc duntaxat ut naturale agens, ſed hoc vel illud pro arbitrio, idque abſolute vel ex hypotheſi. Abſolute ſolus Deus libere agit omnia; id eſt quicquid vult; & agere poteſt vel non agere; Teſtantur hoc paſſim ſacræ literæ: Libere ex hypotheſi, illæ duntaxat cauſæ quæ ratione & conſilio faciunt, ut angeli & homines; ex hypotheſi nimirum divinæ voluntatis, quæ iis libere agendi poteſtatem in principio fecit. Libertas enim poteſtas eſt agendi vel non agendi hoc vel illud. Nempe niſi Deus aliud voluerit, aut vis aliunde ingruat.

Per accidens efficit cauſa, quæ externa facultate efficit. Id eſt, non ſua; cùm principium effecti eſt extra efficientem, externúmque principium interno oppoſitum: ſic n. efficiens non efficit per ſe, ſed per aliud. Hinc vere dicitur, omne effectum cauſa per accidens poteſt reduci ad cauſam per ſe.

Ut in his quæ fiunt coactione, vel fortuna. Duo n. hæc ſunt externa principia internis, naturæ nempe & voluntati ſive conſilio, oppoſita. Sic Ariſtot. Rhet. 2. 20. cùm dixiſſet, homines facere quædam non per ſe, quædam per ſe; ſubjungit, eorum quæ non per ſe, alia per fortunam, alia ex neceſſitate. Sed neceſſitas vox nimis lata eſt, ut ex ſupra dictis de efficiente naturali patebit.

Coactione fit aliquid, cum efficiens vi cogitur ad effectum. Ut cum lapis ſurſum vel recta projicitur qui ſuapte natura deorſum fertur. Hæc neceſſitas coactionis dicitur & cauſis etiam liberis nonnunquam accidere poteſt. Sic neceſſe eſt mercatori in tempeſtate merces ejicere, ſiquidem ſalvus eſſe vult. Hæc itaque neceſſitas mixtas quaſdam actiones produxit, quas facit quis volens nolente animo, quod aiunt.

Fortuna ſive fortuitò fit aliquid, cùm præter ſcopum efficientis accidit. Non enim fortuna, ſed efficiens, quæ per fortunam ſive fortuitò agit, eſt propriè cauſa per accidens rerum fortuitarum: eò quòd earum principium, occulta nimirum illa cauſa quam fortunam dicimus, extra illam efficientem eſt: fortuna autem eſt eventuum eorum principium, etſi occultum, non per accidens tamen, ſed per ſe. Fortuna itaque apud veteres aut nomen ſine re eſſe exiſtimabatur, quo uſi ſunt homines, teſte alicubi Hippocrate, cùm ſecundarias contingentium cauſas ignorarent, aut eſt ipſa latens cauſa: ut Cicero in Top. cùm enim nihil ſine cauſa fiat, hoc ipſum eſt fortuna, eventus obſcura cauſa, quæ latenter efficit. Inter fortunam & caſum hæc volunt intereſſe Ariſtot. Phyſ. 2. 6. & Plutarch. de Placit. & de Fato, ut caſus quàm fortuna latius pateat: fortuna in iis duntaxat qui ratione utuntur; caſus in omnibus tam animantibus quàm inanimatis dominetur: ſed loquendi ferè uſus fortunæ ſub nomine caſum etiam complectitur, quotieſcunque præter ſcopum ſive finem efficientis aliquid accidit. Sic caſu fortuito, ait Tullius, 3. de nat. deor. Pheræo Jaſoni profuit hoſtis, qui gladio vomicam ejus aperuit, quam medici ſanare non poterant.

In hoc genere cauſarum imprudentia connumerari ſolet. Sic etiam Ariſtot. Ethic. 3. 1. videntur non voluntaria eſſe, quæ per vim aut ignorantiam fiunt. Et Ovid. 2. Triſt.

Cur aliquid vidi? cur noxia lumina feci?
Cur imprudenti cognita culpa mihi eſt?
Inſcius Actæon vidit ſine veſte Dianam:
Præda ſuis canibus nec minus ille fuit.
Scilicet in ſuperis etiam fortuna luenda eſt:
Nec veniam, læſo numine, caſus habet.

Durum id eſſe queritur poeta; nam cæteroquì hinc ſumitur plerumque deprecatio; & excuſationi etiam nonnunquam locus hic eſt. Deprecationis exemplum eſt apud Cic. pro Ligario: ignoſce pater: erravit; lapſus eſt: non putavit: Et paulò pòſt; erravi: temerè feci: pœnitet; ad clementiam tuam confugio.

Fortunæ autem nomen, ut ſuprà dictum eſt, ignoratio cauſarum confinxit: cùm enim aliquid præter conſilium ſpémque contigerit, fortuna vulgò dicitur, Unde Cicero, apud Lactantium, Inſtit. 3. 29. ignoratio rerum atque cauſarum fortunæ nomen induxit. Nec inſcite Juvenalis:

Nullum numen abeſt, ſi ſit prudentia: ſed te
Nos facimus, fortuna, deam; cœlóque locamus.

Certè enim & cœlo locanda eſt; ſed, mutato nomine, divina providentia dicenda. Unde Ariſt. Phyſ. 2. 4. ſunt nonnulli quibus fortuna quidem videtur eſſe cauſa, ſed ignota humanæ intelligentia, tanquam divinum quiddam. Et Cic. Acad. 1. providentiam Dei quæ ad homines pertinet, nonnunquam quidem fortunam appellant, quod efficiat multa improviſa nec opinata nobis propter obſcuritatem ignorationémque cauſarum. Sed providentia rerum omnium prima cauſa eſt, ſive notæ ſive ignotæ ſint earum cauſæ ſecundariæ: & providentiæ ſi neceſſitatem adjungas, fatum dici ſolet. Verùm de providentia meliùs Theologia quàm Logica diſceptabit. Hoc tantum obiter; fatum ſive decretum Dei cogere neminem malefacere; & ex hypotheſi divinæ præſcientiæ certa quidem eſſe omnia, non neceſſaria. Non excuſandus itaque Cicero pro Ligario, cùm ait, fatalis quædam calamitas incidiſſe videtur, & improvidas hominum mentes occupaviſſe; ut nemo mirari debeat humana conſilia divina neceſſitate eſſe ſuperata. Multo rectius alibi, datur quidem venia neceſſitati; ſed neceſſitati, quæ inſtituto efficientis repugnat, & voluntati.

CAP. VI.

De Materia.

M*Ateria eſt cauſa ex qua res eſt.* Efficientem ordine naturæ ſequitur materia; & efficientis effectum quoddam eſt; præparat enim efficiens materiam, ut ſit apta ad recipiendam formam. Ut autem efficiens eſt id quod primum movet, ita id materia quod primum movetur, hinc efficiens, agendi; materia, patiendi principium appellatur. Hæc autem definitio materiæ apud omnes eadem ferè occurrit. Eſt cauſa: materiæ enim vi affectum eſt. Illa autem vis particula ex qua ſignificatur: quanquam hæc vulgò non materiæ ſolùm nota eſt, ſed nunc efficientis, ut, ex ictu vulnus: nunc partium, ut, homo conſtat ex anima & corpore; nunc mutationis cujuſvis, ut, ex candido fit niger. Res: nempe quam arguit; effectum ſcilicet materiatum; ut intelligamus materiam etiam eſſe omnium entium & non entium communem; non rerum ſenſibilium & corporearum propriam. Quales autem res ipſæ ſunt, talis materia earum eſſe debet; ſenſibilium ſenſibilis, æternarum æterna; & ita in reliquis. Sic artium materia ſunt præcepta. Eſt, i. e. efficitur & conſtat: unde Cic. 1. Acad. materia ea cauſa eſt, quæ ſe efficienti præbet, ut ex ſeſe non modò effectum fiat, ſed etiam poſtquam effectum eſt, conſtet. Hoc argumento ficto, apud Ovid. 2. Metam. ſolis domus auro, pyropo, ebore, argento componitur. Regia ſolis erat, &c. Sic Cæſar 1. Bell. civil. navium materiam deſcribit: carinæ primum ac ſtatumina ex levi materia fiebant, &c.

Dividitur vulgo materia in primam & ſecundam; ſecunda in proximam & remotam. Verùm hæc diſtributio Phyſica potius eſt. Id enim ſolum Logicus in materia ſpectat, ut res ex ea ſit; & potiſſimum quidem ut proximè ex ea ſit; proxima enim potiſſimum arguit.

C A P. VII.

De Forma.

C*Auſæ primum genus ejuſmodi eſt in efficiente & materia: ſecundum ſequitur in forma & fine.* Quia ſcilicet ordine temporis eſt poſterius. Efficiens enim & materia ſub genere priore continentur, quod in effecto producendo præcedunt; forma & finis ſub poſteriore, quòd efficientem & materiam ſequuntur effectumque ipſum comitantur: poſitis enim efficiente, & materiâ, non continuò ſequuntur forma & finis: efficiens enim etſi materia ſuppetit, forma tamen & fine ſuo nonnunquam fruſtratur; forma & finis ſi adſit, neceſſe eſt efficientem & materiam fuiſſe. Qui autem in uſu obſervatur ordo cauſarum, idem debet in doctrina quoque obſervari. Nec tamen ordo iſte ad conſtituenda cauſarum genera ſatis valet, ſed aliud quiddam quod nomine caret. Unde meritò non ſatis accurata videtur illa cauſarum diſtributio, quæ affertur Ariſtotelis, in cauſas vel effectum præcedentes, ut efficientem & materiam; vel cum effecto ſimul exiſtentes, ut formam & finem: tametſi enim hæc diſtributio ordinem cauſarum ſervat, naturam tamen earum non diſtinguit; immo cauſæ neque convenit, neque propria eſt: non convenit, quia cauſa quælibet, ut cauſa, non præcedit, ſed cum effecto ſimul eſt. Præcedunt autem utcunque efficiens & materia effectum vel naturæ ordine, vel temporis: ſi naturæ, id & cum reliquis cauſis & cum ſubjectis omnibus commune habent; ſi temporis, hoc efficienti & materiæ neque omni commune eſt (quædam enim cum effecto non niſi ſimul ſunt) neque ſolis iis proprium; nam & ſubjecta pleraque adjunctis ſuis tempore priora ſunt. Nec ſœliciùs ab eodem Ariſtotele dividuntur cauſæ in externas, efficientem & finem; & internas, materiam & formam: hæc enim diſtributio etſi uſus ejus aliquis eſſe poteſt, ad leges tamen artis minus accommodata eſt: eſſe enim externum vel internum, non eſt cauſis proprium, ſed effecto etiam & adjuncto commune. Deinde materia & forma cùm intra effectum ſunt, non tam cauſæ quàm partes effecti ſunt: quid? quòd finis, quæ perfectio rei eſt aptitudóque ad uſum, interna potius cauſa diceretur. Poſtremò, hæc diſtributio turbat ordinem cauſarum, methodi proinde legem: efficiens enim eſt principium motus & cauſarum prima; finis, ultima eſt: ſi igitur internum externo præmittitur, materia & forma, quæ efficientis quodammodo effecta ſunt, efficienti præponentur; ſi externum interno, finis efficienti, i. e. ultima primæ, adjungetur; mediis, materiæ nempe & formæ, præmittetur. Cautius itaque Ramus atque arti conveniéntiùs, cauſarum genera anonyma reliquit: quod ut oſtenderemus, longiuſcule cum venia digreſſi, nunc ad alterum genus cauſarum, formam & finem, redeamus. Formæ autem eſt prior locus concedendus, cùm finis nihil aliud ſit quàm fructus quidam formæ.

Forma eſt cauſa per quam res eſt id quod eſt. Hæc definitio Platonicam & Ariſtotelicam conjunxit: ille enim definit formam eſſe cauſam per quam, hic, quod quid eſt eſſe. Ut autem materia, ſic etiam forma effectum quoddam efficientis quidem eſt. Formam enim efficiens & producit nondum exiſtentem, & inducit in materiam: forma autem effecti & cauſa eſt, & præcipua quidem, ſoláque effectum arguit, quòd vi formæ potiſſimum exiſtit. Efficiens enim fruſtrari formâ, forma effecto non poteſt. Per quam itaque particula eam cauſam ſignificat eamque vim, quæ rem ſive effectum informat atque conſtituit. Res enim nulla eſt quæ ſuam non habeat formam, nobis licet incognitam.

Res etiam ſingulæ, ſive individua, quæ vulgò vocant, ſingulas ſibíque proprias formas habent; differunt quippe numero inter ſe, quod nemo non fatetur. Quid autem eſt aliud numero inter ſe, niſi ſingulis formis differre? Numerus enim, ut rectè Scaliger, eſt affectio eſſentiam conſequens. Quæ igitur numero, eſſentiâ quoque differunt; & nequaquam numero, niſi eſſentiâ, differrent. Evigilent hîc Theologi. Quòd ſi quæcunque numero, eſſentiâ quoque differunt, nec tamen materiâ, neceſſe eſt formis inter ſe differant; non autem communibus, ergo propriis. Sic anima rationalis, forma hominis in genere eſt; anima Socratis, forma Socratis propria. Per quam res eſt id quod eſt, i. e. quæ dat proprium eſſe rei. Cùm enim cujuſque ferè rei eſſentia partim ſit communis, partim propria; communem materia conſtituit, forma propriam. Et per alias quidem cauſas eſſe res poteſt dici; per ſolam formam eſſe id quod eſt.

Ideò

Ideóque hinc à cæteris rebus omnib. res diſtinguitur. Id eſt, diſtinctione, quam vocant eſſentiali : ex ſola enim forma eſt differentia eſſentialis. Immo quæcunque inter ſe quovis modo, eadem etiam formis differunt; fónſque omnis differentiæ forma eſt ; nec aliis argumentis inter ſe res, niſi formis primariò diſcreparent. Et hoc quidem conſectarium ex definitione eſt primum, ſequitur alterum.

Forma ſimul cum re ipſa ingeneratur. Hinc illud veriſſimum : poſitâ formâ, res ipſa ponitur; ſublatâ, tollitur. Ad exempla nunc veniamus. Anima rationalis eſt forma hominis, quia per eam homo eſt homo, & diſtinguitur à cæteris omnibus naturis : geometricarum figurarum in triangulis, quadrangulis ſua forma eſt : Phyſicarum, cœli, terræ, arborum, piſcium ſua.

Unde præcipua rerum ut natura eſt, ſic erit explicatio, ſi poſſit inveniri. Tertium hoc conſectarium eſt ex definitione formæ. Unde illud quod de cauſa in communi ſupradictum eſt, nempe fontem eſſe omnis ſcientiæ, formæ potiſſimum convenire intelligitur. Quæ enim cauſa eſſentiam præcipuè conſtituit, eadem ſi nota ſit, ſcientiam quoque potiſſimum facit. Sed formam internam cujuſque rei noſſe, à ſenſibus, ut ferè ſit, remotiſſimam, difficile admodum eſt. In artificioſis autem rebus forma, utpote externa, ſenſibúſque expoſita, facilius occurrit; ut apud Cæſarem de bell. Gall. l. 7. muri autem omnes Gallici hac ferè forma ſunt, &c. Sic forma Virgiliani portus explicatur, Æneid. 1. eſt in ſeceſſu longo locus, &c.

Diſtributio autem formæ nulla vera eſt. Nam quod nonnulli internam vel externam eſſe volunt, ea diſtributio neque ad res omnes, ſed tantùm ad corporeas pertinebit ; & externa non minus eſſentialis cuique rei eſt artificioſæ, quàm interna naturali.

C A P. VIII.

De Fine.

F*Inis eſt cauſa cujus gratia res eſt.* Sic etiam Ariſtoteles, Phil. 1. 3. quarta cauſa eſt cujus & bonum : hoc enim generationis omnis finis eſt. Cùm enim efficiens aſſecutus eſt finem, in eo acquieſcit, actioníque ſuæ finem imponit. Finis itaque eſt cauſarum ultima. Verùm ut rectè Ariſtot. Phyſ. 2. 2. non omne ultimum finalis cauſa eſt, ſed quod eſt optimum : Finis enim vel terminum rei ſignificat, vel bonum rei; ſicut & terminus eſt vel durationis, vel magnitudinis aut figuræ. Finalis autem cauſa non eſt niſi bonum quid; eodemque ſenſu finis & bonum dicitur; verúmne an apparens, ad vim cauſæ nihil intereſt. Sic etiam Ariſtot. Phyſ. 2. 3. idémque in Eth. paſſim : mali etiam evitatio habet rationem boni. Nonnulli tamen inter finem & finalem cauſam ita diſtinguunt, ut finis ſit uſus rei, finalis autem cauſa de uſu cogitatio. Atqui non cogitatio, ſed res, i. e. finis ipſe effecti cauſa finalis vera eſt : nam de materia quoque & de forma prius cogitatur, ſine hac tamen diſtinctione : cogitatur etiam de cauſa impulſiva, eáque movet efficientem, nec tamen finalis cauſa dici poteſt; cùm eam efficiens non appetat, ſed ſæpius averſetur, quoties affectus aut habitus aliquis pravus ad bonum aliquod apparens conſequendum impellit. Idémque finis in animo efficientis primus, in opere atque effecto eſt poſtremus. Dum autem in animo tantum efficientis eſt, & nondum obtinetur, nondum ſanè exiſtit; cùm nondum exiſtit, cauſa eſſe quî poteſt? Cum itaque vulgò dicitur, finis quatenus efficientem quaſi ſuadendo movet ut materiam paret, eíque formam inducat, non modò effecti, verùm etiam cauſarum cauſa earúmque optima eſt, id impropriè & per anticipationem quandam dicitur. In opere autem & uſu licet ſæpe ſit ultimus, aptitudine tamen ad uſum niſi ſimul cum forma & tempore & naturâ eſſe intelligatur, erit poſterior effecto per formam jam conſtituto, & adjunctum potius effecti quàm cauſa. Sic non habitatio, ſed ad habitandum, aptitudo, quæ cum inducta forma ſimul & tempore & naturâ eſt, proprius finis domus eſt ſtatuendus, reíque perfectio & formæ quaſi fructus eſt. Hinc Græci non modò τελέω perficio, à τέλος, i. e. finis deducunt, ſed etiam perfectum τέλειον, à fine vocant, teſte Ariſtotele, Phil. 8. 24.

Vis autem propria qua finalis cauſa aliis ab cauſis diſtinguitur, his verbis, cujus gratia, exprimitur; ut & aliis etiam particulis, nempe cujus cauſa, ad, ob, pro, Propter, quo, quorſum, & ſimilibus. Ne autem eſt nota illius finis, qui in mali alicujus vitatione verſatur. Finis autem dicitur non eorum ſolùm qui finem ſibi proponunt, i. e. efficientium rationalium, ſed eorum quæcunque ad finem referuntur, i. e. quorumvis effectorum. Sic Phyſicis rebus finis homo propoſitus eſt, homini Deus. Quod nec ignoravit Ariſtoteles, Phyſ. 2. 2. rebus, inquit, utimur, quaſi noſtra cauſa eſſent omnia: nam & nos quodammodo finis ſumus. Deum eſſe omnium finem docet ſapiens Hebraus, Proverb. 16. 4. Deus propter ſe fecit omnia. Omnium artium eſt aliquod ſummum bonum & finis extremus; quæ & earum forma eſt: ut Grammaticæ, bene loqui; Rhetoricæ, bene dicere; Logicæ, bene ratiocinari.

Quod autem forma finis quoque eſſe poteſt, teſtatur haud ſemel Ariſtoteles, Phil. 8. 24. & Phyſ. 2. 7, 8. Et Plato in Philebo, eſſentiam ſive formam rei, generationis finem ſtatuit: unde Ariſt. de part. 1. 1. idem.

Ut formæ, ita & finis diſtributio vera nulla eſt: quæ vulgò efferuntur, non ſunt Logici finis diſtributiones, ſed ſpecialium finium pro varietate effectorum diſtinctiones. Diſtinguitur ab Ariſtotele, de Anima, l. 2. 4. finis cujus, & finis cui: finis cujus, eſt finis operæ, ſive operandi; finis cui, eſt finis ipſius operis: e. g. in domo ædificanda; finis cujus, ſive operæ, eſt domus; finis cui, ſive ipſius operis, i. e. domus ædificatæ, eſt aptitudo ad habitationem.

Afferuntur & aliæ diſtributiones finis, quæ ad finem cui pertinent ut ex Ariſtot. Mag. mor. 1. 2. finis alius eſt perfectus, alius imperfectus; vel, quod idem eſt, ex aliis, finis eſt ſummus, aut ſubordinatus. Summus autem eſt, qui propter ſe expetitur: éſtque vel univerſalis, omnib. ſcilicet rebus communis, vel ſpecialis, cuique ſpeciei peculiaris & proprius. Subordinatius autem non tam finis eſt, quàm deſtinatum quiddam ad finem: & eſſe ſummum vel ſubordinatum, eſſe univerſale vel ſpeciale, ad alia æque argumenta pertinet, atque ad finem. Poſtremò, lex diſtributionis jubet partes diſtributionis eſſe oppoſitas: at inter ſummum & ſubordinatum oppoſitio nulla eſt. Ad omnes igitur omnium rerum fines intelligendos, unica finis definitio ſatis eſt; ut id ſit cujus gratia res eſt: utrum autem ſit ſummus an ſubordinatus, univerſalis an ſpecialis, id Logica non ſpectat, ſed inferioribus quibuſvis diſciplinis relinquit.

CAP. IX.

De Effecto.

E*ffectum eſt, quod è cauſis exiſtit.* Effectum cùm ſit vi omnium cauſarum, à cauſa tamen principe, ſcilicet efficiente, effectum denominatur. Sed quoniam, ſi propriè loquimur, effectum ab efficiente ſolo efficitur, omnium autem cauſarum vi eſt, idcirco non definitur ex denominatione quòd à cauſis efficitur, ſed ex re potius, i. e. ex communi cauſarum vi, quod è cauſis eſt vel exiſtit. Jam illud hîc monendum eſt, ex cap. 2. quod in cauſa explicanda monuimus, effectum eſſe argumentum abſolute cum cauſa ſive cauſæ conſentaneum, i. e. cauſam abſolutè arguere; ita ut quemadmodum poſita cauſa, ponitur effectum; ſic poſito effecto, ponatur cauſa: ut enim cauſæ dant eſſe effecto, ita effectum eſſe ſuum habet à cauſis, i. e. ab efficiente, ex materia, per formam, propter finem exiſtit. Effectum igitur cauſas arguit, & ab iis viciſſim arguitur; ſed non pari ratione: effectum enim arguit cauſam eſſe aut fuiſſe, Gracis ὅτι; cauſa autem, quare ſit effectum demonſtrat, Gracis διότι. Cauſæ ſunt priores & notiores effectum, ut poſterius, ita minus arguit. Sic argentum materia poculi, magis arguit & manifeſtum reddit naturam poculi, quàm poculum argenti. Interdum autem effecta, non per ſe quidem, ſed nobis notiora, clarius cauſas arguunt, quàm arguuntur à cauſis. Sic etiam Ariſtoteles, Poſt. 1. 10. nihil prohibet eorum qua ſe reciprocè arguunt, ut cauſa & effectum, id notius nonnunquam eſſe quod non eſt cauſa.

Sive igitur gignatur, ſive corrumpatur, ſive modo quolibet, moveatur quidlibet, hic motus & res motu facta effectum dicitur. Ut cauſarum modi quidem fuere, ita nunc effectorum quidam his verbis oſtenduntur. Modi effectorum generales ſunt, vel ſpeciales. Generales ſunt vel motus quilibet, quæ operatio & actio dicitur; vel res motu factæ, quæ ſunt opera. Modi ſpeciales, ſive exempla ſpecialia, ſunt generatio, corruptio & ſimilia à Phyſicis petita. Cauſa enim corrumpens eſt cauſa procreans corruptionis. Notandum autem eſt hîc rem quamlibet, non motam, ſed motu factam, Effectum dici; nulla enim res corrupta corrumpenti contraria eſt.

Hujus loci ſunt laudes & vituperationes, quarum pleni ſunt libri ſacri & prophani. A factis enim quiſque potiſſimum laudatur & vituperatur.

Huc etiam dicta ſcriptaque referenda ſunt; conſilia item & deliberationes, etiamſi ad exitum perductæ non fuerint. Neque enim facta ſolùm, ſed etiam conſulta & cogitata pro effectis habenda ſunt.

Sunt etiam effecta virtutum & vitiorum. Horatius hoc modò ebrietatis effecta deſcribit:

Quid non ebrietas deſignat? operta recludit, &c.

Volunt hîc plerique Rami interpretes motûs doctrinam, utpote rei generalis, ad Logicam pertinere; ſed non rectè. Quid enim poteſt Logica docere de motu, quod naturale & phyſicum non ſit. Scientias, inquiunt, ex Ariſtot. Phyſ. 8. 3. & opiniones, motu uti omnes. Utuntur quidem, ſed ex natura, quam Phyſica docet, petito. Sic Logica ratione utitur, nec tamen rationis naturam, ſed ratiocinandi artem docet. Omnis quidem cauſa movet, effectum movetur; nec tamen quid moveat aut moveatur, ſed quid arguat aut arguatur Logicus conſiderat. Ipſum etiam arguere & argui non quatenus motus eſt, aut res motu facta, ſed quatenus relatione quadam arguendi vel facultatem ratiocinandi juvat vel artem tradit, ad Logicam pertinet.

Duos hîc canones cauſæ effecti communes, quamvis in Phyſica potiùs quàm in Logica tractandos, ut multa alia quæ Ariſtotelici congerere huc ſolent, tamen quia ſæpe occurrunt & fallaces ſunt, appendiculæ in modum libet cum ſuis cautionibus hîc attingere. Primus eſt, qualis cauſa, tale cauſatum: ex Ariſtot. 2 Top. c. 9. Quod verum non eſt primò in cauſis per accidens: ut, hic ſutor eſt vir bonus; at non ergo bonos conſuit calceos; poteſt enim eſſe ſutor non bonus. Secundò, non in cauſis univerſalibus: ut, ſol omnia calefacit; at non idcirco ipſe eſt calidus. Tertiò, non in cauſis voluntariis, niſi velint. Quartò, ſi res in qua effectum eſt producendum, id per naturam ſuam recipere non poteſt.

Canon ſecundus eſt, propter quod unumquodque eſt tale, illud eſt magis tale: Ariſtot. 1 Poſt. c. 2. Scilicet primò rurſus in cauſis per ſe: ut, hic eſt ebrius; non ergo vinum magis ebrium. Secundò, ſi id à quo tales denominantur utrique inſit: ut, cera fit mollis à ſole; non ergo ſol eſt mollior. Tertiò, ſi cauſa illa recipiat magis & minus: non ergo ſi filius eſt homo propter patrem, pater propterea magis homo. Sed canon hic valet præcipuè in cauſis finalibus: ut, hic ſtudiis dat operam propter quæſtum; quæſtui igitur ſtudet magis.

CAP. X.

De Subjecto.

A*Rgumentum modo quodam conſentaneum ſuccedit, ut ſubjectum & adjunctum.* Abſoluta enim conſenſio cauſæ & effecti hanc modo quodam conſenſionem ſubjecti & adjuncti meritò præceſſit. Modo quodam conſentire cum re quam arguunt dicuntur, quæ leviter & extrinſecus tantum conſentiunt, i. e. citra rationem eſſentiæ; cùm non ut cauſa effecto, ita ſubjectum det eſſe adjuncto; neque hoc ab illo eſſentiam accipiat. De ſubjecto prius eſt agendum: etenim ſubjectum omne ſuis adjunctis naturâ prius eſt, & quodammodo ſe habet ad adjunctum, ut cauſa ad effectum.

Subjectum eſt, cui aliquid adjungitur. Hoc argumentum Cicero rem ſubjectam appellat, quia nimirum alicui ſubjicitur; ſubjici autem id dicitur, cui, cùm ex cauſis conſtitutum jam eſt, aliquid tanquam additamentum quoddam præter cauſas adjungitur: adjungitur itaque aliquid, quod alteri, nempe ſubjecto, perfecto jam ſuiſque cauſis conſtituto, extrinſecus ſive præter eſſentiam accedit. Subjectum ergo eſt quod ad aliquid arguendum eſt affectum, quod ſibi præter illam eſſentiam, quam è cauſis habet, inſuper accedit.

Ut cauſa, ita & ſubjectum ſuos quoſdam habet modos: ſubjici enim aliquid dicitur vel recipiendo adjuncta vel occupando. Unde ſubjectum diſtingui poteſt in recipiens, quod Græce δεκτικὸν appellant, & occupans quod objectum dici ſolet, quia in eo adjuncta occupantur. Recipiens vel in ſe recipit adjuncta, vel ad ſe: recipiens in ſe adjuncta, vel ſuſtinet ea & quaſi ſuſtentat, quæ idcirco inſita & inhærentia appellantur, vel continet, ut locus locatum.

Primus ergo modus eſt cùm ſubjectum recipit adjuncta inſita ſive inhærentia. Sic anima eſt ſubjectum ſcientiæ, ignorantiæ, virtutis, vitii; quia hæc animæ adjunguntur, i. e. præter eſſentiam accedunt: corpus ſanitatis, morbi, roboris, infirmitatis, pulchritudinis, deformitatis; quia corpori quidem inſunt, ſed præter eſſentiam.

Secundus modus eſt ſubjecti adjuncta in ſe continentis, i. e. loci. Sic locus eſt ſubjectum rei locatæ, ſive in quo res locata continetur. Sic Philoſophi divinis entibus, licet parte & magnitudine carentibus, attribuunt locum. Sic Geometræ locum locíque differentias in rebus Geometricis. Phyſici multo etiam diligentius in rebus Phyſicis conſiderant, in mundo, in elementis ſimplicibus, in rebus compoſitis. Hinc nonnulli Dialectici ſuæ artis amplificandæ ſtudio, ut motûs, ita loci doctrinam in Logica tractandam eſſe contendunt. Verùm cùm locus externa ſit affectio cujuſvis naturæ ſive corporeæ ſive incorporeæ, minor quid illis, Rami præſertim diſcipulis, in mentem venerit, ut cùm argumenta, i. e. non res, ſed rationes ſubjectum eſſe Logicæ doceant; res tamen aut rerum naturalium affectiones, motum, locum, tempus in Logica tractandas eſſe ſtatuerent. Locus inquiunt omnium omninò rerum communis eſt: ergo, inquam, ad artem aliquam non corporum duntaxat, ſed rerum naturalium omnium ſive Phyſicam, univerſalem, non ad Logicam pertinet: quæ non quid ſit Locus, ſpatiumne an ſuperficies corporis ambientis, ſed quomodo arguat rem locatam, id ſolùm conſiderat; nempe ut ſubjectum arguit adjunctum.

Tertius modus eſt ſubjecti ad vel circa ſe recipientis adjuncta: quæ idcirco adjacentia & circumſtantia appellantur. Sic homo eſt ſubjectum divitiarum, paupertatis, honoris, infamiæ, veſtitus, comitatus, & eorum ferè quæ dicuntur antecedentia, concomitantia, conſequentia, ſi quam omninò affectionem inter ſe habent non neceſſariam; quæ cauſarum & effectorum quæque ab his orta ſunt argumentorum affectio duntaxat eſſe ſolet. Hactenus de ſubjecto recipiente.

Quartus modus eſt ſubjecti occupantis, in quo nimirum adjunctum occupatur & exercetur: atque hoc propriè objectum dicitur. Sic ſenſilia ſenſuum, & res virtutibus ac vitiis propoſitæ, ſubjecta vitiorum & virtutum hoc modo nominantur. Color eſt ſubjectum viſus, ſonus ſubjectum auditus; quia hi ſenſus in his ſenſilibus occupantur & exercentur. Virtutes & vitia declarantur in Ethicis hoc argumento: temperantia & intemperantia, voluptate; fortitudo & ignavia, periculis; liberalitas & avaritia divitiis. Sic res numerabilis Arithmeticæ; menſurabilis, ut ita dicam, Geometriæ ſubjicitur. Ejuſmodi ſubjecto Cicero 1 Agrar. diſputat, inter Campanos nullam contentionem eſſe, quia nullus ſit honor: Non gloria cupiditate, ait, efferrebantur, propterea quòd ubi honos publicè non eſt, ibi cupiditas gloriæ eſſe non poteſt, &c.

CAP. XI.

De Adjuncto.

ADjunctum eſt cui aliquid ſubjicitur, vel quod affectum eſt ad arguendum ſubjectum. Doctrina adjuncti doctrinæ ſubjecti per omnia reſpondet. Cicero hoc argumentum adjunctum & conjunctum vocat. Ab Ariſtotele, Accidens vocatur, nec male. Quicquid enim ulli ſubjecto extrinſecus accidit, ſive fortuito ſive non, adjunctum ejus eſt. Animi, corporíſque & totius hominis bona & mala, quæ dicuntur, adjuncta ſunt animi, corporis, hominis.

Cùm igitur adjunctum ſubjecto præter eſſentiam accedat, non mutatur ejus acceſſione vel deceſſione eſſentia ſubjecti, neque aliud inde fit ſubjectum, ſed alio duntaxat modo ſe habet. Unde & modi, qui dicuntur, in adjunctis numerandi ſunt. Sic in cauſis procreare & tueri, modi, ut ſuprà dictum eſt, ſive adjuncta quædam vel efficientis vel efficiendi ſunt.

Hoc argumentum etſi ſubjecto eſt levius, attamen eſt copioſius & frequentius. Subjecto ſuo levius eſt, quia ſubjectum prius eſt, & adjuncti ſui quodammodo cauſa: Id quod de adjunctis non quibuſvis verum eſſe docebimur. Hinc Ariſtot. Phil. S. 1. adjunctum ſubjecto eſt poſterius ratione, tempore, cognitione & natura: quod etiam de omni adjuncto ita duntaxat verum eſt, ſi de tempore excipias. Exiſtentiam enim Adjuncti non ſpectat Logica, ſed mutuam quam cum ſubjecto habet affectionem quæ utrobique ſimul eſt; ita ut Subjectum Adjuncto non magis ſit tempore prius quam Adjunctum Subjuncto; ſublato igitur ſubjecto, tollitur adjunctum, ut, mortuus non eſt; ergo nec miſer eſt. Hinc ſtrepitur in ſcholis, ab eſt ſecundi adjecti, ad eſt tertii adjecti, valet conſequentia negando. Et poſito adjuncto, ponitur neceſſario ſubjectum; ut, ſi mortuus eſt miſer, certè neceſſario mortuus eſt. Quod & ſcholæ ſic balbutiunt; ab eſt tertii adjecti, ad eſt ſecundi, valet conſequentia affirmando. Eſt autem adjunctum ſubjecto copioſius & frequentius, quia unius ejuſdémque ſubjecti plurima adjuncta eſſe poſſunt. Itaque quod de ejuſmodi ſignis ait Ovid. 2. de Remed.

Forſitan hæc aliquis (nam ſunt quoque) parva vocabit;
Sed quæ non proſunt ſingula, multa juvant.

Huc itaque referuntur ſigna, quæ ad effecta potius referenda ſunt; vímque arguendi perinde habent ut eorum cauſæ certæ ſunt & cognitæ. Sic tumor uteri ſignum eſt gravidæ; incertum tamen, quia cauſæ tumoris illius aliæ eſſe poſſunt: lac mammarum multo certius, quia cauſa certior & notior. Ejuſdem generis ſunt ſigna phyſiognomonica, prognoſtica Aſtrologorum & Medicorum. Itaque ut cauſæ & effecta ſcientiam, ſic ſubjecta & adjuncta conjecturam ferè pariunt. Hoc genere argumenti Fannium Chaream Cicero pro Roſcio Comœdo cavillatur; & ab adjuncta corporis habitudine, ſigna malitiæ colligit: nonne ipſum caput & ſupercilia illa penitus abraſa olere malitiam, & clamitare calliditatem videntur? nonne ab imis unguibus uſque ad verticem ſummum (ſi quam conjecturam affert homini tacita corporis figura) ex fraude, fallaciis, mendaciis conſtare totus videtur? Sic Martial. l. 2. Zoilum ludit:

Rem magnam præſtas, Zoile, ſi bonus es.

Subjectorum porro modis, adjunctorum reſpondent modi. Quemadmodum igitur ſubjectum erat recipiens vel occupans, ita adjunctum eſt receptum vel occupatum. Receptum vel in ſubjectum recipitur, vel ad ſubjectum: quod in ſubjectum recipitur, vel ſuſtinetur ab eo, vel in eo continetur aut collocatur: quod ſuſtinetur, eſt adjunctum inſitum, ſive inhærens.

Primus ergo modus eſt adjunctorum inhærentium ſive inſitorum. Omninóque qualitates (qualitas autem eſt qua res qualis dicitur) ſubjectis præter cauſas, i. e. formas externas (quæ etiam in qualitatibus numerantur) adjunctæ; ſive propriæ ſint, quæ omni ſolíque ſubjecto ſemper conveniunt, ut homini riſus, equo hinnitus, cani latratus; ſive communes, quæcunque non ſunt eo modo propriæ. Propria autem quatuor modis vulgò dicuntur: ſoli, ſed non omni; ut homini proprium eſt Mathematicum eſſe, ſed non omni: omni, ſed non ſoli; ut bipedem eſſe homini: omni & ſoli, ſed non ſemper; ut homini caneſcere in ſenectute: omni, ſoli, & ſemper; ut riſibilem eſſe homini: hoc demum verè proprium eſt & reciprocum; ita ut omnis homo ſit riſibilis, & omne riſibile, proprie dictum, ſit homo. Adjunctum itaque proprium etſi naturâ eſt poſterius ſubjecto, adeoque levius, tempore tamen ſimul eſt, nobíſque ferè notius; poſitóque adjuncto proprio, ponitur ſubjectum, & contrà: ſubjectum enim adjuncto proprie eſt modo quodam eſſentiale, adjunctumque à forma ſubjecti fluit: habet igitur à forma ſubjecti, non ab natura ſua, quòd ſubjectum ponit & tollit.

Communis etiam qualitas eſt ſeparabilis vel inſeparabilis: ut aquæ frigus, qualitas eſt ſeparabilis; humiditas verò inſeparabilis; utraque autem communis. Atque iſtæ qualitatum diſtinctiones, communium & propriarum, ſeparabilium & inſeparabilium, ad judicium faciendum valde ſunt utiles, ut ſecundo libro facile perſpiciemus. Ad hunc modum refertur etiam quantitas, quâ res magnæ vel parvæ, multæ vel paucæ dicuntur; & paſſio, quâ res aliquid pati dicitur; adeóque motus, ad rem motam ſi referatur, hujus loci eſt. Hactenus de adjuncto quod in ſubjecto ſuſtinetur.

Secundus modus eſt adjunctorum quæ continentur in ſubjecto, ut locatum in loco: atque huc etiam ſitus locorum refertur; niſi ſi cui ad primum potius dum referendus videatur; cùm ſitus paſſio ſit quædam rei locatæ, & ad priorem modum ſic pertineat. Atque hæc de adjunctis quæ in ſubjectum recipiuntur.

Tertius modus eſt adjunctorum quæ recipiuntur ad ſubjectum; quæ vulgò circumſtantiæ nuncupantur, quia extra ſubjectum ſunt. Huc tempus refertur, duratio nempe rerum præterita, præſens, futura. Sic etiam Deus dicitur qui eſt, qui erat, & qui futurus eſt, Apocal. 1. 8. & 4. 8. Deo tamen ævum ſive æternitas, non tempus attribui ſolet: quid autem eſt ævum proprie, niſi duratio perpetua, Græcè αἰὼν, quaſi ἀεὶ ὢν ſemper exiſtens. Sed quod ſuperioribus capitibus de motu & loco, idem nunc de tempore monendum eſt; non pertinere ad Logicam quid ſit tempus philoſophari, ſed quo in genere argumenti ponendum ſit, hîc nempe in adjunctis. Huc etiam referuntur divitiæ, paupertas, honor, infamia, veſtitus, comitatus, & ejuſmodi quicquid adeſſe, adjacere, circumſtare, aut citra vim cauſæ antecedere, concomitari, ſequi, ut ſuprà in ſubjecto diximus, dici poteſt, vel, ut Cic. in Top. Quicquid ante rem, cum re, poſt rem, dummodo non neceſſariò, evenit.

Quo circumſtantiæ genere, Dido venatum proficiſcens, magnifice 4. Æneid. depingitur:

Oceanum interea ſurgens aurora reliquit.
It portis, jubare exorto, delecta juventus:
Retia rara, plagæ, lato venabula ferro, &c.

In hoc exemplo Dido eſt ſubjectum: cujus adjuncta adjacentia ſive circumſtantiæ variæ hîc enumerantur: 1. Tempus, oceanum interea, &c. 2. Comitatus, nimirum delecta juventus, equites, principes Pœnorum. 3. Inſtrumenta (quæ quatenus ad habentem referuntur) adjuncta; & hujus quidem modi ſunt, retia, plagæ, venabula, canes, ſonipes. 4. Habitus ſive veſtitus, Sidonia chlamys, purpurea veſtis, &c. Atque hæc de adjuncto recepto.

Quartus modus eſt adjuncti occupati. Et enim adjunctorum ad ſubjecta, quibus occupantur, uſus item magnus.

Hoc argumento Plato miſeras civitates auguratur, quæ medicorum & judicum multitudine indigeant, quia multam quoque & intemperantiam & injuſtitiam in ea civitate verſari neceſſe ſit. Quia nempe in effectis intemperantiæ ſanandis, medici; in effectis injuſtitiæ vindicandis, judices tanquam adjuncti occupati in ſubjecto ſuo occupante verſantur.

Ad explicandum conſentaneorum in comparationibus uſum hæc clauſula adjecta eſt. Námque ut conſenſionis omnis duorum in uno tertio, ita & unitatis modi hinc ſunt petendi. Quot autem modis plura dicuntur inter ſe conſentire, tot etiam modis dicuntur unum & idem: abſolute ſcilicet aut modo quodam: abſolute unum vel idem cauſâ & effecto; modo quodam unum & idem ſubjecto & adjuncto. Cauſa vel efficiente vel materia vel forma vel fine. Sic plures ſtatuæ, efficiente ſunt eædem, ſi ejuſdem artificis: materia, ſi ex eadem, auro ſcilicet aut ebore; forma ſi effigies ejuſdem, Alexandri puta vel Cæſaris; fine, ſi ad eundem ornandum. Sic ſubjecto idem ſunt adjuncta duo vel plura in eodem ſubjecto; adjuncto idem ſunt plura ſubjecta quibus idem adjungitur: ut duæ vel plures res albæ vel nigræ, albedine vel nigredine idem ſunt.

CAP. XII.

De Diverſis.

A*Rgumentum conſentaneum expoſitum eſt* in cauſa & effecto, ſubjecto & adjuncto.

Altera ſpecies argumenti artificialis, primi, ſimplicis, diſſentaneum, ſequitur. Et ſequi debet: ut enim affirmatio negatione, ſic conſenſio prior eſt diſſenſione; prior autem non natura ſolum, verùm etiam uſu & dignitate. Ab affirmatione enim & conſenſione, ut ſcientia omnis, ita ars omnis atque doctrina deducitur.

Diſſentaneum eſt quod diſſentit à re quam arguit. Ab altero nempe ſui generis ac nominis diſſentaneo. Nam in hoc genere argumentorum, argumenta inter ſe affecta eodem nomine, ideóque plurali numero enunciantur, eadémque definitione & doctrina explicantur.

Hæ duæ ſunt proprietates diſſentaneorum communes. Primum n. in conſentaneis cauſæ effectis, ſubjecta adjunctis, priora, notiora, firmiora, præſtantiora fuerunt : in diſſentaneis alterum altero neque prius neque notius ; ſed natura ſimul, in illa nempe diſſenſione, & æquè nota, æquè firma inter ſe ſunt : id quod neceſſe eſt cùm eodem nomine ac definitione tractentur.

Secunda quoque proprietas, quam Ariſtoteles contrariis alligat, diſſentaneorum eſt omnium communis ; nempe ſua diſſenſione clarius eluceſcere. Quod niſi fieret, argumentum diſſentaneorum nullius uſus eſſet. Debet enim omne argumentum affectum eſſe ad aliquid arguendum & illuſtrandum. Quorum autem hæc eſt proprietas ut æquè nota & ignota ſint, eorum alterum ab altero argui aut illuſtrari non poteſt. Priori igitur proprietati ſecunda hæc ſubvenit: quamvis enim diſſentanea ſint inter ſe æquè manifeſta, ita ut unum ab altero tanquam notiori argui non queat, ex diſſenſione tamen ſua, ſive, ut alii loquuntur, juxta ſe poſita, clarius eluceſcunt. Sic bonæ valetudinis commoda adverſæ valetudinis incommodis manifeſtiora fiunt ; virtutum laudes contrariorum vituperatione vitiorum illuſtrantur.

Utiles itaque ſunt hi loci diſſentaneorum, teſte etiam Ariſtotele, Top. 3, 4. non ſolùm ad arguendum & illuſtrandum, verùm etiam ad impellendum ac refutandum : ut enim conſentaneorum loci valent maximè ad arguendum, probandum & confirmandum, ſic loci diſſentaneorum ad redarguendum, impellendum & refutandum : ut qui conſentaneo argumento doceri non vult, diſſentanei abſurda conſecutione eò redigatur, ut nolens etiam non poſſit veritati non aſſentiri. Hinc Ariſtot. Rhet. 3. 17. refutantia demonſtrativis anteponit.

Diverſa ſunt diſſentanea, quæ ſola ratione diſſentiunt. Nomen hoc videtur aptiſſimum ad hanc leviſſimam diſſenſionem ſignificandam : hac enim voce ea ſignificantur quæ cùm conſenſionem quandam inter ſe habere videantur, poſſintque per ſe ſuáque natura eidem ſubjecto ſimul convenire, tamen nec idem ſunt, nec ei ſubjecto competunt cujus ratione diſſentire dicuntur : quæ autem diſſentiunt in eodem tertio, diſſentiunt etiam inter ſe.

Sola igitur ratione diſſentiunt, quia non per ſe ſuáque natura diſſentiunt, ſed ſolummodo ratione attributionis, i. e. ratione ac reſpectu alicujus ſubjecti, cui ſimul non attribuuntur. Diſtributio itaque diſſentaneorum pro ratione diſſenſionis rectè inſtituta eſt : nam ut conſenſio alia arctior eſt & abſoluta, alia remiſſior & imperfecta ( unde conſentanea diviſa ſunt in ea quæ abſolutè vel modo quodam conſentiunt ) ita diſſenſio omnis vel remiſſior eſt, ut in diſtinctione ſive diſcretione diverſorum, vel acrior, ut in disjunctione oppoſitorum : ergo diſſentanea aut ratione & modo quodam diſſentiunt, ut diverſa, aut re & abſolute, ut oppoſita. Verùm quod de conſentaneis etiam objici potuit, ſpeciebus æque communicandum eſt genus ( has enim voces etiam communi uſu citra artem vulgò intellectus, pace methodi nonnunquam anticipare fas ſit ) reſpondetur, quemadmodum conſentanea abſolute & modo quodam erant æque conſentanea, ſed non æque conſentiebant ; ſic diverſa & oppoſita æque diſſentanea ſunt, ſed non æque diſſentiunt ; in diverſis tam eſt diſſenſio quàm in oppoſitis, ſed non tanta : ut in re ſimili Cic. de Fin. 4. æque contingit omnib. fidibus, ut incontenta ſint ; illud non continuò, ut æquè incontenta. Diverſa autem idcirco priore loco tractantur, quòd propter leviſſimam diſſenſionem videntur affinitatem quandam cum conſentaneis præ ſe ferre. Quanquam autem diverſorum doctrina ab omnibus præter Ramum Logicis omiſſa eſt, conſtat tamen locum in argumentorum doctrina diverſis etiam aſſignandum, cùm ex arguendi varia affectione argumenta diſtinguenda ſint, affectio autem diſſenſionis in diverſis, ut diximus, levior ſit, in oppoſitis acrior. Cur diverſa Logici hactenus omiſerint, videtur hoc eſſe ; quod ad unum ſyllogiſmum omnia referunt, in quo diverſa locum non habent, ut l. 2. oſtendetur.

Diverſorum autem notæ ſunt frequentiſſimè non hoc, ſed illud, quanquam, tamen: ut pro Pompeio; non victoriam, ſed inſignia victoria reportarunt. Victoria & victoriæ inſignia res admodum affines ſunt; poſſúntque ac debent eidem duci competere: ad Syllam autem & Muranam ſi ſpectas, qui non reportata victoria triumpharunt, diſſentanea ſunt, & diſtinguuntur, alteróque affirmato alterum negatur. Sic Ovid. 2. de Arte:

Et Virg. Æneid. 2.

Hic Priamus quanquam in media jam morte tenetur,
Non tamen abſtinuit.

Ut victoria & victoriæ inſignia reſpectu Syllæ & Muranæ, ſic formoſum & facundum reſpectu Ulyſſis, in media morte teneri non & abſtinere à convitiis ratione Priami, diverſa adeóque diſſentanea ſunt. Paulo ſecus in Eunucho:

Nam ſi ego digna hac contumelia
Sum maxime: at tu indignus qui faceres tamen.

Sed idem eſt ac ſi dictum eſſet, quanquam ego digna; tamen tu indignus qui mihi hanc contumeliam faceres. Dignam ſe quidem eſſe contumelia Thais affirmat; à Chærea tamen negat. Cic. 5. Tuſc. Quanquam ſenſu corporis judicantur, ad animum tamen referuntur. Hoc affirmato, negatum intelligitur non ad corpus.

Item illa aliuſmodi. Pro Ligario: ſcelus tu illud vocas, Tubero? cur? iſto n. nomine illa adhuc cauſa caruit: alii enim errorem appellant, alii timorem; qui durius, ſpem, cupiditatem, odium, pertinaciam; qui graviſſimè, temeritatem: ſcelus præter te adhuc nemo. In hoc genere exemplorum aliquid conceditur, ut aliud vicinum poſſit negari: cujuſmodi & illud eſt; veritas premi poteſt, opprimi non poteſt; & ſimilia.

Atque hi modi quidam diverſorum ſunt: in quibus plerunque accidit, ut quæ ſua natura ſunt oppoſita, ratione tamen certi alicujus ſubjecti ſint tantùm diverſa; ut in exemplo ſuperiore error, timor, ſpes, cupiditas, pertinacia, ſcelus. Sic aurum, argentum, æs oppoſita ſunt, ut infrà liquebit: ratione tamen attributionis huic vel illi ſubjecto, qui unum vel aliqua horum habet, alterum vel reliqua non habet, cùm habere ſimul poſſit, diverſa ſunt.

CAP. XIII.

De Diſparatis.

OPpoſita ſunt diſſentanea, qua ratione & re diſſentiunt. Oppoſita reſpondent nomine quidem iis, qua ab Ariſtotele ἀντικείμενα dicuntur; ſed re & ſignificatione latius patent: nam ἀντικείμενα Ariſtoteli (qui diſparata non attigit) nihil aliud quàm contraria ſunt. Poſſunt etiam repugnantia dici; ſiquidem repugnare ea dicuntur, quæ ejuſmodi ſunt, ut cohærere nunquam poſſint; quod Cic. ait in Top. ejuſmodi enim ſunt oppoſita. Re autem & ratione, eſt non ſolùm ratione certi alicujus ſubjecti, cui cùm tribuuntur, ſimul non conveniunt, verum etiam reipſa, i. e. per ſe & inter ſe, ſua ipſorum natura diſſentire, etiam ſubjecto cuivis non attributa; cui ſi attribuuntur, non ſolùm non conveniunt, ſed, ſervata, quæ ſequitur, oppoſitorum lege, convenire non poſſunt. Ea lex quæ ex ipſa definitione oritur, & eſt oppoſitorum omnium communis, non, ut docuit Ariſtoteles, contrariorum propria, hæc eſt, Oppoſita eidem attribui, ſecundum idem, ad idem, & eodem tempore non poſſunt. Eidem, i. e. eidem numero rei ſive ſubjecto. Secundum idem, i. e. eadem parte. Ad idem, i. e. eodem reſpectu; ut, ſol & major eſt terra & minor; ſed non eodem reſpectu; in ſe quidem, major; ut nobis videtur, minor. Extra has tres conditiones poſſunt eidem ſubjecto attribui oppoſita. Sic Socrates, albus & ater non poteſt ſecundum idem, i. e. eadem parte eſſe; pater & filius ejuſdem, ſive ad eundem relatus; ſanus & æger eodem tempore: at albus eſſe poteſt alia parte, ater alia; pater hujus, filius illius; ſanus hodie, cras æger.

Ex quo facile apparet quid interſit inter diverſa & oppoſita: in illis enim altero affirmato; in his, ex altero affirmato alterum negatur: i. e. ex affirmatione unius, neceſſariò ſequitur negatio alterius. Ut, ſumpto ex diverſis exemplo, non victoriam, ſed inſignia victoriæ reportarunt: hic inſignia victoriæ affirmantur, victoria negatur; non ex his affirmatis negatur illa: at in oppoſitis, dicta lege ſervata, Socrates eſt homo, ergo non eſt equus: juxta illud; oppoſita ſe invicem tollunt.

Diſparatorum ergo remiſſior videtur eſſe oppoſitio, contrariorum acrior. Diſparata etiam à Boethio nominantur, quæ tantum à ſe diverſa ſunt, nulla contrarietate pugnantia, ut veſtis, ignis. Apud Ciceronem tamen, Invent. 1. & Fabium, l. 5. c. 10. contradicentia ſignificant. Nos verborum inopiâ coacti, Boethium ſequimur. Multis. nempe ſine ulla certa oppoſitionis lege aut numero: nam & infinitæ ferè res hoc modo opponi inter ſe poſſunt: & ſic intelligendum eſt verbum opponitur, juxta illud; Vocabula in artibus facultatem ſignificant: ut veſtis & ignis etſi res duæ, inter ſe tamen diſparata ſunt, eò quòd multis pariter opponi poſſunt. Pariter: i. e, æquè pari ratione, eodem diſſenſionis modo: ut enim diſparata ſint, non multis tantum, ſed pariter opponi debent. Albedo opponitur nigredini, flavedini, rubedini, ut unum pluribus; non autem ſingulis, ut diſparatum quia non pariter: nigredini enim opponitur ut contrarium, cæteris rebus omnibus ut diſparatum. Viride, cineraceum, rubrum, media ſunt inter album & nigrum, quæ ſingula extremis, & inter ſe diſparata ſunt. Sic liberalitas & avaritia inter ſe diſparantur. Sic homo, arbor, lapis, & ejuſmodi res infinitæ diſparantur; nec eadem res poteſt eſſe homo, arbor, lapis. Virgil. 1. Æneid. hoc argumento diſputat:

C A P. XIV.

De Relatis.

C*Ontraria ſunt oppoſita, quorum unum uni tantum opponitur.*

Intelligitur autem unum uni in eodem genere opponi contrariorum, ut relatorum unum uni tantum, & ſic in reliquis: nam in diverſis ſpeciebus contrariorum, plura poſſunt ut contraria, uni eidémque rei opponi; ut videnti, non videns, & cæcus; motui, motus contrarius, & quies; ſervo, dominus & liber.

Quæ Ariſtoteles ἀντιθέμενα & ἀντικείμενα, ea Cicero in Topicis (quem Ramus ſequitur) contraria appellat: quas etiam in ſpecies quatuor Ariſtoteles ἀντικείμενα, in eaſdem Cicero contraria diſtribuit.

Prius autem quàm ad contrariorum diſtributionem in ſpecies accedimus, inſerenda eſt diſtinctio quædam non inutilis, & ad ea quæ diximus capite ſuperiore clarius intelligenda, & ad eas, quæ ſecundo libro dicentur, disjunctiones neceſſarias à contingentibus dijudicandas. Dictum eſt ſuperiore capite, viride, cineraceum, rubrum, media eſſe inter album & nigrum, quæ ſingula extremis & inter ſe diſparata ſunt. Sciendum itaque eſt contraria, quaſi extrema quædam habere, alia medium, alia medio carere: medium vel eſt negationis vel participationis; ex Atiſtotele, Top. 4. 3. & Phil. V. 7. Medium negationis eſt quicquid inter duo contraria dici poteſt, quod ſit neutrum eorum: ut inter præceptorem & diſcipulum, is qui neque eſt præceptor neque diſcipulus. Medium participationis eſt, quod utriuſque extremi naturam participat; ut viride inter album & nigrum, tepidum inter calidum & frigidum. Contrariorum igitur quæ medium habent, non eſt neceſſe alterutrum affirmari; poteſt enim affirmari medium: quæ autem medio carent, eorum alterum neceſſe eſt affirmari. Quænam autem contraria medium habeant aut non habeant, ex eo dignoſcitur quod & Gellius tradit l. 16. Noct. Att. c. 8. Contraria quorum contradicentia, cùm attribuuntur ei ſubjecto cui propriè poſſunt attribui, ſunt etiam inter ſe contraria, ea medium non habent. Sanum & ægrum contraria ſunt: eorum contradicentia, non ſanum non ægrum, ſi animali attribuas cui ſoli poſſunt attribui, contraria etiam reperies: non ſanum enim, eſt ægrum; non ægrum, ſanum; ſanum ergo & ægrum medio carent: ſic nox & dies, non nox & non dies, æquè ſunt inter ſe contraria; non nox enim, eſt dies; non dies, nox; medio igitur carent: ſic viſu præditum, & cæcum eſſe, ſi homini tribuis. Quorum verò contradicentia non ſunt contraria, ea medium habent: ut præceptor & diſcipulus; non præceptor enim, non eſt diſcipulus; neque non diſcipulus, eſt præceptor; etenim poteſt alteruter aliquid eſſe tertium ſive medium. Sic album & nigrum: namque non album & non nigrum de quovis colore medio dici poſſunt. Nunc ad diſtributionem contrariorum veniamus.

Contraria ſunt affirmantia aut negantia.

Affirmantia, quorum utrumque; affirmat. Scilicet rem, ſive veram ſive fictam; vel quorum vox utraque rem certam ponit atque ſignificat; quorumque unum alteri ut res rei opponitur; ut pater filio, calor frigori. Contraria itaque affirmantia, quod hic notandum eſt & diſtinguendum, ſunt quorum utrumque affirmat rem, non affirmatur de re ſive ſubjecto eodem, id enim ſupradictæ oppoſitorum regulæ, qua ex altero affirmato alterum negatur, planè repugnaret. Quæ igitur affirmat rem aut negat, topica affirmatio aut negatio dicitur; qua res de alio affirmatur aut negatur axiomatica, de qua lib. 2.

Atque ita quidem ut ex eorum illa mutua affectione, contrarietas ipſa naſcatur, ut infra demonſtrabitur. Quid ergo; num idcirco relata nunc conſentanea nunc diſſentanea ſunt? Nequaquam, ut relata quidem: ſed ea tamen quæ relata ſunt, aliis atque aliis argumentorum generibus poſſunt ſubjici; ipſa interim argumentorum genera inconfuſa & diſtincta manent. Sic cauſa & effectum, quæ arguendo inter ſe relata ſunt, adeóque diſſentanea & æque manifeſta, ſuam tamen vim propriam arguendi retinent, qua & conſentanea ſunt, & cauſa prior notiorque effecto. Relata eſſe contraria ex definitione & conſectariis contrariorum liquet; ſunt enim oppoſita, quorum unum uni tantum opponitur, ut pater & filius. At, inquis, unus multis, pater filiis, frater fratribus, præceptor diſcipulis, herus famulis, opponi poteſt. Reſpondetur, opponi patrem filio ut relatum; neque aliud quicquam patri quàm filium, neque filio quàm patrem; & ſic de cæteris: ſed hunc patrem & hunc filium, hunc præceptorem & hunc diſcipulum, &c. Non eſſe relata, ſed diſparata: neque enim horum alter ex mutua alterius affectione conſtat; neque natura ſimul ſunt, & alter ſine altero exiſtere poteſt. Itaque primæ ſubſtantiæ, ſive individua & ſingularia, ut ait Ariſtoteles, Categor. 5. Non ſunt relata. Et Categor. 6. ait multa genera relata eſſe, ſingularia verò nulla: Sed non video cur relata, quemadmodum & alia argumenta, etiam in ſingularibus conſiderari non poſſunt; ſingularia enim exempla ſunt ferè omnia. Nec magis video cur in uno relato ſingulari non poſſit ad correlata multa eſſe multiplex relatio; dummodo relatio una numero inter bina tantummodo ſit, totiéſque conſideretur quot ſint correlata; patris nimirum toties quot ſunt filii; filii quot ſunt parentes, pater nempe & mater; fratris, quot ſunt fratres & ſorores: nam niſi quicquid de relatis in genere dici ſolet, de ſingulis quoque relatis vere dicatur. Id ne toto quidem de genere verè dici poſſet. Si reponas ex Ariſtot. Philoſ. 5. Relata non ſignificare exiſtentiam, ne cætera quidem argumenta id ſignificant ſed mutuam tantummodo affectionem. Sunt affirmantia. i. e. ut duæ voces ſunt, ita etiam duæ ſunt res inter ſe oppoſitæ; ut pater, filius. Conſtare autem alterum ex mutua alterius affectione, eſt nullam aliam habere eſſentiam, quatenus relata ſunt, præter mutuam illam unius affectionem ad alterum & alterius ad illud. Atque inde nominata ſunt relata, quòd ad ſe invicem referuntur, totáque illorum natura in relatione conſiſtit: Sic patrem eſſe, eſt habere filium; filium eſſe, eſt habere patrem. Hinc illud; Omnia relata convertuntur: ut pater eſt filii pater; filius eſt patris filius. Hujus mutua affectionis ratione relata ſunt mutuæ ſibi cauſæ & mutui effectus, nam quòd quis pater eſt, id habet à filio; quòd filius, à patre: & tamen hujus mutuæ affectionis vi ita ſibi invicem opponuntur, ut neque unum de altero nec ambo de tertio dici poſſint; ut Æneas eſt pater Aſcanii, ergo non eſt Aſcanii filius; Aſcanius eſt filius Æneæ, ergo non eſt Æneæ pater. Sed quoniam relatorum unum conſtat ex mutua alterius affectione, mutuæque ſibi, ut diximus, cauſæ atque effecta ſunt, conſectarium hoc inde eſt quod ſequitur.

Relata autem ſimul eſſe natura docuerunt & veteres Logici, Ariſtoteles, Damaſcenus, maſcenus, & alii; relatáque ſe mutuò inferre mutuóque tollere; ut poſito patre, ponatur filius; ſublato, itidem tollatur: etiamſi enim ille manet qui filius fuit, non tamen filius manet. Neque ſolùm unum exiſtere nequit ſine altero, ſed ne intelligi quidem. Neceſſe eſt igitur, quod & meminit Ariſtot. Top. 3. Ut alterum in alterius definitione comprehendatur; útque alterum perfecte, i. e. definite, qui norit, norit continuò alterius definitionem; quæ ſicuti & eſſentia eorum, reciproca eſt. Supra itaque Ramus definivit ſubjectum, cui aliquid adjungitur; non, quod alteri ſubjicitur, ut alii malebant; etiamſi his verbis non modò eſſentia ſubjecti, ſed etiam notatio contineri videatur: deinde adjunctum definivit, cui aliquid ſubjicitur, non quod alteri adjungitur, quia ſubjectum & adjunctum relata ſunt; & ſubjectum adjuncti, adjunctum ſubjecti, ex qua alterum alterius mutua affectione conſtat, eâ erat definiendum, quæ ipſorum eſſentia eſt. Ad exempla nunc veniamus.

Pro Marcello: Ex quo profectò intelligis quanta in dato beneficio ſit laus, cùm in accepto tanta ſit gloria. Hic dare & accipere relata ſunt, quorum unius conſequens ex conſequente alterius intelligi ait Cicero. Martialis in Soſibianum, l. 1.

Cum ſervum ſcis te genitum, blandéque fateris;
Cùm dicis dominum, Soſibiane, patrem.

Arguebat ſe ſervum eſſe genitum Soſibianus, dum negare videbatur, quia dominum vocabat patrem. Sic apud Quintilianum, l. 5. c. 10. Si portorium Rhodiis locare honeſtum eſt, & Hermacreonti conducere. Quomodo & in Oratore perfecto Tullius: Num igitur eſt periculum, ait, nequis putet in magna arte & glorioſa turpe eſſe docere alios id quod ipſi fuerit honeſtum diſcere? Apud Ovidium in ætatis ferreæ deſcriptione, Metam. 1. Varia relatorum exempla afferuntur:

—— Non hoſpes ab hoſpite tutus,
Non ſocer à genero: fratrum quoque gratia rara eſt.
Imminet exitio vir conjugis, illa mariti:
Lurida terribiles miſcent aconita novercæ:
Filius ante diem patrios inquirit in annos.

CAP. XV.

De Adverſis.

Adverſa ſunt contraria affirmantia, quæ inter ſe velut è regione abſolutè adverſantur.

Sic etiam à Cicerone appellantur in Topicis. Sunt contraria, quia eorum unum uni tantum opponitur; ut honeſtum turpi: duo n. duntaxat poſſunt ſibi invicem è regione adverſari. Sunt affirmantia; quia unum uni opponitur, ut res rei; quod ſupra demonſtratum eſt, & infra clarius patebit. His autem verbis è regione abſolutè adverſantur, nihil aliud quàm directa oppoſitio, adeóque maxima, intelligitur; qualis eſt inter duo puncta diametri in eodem circulo. His etiam verbis diſtinguuntur adverſa à ſuis mediis, quæ inter ſe & cum extremis diſparantur. Abſolutè; i. e. omninò, perfectè; ut in Conſentaneis, quæ abſolutè conſentiebant. Ramus perpetuo dixerat: ſed aſſentior aliis, qui abſolutè malunt: nam perpetuò opponi, omnib. oppoſitis etiam relatis, commune eſt, quatenus oppoſita ſunt, i. e. ratione & re diſſentiunt. Abſolutè autem additur, ut hac particula diſtingui adverſa poſſint à relatis, in quibus conſenſio quædam eſt, quatenus alterum ex mutua conſtat alterius affectione, cujuſmodi hic omninò nulla eſt. Sic albor & nigror, claror & frigus opponuntur.

Ariſtoteles, contraria (ſic enim adverſa vocat Categ. 6.) definit, quæ plurimum inter ſe diſtant in eodem genere: & rurſus Categ. 8. Contraria ſunt vel in eadem ſpecie, vel in eodem genere. Quem Cic. eſt ſecutus in Top. & Galen de Opt. ſecta.

Verùm adverſa, ut docet idem Ariſtot. cap. de Contrariis, non in eodem ſolùm genere plurimum differunt, ut album & nigrum, verum etiam in contrariis, ut juſtitia & injuſtitia; vel ipſa genera, ut bonum & malum, virtus & vitium. Quid quod in eodem genere differre, commune videtur adverſis cum relatis: pro eodem igitur genere, rectius in definitione ponitur è regione, prout Cicero interpretatur.

Æneid. 11.

Libertas & ſervitus apud Tibullum, l. 2.

Sic conſilium & caſus; pro Marcello: nunquam enim temeritas cum ſapientia commiſcetur, nec ad conſilium caſus admittitur. Et Parad. 1. contra Epicureos: illud tamen arctè tenent accuratéque defendunt, voluptatem eſſe ſummum bonum: quæ quidem mihi vox pecudum videtur, non hominum, &c. Pecudem & hominem adverſa Cicero oppoſuit: voluptas pecudis bonum eſt, non igitur hominis. Uſus enim hujus argumenti non in qualitatibus duntaxat, ut vulgò putant, verùm in ſubſtantiis etiam & quantitatibus, immo omnibus in rebus verſatur: id quod Ariſtot. non diffitetur, cùm ait Phil. x. 3. Contraria etiam ad primas entis differentias referri: & rurſus; in omni genere contrarietatem eſſe. Contrarietas deinde argumentum eſſe Logicum ab omnibus agnoſcitur: nihil ergo obſtat quominus ad quævis rerum genera pertineat. Quædam denique formæ vel maximè ſubſtantiæ ſunt: formas autem ſpecificas omnes ſibi invicem adverſas eſſe, apud omnes receptiſſimum eſt: immo verò major videtur eſſe formarum contrarietas quàm qualitatum; qualitates enim commiſceri facile poſſunt, formæ vix unquam. Quod ergo idem Ariſtot. alibi docet, ſubſtantiæ & quantitati nihil eſſe contrarium, id non ratione tantùm, ſed ipſius etiam teſtimonio ſuprà citato refellitur; non ſubſtantiarum autem pugna etſi non Phyſica, Logica tamen eſt, dum ex altera ſubſtantia ſingulari affirmata, negatur altera.

CAP. XVI.

De Contradicentibus.

Contraria negantia ſunt, quorum alterum ait, alterum negat idem. Ab altero negante ſic nominantur: in puris enim negantibus, ut loquuntur, nullus eſt rationis uſus. Atq; hinc demum nunc clarius patet, quænam eſſent contraria affirmantia: de quibus cùm dictum eſt, de negantibus quoque eſt dictum quod ſatis ſit.

Ea ſunt contradicentia aut privantia.

Contradicentia ſunt contraria negantia, quorum alterum negat ubique: ut juſtus, non juſtus; animal, non animal; eſt, non eſt.

Contradicentia ſunt contraria, quia una negatio uni affirmationi opponitur, & contrà; immo ſine medio. Sic etiam Ariſtot. Poſt. 1. 2. Contradictio eſt oppoſitio cujus nullum eſt medium per ſe. Quorum alterum negat ubique; i. e. in re qualibet: negare enim ubique eſt de re qualibet dici, de qua affirmatum non dicitur: ut de quo videt non dicitur, de eo non videt dicitur. Unde illud vulgò dictum, contradicentia ſunt omnia: & illud Ariſtot. 1. Poſt. 1. 2. quodvis verè eſt vel affirmare vel negare: verè affirmare & negare ſimul, impoſſibile eſt. & Top. 6. 3. de qualibet re vel affirmatio vel negatio verè dicitur. Alterum autem negare ubique dicitur, vel expreſſè vel implicitè. Expreſſé ut ſuprà, cum negandi particula: implicitè, cùm reipſa non minus contradicit & repugnat alteri, quàm ſi verbo negaret; ut corpus infinitum, proprietas communis. Vulgò vocatur contradictio in adjecto; quia id ſubjecto adjungit quod ſubjectum planè tollit; atque ita contradictionem implicat. Atque hinc etiam eſt quòd contradicentia medio carent non ſolùm participationis verum etiam negationis, quia neceſſe eſt affirmare vel negare unum quodvis de altero. Sic etiam Boethius in Topicis: inter affirmationem & negationem nulla eſt medietas. Contradicentium porrò exempla hæc ſunt. In defenſione Murænæ contradicitur ſententiis Catonis & Ciceronis; illius Stoici, hujus Academici. Dialogus eſt his verbis: nihil ignoveris: immo aliquid, non omnia. Nihil gratia cauſa feceris: immo ne riſiſtito gratia, cùm officium & fides poſtulabit. Miſericordia commotus ne ſis; etiam in diſſolvenda ſeveritate: ſed tamen eſt aliqua laus humanitatis. In ſententia permaneto: enim verò niſi ſententia alia vicerit melior. In hoc exemplo quadruplex contradictio eſt: nihil ignoveris; nonnihil ignoveris; nihil gratiæ cauſa feceris; nonnihil gratiæ cauſa feceris, &c. Martial. l. 1.

Bella es; novimus: & puella; verum eſt:
Et dives; quis enim poteſt negare?
Sed dum te nimium, Fabulla, laudas,
Nec dives, neque bella, nec puella es.

Cicero in Tuſc. cogit hoc argumento Atticum Epicureum fateri mortuos miſeros non eſſe, ſi omnino non ſint, ut Epicurei credebant. Quem eſſe negas; eundem eſſe dicis: cùm enim miſerum eſſe dicis, tum eum qui non ſit, eſſe dicis. Sic Terentianus Phædria Dori eunuchi dictum elevat, quòd affirmaſſet prius, quæ pòſt inficiaretur: modò ait, modò negat.

Sunt qui contradictionem nullam eſſe ſtatuunt, niſi axiomaticam; de qua lib. 2. Verùm ſi affirmatio & negatio Topica datur, ut ſuprà demonſtravimus, neceſſe eſt dari quoque Topicam contradictionem: qualis eſt illa Rom. 9. Vocabo non populum meum, populum meum; & non dilectam, dilectam. In diſtinctionibus etiam frequentiſſimus eſt hujus contradictionis uſus; præſertim ubi alterum diſtinctionis membrum apta voce exprimi non poteſt: ut Dialecticæ materia eſt ens, & non ens; lex eſt ſcripta, vel non ſcripta. Sic ad Critonem Socrates; videris opportunè quidem non excitaſſe me. In his exemplis axiomatica contradictio nulla eſt: uti neque in illo quod ſuprà in hoc capite ex Martiale allatum eſt: Bella es; novimus, & puella, &c. Non enim verbum eſt ſive copulatio negatur, ſed partes. Fabulla eſt bella & puella & dives; Fabulla eſt & non bella, & non puella, & non dives. Axiomatica enim contradictio hujuſmodi fuiſſet: Fabulla non eſt & bella & puella & dives: quod lib. 2. clarius intelligetur.

CAP. XVII.

De Privantibus.

PRivantia ſunt contraria negantia, quorum alterum negat in eo tantum ſubjecto, in quo affirmatum ſuapte natura ineſt. Atque hîc affirmatum dicitur habitus, quo quis quid habet, negatum autem privatio, quâ quis ea re privatur aut caret: ut viſus & cæcitas, motus & quies in iis rebus quæ motu conſervantur. Sunt contraria, quòd unum uni opponitur, habitus privationi; qua ex parte negantia quoque dicuntur: nam & hîc rei alicujus affirmationi ejuſdem negatio, i. e. enti non ens opponitur: privatio enim, ut inquit Ariſtot. Phyſ. 2. 8. per ſe eſt non ens: & Plut. de primo frigido; privatio eſt eſſentiæ negatio; habituique opponitur, non ut natura quadam aut eſſentia per ſe exiſtens, ſed ut ejus corruptio & ademtio. Quorum alterum negat in eo tantum ſubjecto, in quo, &c. His verbis forma privantium qua diſtinguuntur à contradicentibus, exprimitur. In contradicentibus enim negatio infinita eſt, affirmatum ſuum ubique, i. e. qualibet in re negans; ut quicquid non eſt juſtum, eſt non juſtum; in privantibus verò finita eſt negatio, atque in eo tantum ſubjecto affirmatum ſive habitum negans, in quo affirmatum ſuapte natura ineſt, aut ineſſe poteſt: ut etiam Ariſtot. in Categor. Sic cæcitas eſt negatio viſus, non ubique & in re qualibet, ſed in qua ſolùm viſus ineſſe natura debuit: nam privari aliquid tum demum dicitur, cùm eo caret quod natum eſt habere: non ergo quicquid non videt, propriè cæcum dicitur. Deinde in contradicentibus negatum contradicendo negat, & eſt pura negatio; ut videns, non videns: in privantibus negat privando; nec ſolùm negatio eſt, ſed privans negatio & extinctio habitus alicujus qui ineſſe naturâ ſubjecto debuit aut potuit; ut videns, cæcus. Hinc illæ privationis proprietates ex Plut. de primo frigido, non inutiles: privatio iners & agendi impos eſt: non ſuſcipit magis aut minus; neque enim quis dixerit hunc illo cæciorem; aut tacentem, magis minúſve tacere; aut defunctum, magis minúſve eſſe mortuum: habitûs enim gradus eſſe poſſunt, non entis non item: Illa autem Ariſtot. à privatione ad habitum non datur regreſſus, incertior eſt: cùm enim habitus quo quis habere quid dicitur duo modi ſint, potentia & actus, à privatione potentiæ vel facultatis, idque naturâ duntaxat, regreſſus negatur. Contradicentia denique medio carent non ſolùm participationis, verùm etiam negationis: privantia verò carent quidem medio participationis, nulla enim eſt habitus cum privatione permixtio; non carent autem medio negationis; multa enim ſunt, quæ neque vident, neque cæca ſunt; ut lapis, arbor, &c. niſi cùm ei ſubjecto attribuuntur, cui natura ineſſe debuerunt: tum enim negationis etiam medio carent; quippe omnis homo aut videns eſt aut cæcus, gnarus aut ignarus. Exempla porrò privantium ſunt dives & pauper: Martial. l. 5.

Semper eris pauper, ſi pauper es, Æmiliane:

Vita & mors, ut in Miloniana: hujus mortis ſedetis ultores, cujus vitam, ſi putetis per vos reſtitui poſſe, nolitis. Item loqui & tacere: 1 Catil. quid expectas auctoritatem loquentium, quorum voluntatem tacitorum perſpicis. Cætera exempla quæ Ramus attulit, minus quadrant: ut ebrius & ſobrius, mortalis & immortalis, quæ potius adverſa ſunt. Neque enim in præpoſitio in compoſitis privationem ſemper, ſed adverſum habitum ſæpe ſignificat; unde nec peccatum privationem eſſe dixerim; ſiquidem hoc vel illud peccatum ſive vitium, privatio non eſt. Atque hæ quidem ſpecies contrariorum ſunt. Sed quæri hic ſolet, quænam earum ſint maximè inter ſe contrariæ. Ariſtoteles maximam contrarietatem nunc adverſis tribuit, nunc contradicentibus. Sed videtur maximam eſſe diſſenſionem inter privantia: deinde inter adverſa; minorem adhuc inter contradicentia; minimam inter relata: nam relata propter illam mutuam affectionem, partim conſentanea ſunt: contradicentia purè quidem contraria negantia ſunt, ſed tamen propter infinitam illam negationem, pro mediis & diſparatis crebro accipiuntur, ut non calidum non tam opponitur calido quàm frigidum; quoniam non calidum poteſt tepidum eſſe; ſic non bonum, medium quiddam eſſe poteſt & adiaphorum: non album de rubro dici aut intelligi poteſt: adverſa è regione quidem adverſantur; non ita tamen, quin commiſceri queant: privantia verò mixtionem non admittunt; & privatio ferè eſt habitûs extinctio atque ereptio aut ſaltem deficientia; habitúſque eſt ens, privatio non ens; enti autem nihil, æquè ac non ens, contrarium eſt.

CAP. XVIII.

De Paribus.

Argumenta ſimplicia ita fuerunt in conſentaneis & diſſentaneis.
Comparata ſunt argumenta prima, quæ inter ſe comparantur.

Simplex rerum affectio comparatione prius tractanda fuit: hanc enim ſi removes, comparata omnia aut conſentanea erunt aut diſſentanea. Platonis doctrina & Xenophontis ante adjuncta utrique erat, quàm comparata. Sunt argumenta prima non orta, eo quòd orta, ut patebit infra, eandem habent affectionem cum primis unde orta ſunt; comparata etſi ſimplicia prius fuere, ſimplicium tamen affectionem non habent. Inter ſe comparantur; nimirum quæ ſunt ejuſdem generis: genera autem diſtributio mox docebit. Nunc proprietates comparatorum ſunt dicendæ.

Ubi hoc advertendum, non ſua ſed comparationis natura dici æquè nota eſſe comparata. Ita ſunt, inquis, & relata vi relationis; immo argumenta omnia quæ etiam relata ſunt, At, inquam, relatio & comparatio non ſunt idem; & reliqua argumenta, & ſi quatenus relata ſunt notione Logica, æque nota ſunt, ſuâ tamen naturâ, prout quæque eſt, vel æquè vel non æquè ſunt manifeſta; diſſentanea quidem æquè, conſentanea non æquè, ut jam ſupra eſt dictum. Debet autem ei quicum diſputamus comparatorum id quod arguit ſua natura & priuſquam comparatio inſtituitur, notius eſſe atque illuſtrius eo quod arguitur; æque enim obſcurum nihil argueret. Unde in ſignis comparatorum uſus elucet; quo fit ut inæqualis rerum notitia comparationis vi æqualis reddatur. Sic conſentanea ad probandum, diſſentanea ad refellendum, comparata ad illuſtrandum aptiſſima ſunt.

Duplex ergo eſt comparationis forma: altera contracta, altera explicata. Contracta eſt quæ uno verbo concluditur, ut infra cap. 21. Explicata, quæ partibus diſtinguitur; partéſque iſtæ propoſitio & redditio nominantur. Propoſitio præcedit ſæpe, & argumentum eſt: redditio ſæpe ſequitur, éſtque id quod arguitur; ſi ſecus occurrit, inverſio eſt. Omnis autem forma comparationis contracta, ſuis partibus explicari poteſt.

Atque omnino comparata etiam ficta arguunt fidémque faciunt.

Arguunt ſcilicet rem veram; in quo cæteris argumentis præcellunt; quæ ficta ſi ſunt, rem fictam duntaxat arguunt; ut materia ficta, fictam ſolis domum. At comparata etiam ficta, non ſua quidem natura, ſed comparationis vi, res veras arguunt fidémque faciunt.

Comparatio eſt in quantitate vel qualitate.

Quantitas eſt qua res comparata quanta dicuntur.

Eſtque parium vel imparium. Non hic loquimur de quantitate ſolùm mathematica, quæ magnitudinis eſt aut numeri, ſed de quantitate Logica, quæ ratio quælibet ſive affectio eſt, qua res quæcunque inter ſe comparatæ quantæ, i. e. æquales vel inæquales, pares vel impares dici poſſunt.

Paria ſunt, quorum eſt una quantitas.

Sic etiam definit Ariſtoteles, Phil. 8. 15. Quod idem valet acſi diceretur, quorum par ratio eſt. Una, i. e. eadem, æqualis: unde in plurali numero eodem nomine ac definitione explicantur.

Argumentum igitur paris eſt, cùm par illuſtratur à pari.

Ad exempla veniamus; atque ad ea primùm quæ in forma, ut diximus, contracta notis brevius indicantur. Hæ autem notæ præcipuæ ſunt par, aquale, aquare; ut in his: Æneid. 2.

——Par levibus ventis.

Ubi levitas Creuſa umbræ comparatur levitati ventorum. Æneid. 3.

Et nunc aquali tecum pubeſceret avo.

Æneid. 6.

En hujus nate auſpiciis, illa inclyta Roma
Imperium terris, animos aquabit Olimpo.

His notis aliæ ſunt affines, pariter, aquè, aqualitas, aqualiter, perinde, acſi, & id genus alia.

Sequitur forma explicata; in qua propoſitio & redditio diſtinguuntur, quæ in contracta forma erant implicitæ. In hac autem forma explicata par quantitas vel notis apertè indicatur, vel ſine notis mente & ratione concipitur: Notæ iſtæ ſunt vel propriæ parium, vel negationes imparium: parium propriæ, idem, quod; tam, quàm; tanto, quanto; tot, quot. In quibus ſingulis notarum paribus prior quæque redditioni inſervit, poſterior verò propoſitioni. Catil. 4. Cujus res geſta atque virtutes iiſdem, quibus ſolis curſus, regionibus ac terminis continentur. Æneid. 4.

Tàm ficti pravíque tenax quàm nuntia veri.

Tantò peſſimus omnium poëta,
Quantò tu optimus omnium patronus. Catul. 4.

Ovid. 4. Triſt.

Littora quot conchas, quot amœna roſaria flores.
Quótque ſoporiferum grana papaver habet, &c.
Tot premor adverſis—— ——.

Negationes imparium ſunt; vel majoris & minoris ſeorſim vel utriuſque ſimul non magis, non minus. Philippic. 9. Neque enim ille magis Juriſconſultus quàm juſtitiæ fuit, &c. Neque conſtituere litium actiones malebat, quàm controverſias tollere. Ovid. 2. de Arte.

Non minor eſt virtus, quàm quærere, parta tueri.

Utriuſque ſimul pro Murena: Paria cognoſco eſſe iſta in L. Murena, atque ita paria, ut neque ipſe dignitate vinci potuerit, neque te dignitate ſuperarit. Obſervandum eſt autem negationem majoris vel minoris ſeorſim non ſemper eſſe notam parium: neque enim ſi ſervus non eſt major domino, ergo eſt æqualis; nec ſi dominus non eſt minor ſervo, ergo par.

Hactenus cum notis; nunc ſine notis hæc quæ ſequuntur. Atque in hoc potiſſimum genere exemplorum ſine notis, apparet vis eadem arguendi in utramque partem; adeo ut ſi unum, alterum quoque ſit; ſi non ſit unum, neque alterum. Itaque ex uno eorum affirmato, alterum affirmatur; ex negato, negatur: 2 Philip. Quorum facinus commune, cur non eorum præda communis? Ter. in Adel.

Hujus loci, parium nempe ſine notis, ſunt conſectaria illa è contrariis quidem orta, ſed parium collatione tractata. Ut ex adverſis iſta; Cicero pro Sylla: neque verò quid mihi iraſcare intelligere poſſum; ſi, quòd eum defendo quem tu accuſas, cur tibi quoque ipſe non ſuccenſeo, qui accuſes eum quem ego defendo? Inimicum, inquis, accuſo meum: & amicum, inquam, ego defendo meum. Sic 5. Tuſc. quod cùm fateantur, ſatis magnam vim eſſe in vitiis ad miſeram vitam; nónne fatendum eſt eandem vim in virtute eſſe ad beatam vitam? Contraria enim contrariorum ſunt conſequentia.

Quæ tamen regula non eſt perpetuo vera primò niſi collatio ſit verè parium: non ergo ſequitur, mala opera damnant; ergo bona juſtificant. Mala n. opera omnino mala, bona imperfectè bona ſunt; illa noſtra, hæc non plane noſtra. Secundo, ſed in iis duntaxat paribus, contrariorum ex loco petitis, quorum parium propoſitio reciprocatur. Quod in relatis quidem fit frequentiſſimè: ut apud Martialem.

Tum ſervum ſcis te genitum, blandéque fateris,
Cùm dicis dominum, Soſibiane, patrem.

Pater eſt filii dominus, & filii dominus eſt pater: pariter ergo filius eſt patris ſervus. Sic ex adverſis: bonum eſt appetendum; pariter ergo malum eſt fugiendum. Nempe quia propriè adeóque reciprocè, omne appetendum eſt bonum. Et ex privantibus: Ovid. 1. Faſt.

In pretio pretium nunc eſt, dat cenſus honores,
Cenſus amicitias: pauper ubique jacet.

Dives eſt in pretio, & quiſquis eſt in pretio, eſt dives; ergo omnis pauper jacet.

Quoties autem collationis propoſitio non reciprocatur, vel quoties uni parium id quaſi proprium tribuitur quod utriſque commune eſt, eorum conſequentia contraria non ſunt, ſed ſæpe eadem. Fallit ergo hoc ex relatis: pater eſt dives; ergo filius eſt pauper: quia propoſitio non eſt reciproca; omnis enim dives non eſt pater. Et hoc etiam ex adverſis: homo eſt ſenſu præditus; beſtia igitur ſenſu caret. Homo mortalis; beſtia igitur immortalis: quippe nec ſenſu præditum, nec mortale eſt homini proprium; ſed utrique contrario commune, & homini & beſtiæ. Hoc etiam ex contradicentibus: homo eſt animal; ergo non homo eſt non animal. Hoc denique ex privantibus: videns vivit; ergo cæcus eſt mortuus: vivere enim & videnti & cæco commune eſt. Non enim idem non dici de contrariis, ſed contraria de eodem dici non poſſunt: immo quod ſuſcipit unum contrariorum, ſuſcipit alterum; & quod unum non ſuſcipit, neque alterum; ut, in quo eſt amor, in eo poteſt eſſe odium. Quibus nullum eſt jus, iis nulla fit injuria.

Eſt & alius parium ſine notis modus, quo interdum laceſſiti, par pari reponimus. Qualis eſt Virgil. Ecl. 3. In illa paſtorum alterna contentione repetitum illud; Dic quib. in terris, &c. Cujuſmodi eſt & illud Mat. 21. 23, &c. Qua authoritate facis iſta? &c. Interrogabo vos ego etiam quiddam: Baptiſma Joannis unde erat? Affine eſt illud Cic. Off. 2. Cato, cùm ab eo quæreretur, quid eſſet fœnerari? reſpondit, quid hominem occidere?

Paria verò ficta quorum eſſe proprium ſuprà diximus rem veram arguere, ſunt illa apud Ciceronem, Invent. 1. ex Æſchine Socratico; ubi Aſpaſia cum Xenophontis uxore & Xenophonte ipſo ſic inducitur locuta: dic mihi, quaſo, Xenophontis uxor, ſi vicina tua melius habeat aurum quàm tu habes, utrum illius an tuum malis? Illius, inquit. Et ſi veſtem? Illius verò reſpondit. Age verò, ſi virum illa meliorem, an illius malis. Hîc mulier erubuit. Comparatio ſic ſe habet: ſi aurum, ſi veſtem vicinæ meliorem habere malles quàm tuam, malle etiam meliorem vicinæ virum argueris. Non dicit vicinam habere aurum aut veſtem meliorem, ſed fingit aut ponit, eámque ſi mallet Xenophontis uxor, arguitur malle virum quoque vicinæ ſi melior ſit.

C A P. XIX.

De Majoribus.

Imparia ſunt, quorum quantitas non eſt una.

Non una, i. e. non eadem; quorum par ratio non eſt: contrariorum enim contraria ratio eſt.

Majus eſt cujus quantitas excedit.

Major autem vel minor quantitas æſtimanda eſt ex rerum quæ comparantur, elatione vel ſummiſſione, ut inquit Cic. in Top. i. e. exceſſu vel defectu; quæ vel notis indicantur, vel, ſi deſunt notæ aliis vocibus, quæ exceſſum vel defectum ſignificant, intelliguntur. Ex eo autem quod ſuprà de Logica quantitate diximus, intelligendum eſt id Logicè majus quoque eſſe, cujus non ſolùm magnitudo, menſura, aut numerus, ſed etiam auctoritas, potentia, præſtantia, probabilitas, difficultas, aut quid hujuſmodi majus eſt; vel brevius, quod quavis ratione exceſſum habet, id majus eſt; ídque non ſolùm rei ipſius natura, ſed vel opinione diſſerentis. Majus igitur eſt cujus quantitas excedit id quod minus eſt: majus enim hîc adhibetur ad arguendum minus.

Quemadmodum autem parium, ita argumenti à majore, forma alia contracta eſt, quæ notis brevius indicatur; alia explicata, quæ partibus plenius diſtinguitur.

Contractioris formæ notæ ſunt vel nomina comparativa & ſuperlativa ſuos caſus regentia, vel verba quædam; & ea quidem utraque non ſolùm quæ exceſſum ſignificant, ut major, melior, pejor; præſtare, ſuperare, vincere, excedere, præferri, cùm referuntur ad id quod arguit, verùm etiam ea cùm nomina tum verba quæ defectum ſignificant, ut minor, inferior, poſthabeo, cedo, vincor, ſuperor, ſi referuntur ad id quod arguitur.

Explicata autem forma nunc eſt cum notis, nunc ſine notis. Notæ ſunt non ſolùm, ſed etiam; non, tam, quam, & comparationes, verbáque, ut ſuprà, non modò elationem ſignificantia cum particula quàm, ſi ea particula tribuatur ei ſemper quod arguitur, ſed etiam ea quæ ſummiſſionem ſignificant, ſi modò particula quàm referatur ad id quod arguit: ut, minus eſt amicum pulſare, quàm patrem. Sed hoc exemplum arguit potius à minori quàm grave ſcelus ſit pulſare patrem, quàm a majori non admodum grave eſſe pulſare amicum. Idem de cæteris hujuſmodi eſt dicendum.

Exemplum primæ notæ: Cic. pro Murana: Tollitur è medio non ſolùm iſta verboſa ſimulatio prudentia, ſed etiam illa domina rerum ſapientia. Spernitur orator non ſolùm odioſus in dicendo aut loquax, verùm etiam bonus. In hujuſmodi exemplis ſed etiam eſt propoſitio, &, ut majus, arguit redditionem non ſolum, ut minus.

Huic nota affinis eſt immo, vel immo verò. Cujuſmodi eſt illud apud Terent. Thr. Magnas verò agere gratias Thais mihi? Gn. Ingentes. Thr. Ain tu? læta eſt? Gn. Non tam ipſo quidem dono, quàm abs te datum eſſe: id verò ſeriò triumphat. Hîc facile intelligitur immo ingentes & immo id ſeriò triumphat. Ingentes gratiæ arguunt magnas; & triumphare, lætam eſſe. Sic Catil. 1. Hic tamen vivit, vivit? immo verò in ſenatum venit. Et illud Ver. 3. Non furem, ſed raptorem; non adulterum, ſed expugnatorem pudicitia, &c.

Exemplum ſecundæ notæ, comparativorum ſcilicet & verborum cum particula quàm, eſt ex Cic. pro Marcello: Plus admirationis habitura, quam gloria. Sed ambiguum: aut enim plus admirationis arguit minus gloriæ, & ſic argumentum eſt à majori, aut minor gloria ſi magna ſit, arguit maximam admirationem.

Verborum elationem ſignificantium cum particula quàm exemplum hoc erit; mendicare præſtat, quàm furari. Hîc mendicare, quanquam in honeſtum, ut magis tamen & potius faciendum, arguit multo minus eſſe furandum.

Sic malo illud, ſcilicet quod arguit, quàm hoc, ſcilicet quod arguitur: ut Juvenal. Satyra 8. adverſus glorioſum nobilem.

Malo pater tibi ſit Therſites, dummodo tu ſis
Æacidæ ſimilis, Vulcaniáque arma capeſſas,
Quàm te Therſitæ ſimilem producat Achilles.

Quod malit ignobilem fortem, quod tamen non eſt ita optandum, ex eo arguit atque oſtendit à majori ſive à potiori quàm minime velit nobilem ignavum. Cæſar: Malo modeſtiam in milite, quàm virtutem. Modeſtia, judicio Cæſaris, præſtantior & major, arguit virtutem ſive fortitudinem in milite minus eſſe quàm modeſtia requirendam: vel potius à minori exaggerat modeſtiæ laudem in milite præ virtutis laude.

Sequitur majorum tractatio ſine notis.

Atque in hoc ſolùm genere id majus eſt cujus probabilitas aut difficultas eſt major. Hic etiam Logici regulas conſequentiæ tradere ſolent non ſolùm negando, ut vult Ariſtot. Rhet. 2. 23. verùm etiam affirmando, pro quantitatis diverſa vi & conſideratione, in exemplis diverſis: ejuſdem enim exempli una tantum ratio eſt. Si majus eſt probabilius, duntaxat negando, in hunc modum: quod non valet in majore, non valebit in minore Si majus eſt difficilius aut incredibilius, duntaxat affirmando: quod in re majore valet, valet in minore, ut inquit Cic. in Top. Hujus exemplum eſt Æneid. 1.

O ſocii (neque enim ignari ſumus ante malorum)
O paſſi graviora! dabit Deus his quoque finem.

Si gravioribus malis dedit Deus finem, dabit his certè. Sic Cic. pro Murena: Noli tam eſſe injuſtus, ut cùm tui fontes vel inimicis tuis pateant, noſtros rivulos etiam amicis putes clauſos eſſe oportere.

Ficta etiam majora idem valent in ſuis conſequentiis vel refutandis vel probandis.

Refutandi exemplum eſt Terent. Heaut.

——— Satrapas ſi ſiet
Amator, nunquam ſufferre ejus ſumtus queat:
Nedum tu poſſis: quaſi diceret, finge ſatrapam eſſe.
Et Æneid. 5.
Magnanime Ænea, non ſi mihi Jupiter auctor
Spondeat, hoc ſperem Italiam contingere cœlo:
Mutati tranſverſa fremunt, &c.
Nec nos obniti contrà, nec tendere tantùm
Sufficimus: i. e. multo nunc minus Jove non ſpondente.

CAP. XX.

De Minoribus.

MAjus & minus inter ſe affecta & relata ſunt: adeóque unius definitionem qui norit, norit alterius.

Ut igitur majus eſt cujus quantitas excedit, ita minus eſt cujus quantitas exceditur. Quantitas autem ut majoris erat in qualibet rerum elatione ſive exceſſu, ita nunc minoris eſt in qualibet rerum ſummiſſione ſive defectu. Sententiarum enim minor probabilitas aut difficultas locum non habet, niſi in minorum forma explicata; quod ex majorum quoque explicata forma intelligi poteſt. Minus igitur eſt cujus quantitas exceditur à majore: argumentum itaque à minore eſt, cùm id quod minus eſt, adhibetur ad arguendum id quod eſt majus.

Minora etiam vel brevius indicantur notis, vel plenius diſtinguuntur partibus. Hujus utriuſque formæ vel propriæ ſunt minorum notæ, vel negationes parium.

Propriæ notæ contractioris formæ ſunt primùm, voces comparativæ Grammaticæ, cùm nomina tum verba, elationem utraque ſignificantia, ſi modò attribuantur ei quod arguitur. Ovid. 2. de Triſt. Sævior es triſti Buſiride. Hîc minor ſævitia Buſiridis arguit majorem illius in quem poeta invehitur. Præſtat ſapientia divitiis. Sævior & præſtat elationem ſignificant, & notæ ſunt majoris; ſed quia tribuuntur ei quod arguitur, argumentum utrobique eſt à minori. Atque hoc ſedulò advertendum eſt, ut argumentum majoris à minori dijudicare poſſis: majora enim & minora, contractæ præſertim formæ, eaſdem plerumque notas præ ſe ferunt; idémque exemplum utramvis in partem vel à majori vel à minori arguere poteſt: ut, ſævior es triſti Buſiride. Hoc ſi ad ſævitiam cujuſvis exaggerandam dicatur, ut hoc loco, à minori eſt: ſi ad Buſiridis extenuandam, à majori. Si igitur illa quæ elationem ſignificant, referantur ad id quod arguitur, ſunt illa quidem notæ majoris, argumentum autem eſt à minori; quoniam majus, cujus illa notæ ſunt, eſt id quod arguitur: ſin illa quæ ſummiſſionem ſignificant, referuntur ad id quod arguitur, ſunt illa quidem notæ minoris, ſed argumentum eſt à majori; quoniam id quod arguitur, minus eſt.

Secundò, comparationes Grammaticæ verbáque ſummiſſionem ſignificantia, ut minor, inferior, &c. Poſthabeo, poſtpono, cedo, vincor, ſuperor, &c. Si modò ad id quod arguit, referatur: ut cedant arma togæ. Hîc togæ dignitas arguitur à minori armorum dignitate, quæ cedit.

Atque hæ ſunt notæ affirmantes contractæ formæ: quibus annumerandæ ſunt etiam iſtæ formulæ, quæ fiunt negatione parium. Philip. 9. Omnes ex omni ætate, qui in hac civitate intelligentiam juris habuerunt, ſi unum in locum conferantur, cum S. Sulpitio non ſunt conferendi, i. e. non æquandi, quæ nota parium fuit. Hactenus contracta forma.

Explicata forma vel cum notis eſt, vel ſine notis. Propriæ notæ ſunt primò, non modò non, ſed ne. Cic. 2 Catil. Nemo non modò Romæ, ſed ne ullo in angulo totius Italiæ oppreſſus ære alieno fuit, quem non ad hoc incredibile ſceleris fœdus aſciverit. Hîc poſterior nota ſed ne, eſt propoſitionis, & nota minoris; arguitque non modo non, quæ redditionis eſt, & nota majoris, quod arguitur. Ne ullo in angulo Italiæ non fecit, quod minus utile ſibi erat, non modò non igitur vel multo magis Romæ fecit, quod majus erat, vel ſibi magis utile. Pro Fonteio: Non modò nullum facinus hujus protulerunt, ſed ne dictum quidem aliquod reprehenderent. Ne minus quidem fecerunt ut dictum aliquod reprehenderent, quæ propoſitio eſt & arguit non modò non majus, i.e. ergo non majus, ut facinus aliquod proferrent, quæ redditio eſt, & arguitur.

Verùm in hujus notæ exemplis propoſitionis nota ſed ne, aliquando omittitur. Ad Lent. Nullum meum minimum dictum, non modò factum pro Cæſare interceſſit, i. e. nullum non modò factum, ſed ne dictum quidem. Huic notæ affinis eſt illa formula, tantum abeſt ab hoc, ut ne illud quidem. Pro Marcello: Tantum abes à perfectione maximorum operum, ut fundamenta, quæ cogitas, nondum jeceris. Ne hoc quidem feciſti quod minus eſt, abes ergo longe ab illo quod eſt majus.

Secundæ notæ ſunt comparationes Grammaticæ & verba quædam cum particula quàm, quæ vel elationem ſignificant, ut potius hoc quàm illud, malo hoc quàm illud, vel ſummiſſionem, ut minor, inferior, ita ut quàm utrobique referatur ad id quod arguitur. Catil. 1. Ut exul potius tentare, quàm conſul vexare remp. poſſis. Quod potius erat Ciceroni ut exul tentaret remp. quàm conſul vexaret, illud ut minus malum arguit hoc eſſe majus. Hic comparatio Grammatica potius, ad id quod arguit, refertur, nempe ad minus malum; particula quàm ad id refertur quod arguitur, nempe ad majus malum. Sic maluit Metellus de repub. quàm de ſententia ſua dimoveri. Hîc maluit, verbum elationis, refertur ad id quod arguit, nempe ad minus malum, judicio Metelli, de rep. dimoveri; particula quàm ad id refertur quod majus malum arguitur, dimoveri de ſententia. Sic in iis notis quæ ſummiſſionem ſignificant, particula quàm refertur ſemper ad majus quod arguitur, non ſecus atque in iis quæ ſignificant elationem: ut, minus eſt accipere, quàm dare; inferior eſt Cæſar quàm Scipio.

Sequuntur negationes parium in hac forma explicata. Non tam, quàm. Catil. 2. Quanquam illi qui Catilinam Maſſiliam ire dictitant, non tam hac queruntur, quàm verentur. Sic non tot, quot: pro Murena; Quod enim fretum, quem Euripum tot motus, tantas, tam varias habere putatis agitationes fluctuum; quantas perturbationes & quantos æſtus habet ratio comitiorum? In hoc exemplo interrogatio fortius negat paria.

Nunc ad exempla formæ ſine notis explicatæ veniamus. Cic. Off. 1. Ergo hiſtrio hoc videbit in ſcena, non videbit ſapiens in vita. Atque hinc etiam conſequentiæ ducuntur non ſolùm affirmando & probando, ut vult Ariſt. Rhet. 2. 23. & Cic. in Top. ſed etiam negando & refutando: Si quidem hoc de exemplo non eodem intelligitur: ſin de eodem, tum quidem vel ſolum affirmando, vel ſolùm negando rectè proceditur. Affirmandi exemplum eſt Ovid. 1. de Remed.

Ut corpus redimas ferrum patieris & ignes, &c.
Ut valeas animo quicquam tolerare negabis?

Si corporis cauſa, multo magis animi quidvis tolerabis; animus enim dignior. Item pro Archia: Beſtia ſæpe immanes cantu flectuntur: nos non poetarum voce moveamur? Sic illud Mat. 6. 26. Paſſeres curat Deus: multo magis ergo homines. At negando, nulla ex his conſequentia deducitur: non ergo ſequitur, ſi corporis cauſa quicquam non tolerabis, ergo nunc animi; & ſic de cæteris. Rectè igitur, ſi hoc modo intelligitur Ariſtoteles, à minore ad majus affirmando ſolùm proceditur. Verùm exempla non deſunt, in quib. à minore arguitur etiam ſolùm negando: cujuſmodi eſt illud ſuprà citatum, pro Marcello; fundamenta nondum jeciſti, certè ergo non perfeciſti. Nec tamen idem affirmando; fundamenta jeciſti, ergo perfeciſti. Hîc modò cavendum eſt, ne ponatur negatio quæ affirmationi æquipolleat: ut, Deus non negligit paſſeres, idem eſt quod curat. Sic enim utriuſque conſequentiæ idem exemplum prout ſententia eadem vel affirmando vel negando variatur, dari poſſet: ut, ſi fures plectendi, multo magis ſacrilegi. Si furib. non parcendum, multo minus ſacrilegis. Hîc plectere & non parcere idem eſt; & minus ſit nota majoris: non igitur notæ, ſed rerum elatio vel ſummiſſio majus vel minus efficit. Atque hæc de conſequentiis minorum ſine notis.

Verùm eædem conſequentiæ ducuntur ab explicata forma, quæ etiam cum notis eſt, ut ex iis exemplis quæ ſuprà ponuntur, intelligas licet. In hac forma explicata ſine notis eſt ubi occurrit minorum quædam gradatio: ut Ver. 7. Facinus eſt vincere civem Romanum; ſcelus verberare; propè parricidium necare: quid dicam in crucem tollere?

Finguntur etiam minora: Virgil. Ecl. 1.
Antè leves ergo paſcentur in æthere cervi, &c.
Quàm noſtro illius labatur pectore vultus.

Philip. 2. Si inter cœnam in tuis immanibus illis poculis hoc tibi accidiſſet, quis non turpe duceret? In cœtu verò populi R. negotium publicum gerens, magiſter equitum, &c.

CAP. XXI.

De Similibus.

HActenus comparatio in quantitate fuit. Sequitur comparatio in qualitate, qua res comparatæ quales dicuntur.

Qualitas enim Logica non ſolùm eſt habitus, aut diſpoſitio, aut potentia, vel impotentia naturalis, aut denique figura aut forma exterior, quæ Ariſtot. ſpecies qualitatis ſunt, & in aliis artibus tractandæ, ſed eſt affectio quælibet ſive ratio, quâ res inter ſe comparatæ quales, nempe ſimiles aut diſſimiles dicuntur. Nulle autem res eſt, quæ ſi alteri qualitate conferatur, non ſit ei ſimilis vel diſſimilis.

Similia ſunt quorum eadem eſt qualitas.

Sic enim definit Ariſtoteles, Phil. 8. 15. & Boethius, l. 2. in Cic. Top. ſimilitudo, inquit, eſt unitas qualitatis. Argumentum igitur ſimilitudinis eſt, quando ſimile explicatur à ſimili. Magna quidem eſt affinitas parium cum ſimilibus; verùm ut ex definitionibus eorum perſpicere licet, in hoc maximè differunt, quòd paria non admittunt elationem aut ſummiſſionem, ſimilia admittunt: poſſunt enim etiam ſimillima majora eſſe vel minora; quod paria non poſſunt.

Similitudo proportio dicitur, Græcè ferè analogia; & ſimilia proportionalia, Græcè analoga. Proportio autem nihil aliud eſt quàm duarum rationum ſimilitudo: ratio autem eſt duorum inter ſe terminorum ſive rerum collatio. * Monendum autem eſt ſimilia ſive contractæ formæ ſive explicatæ urgenda non eſſe ultra eam qualitatem quam in utriſque eandem eſſe propoſitum aſſimilanti erat oſtendere: ſic magiſtratus aſſimilatur cani, ſola nimirum fidelitate cuſtodiæ: unde illa in ſcholis, nullum ſimile eſt idem, ſimile non currit quatuor pedibus, omne ſimile claudicat.

Similia nunc notis brevius indicantur, nunc partibus plenius diſtinguuntur; hoc enim comparatis omnibus commune eſt. Notæ ſimilitudinis contractæ quæ uno verbo concluditur, ſunt vel ſimilium propriæ vel diſſimilium negationes. Propriæ ſimilium ſunt vel nomina, ut ſimilis, effigies, imago, more, ritu, inſtar, in modum; vel adverbia, tanquam, veluti, quaſi, ſicuti; vel verba, imitari, referre, &c. 1 Æneid. Os humeróſque Deo ſimilis. Philip. 9. Quanquam nullum monumentum clarius Servius Sulpitius relinquere potuit, quàm effigiem morum ſuorum, virtutis, conſtantiæ, pietatis, ingenii, filium. 1 Triſt.

Namque ea vel nemo, vel qui mihi vulnera fecit,
Solus Achilleo tollere more poteſt.

In Piſ. Unus ille dies mihi quidem inſtar immortalitatis fuit, quo in patriam redii. Verr. 1. Sed repente è veſtigio ex homine, tanquam aliquo poculo Circæo, factus eſt Verres. Pro lege Manil. Itaque omnes quidem nunc in his locis Cn. Pompeium, ſicut aliquem, non ex hac urbe miſſum, ſed de cœlo delapſum intuentur. Negationes diſſimilium ſunt, haud ſecus, non aliter, non abſimilis, &c. Æneid. 3. Haud ſecus ac juſſi faciunt. Terent. in Phor. Ego iſti nihilo ſum aliter, ac fui.

Ad contractam ſimilitudinis formam pertinet etiam metaphora: metaphora enim, ut docent Rhetores, eſt ad unum verbum contracta ſimilitudo ſine notis quidem, quæ tamen intelliguntur. Pro Seſt. Cujus ego patrem Deum atque parentem ſtatuo fortunæ nominiſque mei. i. e. tanquam Deum.

Similitudo disjuncta eſt, quando termini ſive res quatuor reipſa diſtinguuntur. i. e. quando duo termini ſive res diſtinctæ in propoſitione comparantur duobus terminis ſive rebus diſtinctis in redditione. Occurrit autem hæc forma & cum notis & ſine notis. Notæ ſunt, qualis, talis; illa propoſitionis, hæc redditionis nota eſt. Item quemadmodum, ut, ſicut, propoſitionis; quibus reſpondent, Sic, eodem modo, ſimiliter, redditionis. Ecl. 5.

Tale tuum carmen nobis, divine poeta,
Quale ſopor feſſis in gramine.

Carmen ad auditorem, ut ſopor ad feſſum, termini quatuor diſtincti ſunt. Ad Frat. 1. Quemadmodum gubernatores optimi vim tempeſtatis, ſic ſapientiſſimi viri fortunæ impetum perſæpe ſuperare non poſſunt. Hîc quatuor ſunt item termini, ut gubernator ad tempeſtatem, ſic ſapiens ad fortunam. 1 Triſt.

Scilicet ut fulvum ſpectatur in ignibus aurum,
Tempore ſic duro eſt inſpicienda fides.

Hos ego verſiculos feci, tulit alter honores:
Sic vos non vobis nidificatis aves:
Sic vos non vobis mellificatis apes: &c.

In hoc exemplo redditio ſine nota præcedit. Particula autem Sic quæ nota ſolet eſſe redditionis, hîc propoſitioni attribuitur.

Aliquando nulla prorſus eſt nota. Virgilius Ecloga 2.

O formoſe puer, nimium ne crede colori.

Continua ſimilitudo eſt, quando eſt ut primus terminus ad ſecundum, ita ſecundus ad tertium. Leg. 3. Ut magiſtratibus leges, ita populo præſunt magiſtratus. Hîc termini ſunt tres; lex, magiſtratus, populus. Sed medius bis adhibetur, & in omni proportione continua continuatur; éſtque poſterior terminus propoſitionis, prior redditionis. In omni enim proportione termini eſſe debent ad minimum quatuor. Ordo hujus ſic eſt: ut leges magiſtratibus, ita magiſtratus populo præſunt.

Quanquam autem ſimilia magis ad illuſtrandum quàm ad probandum accommodata ſunt, & Plato in Phædone, Ego, inquit, ſermones qui ex ſimilibus demonſtrationes ſumunt, probè novi ad oſtentationem comparatos eſſe; & niſi quis caveat ab iis, facile imponunt, quod ad regulas tamen conſequentiarum attinet, ex definitione ſimilium perſpicitur, ſimilium ſimilem eſſe rationem; valere igitur ſimilia in utramque partem. Unde Ariſtot. Top. 24. Quod in aliquo ſimili valet, in aliis quoque ſimilibus valebit; & quod non in aliquo, nec in cæteris.

Quoniam autem ſimilitudo non ſolùm eſt propoſitionis & redditionis, ſed terminorum etiam inter ſe. Idcirco ſi quædam ſimilia ſunt, inverſè quoque ſimilia erunt, & alternè. Et inverſè quidem duobus modis; inverſione ſcilicet vel propoſitionis & redditionis, quæ aliorum comparatorum communis eſt; vel terminorum, quæ videtur ſimilium propria. Exempli gratia; ut gubernator ad tempeſtatem, ſic ſapiens ad fortunam: inverſè ergo; ut ſapiens ad fortunam, ſic gubernator ad tempeſtatem. Hæc propoſitionis & redditionis inverſio eſt. Rurſus, ut tempeſtas ad gubernatorem, ſic fortuna ad ſapientem: hæc inverſio eſt terminorum. Alternatio eſt quando antecedens propoſitionis antecedenti redditionis & conſequens conſequenti comparatur. Regula ergo hîc eſt; ſi quædam ſimilia fuerint, alternè ſimilia erunt. Ut gubernator ad tempeſtatem, ſic ſapiens ad fortunam: ergo, alternè; ut gubernator ad ſapientem, ſic tempeſtas ad fortunam. Inverſionum hujuſmodi & alternationum in Mathematicis proportionibus uſus maximus eſt: ſed proportio non Mathematica ſolùm, verùm etiam Logica eſt, ut ſupradiximus, rerum omnium communis; ejus ergo regulæ non erant hîc omittendæ.

CAP. XXII.

De Similibus.

Contrariorum enim eadem ſcientia eſt. Et Cic. in Top. ejuſdem eſt, inquit, diſſimile & ſimile invenire. In hoc differunt diſſimilia à diverſis, quod diſſimilitudo ſit differentia comparata, & non eidem, eodem ſaltem tempore, ſed diverſis plerumque ſubjectis attribuatur. Itaque diverſorum uno negotio, alterum affirmatur; diſſimilia ſive diverſa ſive oppoſita, ſimul affirmari aut negari poſſunt. Diverſa autem qualitas eſt non eadem; ſive diverſa ſit ſive oppoſita: quaſi dicas diſſimilium diſſimilis eſt ratio. Argumentum igitur diſſimilitudinis eſt, quando diſſimile arguitur à diſſimili.

Contractæ diſſimilitudinis notæ ſunt diſſimile, diſpar, differens, aliud, ſecus: Pro Planc. Diſſimilis eſt debitio pecunia & gratia. Ennius: O domus antiqua, heu quàm diſpari dominare domino. Diſpar autem eſt non impar, ſed diſſimilis. Caſar 1. bell. Gal. Hi omnes linguâ, inſtitutis, legibus inter ſe differunt. 2 Agrar. Alio vultu, alio vocis ſono, alio inceſſu eſſe meditabatur. Cic. 2. Nat. Quoniam cœpi ſecus agere, atque initio dixeram.

Ut nec canibus catuli, nec matribus hœdi, ſic nec Mantua Roma ſimilis eſt. In hoc exemplo erroris confeſſio pro negatione ſimilium eſt.

Explicata diſſimilitudo itidem cum notis eſt vel ſine notis. Notæ ſunt hîc etiam negationes ſimilium. 3. Philip. Certus dies non ut ſacrificii ſic conſilii expectari ſolet.

Diſſimilitudo eſt diei & vitæ noſtræ. Redditio eſt vitam ſemel amiſſam non reſtitui. Illuſtratur à diſſimili, quæ propoſitio eſt, ſoles occidere & redire poſſunt.

CAP. XXIII.

De Conjugatis.

HActenus prima argumenta ſunt expoſita: quorum tria genera fuere; conſentanea, diſſentanea, & comparata.

Sequuntur orta de primis; quæ ad id quod arguunt perinde ſunt ut prima unde oriuntur: ut conjugata & notatio, diſtributio & definitio.

In ſe itaque habent vim arguendi ut argumenta artificialia, & eandem quidem cum iis unde oriuntur: non autem à ſe, quia non prima, ut in capite ſecundo jam dictum eſt. Definitionem autem vix aliam requirunt præter ipſum nomen quod naturam eorum ſatis per ſe explicat: unde illud conſectarium, Orta argumenta perinde eſſe ad id quod arguunt, ut ſunt prima unde oriuntur.

Quatuor hæ ſpecies ortorum, in duo genera, anonyma licet, diſtinguuntur, cùm propter dichotomiæ ſtudium, tum quia conjugata & notatio ſub eodem genere continentur, propter illam quæ inter ea intercedit communionem. Cicero itaque in Top. locum ex conjugatis notationi finitimum eſſe dixit. Et in multis exemplis conjugata à notatione & nomine nihil aut parum differunt. Communio autem illa duplex eſt: primò quòd ſunt argumenta nominalia ſive à nomine petita. Sed in hoc differunt, ut etiam tradit Boet. l. 4. in Top. Cic. quod notatio expoſitione nominis, conjugatio ſimilitudine vocabuli ac derivatione perficitur. Neque idcirco ad Grammaticam pertinent: ex vi enim nominum argumenta petere, Logici eſt, non Grammatici. Secunda communio eſt, quòd ſunt orta ſimplicia: neque enim ex pluribus primis ſimul conjunctis, ſed ex uno aliquo argumento primo ſingula eorum exempla oriuntur, niſi in nominibus compoſitis: compoſitorum enim nominum compoſita interdum ex pluribus argumentis notatio eſt. Diſtributio autem & definitio ſunt argumenta realia, i. e. in rerum explicatione verſari ſolent, & compoſita, i. e. ex pluribus argumentis primis ſimul conjunctis originem ſuam trahunt. Si ergo ortorum genera, quæ anonyma eſſe diximus, nominibus diſtinguere lubet, orta erunt vel nominalia & ſimplicia, ut conjugata & notatio, vel realia & compoſita, ut diſtributio & definitio: niſi hoc fortè excipiamus, quod definitio ex uno primo, i. e. ex ſola forma nonnunquam conſtare poteſt. Ex his autem duobus generibus prius tractandum eſt illud cui conjugata & notatio ſubjiciuntur, quia ferè ſimplicius eſt. Atque in hoc genere conjugata priorem ſibi locum vendicant, quod ex ſolis conſentaneis oriantur, cùm notatio ex quovis argumento primo petatur. Fabius l. 5. c. 10. Conjugata nihili facit: Ariſtoteles autem & Cicero in Topicis ſuis aliter ſentiunt: quorum ille, l. 3. c. 4. & l. 7. c. 2. locos ex diſſentaneis, conjugatis & caſibus plurimum ait valere; & ad plurima eſſe utiles.

Conjugata ſunt nomina ab eodem principio variè deducta. Ut juſtitia, juſtus, juſtè. Ariſtoteles & Cicero conjugata, ille, nomina ejuſdem conjugationis; hic, ejuſdem generis eſſe definiunt: ſed neque ille quaſi jugum ipſum conjugatorum, neque hic genus, neque noſter principium ipſum ſive originem & thema conjugatorum numero excludit. Conjugata autem ſunt omnia non ſolùm nomina tam ſubſtantiva quàm adjectiva, ſed etiam verba, &, quæ Ariſtoteles caſus vocat, adverbia, cùm paronuma, i. e. derivata, tum ipſa themata, ſervatis tamen iſtis conditionibus. 1. Si ut idem ſonant, ſic idem etiam ſignificant. 2. Si in eadem ſignificationis ratione ſumantur. Nam ſi unum ſignificat potentiam ſive facultatem aut habitum, alterum verò actum & ex potentia ſive habitu arguatur actus aut contra, captio eſt. 3. Si in iis ſymbolum ſit conſentaneorum argumentorum, i. e. ſi à conſentaneis orta ſunt: quorum vim & affectionem in arguendo aliis nominibus iiſque conjugatis referant: quorum etiam ad inventionem nominalis hujuſce conjugationis indicio ducamur: unde elucet non contemnendus hujus loci uſus, præſertim in definitionibus.

Sequuntur exempla; ut juſtitia, juſtus, juſtè. Cujuſmodi in exemplis obſervandum eſt, abſtractum quod vocant, cauſam eſſe concreti, & concretum adverbii. Ut juſtitia eſt cauſa, cur aliquis ſit juſtus: & quia juſtus eſt, idcirco juſtè agit. Quod tamen non eſt ubique verum: ſanum enim, i. e. quod efficit aut conſervat ſanitatem, cauſa eſt ſanitatis, concretum ſcilicet abſtracti, ut notat Ariſtot. top. 2. 3. Propert. lib. 2.

Libertas quoniam nulli jam reſtat amanti,
Nullus liber erit, ſiquis amare velit.

Hîc libertas quæ cauſa eſt cur ſis liber, quia non reſtat, ergo nullus, &c. Cicero 3. de Nat. Deor. cùm de Dionyſio tyranno loquitur: Jam menſas argenteas de omnibus delubris juſſit auferri, in quibus quòd more veteris Græciæ inſcriptum eſſet bonorum deorum, uti eorum bonitate velle ſe dicebat: dii boni ſunt: eorum igitur bonitate eſt utendum. Hîc ex effectis ad cauſas eſt diſputatum; ut vult Ramus: ut mihi quidem videtur à cauſis ad affecta. Terent. Homo ſum, humani à me nihil alienum puto.

puto. Ex ſubjecto eſt ad adjunctum. In Piſon. Cum eſſet omnis illa cauſa conſularis & ſenatoria, auxilio mihi opus fuerat & conſulis & ſenatus. Ex adjunctis eſt ad ſubjectum. Phil. 2. Non tractabo ut conſulem, ne ille quidem me ut conſularem. Ex effecto eſt ad cauſam: nam eſſe conſulem cauſa eſt ut quis poſtea ſit conſularis: unde ſic arguitur; non agnoſcit is in me effectum, non agnoſcam ergo in eo cauſam. Notandum eſt nonnulla ſenſu duntaxat, non ſono eſſe conjugata: ut, ſomnus, dormiens; morbus, æger.

CAP. XXIV.

De Notatione.

N*Otatio eſt nominis interpretatio.* i. e. reddita ratio cur quidvis ita nominatum ſit. Definitio autem hæc eſt Boëthi, l. 1. in Cic. Top. Notatio inquit Cic. in Top. Græcis etymologia dicitur, i. e. verbum ex verbo veroloquium: nos autem novitatem verbi non ſatis apti fugientes, genus hoc notationem appellamus, quia ſunt verba rerum notæ. Hæc ille. Ex iis igitur quæ ſupradicta ſunt, intelligi poteſt, notationem eſſe argumentum ortum adeóque ſymbolum alicujus primi; eſſe nominale, i. e. ut Cicero loquitur, argumentum ex vi nominis elicitum.

Quippe nomina ſunt notæ rerum & cujuſlibet nominis vel derivati vel compoſiti, ſiquidem notatione vera nomen inditum fuit, ratio reddi poteſt ex aliquo argumento primo.

Ut homo ab humo. Hæc à materia eſt notatio. Sed linguæ, cùm prima illa quam Adamus in Edene, tum illæ variæ atque à prima fortaſſis ortæ, quas conditores turris Babelicæ ſubito acceperunt, divinitus proculdubio datæ ſunt; unde vocum primitivarum ratio ſi ignoretur, mirum non eſt: quæ autem voces derivatæ ſunt aut compoſitæ, vel earum origines ex aliis linguis antiquis jamque obſoletis petendæ ſunt, vel ipſæ vetuſtate aut infimæ plebis inquinata fere pronuntiatione ita immutata, mendoſe etiam ſcribendi conſuetudine ita quaſi obliteratæ, ut vera vocum notatio raro admodum teneatur. Unde argumentum à notatione, niſi ea fortè manifeſtiſſima ſit, fallax admodum & ſæpe ludicrum eſt.

Nunc reliqua exempla videamus. Ovid. 6 Faſt.

Stat vi terra ſua; vi ſtando Veſta vocatur.

Terra dicitur Veſta ab effecto ſuo naturali, propterea quod vi ſua ſtat.

At locus à flammis & quod fovet omnia dictus.

Ex effectis eſt notatio. Item Verr. 4. O Verrea præclara! Quò enim acceſſiſti, quo non attuleris tecum iſtum diem? Etenim quam tu domum, quam urbem adiiſti, quod fanum denique, quod non everſum atque exterſum reliqueris? Quare appellantur ſanè iſta Verrea, quæ non ex nomine, ſed ex moribus naturaq; tua conſtituta eſſe videantur. Ex effectis item eſt notatio. Ovid. 1. Faſt.

Prima dies tibi, Carna, datur, dea cardinis hæc eſt.

Notatio hæc è ſubjecto eſt, cardine ſcilicet, in quo verſando dea illa exercebatur. Hinc illa cavillatio in Antonium generum: Tuæ conjugis bonæ fœminæ, locupletis quidem certè, Bambalio quidam pater, homo nullo numero, nihil illo contemptius; qui propter hæſitantium linguæ ſtuporémque cordis, cognomen ex contumelia traxerit. Ex adjunctis eſt notatio hæc Bambalionis, quia balbus & ſtupidus. E diſſentaneis autem ſunt illa apud Quintil. l. 1. c. 6. Lucus, quia umbra opacus parum luceat: & ludus, quia ſit longiſſimè à luſu: & Dis quia minimè dives. Eſt etiam è comparatis notatio pyropi, quòd ignis quondam ſpeciem præbeat.

Atque hactenus de notatione: nunc aliquid de nomine adjiciendum eſt. Eſt enim ut notationi ad ſuum nomen, ſic nomini ad notationem ſua affectio: Hoc eſt, ut notatio arguit nomen, ſic nomen viciſſim arguit notationem. Ut animi plenus, ergo animoſus; & contrà, animoſus, ergo animi plenus. Nam & nomen quoque ortum argumentum eſt; ex quo autem fonte oriatur, notatio declarat. Hæc autem appendicula de nomine idcirco eſt adjecta, quia cum alia argumenta inter ſe affecta, quot quidem eodem nomine ac definitione non ſunt comprehenſa, ſua ſeorſum capita ſibi habuerint, & tantillum eſſet quod de nomine dicendum erat, non videbatur caput novum ob id eſſe inſtituendum. In hoc igitur capite duo loci inventionis continentur, notationis & nominis: inter quos ſi comparatio fiat, potior videtur nominis. Unde tota hæc categoria ab Ariſtotele locus à nomine dicitur. Sæpiúſque & firmius à nomine quàm à notatione argumentum ducitur; ut homo eſt, ergo ex humo; focus eſt, ergo fovet. At non eadem vi argumentum à notatione deducitur; ex humo eſt, homo igitur; fovet omnia, ergo focus eſt.

CAP. XXV.

De Diſtributione.

Reliquam eſt exortis aliunde argumentis argumentum diſtributionis & definitionis.

Reciprocatio autem hoc loco eſt qua prorſus idem, eadémque, ut ita dicam, eſſentia utrinque ſignificatur: nam partes omnes ſimul ſumptæ, i. e. rite compoſitæ, idem ſunt quod totum, & definitio idem quod definitum; quod de nullo præterea genere argumentorum dici poteſt. Unde naſcitur hæc regula utrique huic argumento communis, ut in diſtributione ac definitione nequid deſit nequid redundet: nam ubi reciprocatio, ibi quoque æqualitas requiritur. Hinc eximia illa diſtributionis & definitionis laus effloruit; ex iis nempe artium inſtitutiones maxima ex parte conſtare. Cùm n. omnia artium præcepta conſtare debeant ex argumentis reciprocis, reciprocatio autem nuſquam alibi reperiatur niſi inter formam (quæ ipſa in definitionibus comprehendi ſolet) & formatum, inter ſubjectum & proprium adjunctum; hinc factum eſt ut præcepta omnia vel definitiones ſint vel diſtributiones vel regulæ quædam ſive conſectaria, quæ proprietatum explicationes dicuntur.

Pars eſt, quæ continetur à toto.

Totum Logicè & generaliter dicitur, quicquid quocunque modo diſtribuitur & partes continet: pars, quæ quocunque modo continetur à toto.

Inter hanc autem inductionem & diſtributionem nullum aliud diſcrimen eſt, niſi quòd diſtributio à toto ad partes, hæc verò à partibus ad totum progreditur. Quamobrem, ut ſupra, nomen ad notationem, ita hîc inductio ad diſtributionem referenda eſt; non ad ſyllogiſmos, ut plerique volunt; cùm non alio modo ab inductione argumentemur atque à diſtributione: ſiquidem eadem eſt via Thebis Athenas quæ Athenis Thebas. Inductionis autem auctorem Ariſtoteles agnoſcit Socratem: ejuſq; neceſſitatem tantam eſſe teſtatur, ut cùm ſcientia univerſalium ſit, univerſalia cognoſcere nequeamus niſi per inductionem. Inductionis ergo ope præcepta artium inventa ſunt; ut in proœmio monuimus.

Sed diſſenſio illa non eſt diſtributionis diſſenſio (nunquam n. diſſentaneum in diſſentaneum diſtribuitur) ſed partium diſtributarum.

Itaque tanto accuratior erit diſtributio, quanto partium & cum toto conſenſio & inter ſe diſſenſio major fuerit.

Hinc efficitur, eam diſtributionem accuratiſſimam eſſe, quæ in duas partes fit; eáque dichotomia dicitur: diſſenſio enim inter duo maxima eſt; & contrariorum unum uni tàntum opponitur. Platonis itaque regula eſt: oportet in quàm proximum fieri poteſt numerum ſemper dividere. Quod ſi dichotomiam invenire non queamus, difficile n. eſt eam ſemper invenire, ſpecies bisbinas ponere interdum præſtat, quaſi ſub duobus generibus, licet anonymis, quàm quatuor ſub uno. Hæc n. diſtributionis forma, licet non ſit optima, eſt tamen optimæ proxima. Hac ratione ſuprà cap. 3. Ramus diviſit cauſas, in duo genera anonyma nempe efficientem & materiam, aut formam & finem. Eff. Ubi autem dichotomia nullo modo commodè adhiberi poteſt, multis protinus differentiis res dividenda eſt, ut Ariſtoteles monet. Neque enim propter dichotomiæ ſtudium diſtributio vel mutilanda vel implicanda aut confundenda eſt.

CAP.

CAP. XXVI.

De Diſtributione ex cauſis.

DIſtributio prima eſt ex abſolutè conſentaneis, cauſis nempe & effectis. Diſtributio ex cauſis eſt, quando partes ſunt cauſa totius.

Hîc diſtributio integri in ſua membra pracipuè laudatur.

Integrum eſt totum, cui partes ſunt eſſentiales. i. e. quod ex partibus totam ſuam eſſentiam complectentibus conſtituitur; ideóque ſymbolum eſt effecti ex materia per formam exiſtentes.

Membrum eſt pars integri.

Nimirum integro ſuo eſſentialis. Sive ut Ariſtot. Phil. 8. 15. Membra ſunt ex quibus integrum componitur. Et membra quidem ſymbola ſunt cauſarum eſſentialium, materiæ nimirum & formæ, in quibus tota integri eſſentia conſiſtit: ſingula n. membra materiam continent; cuncta ſimul, ipſam quoque formam. Sic Grammatica in etymologiam & ſyntaxin; Rhetorica in elocutionem & actionem; Logica in inventionem & diſpoſitionem argumentorum dividitur. Ab his n. partib. artes illa conſtituuntur; non tanquam ex cauſis, ſed tanquam ex cauſarum ſymbolis. Cùm enim eſſentia Dialecticæ partim communis ſit materia ſcilicet, i. e. præcepta, & forma etiam nempe methodica illorum præceptorum diſpoſitio; partim propria, quæ in bene diſſerendo poſita eſt, tota hæc Dialecticæ eſſentia in inventione & diſpoſitione comprehenditur. Nec tamen partes iſtæ ſunt ipſa materia, i. e. præcepta, nec ipſa forma communis, i. e. methodica præceptorum diſpoſitio, nec propria, i. e. ipſa facultate diſſerendi; ſed ex præceptis methodicè diſpoſitis conflatæ ſunt, & ipſa facultas diſſerendi inventionis & diſpoſitionis finibus continetur.

Quæ ſequuntur apud authorem noſtrum exempla duo, alterum ex Virgilio, Georg. 1. alterum ex Cicerone pro Muræna, objectis utraque diſtinguuntur, non cauſis; ideóque ad cap. 28. ad diſtributionem nempe è ſubjectis, ad quam etiam præmiſſa illa annotatio de uſu pertinet.

Hac de re Ariſtoteles, Top. 6. 6. Regulas quaſdam tradit. Primo à partibus: affirmatis partibus cunctis, affirmatur totum: & contrà; ſublatis partibus cunctis, tolli totum. Item ab una parte: una parte ſublata, totum tolli. Secundo à toto ad partes: toto affirmato, affirmantur partes. Verùm hæc omnia ex illa reciprocationis regula ſuperioris capitis initio tradita ſatis intelliguntur. Nam quæ reciprocantur, eorum alterum ex altero viciſſim & neceſſariò affirmatè & negatè concluditur. Hoc verò, ut Ariſtoteles etiam notavit, non ſequitur; ſublato integro, partes tolluntur.

Quintia formoſa eſt multis: mihi candida, longa,
Recta eſt: hac ego ſic ſingula confiteor:
Totum illud, formoſa, nego. Nam nulla venuſtas,
Nulla in tam magno eſt corpore mica ſalis.
Lesbia formoſa eſt: qua cùm pulcherrima tota eſt,
Tum omnibus una omnes ſurripuit veneres.

Eſt & alia diſtributio ex cauſis & meritò quidem imperfectior dicta, cùm non tam ipſius rei quàm ejus cauſarum diſtributio ſit: ut ab efficiente, teſtimonium eſt divinum vel humanum. Sic ſtatuæ veteres aliæ factæ erant à Phydia, aliæ à Polycleto, &c. Diſtributio hæc quædam eſt totius in partes; ubi tamen non tam partes ipſæ ponuntur quàm pro iis earum efficientis, quibus inter ſe diſtinguuntur. Sic ſtatuæ aliæ erant aureæ, aliæ argenteæ, aliæ æneæ, aliæ eburneæ, &c. Diſtributio eſt ex materia. Aliæ ad hominum, aliæ ad brutorum effigiem factæ; eſt diſtributio à forma externa. Aliæ factæ ſunt ad uſum religioſum, aliæ ad civilem; eſt diſtributio à fine.

CAP. XXVII.

De Diſtributione ex effectis, ubi de genere & ſpecie.

Diſtributio ex effectis eſt, quando partes ſunt effecta.

Diſtributio generis in ſpecies hic excellit.

Nonnulli ex Cicerone diſtributionem integri in membra partitionem vocant; generis in ſpecies diviſionem. Nec de nihilo ſanè: membra enim copulari, ſpecies disjungi ſolent.

Genus eſt totum partibus eſſentiale.

Id quo contrarium eſt integro: illic enim toti partes, hîc totum partibus eſt eſſentiale: unde conſtat, illam ex cauſis, hanc ex effectis diſtributionem rectè dici. Genus autem eſt totum partibus eſſentiale, quia illam eſſentiam nempe materiam & formam, quæ ſpeciebus omnibus æquè communis eſt, ſignificatione ſua complectitur: vel brevius, quia ſymbolum eſt communis eſſentiæ. Neque enim genus propriè eſſentiam ſpeciebus communicat (cùm in ſe extra ſpecies reverà nihil ſit) ſed earum duntaxat eſſentiam ſignificet. Quod enim eſſentiale eſt & ſpeciebus omnibus commune, ejus notio genus dicitur. Et idæa ſæpe à Græcis, non ſeparata quidem à rebus illa, ut velunt Platonica, quæ nugæ ſunt, teſte Ariſtot. Phil. 1. 7. & v. 5. Sed quod cogitatione & ratione unum & idem eſt ſpecieb. multis commune in quibus re & natura eſt ſingulatim, ut Plato in Menone. Stoici etiam Idæas, ut refert Plut. de Placit. 1. 10. noſtras notiones eſſe dixerunt.

Species eſt pars generis.

Sic etiam Ariſtoteles, Phil. 8. 25. Et Cicero, Invent. 1. Pars quæ generi ſubeſt. Ex definitione autem generis intelligimus ſpeciem ejuſmodi partem eſſe cujus eſſentia communis in generis ſignificatione contineatur. Propriam autem eſſentiam ſpecies, per quam eſt id quod eſt, à propria forma habet, quæ generis ſignificatione minime continetur. Sic etiam Ariſtot. Phil. ζ. 12. Genus non videtur particeps eſſe differentiarum: ſimul n. contrariorum idem particeps eſſet; differentiæ n. contrariæ ſunt. Unde illud; Plus eſt in ſpecie quam in genere: & illud Porphyrii; differentia eſt quâ ſpecies ſuperat genus. Tota igitur generis eſſentia ſingulis æqualiter ineſt ſpeciebus; at tota eſſentia ſpeciei non eſt in genere, niſi potentia, ut inquit Porphirius. Hinc ut ſpecies eſt pars generis, ita genus pars eſſe ſpeciei quodammodo videtur: quod & Plato in Politico notavit. Sic animal genus hominis & beſtiæ dicimus. Animal enim eſt totum, cujus eſſentia, nempe corporea, animata, ſentiens, ad hominem & beſtiam communiter attinet. Sic dicimus hominem & beſtiam ſpecies animalis; quia partes ſunt animali ſubjectæ, quæ animalis eſſentiam communem habent.

Genus eſt generaliſſimum aut ſubalternum.

Genus generaliſſimum, cujus nullum eſt genus.

Ut in Logica inventione argumentum eſt genus generaliſſimum artificialium & inartificialium.

Id eſt, quod nunc genus eſt, nunc ſpecies: genus, ſi ad ſpecies ſibi ſubjectas referatur; ſpecies, ſi ad ſuum genus.

Sic cauſa, genus eſt materiæ & formæ; ſpecies, argumenti abſolutè conſentanei. Sic homo eſt genus ſubalternum, ſive ſpecies ſubalterna: ſpecies quidem, ſi ad animal referas; genus, ſi ad ſingulos homines.

Species ſpecialiſſima eſt, quæ individua eſt in ſpecies alias.

Ut materia & forma quæque ſingularis. Sic homines ſinguli ſunt ſpecies ſpecialiſſimæ hominis, & ſinguli leones leonis.

Logicorum quidem pars maxima hominem ſpeciem ſpecialiſſimam, ſingulos homines individua vocant, non ſpecies. Verùm ut animal eſt totum cujus eſſentia communis, nempe corporea, animata, ſentiens, ad hominem & beſtiam communiter attinet; ſic homo eſt totum, cujus communis eſſentia rationalis communiter ad ſingulos attinet homines; atque ut homo & beſtia ſpecies ſunt animalis, quia partes ſunt animali ſubjectæ, quæ animalis eſſentiam communem habent; ita ſinguli homines ſpecies ſunt hominis, quia partes ſunt homini ſubjectæ, jectæ, quæ hominis eſſentiam communem habent: ergo homo non minus eſt ſingulorum hominum genus quàm animal hominis; homines ſinguli non minus ſunt hominis ſpecies, quàm homo animalis. Singuli enim homines propria forma differunt: quæ autem forma differunt propria, differunt & ſpecie; teſte Ariſtot. Phyſ. 1. 7. Deinde, quicquid differt, aut genere differt aut ſpecie; teſte eodem Ariſtot. Phil. 10. 3. differre autem genere ſingulos homines nemo dixerit; differunt ergo ſpecie. Nam quod aiunt hominem eſſe ſpeciem ſingulorum hominum, id planè abſurdum eſt: ſpecies enim pars eſt ejus cujus eſt ſpecies; ut ex ejus definitione conſtat: genus porrò & ſpecies cùm relata ſint, genus utique erit ſpeciei genus; ſpecies, generis erit ſpecies. Si igitur homo, ut vulgò volunt, eſt ſpecies ſingulorum hominum; ſinguli homines erunt genus hominis; quod nimis abſurdum eſt. At inquiunt ſinguli homines numero tantum differunt, non forma. Verùm quæ numero differunt, forma quoque differre, jam ſupra capite de Forma ſatis oſtendimus; etſi formæ cujuſque propriæ differentia nobis non niſi per externa quædam effecta, & accidentia, quæ vocant, dignoſci poteſt. Deinde, ſinguli homines inter ſe diſparantur, ergo opponuntur: quæ autem inter ſe opponuntur, eodem eadem forma eſſe non poteſt; forma ergo differunt non numero tantum. Itaque apud Laertium, in Zenone, Stoici docent, Socratem eſſe, ſpeciem ſpecialiſſimam. Immo Ariſtot. de Part. 1. 4. Socratem & Coriſcum ſpecies infimas vocat. Sic juriſconſulti, hominem genus appellant; Stichum & Pamphilum ſpecies.

In animali n. eſt eſſentia corporea, quæ materia eſt ad ſpecies communiter attinens: tum facultas vitæ & ſenſus, quæ forma item communiter ad ſpecies ſpectat. Quare genus continet cauſas, qua communiter ad ipſius ſpecies attinent: contra itaque etiam ſpecies effecta generis ſui continent.

Idem ait Ariſtot. Poſter. 1. 24.

Diſtributio generis in ſpecies valdè quidem excellit, ſed difficilis eſt & rara inventu.

Excellit quidem quia quicquid in artibus ex cauſis & effectis ſumitur, id totum ferè generis & ſpeciei notionibus comprehenditur: difficilis eſt, cùm quia formæ, unde ſpecies oriuntur, difficiles itidem inventu ſunt; tum etiam propter vocum penuriam, quibus genera & ſpecies apte nominentur.

Attamen illuſtrationis & exempli gratia afferemus quod poterimus. Ovidius 1 Metam. dividit animal in quinque ſpecies, ſtellas, aves, beſtias, piſces, homines: ſtellis animam tribuens, ut etiam quidam Philoſophi tribuerunt.

Neu regio foret ulla ſuis animalibus orba,
Aſtra tenent cœleſte ſolum forméque deorum, &c.

Sic Cic. Offic. 1. Virtutem dividit in ſpecies quatuor, prudentiam, juſtitiam, fortitudinem, temperantiam; quæ tamen ipſæ non ponuntur in diſtributione, ſed, quod idem eſt, earum formæ. Sed omne quod honeſtum eſt, id quatuor partium oritur ex aliqua: aut enim in perſpicentia veri ſolertiáque verſatur, aut in ſocietate hominum tuenda, tribuendóque ſuum unicuique, & rerum contractarum fide; aut in animi excelſi atque invicti magnitudine ac robore; aut in omnibus qua fiunt, quaque dicuntur, ordine & modo, in quo ineſt modeſtia & temperantia.

Hæc quidem, ut dixi, eſt diſtributio generis in ſpecierum formas; quæ perinde eſt ac ſi in ipſa ſpecies eſſet; quia forma cum genere conſtituunt ſuas ſpecies.

Genus & ſpecies non ſolum tractantur hac ſimplici diviſionis formula, ſed etiam ſeparatim alterum ex altero.

Hoc eſt, quod de toto genere, id de omnibus etiam ſpeciebus rectè affirmatur. Sic Cicero, pro Archia, poëticam cum eloquentia comparans, quæ ſunt ſpecies artis, cognatas eſſe ait inter ſe, quia idem de artibus in genere, humanioribus præſertim, affirmatur. Etenim omnes artes, qua ad humanitatem pertinent, habent quoddam commune vinculum, & quaſi cognatione quadam inter ſe continentur.

Contra genus tractatur per ſpecies.

Hoc eſt, quod de omnibus ſpeciebus, id de genere quoque rectè affirmatur. Sic Ovidius probat, virtutem in rebus adverſis clariorem eſſe, per inductionem ſpecierum: quoniam ſcilicet virtus militis, nautæ, medici, rebus adverſis ſpectatur, 4 Triſt.

Hectora quis noſſet, felix ſi Troia fuiſſet?
Publica virtuti per mala facta via eſt:
Ars tua, Tiphy, jacet, ſi non ſit in æquore fluctus:
Si valeant homines, ars tua, Phæbe, jacet.
Qua latet, inque bonis ceſſat non cognita rebus,
Apparet virtus arguitùrque malis.

Cùm itaque genus tractetur etiam per ſpecies, ut ſuperiore regula docemur, & exempla ſpecialia ſpecies eorum ſint, quorum exempla ſunt; hinc ſequitur, exempla ſpecialia ſuo generi accommodata, hujus eſſe loci; ſive unum ſolum, ſive per inductionem plura adhibeantur: ſpecialia inquam, exempla enim vel ſimilia ſunt, quæ ſimilia arguunt; vel ſpecialia, quæ arguunt ſuum genus; qualia fuerunt in ſingulis argumentorum captibus ex poëtis & oratoribus deſumpta. Exemplorum autem ſpecialium, non ſolum in artib. cùm inveniendis tum tradendis uſus planè eſt neceſſarius (nam inductione exemplorum præcepta colliguntur, & eorum uſu illuſtrantur) verùm etiam in omni ſermone, quoties res lucem deſiderat. Cujuſmodi eſt illud Cic. ad Atticum: Urbem tu relinquas? Ergo idem ſi Galli venirent. Non eſt, inquit, in parietibus reſpub. at in aris & focis: fecit idem Themiſtocles: fluctum enim totius barbariæ ferre urbs una non poterat. At idem Pericles non fecit, annum ferè poſt quinquageſimum, quum præter mœnia nihil teneret: noſtri olim urbe reliqua capta, arcem tamen retinuerunt. Hîc ab exemplo ſpeciali in utramque partem diſſeritur. Themiſtocles deſeruit Athenas; ergo urbem deſerere licet. Pericles non deſeruit Athenas; nec Romani Gallis venientibus Romam; ergo urbs non eſt deſerenda. Quod ſi hoc modo argumentaretur, Themiſtocles urbem reliquit, ergo mihi licet; argumentum eſſet à ſimili: nam exempla, cùm ad alia ſpecialia accommodantur, ſimilia ſunt vel diſſimilia. Hujus autem loci ea demum ſunt, quæ generi ſuo accommodantur.

Eſt & alia imperfectior diſtributio ex effectis, quando partes non ſunt propriè effecta totius, ſed ipſarum partium. Ut Cic. de Senect. Nautarum alii malos ſcandunt, alii per foros curſitant, alii ſentinam exhauriunt; gubernator autem clavum tenet in puppi. In hoc exemplo totum eſt nauta, quod eſt ſingulorum nautarum genus; partes, malum ſcandere, curſitare, &c. Quæ tamen nautæ ut totius ſive generis partes ſive ſpecies non ſunt, ſed ſpecierum, i. e. ſingulorum nautarum effecta ſive officià, quibus ipſæ ſpecies, i. e. ſinguli nautæ inter ſe diſtinguuntur. Verùm quanto hæc diſtributio imperfectior eſt, tanto eſt frequentior. Uſus autem illius præcipuus eſt, ut perfectioris raritatem ſuppleat; cùm diſtributio generis in ſpecies, ut ſupradictum eſt, tam difficilis inventu ſit.

CAP. XXVIII.

De Diſtributione è ſubjectis.

R*Eliqua deſtributio eſt modo quodam conſentaneorum, ut ſubjectorum & adjunctorum. Diſtributio è ſubjectis eſt, cùm partes ſunt ſubjecta.* Id eſt quando veræ partes intellectæ ſubjectis diſtinguuntur vel adumbrantur.

Ut apud Catullum:

Virginitas non tota tua eſt: ex parte parentum eſt.
Tertia pars matri data, pars data tertia patri:
Tertia ſola tua eſt: noli pugnare duobus,
Qui genero ſua jura ſimul cum dote dederunt.

Virginitas puellæ vel jus potius virginitatis in tres partes dividitur ſubjectis diſtinctas, matre, patre & ipſa puella. Alterum exemplum ex cap. 26. huc transfertur, Virgil. 1. Georg. Ubi poëta exorditur opus ſuum à diviſione in quatuor partes, ſubjectis ſuis occupantibus diſtinctas, ſegetes, arbores, pecora, apes.

Quid faciat lætas ſegetes, quo ſidere terram
Vertere, Mæcenas, ulmiſque adjungere vites
Conveniat: quæ cura boum, qui cultus habendo
Sit pecori, atque apibus quanta experientia parcis,
Hinc [illegible]ere incipi[illegible] —

Tertium exemplum ex eodem etiam capite huc transfertur. Cic. pro Murena: Intelligo Judices, tres totius accuſationis partes fuiſſe: & earum unam in reprehenſione vitæ, alteram in contentione dignitatis, tertiam in criminibus ambitûs eſſe verſatam. Hîc tota accuſatio in tria membra diſtribuitur, ſubjectis ſuis occupantibus diſtincta: atque in his tribus exemplis totum eſt integrum. Quartum exemplum eſt generis in ſpecies ex Cic. 5. Tuſcul. Sint ſanè illa tria genera bonorum, dum corporis & externa jaceant humi, & tantummodo quia ſumenda ſunt, appellentur bona. Alia autem, divina illa, longè latéque ſe pandant, cœlúmque contingant. Hîc Cicero bona in tres ſpecies, quas ille genera vocat, dividit, ſubjectis ſuis diſtinctas; nempe animi, corporis & fortunæ.

C A P. XXIX.

De Diſtributione ex Adjunctis.

D*Iſtributio ex adjunctis eſt, quando partes ſunt adjuncta.*

Ut hominum alii ſani, alii ægri: alii divites, alii pauperes.

Sic Virgil. 1. Georg. mundum dividit in quinque partes; mediam torridam, duas extremas frigidas, & reliquas duas temperatas:

Quinque tenent cœlum zonæ, quarum una coruſco
Semper ſole rubens, & torrida ſemper ab igni, &c.

Cæſar 1. Belli Gall. Gallia eſt omnis diviſa in tres partes: quarum unam incolunt Belgæ, aliam Aquitani, tertiam, qui, ipſorum lingua Celtæ, noſtra, Galli appellantur.

In diſtributionibus hujuſmodi imperfectis advertendum eſt id quod videtur diſtribui. Nam ſi id totius rationem habet, integri vel generis, diſtributio eſt; ſi non habet rationem totius, ſed ſimplex aliquod argumentum eſt, ut cauſa, effectum, ſubjectum, adjunctum, non eſt diſtributio ſed enumeratio potius, vel cauſarum plurium ejuſdem effecti, vel effectorum plurium ejuſdem cauſæ, vel ſubjectorum plurium ejuſdem adjuncti, vel denique adjunctorum plurium ejuſdem ſubjecti. Hoc genere diſtributionis imperfecto argumenta ſæpe quorum veræ ſpecies nullæ apparent, modis quibuſdam diſtinguuntur, modos autem ſupra in adjunctis poſuimus. Sic in cauſis, procreans & conſervans, modi efficientis, non ſpecies, dicuntur: quia non differunt inter ſe ut ſpecies per differentias oppoſitas, ſed ita ut uni & eidem efficienti convenire queant; quandoquidem quæ cauſa procreat, eadem ferè conſervat; potéſtque efficere idem vel ſolus, vel cum aliis; nonnulla vel per ſe, vel per accidens.

C A P. XXX.

De Definitione.

DEfinitio in tradendis artibus eſt uſu quidem prior diſtributione (prius enim definitur unaquæque res quàm diſtribuitur) natura tamen & inveniendi ordine eſt poſterior: genus enim, quo non adhibito, ſi quod ſit, nulla definitio conſtitui poteſt, à diſtributione, qui proprius generis eſt locus, mutuum accipit.

Definitio eſt, cum explicatur quid res ſit.

Definitio vocatur, eo quòd rei cujuſque eſſentiam definit, eámque ſuis quaſi finibus circumſcribit.

Atque ut definitio arguit ſive explicat definitum, ſic viciſſim à definito argui poteſt. Quæ quanquam argumentorum omnium affectio communis eſt arguere inter ſe viciſſim & argui, hîc tamen eandem ob cauſam facta mentio eſt definiti, ob quam in capite notationis facta eſt nominis; ne argumentorum numero excludi videatur, cùm neque ejuſdem ſit nominis cum definitione quam arguit, neque caput ſibi peculiare obtineat; ſicut alia argumentorum paria, quæ nominis ejuſdem non ſunt. Ad reciprocationem autem quod attinet, quæ definitioni cum diſtributione communis eſt, ea definitionis & definiti maniſeſtiſſima eſt: Logica enim eſt ars bene ratiocinandi; & viciſſim, ars bene ratiocinandi eſt Logica. Atque ad hunc modum omnis definitio, ut nonnulli rectè monuerunt, converſione examinanda eſt: unde Boëthius, Top. 5. omnis definitio rei, quam definit, adæquatur.

Definitio perfecta eſt, quæ conſtat è ſolis cauſis eſſentiam conſtituentibus. Redundat ergo in definitione perfecta quicquid præterea ponitur.

Cauſæ autem illæ genere & forma comprehenduntur.

Genus enim & forma (quæ ſunt quaſi corpus & anima definitionis) totam rei eſſentiam conſtituunt. Non ita tamen neceſſariò requiritur in definitione perfecta genus, ut perfecta non ſit niſi genus habeat: primùm enim, ſummorum generum, ut argumenti in Logica inventione, genus nullum eſt; ſed tota eorum eſſentia ſub ipſa forma continetur; quæ etiam materiam iis convenientem complectitur; deinde fieri poteſt ut ipſæ cauſæ facilius occurrant quam earum ſymbolum genus. Itaque ſi ex ipſis cauſis definitio conſtat, perfecta erit; ſi ex genere, ſuccinctior tantum. Genus autem proximum, non remotum, in definitione ſemper eſt ponendum: qui enim proximum ponit, remotiora etiam poſuit: niſi proximum fortè anonymum ſit; tum enim & quotieſcunque generis, ſive anonymum ſit ſive non, paulo ante facta mentio eſt, abeſſe genus in definitione, & rectè ſubintelligi poteſt: ut in hac ipſa definitionis definitione, genus remotum, nempe ortum argumentum; tum etiam proximum, nempe reale & compoſitum, ſubintelligitur. Quam autem hîc formam in definitione appellamus, plerique differentiam vocant. Sed differentia formæ fructus eſt: & niſi in rerum collatione, quæ in definitione nulla eſt, non apparet; & forma ipſa eſt unde præcipua rerum explicatio ſumitur; præcipuum ergo in definitione locum habet.

Atque hoc modo definitur homo, animal rationale: nempe genere, animal, intelligimus, ut dictum eſt, eſſentiam corpoream plenam vitæ & ſenſus, quæ materies hominis eſt, & pars formæ: cui ſi addas rationale, totam formam hominis comprehendes, vitæ, ſenſus, rationis facultate.

Tales definitiones ſunt artium. Grammatica eſt ars bene loquendi. Rhetorica bene dicendi. Logica bene ratiocinandi. Arithmetica bene numerandi. Geometria bene metiendi. Nam genere ars intelligimus præceptorum ordine diſpoſitorum comprehenſionem, quæ materies eſt cujuſque artis & pars formæ, ſive forma communis, cui ſi addas formam cujuſque artis propriam (quæ finem quoque ſub ſe comprehendit, ut dictum eſt cap. 8.) habes totam artis eſſentiam explicatam, quæ perfecta definitio eſt.

Ad regulas conſequentiæ quod attinet, nempe à definitione ad definitum; & contrà, affirmatè vel negate; hæc omnia reciprocatio, quæ diſtributionis quoque fuit, ſatis clarè ſuo loco expoſuit.

CAP. XXXI.

De Deſcriptione.

DEfinitiones perfectæ propter cauſarum & præſertim formarum obſcuritatem, difficiles inventu ſunt: ad ſupplendam igitur earum raritatem, deſcriptio inventa eſt.

Deſcriptio eſt definitio imperfecta, ex aliis etiam argumentis rem definiens. Id eſt, ex quibuſvis aliis rem quoquo modo explicans.

Ubi itaque forma haberi non poteſt (nam genera ferè notiora ſunt) proprietas loco formæ ſeu differentiæ accipienda eſt: ut, angelus eſt ſubſtantia incorporea; equus eſt animal hinnibile, &c. Adjuncta ſive accidentia, quæ vocantur (quia ſubſtantiæ ſolæ, ut inquit Ariſtot. l. 6. Metaph. c. 5. Primariò definiuntur, accidentia ſecundariò tantum) propria quidem genere, ſubjecto, cauſâque proxima vel efficiente, vel finali, vel utráque definiuntur. Genere & ſubjecto ſolo; ut, ſimitas eſt curvitas naſi: ſubjecto & efficiente; ut, tonitru eſt ſonus fractæ nubis, ob ignem oppreſſum; quantitas continua eſt adjunctum corporis, ab extenſione materiæ: finali; ut, ſenſus eſt facultas naturalis in animali, ad judicandum de ſingularibus: vel utrâque; ut, reſpiratio eſt attractio & expulſio aëris reciproca à pulmonibus facta, ad cordis refrigerationem. Omittitur enim ſæpe ſubjectum in definitione propriorum, quippe quòd ex genere vel ex cauſa intelligitur: ut, memoria eſt ſenſus internus conſervans imagines rerum cognitarum. Non dicitur ſenſus internus animalis, addito nempe ſubjecto, quia id mentione ſensûs intelligitur. Potentiæ naturales actione ſua & cauſa efficiente definiuntur: ut, riſibilitas eſt facultas ridendi, orta ab anima rationali. Habitus vel fine vel objecto quæ ſæpe coincidunt definiuntur: fine; ut, Logica eſt ars bene ratiocinandi: objecto; ut, Phyſica eſt ſcientia rerum naturalium. Qualitates patibiles definiuntur ſubjecto & efficiente: ut, color eſt qualitas corporis mixti, orta ex contemperatione lucidi & opaci. Actiones ferè ſubjecto efficiente & fine definiuntur. Relationes relatis inter ſe & fundamento ſive cauſa: ut, paternitas eſt relatio patris ad filium, ex procreatione orta.

Illud modo generatim in deſcriptionib. cavendum, ne cauſa pro genere habeatur: ut cùm dubitatio deſcribitur, æqualitas rationum; ſanitas, ſymmetria humorum; dolor, ſolutio continui; eclipſis lunæ, interpoſitio terræ: aut ſubjectum; ut, ventus eſt aër motus; juſtitia eſt voluntas conſtans; vulnus eſt pars carnis dilacerata; peccatum originis eſt natura corrupta, & ſimilia.

Cæterum in his certæ regulæ dari non poſſunt. Aliquando enim ex remoto ſolùm contrario fit deſcriptio: ut,

Virtus eſt vitium fugere, & ſapientia prima
Stultitia caruiſſe.——Aliquando planè arbitraria eſt.

Hinc etſi unica rei definitio, plures tamen deſcriptiones eſſe poſſunt.

Ut autem definitio definito, quod ſuprà monuimus, ita etiam deſcriptio deſcripto viciſſim argui poteſt. Verùm non affectio ſolùm hæc mutua inter deſcriptionem & rem deſcriptam intercedit, ſed etiam reciprocatio; juxta communem illam diſtributionis ac definitionis regulam, ſuprà, cap. 25. traditam; quâ deſcriptio quoque propria rei deſcriptæ & reciproca eſſe debet. Quamvis enim in deſcriptionibus, multa ſæpe congeruntur, quorum aliqua fortè latius patent, quàm id quod deſcribitur, juncta tamen æquantur deſcripto, deſcriptionémque propriam reddunt; ſin minus, vitioſa atque inutilis deſcriptio cenſenda eſt. Ut, homo eſt animal mortale, capax diſciplina. Hîc cum aliqua cauſa (materia ſcilicet & communi forma, quæ ſub genere animal continetur) miſcentur duæ circumſtantiæ ſive adjuncta, alterum commune, ſcilicet mortale, alterum proprium, capax diſciplina. At quorſum, inquis, illud mortale, cùm nullum animal non ſit mortale? Quia nempe Ariſtot. cujus hæc deſcriptio eſt, Top. 5. 1. animalia quædam ait eſſe immortalia, Top. 4. 2. & in eodem capite, Deum ipſum ζῶον ἀθάνατον, i. e. immortale animal vocat.

Succinctæ deſcriptiones quæ perfectas æmulantur definitiones, uſum habent præcipuè in artibus tradendis ac diſputationibus. Prolixiores illæ, utpote ad aures vulgi magis accommodatæ, apud oratores ac poëtas frequentiùs occurrunt.

Sic gloria deſcribitur in Miloniana: ſed tamen ex omnibus præmiis virtutis, ſi eſſet habenda ratio præmiorum, ampliſſimum eſſe præmium gloriam: hanc unam, qua brevitatem vita poſteritatis memoria conſolaretur; qua efficeret, ut abſentes, adeſſemus; mortui, viveremus: hanc denique eſſe, cujus gradibus etiam homines in cœlum videantur aſcendere. Deſcriptio hæc gloriæ conſtat ex genere, pramio nempe virtutis, adjuncta amplitudine, eáque aucta à minore, quod ſit omnium ampliſſima; quatuor deinde effecta ejus adjiciuntur.

Sic 4 Æneid. fama deſcribitur:

Extemplo Lybiæ magnas it fama per urbes,
Fama malum; quo non aliud velocius ullum
Mobilitate viget, viréſque acquirit eundo, &c.

Deſcribitur fama, 1. à genere, malum: 2. ab adjuncta velocitate, quæ illuſtratur à majore negato, quo non aliud velocius: tum duplici effecto aliarum rerum diſſimili, quòd

Mobilitate viget, viréſque acquirit eundo.

3. Ab adjuncta varietate, quæ oſtenditur ex aliis adjunctis, quòd ſit primò parva, ídque arguitur cauſa, ſcilicet metu, & circumſtantia temporis, primo nempe; tum ſubitò grandior facta incremento exigui temporis incredibili, ídque oſtenditur trib. effectis, quæ ſingula ſubjectis ſuis illuſtrantur,

——— Mox ſeſe attollit in auras:
Ingreditúrque ſolo, & caput inter nubila condit.

4. A cauſa procreante, illam terra parens,—— mater ſcilicet gigantum; & efficiendi modo, conſilio nempe ſive impetu naturali, ira irritata deorum, qui gigantes occiderant; cauſa autem procreans communis illuſtrata tempore adjuncto, & communi teſtimonio,

Extremam, ut perhibent, Cæo Enceladóque ſororem
Progenuit. Rurſus illuſtratam ab adjunctis,
—— Pedibus celerem & pernicibus alis,
Monſtrum horrendum, ingens———.

Deinde à partibus corporis & membris, iiſque paribus,

—— Cui quot ſunt corpore plumæ,
Tot vigiles oculi ſubter, mirabile dictu,
Tot linguæ, totidem ora ſonant, tot ſubrigit aures.

Tum ab effectis nocturnis, iiſque partim affirmatis quæ ſubjectis locis illuſtrantur,

Nocte volat cœli medio, terræque per umbram
Stridens; partim negatis, nec dulci declinat lumina ſomno.

Tum diurnis, eáque illuſtrantur & ſubjectis locis, & adjuncto ſitu ſedendi,

Luce ſedet cuſtos, aut ſummi culmine tecti,
Turribus aut altis, & magnas territat urbes.

Ab adjunctis denique paribus;

Tam ficti pravique tenax quam nuntia veri.

CAP. XXXII.

De Teſtimonio divino.

Inartificiale autem dicitur, non quòd artis ope & auxilio non inveniatur (ſiquidem de eo inveniendo, ut inquit Cicero, Partit. in arte præcipitur) ſed quod ex ſe ſuaque natura artis hujus & facultatis arguendi expers ſit. Poteſt etiam aſſumptum dici, quod aſſumpta vi arguit, non ſua. Argumentum enim inartificiale naturam rei non attingit, nedum arguit, ut artificiale ſolet, neque rei affectio, ſicut artificiale, eſt; ſed eſt nuda cujuſpiam aliqua de re atteſtatio, ſive atteſtantis affirmatio aut negatio. Res autem neque propter affirmationem ſunt, neque propter negationem non ſunt: teſtimonium igitur ex ſe ſuáque natura non arguit; ſed aſſumpta artificialis alicujus argumenti vi. Vis autem hæc eſt teſtantis auctoritas, à qua omnis teſtimonii fides pendet. Auctoritas autem variis in argumentis conſiſtit, ſed in effectis teſtantis & in adjunctis præcipuè cernitur.

Hinc Cic. 1. de Nat. Non tam auctores, inquit, in diſputando, quàm rationum momenta quærenda ſunt.

In civilibus autem & humanis rebus, ubi de facto quæritur, plerumque hoc argumentum præcipuam fidem è moribus arguentis efficit, ſi prudentia, probitas & benevolentia affuerint.

Horum unum aliquod ſi deeſt, vel per imprudentiam teſtis, vel propter improbitatem, vel inimicitiarum denique aut nimiæ gratiæ cauſa, falſum ſæpe pro teſtimonio dicitur.

Teſtimonium eſt divinum vel humanum.

Et rectè quidem in ſpecies efficientibus ſuis cauſis diſtinctas dividitur. Ab efficientibus enim maximè teſtimonium ſuas vires aſſumit. Effectum itaque eſt, ſi ad teſtem ſpectas; teſtimonium, ſi ad rem teſtatam. Perexiguam autem vim probationis in exquiſita veritate & natura rerum perveſtiganda communiter tribui teſtimonio quod tam ad divinum quàm ad humanum pertinere videatur, id cur quempiam offendat, non video: teſtimonium enim ſive divinum ſit ſive humanum, peræque vim omnem ab authore, nullam in ſe habet. Et divinum quidem teſtimonium affirmat vel negat rem ita eſſe, facitque ut credam; non probat, non docet, non facit ut ſciam aut intelligam cur ita ſit, niſi rationes quoque adhibeat.

Vera hæc ſint an ficta, veri numinis an falſi, Logicus non laborat, ſed quam modò vim arguendi unumquodque habeat. Itaque in civilib. etiam & humanis rebus teſtimonium divinum perinde vim probationis habet, ut ejus author verus eſt aut falſus Deus.

Hujuſmodi ſunt iſta Catilin. 3. Nam ut illa omittam, viſas nocturno tempore ab occidente faces, ardorémque cœli; ut fulminum jactus, ut terræ motus, cæteráque, quæ ita multa, nobis conſulibus, facta ſunt, ut hæc, quæ nunc fiunt, canere dii immortales viderentur.

CAP. XXXIII.

De Teſtimonio humano.

Teſtimonium humanum eſt, quod authorem habet hominem.

Eſtque commune aut proprium.

Diſtributio hæc proponitur, non ut accurata aliqua diviſio (neque enim teſtimonio propria eſt) ſed ut diſtinctio qualiſcunque ſubalternarum ſpecierum, ad quas inferiores ſpecies teſtimonii & exempla poſſint revocari. Atque, ut ſuperior illa diſtinctio in divinum & humanum, ab efficiente quoque ſumitur, qui ſit perſona publica ſive communis, aut propria ſive privata.

Teſtimonium commune eſt, ut lex & illuſtris ſententia.

Hæc enim duo exempla ſunt potius quàm ſpecies: quibus adjungi poteſt Fama; quam Cic. in Top. quoddam multitudinis teſtimonium appellat; alii, conſenſum civitatis & publicum teſtimonium vocant.

Legis autem & non ſcriptæ & ſcriptæ teſtimonium eſt pro Milone: Eſt enim, judices, non ſcripta, ſed nata lex; quam non didicimus, accepimus, legimus; verùm ex natura ipſa arripuimus, hauſimus, expreſſimus: ad quam non docti, ſed facti; non inſtituti, ſed imbuti ſumus: ut, ſi vita noſtra in aliquas inſidias, ſi in vim, in tela, aut latronum aut inimicorum incidiſſet, omnis honeſta ratio eſſet expediendæ ſalutis. Et ibidem, Quod ſi duodecim tabulæ nocturnum furem quoquo modo, diurnum autem, ſi ſe telo defenderit, interfici impunè voluerunt, quis eſt, qui, &c.

Reſtat illuſtris ſententia; cujus generis ſunt proverbia. Ut pares cum paribus facillime congregantur. Spartam nactus es, hanc exorna. Tum dicta ſapientum: ut, Noſce teipſum. Ne quid nimis. Sponde, præſto eſt detrimentum. Quanquam enim hæc dicta ſingula à ſingulis fortaſſe auctoribus orta ſunt, tamen quia omnium in ore verſantur, quaſi omnium fiunt, & ad commune teſtimonium rectè referuntur.

Proprium teſtimonium eſt: ut Platonis illud, 1 ad Q. fratrem: Atque ille quidem princeps ingenii & doctrinæ, Plato, tum denique fore beatas reſpub. putavit, ſi aut docti & ſapientes homines eas regere cœpiſſent, aut qui regerent, omne ſuum ſtudium in doctrina ac ſapientia collocaſſent.

Talia ſunt in poetis. Æneid. 6.

Diſcite juſtitiam, moniti ; & non temnere divos.

Sic Homericis illis verſibus.

Αἴας δ' ἐκ Σαλαμῖνος ἄγεν δυοκαίδεκα νῆας.
Στῆσε δ' ἄγων ἵν' Ἀθηναίων ἵσταντο φάλαγγες.

Ajax autem ex Salamine duxit duodecim naves.
Conſtituit verò ducens, ubi Athenienſium ſtabant phalanges.

Victi ſunt in judicio Megarenſes, quo contenderunt cum Athenienſibus de Salamine inſula, utrique fortè civitati æquè vicina.

Atque hæc veterum fuere & abſentium teſtimonia, & ferè mortuorum ; quæ de jure potiſſimum afferuntur.

Viventium & præſentium, quæ de facto plerunque teſtantur, non tantum ſunt cùm quæritur de fundo aut cæde & ejuſmodi negotio aliquo, ſed etiam obligationis, confeſſionis, jurisjurandi teſtimonia ſunt.

Obligationis exemplum eſt Philipp. 5. Promitto, recipio, ſpondeo. P. C. Cæſarem talem ſemper fore civem, qualis hodie ſit, qualémque eum maximè velle & optare debemus.

Pignus etiam obligatio quædam eſt :

Ut apud Virgil. Ecl. 3.

Vis ergo inter nos quid poſſit uterque viciſſim
Experiamur ? Ego hanc vitulam (ne forte recuſes, Bis venit ad mulctram, binos alit ubere fœtus)
Depono : tu dic, mecum quo pignore certes.

Confeſſio eſt vel libera, in qua cujuſvis teſtimonium pro ſe leviſſimum contra ſe graviſſimum cenſetur. Vel eſt expreſſa tormentis, quæ propriè quæſtio dicitur.

Tale fuit argumentum contra Milonem, quòd à Cicerone deridetur : quia cruciatus non ſæpius veritatem quàm mendacium exprimit atque extorquet. Age verò, quæ erat aut qualis quæſtio ? Heus, ubi Ruſcio ? ubi Caſca ? Clodius inſidias fecit Miloni ? Fecit ; certa crux. Nullas fecit. Sperata libertas.

Huc etiam referri poteſt argumentum, quo utimur cùm affirmationis noſtræ approbationem & experientiam adverſario proponimus.

Ver. 4. Ecquis Volcatio, ſi ſua ſponte veniſſet, unam libellam dediſſet ? veniat nunc, experiatur : tecto recipiet nemo.

Terent. Eunuch.

——————Fac periculum in literis,
Fac in palæſtra, in muſicis ; quæ liberum
Scire æquum eſt adoleſcentem, ſolertem dabo.

Ovid. 3. Triſt.

Quod magis ut liqueat, neve hoc ego fingere credar,
Ipſe velim pœnas experiare meas.

Jusjurandum etiam teſtimonium eſt.

Quale eſt Æneid. 9.

Per ſuperos, & ſiqua fides tellure ſub ima eſt,
Invitus, regina, tuo de littore ceſſi.

Quamvis autem in juramentis divinum quodammodo teſtimonium invocetur, juramenti tamen fides authoritate & moribus jurantis nititur.

Reciprocatio hîc obſcurior eſt ad rem teſtatam, quod eſt hîc alterum argumentum affectum ; ut quia teſtatum verum ſit, teſtis ſit etiam verax.

ARTIS LOGICÆ
Ad Petri Rami methodum concinnatæ,
Liber Secundus.
De Argumentorum diſpoſitione.

CAP. I.
Quid ſit argumentorum diſpoſitio?

ADhuc prima artis Logicæ pars fuit in argumentorum inventione: pars altera ſequitur in eorum diſpoſitione.

Quemadmodum Grammaticæ pars prima eſt de ſingulis vocibus, ſecunda de ſyntaxi earum; ſic Logicæ pars prima de argumentis inveniendis fuit, ſecunda eſt de diſponendis, i. e. quæ doceat argumenta rectè diſponere: ita diſpoſitio quaſi ſyntaxis quædam argumentorum eſt; non tamen ad bene judicandum duntaxat, ut vult Ramus, quod nimis anguſtum eſt, ſed ad bene ratiocinandum, qui finis eſt Logicæ generalis, ad quem unum finem omnia artis præcepta referenda ſunt. Iis itaque non aſſentior, qui judicium ſecundam eſſe partem Logicæ volunt: cùm ipſorum ſententia judicium ſit ſecundæ hujus partis nempe diſpoſitionis finis & fructus: non poteſt autem res eadem eſſe finis & id cujus eſt finis, fructus quod effectum eſt & ejus fructus cauſa, quæ diſpoſitio eſt. At inquiunt, judicium ut doctrina eſt pars Logicæ; finis eſt ut habitus bene judicandi. Immo verò inquam, diſpoſitionis doctrina ſuam operam confert non ſolùm ad bene judicandum, ſed ad bene ratiocinandum; judicium autem & diſpoſitionem pro eodem non dixerim cum Ramo: ſi enim certa, ut ipſe Ramus ait, diſpoſitionis regula unumquodque judicatur, diſpoſitio utique ac judicium ſi idem erunt, idem erit & regula, & id cujus regula eſt: doctrina deinde judicii docet nihil aliud quàm bene judicare; doctrina diſpoſitionis pro ſua diſponendi parte, etiam bene ratiocinari: ſive id ſit intelligere, ſive judicare, ſive diſputare, ſive meminiſſe. Certa enim diſpoſitionis regula unumquodque munus ratiocinandi excolitur.

Cum itaque ſimplicem argumentorum inter ſe affectionem aliquid per ſe conferre ad judicium rectumque ratiocinium initio propoſuerim, nunc eorum diſpoſitionem aliquanto plus, adeoque clarius ad idem conducere propono.

Prius autem quàm ad partes diſpoſitionis accedimus, generalis quædam diſpoſitionis affectio, quæ Crypſis dicitur, attingenda eſt; ut quæ ad omnes ſpecies diſpoſitionis communiter pertineat. Crypſis autem ſive occultatio iſta, eſt triplex; diſpoſitarum ſcilicet partium vel defectus, vel redundantia, vel inverſio. Quod itaque ſemel hic monendum eſt, ſiqua propter has crypſes dubitatio contingit, explenda quæ deſunt, amputanda quæ ſuperſunt, & pars quæque in ſuum reſtituenda eſt locum.

CAP. II.
De Axiomatis affirmatione & negatione.

Axioma ſæpe Ariſtoteli ſignificat propoſitionem ſive ſententiam ita claram, ut quaſi digna ſit cui propter ſe fides habeatur. Aliàs axioma & propoſitionem ſive ſententiam quamlibet pro eodem is habet: & rectè quidem: ut enim ſententia à ſentio, i. e. exiſtimo vel arbitror, ita axioma à verbo Græco quod idem ſignificat, derivatur. Atque hujus vocis generalem hanc ſignificationem apud veteres Dialecticos receptum fuiſſe, ex Cicerone, Plutarcho, Laertio, Gellio, Galeno lib. 16. c. 8. conſtat.

Latinè enuntiatum, enuntiatio; pronuntiatum, pronuntiatio; effatum Varroni profatum, & proloquium, apud Gellium lib. 16. id eſt ſententia in qua nihil deſideratur. Ex Græco etiam oratio & propoſitio dicitur.

Cur ergo, inquis, Græcanica, & hæc præ aliis, vox placita eſt? Quia, inquam, commodiſſima. Nam oratio & ſententia voces latiores ſunt; ideóque Græci qui λόγον ſive rationem vocant, addunt ferè primam, breviſſimam aut enuntiativam. Deinde propoſitio ambigua vox eſt; ſignificat enim nunc priorem partem plenæ comparationis, nunc primam partem ſyllogiſmi. Latina autem illa, enuntiatum, enuntiatio, &c. orationis exterioris videntur magis quàm rationis interioris eſſe: cùm diſpoſitio hæc Logica rationis omnino ſit tam mente conceptæ quàm ore prolatæ; útque voces ſymbola ſunt & notæ ſimplicium notionum, ita enuntiatum videtur eſſe ſymbolum axiomatis mente concepti. Sic tamen retineri poſſunt voces Latinæ enuntiatum, enuntiatio, &c. ſi diſtinguimus cum Ariſtotele ſermonem in exteriorem, qui ore profertur; & interiorem, qui mente ſolùm concipitur.

Genus autem axiomatis rectè ſtatuitur diſpoſitio, non judicium, quod ut ſupra retuli, diſpoſitionis effectum eſt, & hic quidem ſpecialiter quo aliquid eſſe aut non eſſe judicatur.

Argumentum autem cum argumento eſt id quod arguit cum eo quod arguitur. Finis diſpoſitionis eſt, ut per eam eſſe aliquid aut non eſſe indicetur, ſive ut aliquid de aliquo dicatur aut non dicatur. Hinc illud Ariſtot. Phil. ϑ. 10. eſſe eſt componi, & unum eſſe; non eſſe autem eſt non componi, ſed plura eſſe. Et ſimplicia quidem argumenta per ſe conſiderata ſignificant aliquid; non autem eſſe, aut non eſſe aliquid, niſi diſpoſita. Solo autem modo indicativo eſſe aliquid aut non eſſe indicatur; non reliquis, niſi ad indicativum reductis: ut, abi, i. e. jubeo te abire. Fiat voluntas tua, i. e. precamur ut fiat. Utinam diſſolverer, i. e. cupio diſſolvi. Quid eſt Dialectica, i. e. quæro quid ſit.

Cùm autem in axiomate argumentum cum argumento diſponatur, horúmque unum neceſſe ſit antecedere, alterum ſequi; hinc partes axiomatis (Ariſtot. terminos vocat) duæ ſunt, antecedens & conſequens: illa vulgò minor terminus, ſive ſubjectum, hæc terminus major ſeu prædicatum nominatur; quia id continet, quod de ſubjecto prædicatur ſive dicitur. Verùm hæc nomina anguſtiora ſunt, quàm illa, ut infra patebit.

Axiomatis affectio communis eſt crypſis illa triplex, de qua deque ejus triplici medela capite ſuperiore diximus: defectus, cùm pars aliqua deeſt; ut, exceſſit, erupit, evaſit; Catilina ſcilicet vel quis alius; pluit, tonat; Deus nempe vel cœlum. Redundantia, quæ & amplificatio dicitur, eſt, cùm argumentum ejúſque ſynonymum ponitur; aut ad id illuſtrandum quidvis aliud: prioris exemplum eſt, Logica ſive Dialectica eſt ars bene ratiocinandi: poſterioris eſt hoc,

Inverſio eſt, cùm antecedentis loco ponitur conſequens: ut, quæſtus magnus eſt pietas cum animo ſua ſorte contento, i. e. pietas cum animo ſua ſorte contento eſt magnus quæſtus.

Duæ ſunt reliquæ axiomatis affectiones; quarum altera ex diſpoſitione oritur, altera ad judicium pertinet. Nam intellectus cùm diſponit argumenta, vel componit ea inter ſe, vel dividit: compoſitio autem illa & diviſio nihil aliud ſunt quàm affirmatio & negatio. Cùm verò de diſpoſitione illa judicium fert, judicat eam vel veram eſſe vel falſam. Quemadmodum autem diſpoſitio eſt prior judicio, ſic eſſe & non eſſe prius quiddam eſt & ſimplicius quàm affirmare & negare, & utrumque hoc quàm verum aut falſum judicare.

Duplex eſt hic modus enuntiandi, non duæ ſunt ſpecies enuntiati ſive axiomatis: contradictione enim idem axioma affirmatur & negatur: ſed affirmatio & negatio enuntiationis, i. e. enuntiandi ſpecies ſunt, non enuntiati; nam & affirmatio & negatio dici poteſt enuntiatio, enuntiatum verò nequaquam; axiomatis igitur utraque eſt affectio, non axioma.

Axioma affirmatum eſt quando vinculum ejus affirmatur: negatum, quando negatur. Vinculum n. axiomatis forma eſt; vinculi vi axiomatis materia diſponitur & quaſi animatur; vinculo affirmato aut negato, axioma ipſum affirmatur aut negatur: affirmatio itaque & negatio ſunt vinculi affectiones, adeóque axiomatis ejúſque ſpecierum. Vinculum autem eſt vel verbum vel grammatica conjunctio, ut poſtmodum patebit, cùm axioma in ſpecies dividetur.

Affirmatio autem hæc & negatio nihil aliud eſt, ut ſuprà diximus, quàm compoſitio & diviſio: affirmatur enim axioma, cùm ejus conſequens per affirmationem vinculi cum antecedente componitur; negatur, cùm negato vinculo, conſequens ab antecedente dividitur. Negatio igitur axiomatica non eſt, quemadmodum erat topica non ens, ſed entis tantummodo ab ente diviſio.

C A P. III.

De vero & falſo.

A*Xioma deinde eſt verum aut falſum.*

Hoc ſcilicet ex affirmatione & negatione fit judicium: cùm enim affirmantur quæ affirmanda ſunt, & negantur quæ neganda, axiomata judicantur vera; & contrà. Unde Ariſt. de Interpret. 1. in compoſitione & diviſione eſt verum aut falſum. Falſum autem non docetur hoc modo in arte, ſed judicatur: nam enuntiatio falſa non minus axioma eſt, quàm vera, eadem enim utrobique diſpoſitio eſt: non idem de ſyllogiſmo ac methodo dici poterit.

Axioma verum eſt, quando pronunciat uti res eſt: falſum, contrà.

Sic enim Plato, in Cratylo. Ad judicium itaque faciendum, non modò artis documenta, ſed etiam rerum ipſarum cognitio requiritur; quia res ipſa veritatis norma & menſura eſt.

Axioma verum eſt contingens aut neceſſarium. Contingens, quando ſic verum eſt, ut aliquando falſum eſſe poſſit. Ut, audentes fortuna juvat.

Itaque veritatis hujus contingentis judicium, opinio dicitur. Quæ præteritorum & præſentium homini certa eſſe poteſt, futurorum per naturam non admodùm poteſt. Deo autem, etſi tempora omnia præſentia non ſunt, ut vulgò receptum eſt, præſentia enim mutare poteſt, præterita non item; opinio tamen in Deum non cadit, quia per cauſas æque omnia cognoſcit.

De contingentibus autem, præteritis etiam, & præſentibus humanum judicium certa quidem opinio dicitur, non tamen ſcientia: ea enim ex argumentis, quorum eſt immutabilis affectio, oritur; cujuſmodi in contingenti axiomate non diſponuntur. Neque idcirco non eſt opinio præteritorum & præſentium, quòd manifeſta ſunt, immo tum maximè opinari contingentia dicimur; nam dubia ſi ſunt, ſive contingentia ſive neceſſaria, ne opinamur quidem, ſed dubitamus: & neceſſaria tametſi ſunt atque certiſſima, ſi cauſam neſcimus, etiam ea duntaxat opinamur.

At, inquies, præterita & præſentia non ſunt contingentia, ſed neceſſaria, quia ſunt immutabilia; nam neque factum infectum fieri poteſt; & quicquid eſt, quandiu eſt, neceſſe eſt eſſe. Reſpondendum, neceſſe quidem eſſe, ut quod fuit, fuerit, & quod jam eſt, ſit; nec tamen ſequi, ut quod fuit vel eſt, ſit propriè neceſſarium. In axiomate enim contingenti, præterito, vel præſenti quæ videtur eſſe neceſſitas, abſoluta non eſt, neque ex rerum diſpoſitarum natura, ſed ex conditione duntaxat & lege contradictionis pendet: dum enim aliquid eſt, non eſſe non poteſt; neque dum verum eſt, eſſe falſum: & tamen quod nunc verum eſt, fieri poteſt ut aliquando falſum fuerit, aut futurum ſit. Idem de futuris dicendum; ſiquid futurum certò eſt, id neceſſe eſt fore quidem verum (omne n. axioma verum eſt aut falſum) non tamen neceſſarium. Id niſi teneatur, omne contingens futurum erit neceſſarium, quod implicat contradictionem. Hoc etiam monendum, futura quidem ipſa neque vera eſſe neque falſa, neque contingentia, neque neceſſaria, nondum n. ſunt, ſed affirmatio ſolùm de iis aut negatio in futurum, déque præteritis eodem modo ſentiendum.

Nec ſupervacua poſterior hæc clauſula eſt: ſemper n. eſſe verum etiam contingens poteſt; neceſſarium autem non modò ſemper eſt verum, ſed falſum eſſe non poteſt. Sic etiam Ariſtot. Poſt. 1. 26.

Contrà, quod ſemper falſum eſt, nec verum poteſt eſſe, axioma impoſſibile dicitur. Sic etiam Ariſtot. Phil. δ. 12.

Hæc autem immutabilitas veritatis in neceſſario, & falſitatis in impoſſibili, ab argumentorum quæ in iis diſponuntur vel ſumma conſenſione, vel infeſta ſemper diſſenſione pendet. Pari ratione mutabilitas veri aut falſi in contingenti & poſſibili ex levi argumentorum in iis diſpoſitorum conſenſione aut diſſidio perſpicitur.

Ex quo doctrina illa quatuor formularum modalium, neceſſe eſt, impoſſibile eſt, poſſibile eſt, contingens eſt, quàm inutiliter ab Ariſtot. introducta ſit, facile apparet: ut, neceſſe eſt hominem eſſe animal; impoſſibile eſt hominem eſſe equum; poſſibile eſt Socratem eſſe divitem; contingens eſt Socratem eſſe doctum. Hæ quatuor modales diſpoſitionem purarum enuntiationum quodammodo afficiunt: pura eſt, omnis homo eſt animal; modalis, neceſſe eſt omnem hominem eſſe animal: hic omnem hominem eſſe animal, licet inverſo ordine, ſubjectum eſt enuntiationis modalis; modus neceſſe eſt prædicatum. Verùm quid attinet quomodo partes axiomatis inter ſe affectæ ſint, ſignis aut modis exprimere, cùm id ex argumentis ipſis in eo diſpoſitis poſſit rectius judicari, & ad hos modos alii complures, facile, difficile, honeſtum, turpe, &c. Non inutiliùs poſſint adjungi?

Equidem ſecundarias, quas vocant modales, primariis hiſce potiores exiſtimem: quibus vulgò dividuntur enuntiationes in excluſivas, quarum notæ ſunt ſolus, tantùm, duntaxat, &c. ut, ſola fides juſtificat: exceptivas, quarum notæ ſunt præter, præterquam, niſi, &c. Ut, nemo præter te ſapit: & reſtrictivas, quarum notæ ſunt qua, quatenus, quoad, ſecundum, quid, &c. Ut, homo qua animal, ſentit. Et excluſiva quidem eſt vel ſubjecti vel prædicati: ſubjecti, quæ notâ excluſivâ præpoſitâ, excludit omnia ſubjecta alia à prædicato. Sed fruſtra hanc regulam ratio dictarit, ſi Logicis quibuſdam modernis, & nominatim Keckermanno licebit, eam ſtatim, conflato ad id ipſum canone, funditus evertere. Excluſiva, inquit, ſubjecti non excludit concomitantia: ut, ſolus pater eſt verus Deus. Hic inquit, non excluditur concomitans, filius, & ſpiritus ſanctus. At quis non videt ſubornatum hunc canonem, ad locum illum luculentiſſimum Joan. 17. 3. ludificandum? Haud paulò utilior eſt canon ille reſtrictivæ enuntiationis, quem tradit l. 2. c. 4. (reſtrictiva autem eſt quæ oſtendit quatenus ſubjectum prædicato convenit) prædicatum, inquit, contradictorium nulla limitatione ſubjecto conciliatur; ex Ariſtot. 2. Top. c. ult. ſect. 4. Quid evidentius dici potuit? & tamen reperti ſunt qui interpoſitis quibuſdam diſtinctiunculis, accidens poſſe exiſtere ſine ſubjecto (quod repugnat) in cæna Domini contendant: deinde, qui ſimilib. confictis diſtinctiunculis, humanam naturam Chriſti adeoque corpus infinitum eſſe diſputantes, parem contradictionem committant. Sed omiſſis Theologorum paradoxis, ad præcepta Logica redeamus.

Id eſt, cum conſequens ſive prædicatum, ut vocant, axiomatis, de omni & toto antecedente ſive ſubjecto ſemper verum eſt. Sic etiam Ariſtot. 1. prior. 1. & poſt. 1. 4. & hoc etiam nonnunquam καθόλου, i. e. de toto, vocat, Poſt. 2. 13.

Axiomata artium ſic κατὰ παντὸς eſſe debent,

Nempe de omnia & de toto vera, non falſa; neceſſaria, non fortuita, alioqui non ſcientiam pariunt, ſed opinionem; affirmata denique, non negata: affirmatum enim eſt firmum, certum, breviſſimum; negatum verò eſt vagum, incertum, infinitum, nihilque docet: ut ſi quis definiret Logicam, non eſſe artem bene loquendi, non doceret quid Logica ſit, ſed quid non ſit; eáque definitio omnib. artibus præter Grammaticam æque ac Logicæ conveniret. Nonnulli addunt ex hac lege, axiomata artium debere etiam eſſe generalia. Verùm hæc regula non tantum de omni eſt, ſed de toto: & multa in artibus præcepta ſpecialibus de rebus occurrunt, ut in Theologia, de Chriſto; in Aſtronomia de ſole & luna reliquiſque planetis: in aliis artibus hujuſmodi alia, in quibus, cùm ſint ſpecialia, etſi κατὰ παντὸς dici non poſſunt, καθόλου tamen poſſunt, quod ſatis eſt. Quòd ſi quis objicit, ne in generalibus quidem præcepta artium κατὰ παντὶς eſſe poſſe, propter exceptionum multitudinem, ut in Grammatica videre eſt; reſpondendum eſt, anomalium analogiæ conjunctam, κατὰ παντὶς inſtar eſſe.

i. e. Vel abſolute, ut forma formato, genus ſpeciei, membra integro, definitio definito; vel modo quodam, ut ſubjectum proprio adjuncto.

Id appellatur καθ' αὑτὸ per ſe.

Idcirco etiam partes axiomatis eſſentiales inter ſe eſſe debent, ut præceptum artis eſſe ſcientificum poſſit: accidentis enim, ut teſtatur Ariſtoteles, nulla eſt ſcientia; nulla niſi per eſſentiam & cauſam: idem, τὰ καθ' αὑτὸ, & τὰ συμβεβηκότα, i. e. accidentia, opponit, Poſt. 1. 4. Itaque non ſatis eſt, partes eſſe inter ſe conſentaneas, ſed eſſentiales: quod cùm ex argumentorum inter ſe ſumma conſenſione oriatur, ex qua neceſſarium quoque axioma eſſe ortum ſupradiximus, non video quid per hanc regulam καθ' αὑτὸ ad ſuperiorem illam κατὰ παντὸς quod magni ſit momenti, accedat; cùm nullum axioma neceſſarium eſſe queat, quin ejus partes inter ſe ſint etiam eſſentiales. Neque verò putem hîc præcipi, ne quid heterogeneum ſive alienum in arte doceatur; neque enim huc pertinet diſpoſitio præcepti cum præcepto, ſed argumenti ſolùm cum argumento, quæ axiomatis doctrina eſt, & ex homogenei definitione ipſa ejúſque exemplis perſpicitur.

Axioma reciprocum eſt, quando conſequens ſemper verum eſt de antecedente, non ſolùm omni & per ſe, ſed etiam reciprocè.

Ut homo eſt animal rationale: numerus eſt par vel impar. Lupus eſt natus ad ululandum. Id appellatur καθόλου πρῶτον, de toto primum. Nempe quia de nullo prius dicitur; ideóque proximum eſt & immediatum, proprium & æquale; unóque verbo, reciprocum: ut riſibile de homine: omnis enim homo eſt riſibilis; & reciprocè, omne riſibile eſt homo. Hæc regula niſi obſervetur, vitari tautologia in artibus non poteſt. Tum enim non reciprocatur axioma, cùm antecedens conſequenti non eſt æquale, aut contra; ſed vel ſpeciale alicui generi, vel generale alicui ſpeciei attribuitur: generale autem de ſpecie non dicitur primò; prius enim dicitur de genere. Cum autem id quod generis eſt, ſpeciei attribuitur, idem in reliquis ſpeciebus neceſſario eſt repetendum, quod in genere ſemel dictum oportuit. Ad hanc itaque regulam pertinet præceptum artis illud nobile γενικὰ γενικῶς, generalia generaliter & ſemel docenda ſunt. Hæc lex brevitati, brevitas autem intelligentiæ & memoriæ conſulit.

Atque hæ tres ſunt leges documentorum artium propriorum. Prima κατὰ παντὸς, lex veritatis; propterea quòd neceſſariam affirmati axiomatis veritatem ex conſentanea partium affectione poſtulat. Secunda καθ' αὑτὸ, lex juſtitiæ; quia juſtitiam requirit in eſſentiali partium cognatione. Peccant ergo in hanc legem, qui Rhetoricam in inventionem, diſpoſitionem, memoriam, &c. diſtribuunt, cùm Rhetoricæ partes attribuant, quæ Dialecticæ propriæ ſunt. Tertia καθόλου πρῶτον, lex ſapientiæ meritò dici poſſit; cùm quia ejus judicium veriſſima ſcientia eſt, ut poſtea dicetur, tum quia vitia ſapientiæ contraria prohibet, inæqualitatem ſive inconvenientiam antecedentis cùm conſequente & tautologiam.

Dices, duas illas priores leges comprehendi ſub hac tertia: & hoc fatendum quidem eſt: veruntamen ut trigonum tetragonus & tetragonum pentagonus comprehendit, neque idcirco tamen diſtinctæ figuræ non ſunt; ita hæ leges etiamſi poſterior quæquæ priorem comprehendit, erant tamen perſpicuitatis cauſa diſtinguendæ.

Atque hujuſmodi axiomatum ita reciprocorum judicium veriſſima & prima ſcientia eſt. Prima quia principiorum eſt, quæ per ſe indemonſtrabilia, ſuáque luce manifeſtiſſima ſunt, neque ſyllogiſmi aut ullius argumenti clarioris lucem ad ſcientiam faciendam deſiderant: quæ inde veriſſima quoque ſit neceſſe eſt.

CAP. IV.

De Axiomate ſimplici.

Axioma eſt ſimplex aut compoſitum.

Sic etiam Ariſtot. de interpret. 1. 5. Vulgò propoſitio dividitur in categoricam & hypotheticam, eodem ſenſu. Sed categorica affirmatum duntaxat propoſitionem ſimplicem comprehendit, quæ ſcilicet de ſubjecto κατηγορεῖται, i. e. prædicatur.

Axioma ſimplex eſt, quod verbi vinculo continetur.

Cùm enim vinculum, ut ſupradiximus, axiomatis forma & quaſi anima ſit, hinc efficitur, quemadmodum duæ ſunt ſpecies vinculorum, verbum & conjunctio, illud ſimplicis axiomatis, hoc compoſiti, ut axioma quoque ex iſta diſtributione vinculi, in oppoſitas formas ſive ſpecies dividatur. Vinculum autem ſimplicis axiomatis, non ſolum eſt verbum ſubſtantivum, quod dicitur, ſed quodvis verbum actionem aut paſſionem ſignificans, vinculi, in ſe vim incluſam habet; & vel totum conſequens vel pars conſequentis eſt; ut, Socrates ſcribit. Nam quod nonnulli putant, verbum omne in ſubſtantivum & participium reſolvi oportere, ut ea ratione verbum ſubſtantivum eſſe vinculum appareat, ſcilicet, Socrates eſt ſcribens; id ſæpe ineptiſſimum eſſe reperietur. Ut ſiquis hoc, Socrates docetur, ſic ſolvat, Socrates eſt doctus: hoc enim aliud longe eſt. Quidquod etiam verbum ſubſtantivum nonnunquam & vinculum & totum conſequens includit; ut, Socrates eſt; Mortui non ſunt, i. e. non exiſtunt. Quodſi in uno ſimplici axiomate plura verba occurrunt, ut, Imparia ſunt comparata, quorum quantitas non eſt una, ſciendum eſt illud verbum axiomatis vinculum eſſe, quod Grammatici vocant principale.

Negatur autem, ſi negationis nota verbum illud præcedit: Nam ſi ſequitur, negatum non eſt, ſed affirmatum: ut Socrates eſt leo non neceſſarió, affirmatum eſt, quia negationis nota ſequitur verbum; nec totum conſequens negatur, ſed modus.

Negationis autem notæ non ſolùm ſunt adverbia negandi, ſed etiam particulæ excluſivæ (cujuſmodi ſunt unicus & ſolus) & verba diſſenſionem vel differentiam ſignificantia; ut, differre, opponi, &c.

Exempla nunc videamus. Ignis urit; ignis eſt calidus; ignis eſt non aqua. Hîc ignis eſt antecedens, urit conſequens.

Atque hîc eſt prima inventarum rerum diſpoſitio, cauſæ cum effecto, ut in primo exemplo; ſubjecti cum adjuncto, ut in ſecundo; diſſentanei cum diſſentaneo, ut in tertio.

Quo modo argumenta qualibet inter ſe affecta enuntiari poſſunt, conſentanea quidem affirmando, diſſentanea negando. Exceptis plenis comparationibus, in quibus duo planè diſtincta axiomata ſunt, propoſitio, & redditio. Nam diſtributiones, quas etiam excipit Ramus, ut, Argumentum eſt artificiale aut inartificiale, axiomate ſimplici enuntiari poſſunt, ut infra docebitur: poſſunt & diverſa, quæ excipiunt alii, ſi ſic enuntias, Aliquis facundus non eſt formoſus: & contraria; ut, virtus non eſt vitium, &c.

Hæc diſtributio eſt ſimplicis axiomatis ex adjuncta quantitate, quæ modos, non ſpecies conſtituit. In axiomate autem compoſito, quantitatis nulla ratio habetur, ſed tantum vinculi, ut infra dicemus.

Axioma generale eſt, quando commune conſequens attribuitur generaliter communi antecedenti.

Vulgò etiam vocatur univerſale. Generaliter autem conſequens antecedenti attribuitur, quando omni totique ſive univerſo antecedenti attribuitur, omnibúſque iis, quæ ſub ejus ſignificatione continentur. Ad axioma igitur generale, tria hæc requiruntur; conſequens, & antecedens generale, & generalis attributio. Neque enim ex nota ſive ſigno univerſali definiendum fuit axioma generale; cùm & ſæpiſſime non adſit nota, & cùm adeſt, non cauſa ſed ſignum tantummodo ſit axioma eſſe generale. Indefinita igitur, quæ vulgò vocant, etſi notam non habent generalem, generalia tamen ſunt; ut definitiones & reliqua artium præcepta, quæ nemo generalia eſſe inficiabitur; nec notam tamen generalem præfixam habent. Notæ axiomatis generalis tam affirmati quàm negati hæ ſunt: omnis, nullus; ſemper, nunquam; ubique, nuſquam, &c.

Atque hîc contradictio non ſemper dividit verum & falſum; ſed contingentium utraque pars falſa poteſt eſſe: ut, Omnis in urbe locus bajis prælucet amœnis.

Nullus in urbe locus bajis prælucet amœnis.

Item non contingentium.

Ut, omne animal eſt rationale; nullum animal eſt rationale. Hæc enim non contingentia ſunt, ſed potius abſurda; quia conſequens ſpeciale antecedenti generali generaliter attribuitur. Falſa igitur pars utraque generalis contradictionis eſſe poteſt, vera eſſe non poteſt; falſitas quippe multiplex, veritas una eſt.

Axioma ſpeciale eſt, quando conſequens non omni antecedenti attribuitur.

Speciale dicitur, quia de ſpecie aliqua enuntiatur. Atque ut in generali axiomate conſequens generaliter, ſive omni & univerſo antecedenti; ita in ſpeciali ſpecialiter, ſive non omni attribuitur.

Id eſt ſpecialis contradictionis pars una ſemper vera, pars altera ſemper eſt falſa.

Particulare, quando conſequens commune antecedenti particulariter attribuitur.

Ex axioma ſpeciale quia de ſpecie aliqua, licet ea quidem incerta & indefinita, enuntiatur: particulariter autem conſequens attribuitur, quando non univerſo antecedenti, ſed ejus alicui parti attribuitur. Attributionis autem particularis notæ ſive ſigna ſunt, quidam, aliquis, aliquando, alicubi; & negationes generalium, nonnulli, nonnunquam, non ſemper, non omnis, &c. quæ particulari æquipollent. Commune autem conſequens debet eſſe; ex illa regula, Conſequens nunquam minus eſt antecedente, ſed ſemper vel majus eo vel ſaltem æquale. Unde Ariſtoteles, prior. 1. 28. negat ſingulare de alio prædicari.

Aliquid ignoſcendum eſt; nihil ignoſcendum eſt: aliqua clementia non eſt laudanda; omnis clementia eſt laudanda. Hîc particulari affirmato, generale negatum; & particulari negato, generale affirmatum opponitur. Quodſi utraque pars particularis eſt, non modo nulla eſt axiomatum contradictio, ſed ne oppoſitio quidem. Ut, Quidam homo eſt doctus, quidam homo non eſt doctus. Non enim eidem ſubjecto attribuuntur, quæ lex eſt oppoſitorum. Pars igitur utraque vera eſſe poteſt; ſicuti etiam cùm utraque affirmata eſt vel negata: ut, Omnis homo eſt rationalis, quidam homo eſt rationalis: nullus homo eſt irrationalis, quidam homo non eſt irrationalis. In his non modo contradictio nulla, ſed conſenſio ſumma eſt, generis nempe & ſpeciei.

Axioma proprium ( quod alii ſingulare vocant ) eſt, quando conſequens antecedenti proprio attribuitur. Antecedens autem Logicè proprium dicitur quando rem vel perſonam ſingularem deſignat; ſive proprio nomine exprimatur, ſive non: qualia ſunt etiam demonſtrativa; ut, hic homo. Secundò, quæ per ſynecdochen generis dicuntur; ut Poëta pro Homero aut Virgilio, Philoſophus pro Ariſtotele aut Platone & ſimilia. Ad conſequens autem hujus axiomatis quod attinet, id vel commune eſſe poteſt vel proprium.

Proprii contradictio eſt quando utraque pars eſt propria: in quo diſcrepat à particulari, cujus pars altera duntaxat particularis eſſe debet; conſentit cum generali, cujus pars utraque generalis; ut, Fabulla eſt bella: cujus negatio & contradictio eſt, Fabulla non eſt bella. Atque hæc de axiomate ſimplici.

APPENDIX.

AD has axiomatis ſimplicis affectiones addunt Ariſtotelici æquipollentiam & converſionem.

Æquipollentia definitur, enuntiationum verbis diſcrepantium convenientia re atque ſenſu: ſic aliquis homo eſt doctus, &, non omnis homo eſt doctus, idem valent, & ſimilia, ut ſuprà in notis eſt dictum. Æquipollentia itaque cum in verbis duntaxat, non in rebus, poſita ſit, ad Grammaticam vel ad Rhetoricam & verborum copiam remittenda eſt.

Converſio eſt prædicati unius enuntiationis in locum ſubjecti tranſpoſitio ad probandam alteram enuntiationem, quæ ex ea tranſpoſitione ſive converſione efficitur. Ea triplex affertur; ſimplex, per accidens, & per contrapoſitionem. Simplex, quæ fit manente eadem enuntiationis & quantitate & qualitate: fitque etiam tripliciter; in univerſali negante; ut, nullus homo eſt lapis, ergo nullus lapis eſt homo: in particulari affirmante; ut, aliquis homo eſt albus, ergo aliquod album eſt homo: in affirmante denique univerſali & neceſſaria; ut, omnis homo eſt riſibilis, ergo omne riſibile eſt homo. Et hæc eſt una omnium converſionum veriſſima, quæ & recipocratio dicitur, proprii ſcilicet cum ſuo ſubjecto, definiti cum ſua definitione.

Converſio per accidens mutat enuntiationis quantitatem; univerſalem ſcilicet affirmantem in particularem: ut, omnis homo eſt animal, ergo quoddam animal eſt homo. Per accidens hanc dici volunt, quia aliud prius ſequitur, nempe, quidam homo eſt animal, ex quo hoc deinde, ſimplici converſione, ergo quoddam animal eſt homo.

Converſio per contrapoſitionem mutat enuntiationis qualitatem; univerſalem ſcilicet affirmantem in negantem: vel, in qua loco ſubjecti & prædicati, ponitur utriuſque converſi contradictio: ut, omnis homo eſt rationalis; ergo quodcunque non eſt rationale, non eſt homo: omne mortale eſt genitum; ergo quod non eſt genitum, non eſt mortale; vel, quod eſt non genitum, eſt non mortale: admittendi ad ſacramenta, habent pœnitentiam & fidem; ergo qui hæc non habent, non ſunt admittendi. Tres hoſce modos converſionum ex Ariſtot. petunt: duos priores ex 1. Prior. c. 2. tertium ex 2. Top. c. 1. ſyllogiſticæ reductionis gratia, cujus inutiliter infra oſtendetur, ab ipſo inventos.

Converſione autem hac ne decipiamur fortè, neque enim fidiſſima eſt, cautiones quædam adhiberi ſolent: prima, ne termini ſint figurati; ut, panis eſt corpus Chriſti. Secunda, ne quid mutiletur; ut, quidam cernit cæcum, ergo cæcus cernit quendam: totum enim prædicatum non eſt cæcum, ſed cernit cæcum; ut etiam in hac; omnis ſenex fuit puer, ergo quidem puer fuit ſenex; non enim puer, ſed fuit puer totum prædicatum eſt; convertendum ergo, quidam qui fuit puer, eſt ſenex. Tertia, ut caſus obliqui à converſione facti, reddantur recti; ut, aliqua arbor eſt in agro; ergo aliquod quod eſt in agro, eſt arbor, non ſic, ergo aliquis ager eſt in arbore.

Sed, omiſſis iſtis cautionibus, expeditior via eſt, converſionem omnem ſi dubia ſit, tanquam ſophiſma petitionis principii rejicere; ut quæ ſine medio termino probare rem dubiam conetur: de quo ſophiſmate infra monebimus.

CAP. V.

De Axiomate copulato.

A*Xioma compoſitum eſt quod vinculo conjunctionis continetur.*

Hoc genus axiomatis Ariſtoteles totum prætermiſit. Vulgò propoſitio hypothetica vocatur; i. e. conditionalis; anguſtè nimis; cum ea vox compoſitis non omnibus conveniat, ut ſuo loco patebit. Compoſitum autem dicitur, quia ſententia eſt multiplex, quæ in plures reſolvi ſimplices poteſt: nec tamen dicendum eſt, ex ſimplicib. axiomatis componi, ſed ex argumentis, quæ conjunctionis vinculo compoſita, multiplicem ſententiam efficiunt: idcirco autem axioma componitur, quia argumenta in eo conjuncta conſentiunt & compoſitionem appetunt. Nulla autem hîc ratio habetur quantitatis, generale ſit an ſpeciale, ſed tantum compoſitionis. Ut autem verbum fuit vinculum ſimplicis, ita conjunctio eſt axiomatis compoſiti, ejúſque proinde forma & quaſi anima eſt.

Itaque à conjunctione affirmata vel negata, affirmatur vel negatur. Conjunctione non negata, negatum axioma non erit, etiamſi partes omnes erunt negatæ.

Contradictioniſque pars vera eſt, pars falſa. De qua vulgus Logicorum ſilet.

Congregativum eſt cujus partes tanquam ſimul veræ, conjunctione ſua congregantur. Conjunctione videlicet non ſolùm illa Grammatica verùm etiam ſententiarum quavis relatione. Cùm autem relatio iſta, ſive Grammatica ſive Logica, multiplex ſit, eſſentiæ, conſequentiæ ſive cauſæ, quantitatis, qualitatis, temporis, loci, relatio quidem eſſentiæ ( cujus notæ ſunt is qui, id quod ) & loci ( cujus notæ ſunt ubi, ibi ) ad ſimplicia axiomata referenda eſt; de reliquis ſuo loco.

Congregativum enuntiat omnia conſentanea affirmando, omnia diſſentanea negando. Hoc eſt, ſi unum conſentaneorum ſubjecto attribuatur, alterum quoque attribuitur; & contrà, uno negato, alterum negatur: ſi unum diſſentaneorum de ſubjecto affirmatur, alterum negatur; & contrà. Ita ſemper conſentanea ſimul hîc affirmanda vel neganda ſunt, diſſentanea non ſimul.

Congregativum verò eſt copulatum aut connexum. Copulatum, cujus conjunctio eſt copulativa. Ut Æneid. 1.

Africus.

Hîc igitur negatio erit & contradictio, negatæ conjunctione; non unà Eurúſque Notúſque ruunt, &c. Socrates & doctus erat & formoſus: Socrates non & doctus erat & formoſus. Quòdſi hoc modo negaretur, Socrates nec doctus erat nec formoſus ( qui modus contradictionis eſt adhibendus cùm omnes partes ſunt falſæ ) contradictio non eſſet axiomatica; non enim vinculum negaretur, ſed partes: copulatio enim ſignificat utrumque ſimul verum eſſet, ejus negatio non utrumque; at hæc negatio neutrum: ac ſi dictum eſſe, Socrates & non doctus & non formoſus erat: deinde, in axiomate compoſito contradictionis pars una vera, altera eſt falſa; hîc autem utraque: hoc ergo axioma, Socrates nec doctus erat nec formoſus, eſt potius axioma copulatum affirmatum, cujus partes negantur. Copulati autem negatio per axioma etiam diſcretum fieri poteſt, cùm partes non omnes falſæ ſunt; ut infra intelligitur. Conjunctio denique hîc ſæpe non adeſt, ſed intelligitur.

Verum autem enuntiati copulati judicium pendet ex omnium partium veritate; falſum, ex una ſaltem parte falſa. Hoc eſt axioma copulatum judicatur eſſe verum, ſi omnes partes ſimul veræ ſunt; falſum, ſi vel una pars erit falſa. Idem tradit Gellius, l. 16. c. 8. In copulato enim axiomate, verias omnium partium ſpectatur, quia partes omnes abſolute enuntiantur tanquam ſimul veræ.

Relata autem qualitas eſt plena ſimilitudo: ut notæ ipſæ teſtantur; qualis, talis, quemadmodum, ſic. Eclog. 3.

Tale tuum carmen nobis, divine poëta,
Quale ſopor feſſis in gramine. ———

Hîc copulatum judicium eſt tanquam diceretur, Sopor eſt feſſis gratus, & ſic tuum carmen nobis gratum eſt: cujus negatio, Non tale tuum carmen, quale ſopor, &c.

Ad hunc etiam locum pertinet relatio quantitatis in plenis comparationibus: quarum notæ ſunt, cùm à pari, idem quod, tam quam, tanto quanto, tot quot, eò quò; tum à majori, non ſolùm, ſed etiam; tum à minori, non modò non, ſed ne ( quæ nota eſt copulati axiomatis affirmati, cujus partes negantur ) cùm tum. Relatio autem hæc & qualitatis & quantitatis, ſi hypotheticè non abſolutè enuntiatur, ad connexum potius referenda eſt.

Relationes autem loci ad axioma ſimplex rectius referuntur, ut ſupra eſt dictum. Neque enim in hujuſmodi exemplo, ubi amici ibi opes, eſt copulatum judicium, ſed ſimplex & quidem generale; ſcilicet, omnem divitem amicos habere.

CAP. VI.

De Axiomate connexo.

Ut, ſi, niſi affirmativè. Idem enim valet niſi, quod ſi non: quo non totum axioma, ſed antecedens tantum negatur: ut Æneid. 2.

——— Si miſerum fortuna Sinonem
Finxit, vanum etiam mendacémque improba finget.

Cujus negatio eſt, negata conjunctione, Non ſi miſerum fortuna Sinonem finxit, vanum etiam mendacémque improba finget.

Conjunctio etiam hæc interdum negatur apertiùs, negando conſequentiam. Ut, non continuò, non illicò, non idcirco, non ideo: his enim formulis non conſequens axiomatis, id n. contradictionem non efficeret, ſed ipſa partium conſequentia quæ Logica conjunctio eſt apertius negatur: ut pro Amer. Non continuò, ſi me in ſicariorum gregem contuli, ſicarius ſum. De Fato: Nec ſi omne enuntiatum verum eſt aut falſum, ſequitur illicò cauſas eſſe immutabiles.

Affirmatio enim ſignificat, ſi ſit antecedens, etiam conſequens eſſe. Negatio itaque & contradictio ſtatuit, ſi ſit antecedens, non ideo conſequens eſſe.

Poteſt & connexo per axioma diſcretum contradici: ut, quamvis omne enuntiatum ſit verum aut falſum, non tamen cauſa ſunt immutabiles; quod ſequente capite liquebit.

Sed cùm judicabis connexum abſolute, i. e. per ſe ſuáque natura verum eſſe, neceſſarium quoque judicabis: & intelliges hanc neceſſitatem ex neceſſaria partium connexione oriri, quæ ipſa poteſt eſſe vel in falſis partibus.

Ut, ſi homo eſt leo, eſt etiam quadrupes, neceſſarium connexum eſt; quia argumentorum, quæ hic connectuntur, leonis ſcilicet & quadrupedis, connexio eſt neceſſaria, ſpeciei ſcilicet cum genere. Unde efficitur axioma generaliter verum ac proinde neceſſarium; omnis leo eſt quadrupes: quod in connexo indicium eſt abſolutæ veritatis. Sic, ſi Socrates eſt homo, eſt etiam animal, abſolutè verum eſt & neceſſarium, quia omnis homo eſt animal: hujúſque connexi conſequens falſum eſſe non poteſt, niſi antecedens quoque falſum ſit, quod aliud ſignum eſt abſolutæ veritatis.

Quòd ſi conſequens falſum fuerit, falſum item eſt antecedens. Si illud, hoc: ſi non hoc, ne illud quidem. Atque ita, ut jam demonſtravimus, ſi connexio abſolute vera eſt, erit quoque neceſſaria: ſin ex conditione & pacto, ſine quo connexum per ſe ſuáque natura verum non eſſet, erit tantummodo contingens.

Pamphile, ſi id facis, hodie poſtremum me vides.

Hoc eſt, ſi Philumenam uxorem ducis, ego hodie moriar: quod nemo ſequi exiſtimaverit, niſi hoc poſito, Charinum, qui hoc dicit, Philumenam perditiſſimè amare. Per ſe enim nulla eſt connexionis neceſſitas inter nuptias Pamphili & interitum Charini. Qui autem ex amoris vehementia ſic exiſtimabit, ejus judicium non erit ſcientia, ſed opinio.

Ut autem judicare poſſimus, quæ connexio ſit abſolutè vera, quæ non, ſpectanda argumenta ſunt, quæ in axiomate connectuntur, conſentiant inter ſe nec ne, & quo modo. Ut ſi dies eſt, lux eſt, connexum eſt neceſſarium, quia dies ſive ſol ortus eſt cauſa lucis. Si dies eſt, Dio ambulat, connexum eſt falſum aut contingens; quia nulla eſt affectio abſolutè conſentanea inter diem & Dionem.

Connexo axiomati affinis eſt iſta conſequentiæ relatio: quæ à nonnullis, relatio cauſæ dicitur; & axioma efficit, quod Stoici cauſale nominant; Laert. in Zenone: quia nempe antecedens eſt cauſa conſequentis, adeóque vinculum ejus conjunctio cauſalis cùm, quia, quoniam; quibus reſpondet ideo vel etiam: ut, cùm Tullius ſit orator, eſt etiam peritus benè dicendi. Quanquam autem relata iſta connexis affinia ſunt, non nihil tamen diſcrepant: in antecedente enim connexi quædam conditio eſt, in hoc relato nulla: connexum poteſt ex falſis partibus verum eſſe, relatum hoc ſive cauſale non poteſt eſſe verum, niſi antecedens verum fuerit: ut, quia dies eſt, ſol eſt ſupra horizontem.

Affinis eſt & relatio temporis axiomati connexo, ut ait ipſe Ramus infra c. 13. Relatio autem temporis has habet notas, tum cùm, donec dum, quamdiu tandiu; ut apud Ovid. in epiſt.

Cùm Paris Oenone poterit ſpirare relicta
Ad fontem Xanthi verſa recurret aqua.

Sic, Donec eris felix, multos numerabis amicos.

Poteſt etiam connexum enuntiari ſine ulla non modò relationis, verùm etiam connexionis nota: ut, poſita cauſa, ponitur effectum. Fac hoc, & vives. Ovid. in epiſt. ſume fidem & pharetram, fies manifeſtus Apollo. Nonnunquam etiam duob. negativis: Cic. pro Milone, non hoc fragile corpus humanum mente regitur, & non regitur mente univerſum mundi corpus.

CAP. VII.

De Axiomate diſcreto.

Ideòque argumenta diſſentanea enuntiat.

Diſcretum, cujus conjunctio eſt diſcretiva. Diſcretum dicitur, quòd conjunctione illa ſegregativa diſcernuntur & ſegregantur, ea potiſſimum quæ leviter & ratione tantum diſſentiunt.

Itaque è diſſentaneis præcipuè diverſa enuntiat.

Præcipuè, quia diverſorum notæ, non hoc, ſed illud, ut ſuperiore libro dictum eſt, in diverſis nonnunquam ſolent oppoſitis inſervire. Ut autem diverſorum ita etiam diſcreti axiomatis doctrina diſtinctionib. duntaxat, non concluſionibus, idonea eſt; & à reliquis propterea Dialecticis, qui omnia ad ſyllogiſmum referunt, omiſſa. Sed rationis uſus quicunque in Logica prætermittendus non erat. Exempli gratia: Tuſcul. 5. Quanquam ſenſu corporis judicentur, ad animum referri tamen. Cujus negatio & contradictio eſt, non quanquam corporis ſenſu judicentur, tamen ad animum referri: vel, quanquam ſenſu corporis judicentur, non tamen ad animum referri. Nam tamen eſt hìc conjunctio præcipua. Quemadmodum autem copulati & connexi axiomatis negatio & contradictio diſcretum eſſe poteſt, ita viciſſim copulatum vel connexum diſcreti: ut, quanquam culpa vacat, non tamen ſuſpicione caret: cujus per copulatum contradictio eſt, & culpa vacat, & ſuſpicione caret; vel per connexum, ſi culpa vacat, etiam ſuſpicione caret.

Diſcretum enuntiatum judicatur eſſe verum & legitimum, ſi partes non ſolum vera, ſed etiam diſcreta ſint; falſum vel ridiculum contra.

Ut, quanquam Ulyſſes formoſus erat, tamen non erat infacundus, falſum eſt, quia antecedens eſt falſum. Sed ſi conſequens modò verum eſt, axioma verum erit, etiamſi antecedens verum eſſe tantummodo concedatur. Hoc autem, quanquam Menelaus formoſus erat, tamen erat facundus, non eſt diſcretum, ſed ne ſegregativum quidem: omnis enim ſegregativi axiomatis partes tanquam non ſimul veræ ſegregantur, hic verò tanquam ſimul veræ congregantur. Quanquam Ulyſſes facundus erat, non tamen erat indiſertus, eſt ridiculum, quia partes non ſunt diſcretæ ſed oppoſitæ.

CAP. VIII.

De Axiomate disjuncto.

Ut, aut dies eſt, aut nox eſt. Aut vera eſt hac enuntiatio aut falſa. Nam ut ex Cicerone citatur hoc exemplum, omnis enuntiatio vera eſt aut falſa, videtur eſſe diſtributio potius quàm disjunctio. Diſtributio autem quatenus de toto diviſo partes enuntiantur, axioma ſimplex & generale eſt, adeóque non compoſitum nedum disjunctum. Neque enim diſtributionis partes, quamvis inter ſe oppoſitæ, oppoſitionem vel disjunctionem ullam faciunt, ſed eidem toti ſubjiciuntur, & in ejuſdem ſimplicis axiomatis conſequente verbi vinculo cum toto, quod antecedens eſt, conſentiunt; at extra diſtributionem, ubi non de toto, ſed de aliqua ejus parte vel ſpecie enuntiantur, tum demum axioma disjunctum efficiunt; ut, quod ſupra poſuimus, hæc enuntiatio aut vera eſt aut falſa.

Hîc ſignificatur è disjunctis unicum verum eſſe.

Nempe quia oppoſita hic ſola diſponi debent. Atque id ſemper à differente ſignificatur, tametſi aliquando accidit, ut disjunctorum vel plura uno, vel nullum omninò verum ſit. Negatio igitur & contradictio erit, non aut dies aut nox eſt.

Et contradictione ſignificatur, non neceſſario alterutrum verum eſſe.

Nam ſi disjunctio abſolutè vera eſt, eſt etiam neceſſaria; parteſque disjuncta ſunt oppoſitis ſine ullo medio. De quibus vide ſuperioris libri caput de contradicentibus.

Veruntamen quamvis abſolutè vera disjunctio, neceſſaria quoque ſit; tamen nihil neceſſe eſt partes ſeparatim neceſſarias eſſe.

Ut, cras aut pluet aut non pluet, disjunctio eſt neceſſaria, quia ex contradicentibus conſtat, quæ ſunt contraria ſine medio: & tamen, cras pluet & cras non pluet, utrumque contingens axioma eſt. Sic, homo aut bonus eſt aut non bonus, &c.

Nam disjunctionis neceſſitas pendet è neceſſaria partium oppoſitione & disjunctione, non ex earum neceſſaria veritate.

Hinc argumentum illud diſſolvitur Chryſippi Stoici aliorúmque veterum, apud Ciceronem de Fato; quo probare ſunt conati, futura omnia eſſe neceſſaria & quaſi fatalia, eò quòd neceſſe ſit ea aut vera eſſe aut falſa. Disjunctio quidem, ut diximus, neceſſaria eſt; pars tamen disjunctionis alterutra talis erit, qualis cauſa ejus eſt; ſive neceſſaria, ſive contingens, i. e. vel libera vel fortuita.

Atque hæc de neceſſaria disjunctione, cujus judicium ſcientia eſt.

Disjunctio autem ſæpe eſt ex conditione.

Ut ſi quæratur utrum Cleon venerit an Socrates, quia ita pactum ſit alterutrum tantum venturum eſſe.

Itaque ſi disjunctio ſit contingens (contingens autem eſt, ſi partes medium habent) non eſt abſolute vera, ſed tantum opinabilis.

Qualis eſt frequenter in hominum uſu. Ut Cæſar ad matrem: hodie me aut pontificem videbis, aut exulem. Ovid. in epiſtola Leandri.

Aut mihi continget felix audacia ſalvo,
Aut mors ſolliciti finis amoris erit.

CAP. IX.

De Syllogiſmo & ejus partibus.

ATque ejuſmodi diſpoſitio eſt axiomatica ſive noëtica axiomatis per ſe manifeſti: ſequitur dianoëtica.

Dianoëtica eſt cùm aliud axioma ex alio deducitur.

Vox Græca διάνοια, mentis & rationis diſcurſum ſignificat; qui tum fit maximè cùm ſententia alia ex alia ratiocinando deducitur.

Syllogiſmus eſt diſpoſitio dianoëtica qua quæſtio cum argumento ita diſponitur, ut poſito antecedente, neceſſariò concludatur.

Eſt dianoia: eſt ergo diſcurſus mentis ac rationis quo aliud ex alio ratiocinando colligitur: eam ratiocinantis quaſi collectionem vox ipſa ſyllogiſmi ſignificat: quæ quidem collectio ſive deductio ab intellectûs humani imbecillitate profecta eſt: quæ cùm rerum veritatem & falſitatem primo intuitu perſpicere in axiomate non poteſt, ad ſyllogiſmum ſe confert, in quo de conſequentia & inconſequentia earum judicare poſſit.

Cùm itaque axioma dubium eſt, quæſtio efficitur, & ad ejus fidem tertio argumento eſt opus cum quæſtione collocato.

Quæſtionis partes vulgò termini appellantur; & antecedens quidem minor terminus, conſequens major terminus dicitur; quia antecedente latius ferè eſt conſequens. Tertium autem argumentum ab Ariſtot. medium & medius terminus dicitur. Non quo ſemper medius inter duos quæſtionis terminos in ſyllogiſmo collocetur, ſed eò quòd quaſi arbiter de conſenſu eorum inter ſe aut diſſenſu, diſceptat & judicat. Atque hæc ſunt tria illa argumenta, ex quibus ſolis omnis ſyllogiſmus conficitur; duo ſcilicet quæſtionis, & tertium argumentum; quæ vulgò tres termini dicuntur. Termini autem iſti non ſemper ſimplices ſunt voces, ſed orationes nonnunquam longiuſculæ; nec ſemper caſibus rectis, ſed obliquis interdum efferuntur.

Syllogiſmi antecedens partes duas habet, propoſitionem & aſſumptionem: quæ vulgò præmiſſæ nominantur.

Propoſitio eſt prior pars antecedentis, qua quæſtionis ſaltem conſequens cum argumento diſponitur.

Saltem; quia nonnunquam tota quæſtio cum argumento in propoſitione diſponitur, ut infra patebit.

Propoſitio vulgò major dicitur; vel quia majorem vim habet (eſt enim argumentationis quaſi baſis & fundamentum) vel quia major terminus, i. e. conſequens quæſtionis in propoſitione collocatur.

Aſſumptio eſt ſecunda pars antecedentis, quæ aſſumitur è propoſitione.

Aſſumitur enim inde vel tertium argumentum vel tota aſſumptio, ut infra perſpicietur. Hinc itaque argumentum tertium, ſive medius terminus, dignoſcitur, quòd bis ponitur ante concluſionem. Aſſumptio vulgo minor propoſitio dicitur, vel quia minorem vim obtinet, ex propoſitione videlicet deductam; vel quia minor terminus, i. e. antecedens quæſtionis, in ea ſæpe diſponi ſoleat, non ſemper, ut infra intelligemus.

Syllogiſmi autem pars conſequens eſt, qua complectitur partes quæſtionis, eámque concludit. Unde complexio & concluſio dicitur.

Hinc ſequitur, concluſionem & verbis & terminorum ordine, eandem planè eſſe cum propoſita quæſtione oportere; alioqui ſyllogiſmi fidem claudicare, & quaſi depoſitum non reddere. Secundo hinc intelligitur illa regula, tertium argumentum ſive medius terminus nunquam ingreditur concluſionem. Ratio eſt, quia medium non eſt id quòd concluditur, neque de quo quicquam; ſed id, quo adhibito, quæſtio concluditur, vel duo ejus termini inter ſe conſentire aut diſſentire judicantur. Medius itaque terminus aut ulla pars ejus in concluſione ſi ſit, ſyllogiſmum vitioſum facit; id facillime deprehenditur, ſi non ſolum quæſtio propoſita, ſed præterea aliquid quod bis erat in præmiſſis repetitum, concluſionem intrat.

Cùm autem in omni ſyllogiſmo, ut ex ejus definitione conſtat, quæſtio cum argumento ita diſponatur, ut poſito antecedente, i. e. conceſſis præmiſſis, neceſſariò concludatur: quæ neceſſitas non conſequentis, ſed conſequentiæ, non materiæ, ſed formæ eſt, hinc intelligitur, nullam in ſyllogiſmi forma differentiam eſſe contingentis & neceſſarii, ſed ſyllogiſmum omnem neceſſario concludere, teſte etiam Ariſtot. Prior. 1. 33. eámque neceſſitatem ex legitima diſpoſitione quæſtionis cum tertio argumento, non ex neceſſaria partium in antecedente diſpoſitarum veritate pendere. Unde & illi redarguuntur, qui vulgò dividunt ſyllogiſmum in dialecticum & apodicticum, probabilem ſcilicet & demonſtrativum, ſive neceſſarium, cùm & illa diſtinctio axiomatum ſit, & ſyllogiſmi conſequentia tam in contingenti, immo in falſo neceſſaria ſit, quàm in vero & neceſſario; immo ex falſis præmiſſis concluſio nunc vera nunc falſa neceſſariò ſequatur: ut, omnis leo eſt quadrupes: Socrates eſt leo; ergo Socrates eſt quadrupes. In quo ſimile quiddam habet ſyllogiſmus axiomati connexo, & fortaſſe originem ab eo ducit: nam ut connexum neceſſarium eſſe poteſt ex falſis partibus, modò ipſa connexio ſit vera; ut, ſi leo eſt quadrupes, & Socrates leo, Socrates neceſſario eſt quadrupes; ſic ſyllogiſmus neceſſariò concludit ex veris quidem partibus nil niſi verum, ex falſis & falſum & verum, modò ipſa diſpoſitio ſit legitima.

Quòd autem Ariſtotelici ſyllogiſmum dividunt in verum & falſum ſive apparentem; verum, cujus materia vera eſt; in dialecticum ſive probabilem, cujus materia contingens eſt; & apodicticum ſive demonſtrativum ac neceſſarium, eúmque vel perfectum, quæ vocatur διότι ſive à priori, quo accidens de ſubjecto per cauſam vel efficientem vel finalem poſitam quidem affirmatur, remotam verò negatur; & in imperfectum quæ vocatur τοῦ ὅτι ſive à poſteriori, quo accidens cideus de ſubjecto per effectum probatur; hæc quidem diviſio, qualiſcunque eſt, cùm axiomatis propria ſit, & vel ad formam ſyllogiſmi ut in dialectico & apodictico, vel omninò ad artem, ut in falſo ſive ſophiſtico, nihil pertineat, melius rejicitur.

APPENDIX de Parologiſmis qui hac generali doctrina ſyllogiſmi redarguuntur.

ATque hæc ſyllogiſmi doctrina generalis fuit. Et rectum quidem index eſt ſui & obliqui, & veritatis doctrina rectè tradita, errorem omnem ipſa per ſe indicat atque etiam redarguit. Verùm cùm non ſit ea cujuſque hominis perſpicacia aut ingenii felicitas, ut vel omnes technas adverſarii animadvertere ex ipſis regulis, vel omnes artis regulas memoria tenere ſemper queat, alienum non erit de præcipuis captionibus quæ committere in hanc generalem ſyllogiſmi doctrinam ſolent, ſeorſim hîc aliquid monere.

Cùm itaque ſyllogiſmi doctrina generali doceamur, tria duntaxat argumenta ſive tres terminos in ſyllogiſmo diſponi oportere, hinc facilè perſpicuum eſt, peccare omnem ſyllogiſmum in hanc doctrinam generalem, in quo termini vel plures ternis diſponantur, vel pauciores: termini autem non tam ſunt verba, quàm verborum ſenſus & ſignificationes.

Peccatur autem terminis pluribus, vel apertius vel tectius. Apertius (ut puerilia de accentu, figurâ dictionis, plurium, quæ dicitur interrogationum, & ſimilia omittam) cùm tres termini diſtinctè numerantur in propoſitione: ut, qui eſt bonus & dialecticus, is eſt bonus dialecticus; Cleanthes eſt bonus & dialecticus; ergo, eſt bonus dialecticus. Hæc fallacia compoſitionis dicitur; quia diviſa male componit. Contra; qui eſt bonus dialecticus, is eſt bonus & dialecticus; Cleanthes, &c. Hæc fallacia eſt diviſionis; quia compoſita male dividit; vel quia compoſita proponit, diviſa concludit. Idem committitur etiam ſine conjunctione: ut, bonus citharadus eſt bonus; Nero eſt bonus citharadus; ergo, bonus. Bonus duplici ſignificatione cum citharado diſponitur, in propoſitione; quatuor ergo termini. Sic etiam cùm non iiſdem verbis aliud planè proponitur, aliud aſſumitur: ut, dextera Dei eſt ubique; humanitas Chriſti ſedet ad dextram Dei; ergo, humanitas Chriſti eſt ubique.

Homonymia ſive æquivocatio eſt, primò, cum ſimplicis vocis ſeu termini unius, ſignificatio duplex ponitur: ut, leo eſt beſtia; leo eſt Papa; ergo, Papa eſt beſtia. Secundò, cùm argumentum in una parte propriè, in altera tropicè ponitur; vel in una parte pro reipſa, in altera pro artificiali aliqua notione rei. Hujuſmodi ſunt artium vocabula: ut, potens eſt participium; rex eſt potens; ergo, rex eſt participium. Animal eſt genus; homo eſt animal; ergo, homo eſt genus.

Amphibolia ſive ambiguitas vel in ſyntaxi eſt, vel in ipſa re. In ſyntaxi; ut, pecunia qua eſt Caſaris, poſſidetur à Caſare; hac pecunia eſt Caſaris; ergo, poſſidetur à Caſare. Ambiguitas in ipſa re, quæ & prava expoſitio vocatur, fit, cùm affectio rei non eadem aſſumitur quæ proponitur; mutata autem affectione, mutatur argumentum; ut, quas carnes emiſti, comediſti; crudas emiſti; ergo, crudas comediſti. Hic propoſitio & de carnibus & de ſubſtantia carnium loquitur; aſſumptio, de qualitate earum: dicendum ergo erat, quales carnes emiſti, &c. Eadem eſt fallacia cum id quod in abſtracto, quod aiunt, proponitur, in concreto aſſumitur: ut, candidum eſt diſgregativum viſus: paries eſt candidus; ergo, paries eſt diſgregativum viſus. Etiam cùm in ipſa copula quartus terminus latet: ut, fortitudo non eſt clementia; principis eſt fortitudo; ergo, principis non eſt clementia. Hîc verbum eſt in majore eſſe, in minore habere ſignificat; caſuúmque mutationem rectorum in obliquos inducit; qui quatuor eſſe terminos declarant. Nullus puer diu vixit; Neſtor fuit puer; ergo, Neſtor non diu vixit. Hîc major de eo qui eſt, minor de eo qui fuit puer loquitur; qui duo termini ſunt. Quatuor denique ſunt termini cùm plus eſt in concluſione quàm in præmiſſis.

Pauciores autem termini ſunt ternis, cùm tertium argumentum deeſt. Hoc fit quoties vel idem ſenſu vel æque obſcurum pro argumento ſumitur; (idem enim non eſt tertium; æque obſcurum non eſt argumentum) quæ petitio principii, vel, ejus quod erat in principio nominatur; quia poſtulatur ipſa quæſtio ut gratis, i. e. ſine argumento concedatur: ut, enſis eſt acutus; gladius eſt enſis; ergo, gladius eſt acutus. Vel, quod omnis homo eſt, id ſinguli homines ſunt; omnis homo eſt juſtus; ergo, ſinguli homines ſunt juſti. Huc refer jactatum illud, Quæ non amiſiſti habes, cornua non amiſiſti, ergo cornua habes. Habere & amittere privantia ſunt & quidem ſine medio quatenus talia, ergo non amittere & habere ſunt idem, nullus itaque hic eſt medius terminus, ſed perinde ac ſi diceres; Quæ habes, habes, cornua habes, ergo habes. Hujus generis eſt, cùm tertium argumentum non integrum è propoſitione aſſumitur: ut, omnes apoſtoli ſunt duodecim; Petrus & Joannes ſunt apoſtoli; ergo, Petrus & Joannes ſunt duodecim. Hîc omnes collectivè ſumptum, pars eſt tertii argumenti, quod totum erat in aſſumptione aſſumendum. Ad hoc ſophiſma referendæ ſunt denique omnes converſiones enuntiationum; quoties rem dubiam non argumento ſive medio termino, ſed converſione ſola probare contendunt: de qua ſuprà monuimus. Atque his ferè modis in formam ſyllogiſmi generalem peccatur.

Materia ſyllogiſmi vitioſa eſt, quoties antecedentis pars vel altera vel utraque eſt falſa: id fit tot modis, quot ſunt argumentorum genera. Quorum cùm veritas tum falſitas quanquam in axiomate judicatur, propterea tamen quòd argumenta ipſa in ſyllogiſmo diſponuntur, qui modi præcipuè nominantur à Dialecticis vel materia ſolo, vel partim materia, partim forma vitioſi, eos hîc breviter attingemus.

Primus eſt materiæ ſolius; dicitúrque non cauſa ut cauſa. Cauſæ autem nomen hîc uſurpatur pro quovis argumento, etiam non effecti ut effecti, non ſubjecti ut ſubjecti, & ſic deinceps. Hanc captionem ſingulorum argumentorum definitiones facile refellunt.

Secundus eſt quæ vocatur fallacia accidentis, ſive, quod idem eſt, à dicto ſecundum quid ad dictum ſimpliciter: vel contrà, à dicto ſimpliciter ad dictum ſecundum quid; quoties id quod adjuncti eſt, ſubjecto attribuitur; aut contrà quod ſubjecti, adjuncto: ut, quæ non reſtituenda ſunt domino furioſo, non reſtituenda ſunt domino; arma non reſtituenda ſunt domino furioſo; ergo, non domino: vel contra: quæ reſtituenda ſunt domino, etiam domino furioſo; arma domino; ergo, domino furioſo. In his propoſitio ſemper falſa eſt.

Tertius eſt ignoratio elenchi; ( elenchus autem eſt redargutio quælibet ſive vera ſive falſa ) cùm leges oppoſitionis non obſervantur eidem numero, ſecundum idem, ad idem, & eodem tempore: ut cæci vident; qui carent viſu, ſunt cæci; ergo, qui carent viſu, vident. Propoſitio diſtinguenda eſt; nempe, qui fuerunt cæci, nunc vident. Sic; is qui non videt, cæcus eſt; dormiens non videt; eſt ergo cæcus. Ad idem non eſt: propoſitio enim de potentia, aſſumptio de actu videndi loquitur; vel quatuor ſunt termini; & prava expoſitio dici poteſt. Aliis ignoratio elenchi eſt, cùm vel planè mutatur & torquetur ſtatus controverſiæ, vel concluſio adverſarii non directè opponitur noſtræ theſi ſecundum canones legitimæ oppoſitionis.

Quartus eſt fallacia conſequentis, ſive comparatorum; quæ è contrariis quidem ſunt orta, ſed parium collatione tractata, cùm diſputatur contraria eſſe contrariorum conſequentia: quam regulam eſſe fallacem, l. 1. c. 18. copioſe oſtenditur: ut, quæ eidem æqualia, inter ſe æqualia; ergo quæ eidem ſunt inæqualia, inter ſe ſunt inæqualia. Ut, 2. et 2. ſunt inæquales ad 5; ergo ſunt inter ſe inæquales. Duo latera quadrati ſymmetra non ſunt diagono; ergo non ſunt inter ſe.

CAP. X.

De Syllogiſmo ſimplici contracto.

Simplex, ubi pars conſequens quæſtionis diſponitur in propoſitione, pars antecedens in aſſumptione.

Ut ſyllogiſmi forma generalis erat diſpoſitio quæſtionis cum argumento, ita ſpecialis quæque diſpoſitio quæſtionis cum argumento cujuſque ſpeciei forma eſt. Ex. gr. homo eſt animal: Socrates eſt homo; ergo Socrates eſt animal. Hinc facile perſpicitur, ſi quæſtionis terminus major non diſponatur in propoſitione majore, minor in minore, ſyllogiſmum non eſſe legitimum. Quòd ſi aliquando uſu venit, ut antecedens quæſtionis in propoſitione & conſequens in aſſumptione diſponi videatur, intelligere debemus ſyllogiſmi partes inverti: ut, Socrates eſt homo: homo eſt animal; ergo Socrates aſt animal.

Sequitur jam ſyllogiſmi ſimplicis diſtinctio in adjunctos modos, qui ex partium, i. e. axiomatum affectione oriuntur.

Syllogiſmus ſimplex eſt affirmatus è partib. omnib. affirmatis. Negatus ex negata antecedentis parte altera cum complexione. Non ex omnib. negatis, ut affirmatus ex omnibus affirmatis; niſi enim argumentum tertium cum altera parte quæſtionis conſentiat, nihil probat.

Ut autem ſyllogiſmorum tota ratio intelligatur (quod hoc loco fieri commodiſſimè poſſe arbitror) ſciendum eſt eam duab. præcipuè legibus fundari; altera parium, altera generis ex loco petita. Ex parium loco; quæ conveniunt in uno aliquo tertio, conveniunt inter ſe; & contrà, quæ non in uno tertio non inter ſe. Ex loco generis; quod generi generaliter attribuitur, id omnib. etiam attribuitur ſpecibus quæ ſub eo genere continentur. Hæc regula vocatur in ſcholis, dictum de omni & nullo. Illa à Geometris primum ſenſu præeunte facilius inventa eſt; & præcipitur Ariſtot. 1. Prior. c. 1. Ut enim illic norma, ſi duab. lineis æque conveniat, eas lineas demonſtrat convenire inter ſe ſive eſſe æquales; eodem planè modo medius terminus ſi duob. concluſionis terminis conveniat, velut norma demonſtrat, convenire duos illos inter ſe, & contrà. Itaque ſi quæſtio affirmanda eſt, quærendum eſt per omnes inventiones locos argumentum quod utrique parti quæſtionis conveniat: ſi neganda eſt, quærendum quod uni parti conveniat, ab altera diſſentiat; nam ſi ab utraque parte diſſentit, tertium argumentum eſſe non poterit, nihil n. probabit. Ex. gr. quæritur an Socrates ſit animal? Si affirmanda eſt hæc quæſtio, ad illa duo argumenta quæ in quæſtione ſunt, Socrates & animal, quærendum aliquod tertium argumentum eſt, quod cum utraque parte quæſtionis conſentiat. Ejuſmodi autem eſt homo: nam homo convenit cum animali, ut ſpecies cum ſuo genere; cum Socrate, ut genus cum ſua ſpecie; ergo Socrates & animal conveniunt inter ſe; adeóque Socrates eſt animal. Sin neganda eſt quæſtio, ut, Socrates non eſt beſtia, quærendum eſt argumentum tertium, quod ab altera tantùm parte diſſentiat. Hujuſmodi autem eſt homo: homo n. non eſt beſtia, at Socrates eſt homo; ergo Socrates non eſt beſtia. Sin medius cum neutro quæſtionis termino conveniat, neutrius norma eſſe poteſt; neque oſtendit, inter ſe conveniant, nécne; neque de omni dicit neque de nullo; adeoque nec probat quicquam nec refellit. Unde illa regula; ex utraque præmiſſa negata nihil concluditur: Ariſtot. 1. prior. c. 24. ut, nullus lapis eſt animal; nullus homo eſt lapis, nullus igitur homo eſt animal. Excipitur tamen ab hac regula, ſi medius terminus ſit negatus, vel duplex negatio ſit in majore: ut, quod non ſentit, non eſt animal: planta non ſentit; ergo planta non eſt animal. Hìc enim major, quæ videtur eſſe negata, æquipollet affirmatæ; eadémque eſt acſi diceret, omne quod ſentit eſt animal: negationéſque iſtæ topicæ potius & infinitæ, quàm axiomaticæ ſunt, partiumque negationis non totius axiomatis, hoc potius modo enuntiandi, quod eſt non ſentiens, eſt non animal: & hoc affirmatum planè axioma eſt. Sed hac de re plura dicemus infra cap. 12. ad ſecundam ſpeciem explicati. Cur autem complexio, negata antecedentis parte altera, negata quoque eſſe debet, ratio eſt, trita illa regula, concluſio ſequitur partem debiliorem: negatúmque debilius eſt affirmato, particulare generali, contingens neceſſario. Regulæ autem ratio eſt, quia concluſio eſt præmiſſarum quaſi effectum: nullum autem effectum eſt toto genere dignius aut fortius ſua cauſa. Fallit ergo hic paralogiſmus: qui non differt à bruto differt à Sophroniſci filio: Socrates non differt à Sophroniſci filio; ergo non à bruto. Hæc concluſio non ſequitur, uti debuit, aſſumptionem negatam, ſed propoſitionem affirmatam: & enim non differt à bruto non propoſitionis totius, ſed antecedentis duntaxat ejus eſt negatio: idémque valet, acſi affirmatum ſic eſſet; qui idem eſt cum bruto. Sequitur autem concluſio ſive conſequens partem antecedentis negatam non affirmatam, quia ſi partes concluſionis non conſentiunt in argumento tertio, non conſentiunt inter ſe: ſequitur partem ſpecialem, non generalem, quia genus concludit ſpeciem, non ſpecies genus; juxta illud ſuperius dictum de omni & nullo.

Hic enim regula firmiſſima quoque eſt, ex utraque præmiſſa particulari nihil concluditur. Exigit enim dictum de omni & nullo partem antecedentis unam ſaltem generalem: nec non in duabus particularibus quatuor ſunt termini: cùm enim individua, quæ vocant, vaga, particulares propoſitiones faciunt, fit ut de alio ſubjecto major, de alio minor ferè loquatur: ut, quoddam animal eſt homo: quoddam animal eſt brutum; ergo quoddam brutum eſt homo. Quidam ſunt divites: quidam ſunt docti; ergo quidam docti ſunt divites.

Cur autem ex utraque propria cùm non ex utraque particulari, quia nempe hæc certa ſunt & de eodem dicta, illa vaga, ut ſuprà.

Hinc liquet, cur ut axioma, ita ſyllogiſmus ſpecialis in particularem & proprium dividi non potuerit, cùm ſyllogiſmus proprius non ſit ſpecies ſyllogiſmi ſpecialis. Quare autem partes omnes non ſint propriæ, i. e. axiomata propria, infra etiam apparebit. Et ſyllogiſmus quidem proprius, etſi ab Ariſtotele neglectus, ab aliis rejectus ſit, uſum tamen frequentiſſimum habet.

Simplex ſyllogiſmus eſt contractus partibus, vel explicatus.

Ariſtoteles in tres figuras dividit ſyllogiſmum; primam, ſecundam, & tertiam. Verùm hanc Rami dichotomiam eſſe commodiorem & naturæ ordini aptius reſpondere, res ipſa demonſtrabit.

Contractus ſyllogiſmus eſt, cùm exemplum pro argumento ita ſubjicitur particulari quæſtioni, ut utramque ejus partem antecedere & aſſumptione affirmatum eſſe intelligatur.

Exempli gratia: quædam confidentia eſt virtus, ut conſtantia. Quædam confidentia non eſt virtus, ut audacia.

In his, ut cernimus, primò quæſtio particularis duntaxat proponitur; generale enim, ut inquit Ariſtot. pr. 1. 6. & 2. 7. in hac ſpecie, quæ tertia nimirum Ariſt. figura eſt, concludere non licet: addo etiam, neque proprium; quæ ratio eſt, cur ſyllogiſmus generalis non ex omnibus generalibus & proprium non ex omnibus propriis definitur, cùm in hac ſpecie conſequens ſive concluſio debeat ſemper eſſe particularis, etiamſi utraque pars antecedentis generalis aut propria fuerit: unde ſequitur, particulares duntaxat quæſtiones in hac ſpecie concludi. Deinde exemplum ſpeciale pro argumento ſubjicitur ſive ſubjungitur, ut conſtantia.

Hujus autem ſyllogiſmi diſpoſitio ſpecialis hæc eſſe intelligitur, ſi contractum explicamus (tametſi nunquam ferè niſi contractus in uſu occurrit) ut exemplum ſive argumentum tertium, primò utramque partem quæſtionis in præmiſſis, quod aiunt, antecedat, ſive præmiſſæ utriuſque ſubjectum ſit.

Hîc autem argumentum ſive exemplum utramque partem quæſtionis antecedere intelligitur, quia quæſtionis pars utraque argumento ſive exemplo attribuitur, i. e. de eo vel affirmatur vel negatur; perinde quaſi explicatè diceretur, conſtantiam eſſe virtutem, & eſſe confidentiam; ergo quandam confidentiam eſſe virtutem. Item, audaciam non eſſe virtutem, & tamen eſſe confidentiam; ideóque quandam confidentiam non eſſe virtutem. Exemplum ergo ſive argumentum tertium in contracto, etſi quæſtioni ſubjicitur, tamen ſi contractum explicas, & propoſitionis & aſſumptionis antecedens ſive ſubjectum eſſe reperitur. Eſt autem contractus enthymematis quædam ſpecies, quæ, cùm explicatur, in peculiarem quandam ſyllogiſmi formam reſolvitur, ideóque erat ſpecialiter docenda. Secundò, poſtulat hujus ſyllogiſmi diſpoſitio, ut aſſumptio ſemper affirmetur. Cùm enim tertium argumentum ſpeciale exemplum ſit, adeóque ſpecies antecedentis ſive minoris termini quæſtionis qui in aſſumptione ſemper diſponitur, atque ita antecedens ſit tertii argumenti genus; neceſſe eſt, genus de ſpecie ſemper affirmari.

Atque iſta expoſitio quæſtionis per exemplum quod ſubjicitur, principium ſyllogiſmi partibus explicati ab Ariſtot. 1. pr. 6. &c. efficitur, tanquam per ſe pleno ſyllogiſmi judicio clarior & illuſtrior.

Prior ergo eſt ordine ſyllogiſmus contractus explicato, cùm quia clarior, tum quia ſimplicior: eſt autem ita clarus, ut mens eum, ſicuti eſt contractus, antè percipiat, quàm partibus explicari poſſit; ideóque uſus differendi contracta hac forma contentus, formam explicatam rariſſime ſolet adhibere. Claritas autem ejus eximia vel hinc perſpicitur; quòd cùm duo duntaxat hujus ſpeciei ſint ſophiſmata, eorum inanitatem contracta hujus ſyllogiſmi forma facilius detegit quàm explicata, ut infra oſtendetur.

Ad tollendum itaque dubitationem, non hic ſupplendæ ſyllogiſmi partes, ut in enthymemate, ſed contrahendæ; contractum quippe explicato hîc eſt explicatius, catius, & ab judicio ſyllogiſmi ad axiomatis clarius judicium hîc eſt quaſi provocandum & regrediendum.

Quod ad modos attinet hujus ſpeciei, ſi contractam tantummodo formam ſpectamus, pluribus non eſt opus quàm duobus; uno affirmato, altero negato: quia non refert, utrum exemplum ſubalterna ſit ſpecies an ſpecialiſſima. Sin explicatam hanc ſpeciem ſpectamus, plures habet modos quàm ſpecies reliquæ: quatuor autem ſunt affirmati, totidem negati; quorum duo ſunt generales quatuor ſpeciales, duo proprii: quatuor autem ſunt in hac ſpecie ſpeciales modi, cùm in reliquis bini tantum ſint; quia in hac ſpecie propoſitio poteſt eſſe vel generalis vel particularis, in reliquis verò nunquam particularis eſt. Exempla hæc ſunt.

Secundus eſt negatus generalis: ut, audacia non eſt virtus: audacia eſt confidentia; ergo quædam confidentia non eſt virtus.

Affirmatus ſpecialis duplex eſt; tertius & quartus. Tertius, cujus propoſitio eſt particularis: ut, quidam ſapiens eſt dives: omnis ſapiens eſt laudabilis; ergo quidam laudabilis eſt dives.

Quartus, cujus propoſitio eſt generalis: ut, omnis ſapiens eſt laudabilis, quidam ſapiens eſt pauper; ergo quidam pauper eſt laudabilis.

Negatus item ſpecialis eſt duplex; quintus & ſextus. Quintus, cujus propoſitio eſt particularis: ut, quidam ſtultus non eſt fortunatus: omnis ſtultus eſt contemptus; ergo quidam contemptus non eſt fortunatus.

Sextus, cujus propoſitio eſt generalis: ut, ſtultus non eſt beatus: quidam ſtultus eſt fortunatus; ergo quidam fortunatus non eſt beatus.

Reliqui duo proprii ſunt, cùm exemplum eſt ſpecies ſpecialiſſima ſive individuum. Affirmatus eſt, Socrates eſt Philoſophus: Socrates eſt homo; ergo quidam homo eſt Philoſophus. Negatus eſt, Therſites non eſt Philoſophus: Therſites eſt homo; ergo quidam homo non eſt Philoſophus.

Contracti ſyllogiſmi duo vitia ſive ſophiſmata ſunt, quæ definitione præcaventur. Unum, ſi quæſtio ſive concluſio particularis non ſit: ut, omnis homo eſt rationalis: omnis homo eſt animal; ergo omne animal eſt rationale, ratio eſt, quia id quod non generaliter attribuitur in aſſumptione (non enim omne animal eſt homo) non poteſt eſſe generale ſubjectum concluſionis. Alterum eſt, cùm aſſumptio eſt negata: ut, homo eſt animal: homo non eſt beſtia; ergo beſtia non eſt animal. Quæ duo ſophiſmata in contracta hujus ſyllogiſmi forma, facilius, ut ſuprà dixi, deteguntur, & primo ſtatim intuitu ridentur: ut, omne animal eſt rationale, ut homo: quædam beſtia non eſt animal, ut homo.

CAP. XI.

De Prima ſpecie ſyllogiſmi ſimplicis explicati.

SYllogiſmus explicatus præter ipſum nomen aliam definitionem non deſiderat. Dicitur explicatus, non quod ſemper omnibus occurrat partibus explicatus, ſic enim vix milleſimus quiſque ſyllogiſmus occurrit, ſed quod partes non modo in forma integra, verùm etiam in enthymemate ſemper diſtinctas habet.

In ſyllogiſmo explicato propoſitio eſt generalis aut propria; & concluſio ſimilis antecedenti aut parti debiliori.

Similis, nempe & qualitate & quantitate: antecedenti, utrique ſcilicet ejus parti, propoſitioni & aſſumptioni, ſi ipſi inter ſe ſimiles ſunt ſive affirmatæ ſive generales ſive propriæ; ſin diſſimiles, parti debiliori, ut ſuprà.

Syllogiſmi explicati ſpecies duæ ſunt. Prima ubi argumentum ſemper ſequitur, negatum in altera parte.

Hæc prima ſpecies explicati, figura ſecunda ab Ariſtotele dicitur. Prior autem hæc ſpecies efficitur, quia diſpoſitio ejus eſt ſimplicior, ut ex altera ſpecie collata comperiemus. Sequitur autem ſemper argumentum partem utramque quæſtionis, conſequentem in propoſitione, antecedentem in aſſumptione: unde ab Ariſtot. pr. 1. 5. prædicatum de ambabus dicitur. Negatum autem dicitur argumentum in altera parte, quia pars altera vel propoſitio nempe vel aſſumptio ſemper eſt negata. Unde cùm negata etiam concluſio ſemper neceſſariò ſit, ſequitur hujus ſpeciei modos omnes negatos eſſe, & negatas duntaxat quæſtiones hac ſpecie concludi, quæ omnis in refutationibus eſt poſita.

Generalis primus, cujus propoſitio negatur: Turbatus non benè utitur ratione: ſapiens bene utitur ratione; ſapiens igitur non eſt turbatus. Hoc exemplum in ſua crypſi ſic apud Ciceronem eſt 3 Tuſcul. Quemadmodum oculus conturbatus non eſt probè affectus ad ſuum munus fungendum, & reliqua partes totúmque corpus à ſtatu cùm eſt motum, deeſt officio ſuo ac muneri; ſic conturbatus animus non eſt probè affectus ad exequendum munus ſuum. Munus autem animi eſt ratione uti: & ſapientis animus ita ſemper affectus eſt, ut ratione optimè utatur; nunquam igitur eſt perturbatus. Crypſis hîc unica redundantia eſt: nam ordo partium rectus eſt, nec ulla pars deeſt: proſyllogiſmus unus eſt propoſitionis; illuſtratur enim propoſitio ſimilitudine plena, cujus redditio eſt ipſius propoſitionis ſententia.

Generalis ſecundus, cujus aſſumptio negatur res mortalis eſt compoſita: animus non eſt compoſitus; animus igitur non eſt mortalis. Hîc ſyllogiſmus crypſi involutus eſt apud Cic. 1. Tuſcul. quo is judicat animum immortalem eſſe. In animi autem cognitione, inquit, dubitare non poſſumus, niſi fortè in phyſicis plumbei ſumus, quin nihil ſit animis admixtum, nihil concretum, nihil coagmentatum, nihil duplex. Quod cùm ita ſit, certè nec ſecerni, nec dividi, nec diſcerpi, nec diſtrahi poteſt; nec interire igitur: eſt enim interitus quaſi diſceſſus & ſecretio ac diremptus earum partium qua ante interitum junctione aliqua tenebantur. In hoc exemplo partium ordo invertitur: nam poſtremo in loco propoſitionis ſententia ponitur, interitum eſſe ſcilicet rerùm compoſitarum: aſſumptio occurrit prima, in animi autem cognitione, &c. Et ornatur ſynonymis: concluſio media eſt atque à cauſa illuſtratur, ergo nec ſecerni &c. nec interire igitur.

Livor, iners vitium, mores non exit in altos;
Utque latens ima vipera ſerpit humo.
Ergo, alii noceant, miſeris, optentque timeri,
Tinctáque mordaci ſpicula felle gerant.
At tua ſupplicibus domus eſt aſſueta juvandis;
In quorum numero me precor eſſe velis.

Hujus etiam exempli crypſis redundantia ſola eſt: propoſitio ſuos habet proſyllogiſmos, & livor pro livido ponitur, adjunctum pro ſubjecto; & illuſtratur à contrario abjecto; iſque à ſimili, vipera: aſſumptio, i. e. Maximi magnanimitas, illuſtratur partim à minori totius generis magnanimitate, partim à notatione nominis ejus, i. e. Maximi; cujus parem eſſe animi magnitudinem demonſtrat: concluſio negat Maximum eſſe lividum, partim quia diſſimilis ſit lividorum, quos deſcribit ab effectis, ergo alii noceant &c. partim, quia ipſe faciat quæ magnanimus conſuevit, qui diſparatus à livido eſt; at tua ſupplicibus &c.

Specialis ſecundus eſt, cujus aſſumptio negatur: Saltator eſt luxurioſus: Murana non eſt luxurioſus; Murana igitur non eſt ſaltator. Cic. pro Muræn. Nemo enim ferè ſaltat ſobrius, niſi fortè inſanet: neque in ſolitudine neque in convivio moderato atque honeſto. Intempeſtivi convivii, amœni loci, multarum deliciarum comes eſt extrema ſaltatio. Tu mihi arripis id quod neceſſe eſt omnium vitiorum eſſe poſtremum: relinquis illa quibus remotis, hoc vitium omnino eſſe non poteſt: nullum turpe convivium, non amor, non comeſſatio, non libido, non ſumptus oſtenditur: & cùm ea non reperiantur qua voluptatis nomen habent quæque vitioſa ſunt, in quo ipſam luxuriam reperire non potes, in eo te umbram luxuria reperturum putas? Hujus etiam ſyllogiſmi partes proſyllogiſmis exornantur. Propoſitionis ſententia his verbis continetur, intempeſtivi convivii &c. quam proſyllogiſmus præcedens illuſtrat à contrariis, nemo ferè ſaltat ſobrius &c. aſſumptio per partes explicatur, nullum turpe convivium, &c. & à minoribus quibuſdam illuſtratur: cujus etiam proſyllogiſmus præcedit, reprehenſio nempe Catonis, quòd poſtularet conſequens, non probato antecedente: poſtremo loco ponitur concluſio, quæ negat Muranam eſſe ſaltatorem repetendo quædam quæ in aſſumptione præceſſerant; & interrogatione fortius negando.

Carmina proveniunt animo deducta ſereno;
Nubila ſunt ſubitis tempora noſtra malis.
Carmina ſeceſſum ſcribentis & otia quærunt.
Me mare, me venti, me fera jactat hyems.
Carminibus metus omnis abeſt; ego perditus enſem
Hæſurum jugulo jam puto jamque meo.
Hæc quoque quæ facio, judex mirabitur æquus;
Scriptáque cum venia qualiacunque leget.

Tres hîc ſyllogiſmi ſunt qui in unum ſic reduci poſſunt: Ut quis poſſit carmina bona ſcribere, oportet is lætus ſit, otioſus, ſecurus: ego nec lætus ſum, nec otioſus, nec ſecurus; ergo bona carmina non ſcribo. Pro aſſumptionibus proſyllogiſmi à diſſentaneis & impedientibus cauſis ponuntur. Deinde concluſio ſequitur, non ipſa quidem ſed ejus conſectarium; mirum eſſe ſi bona ſunt; ſed potius cum venia eſſe legenda, quia non ſunt bona.

Sophiſmata hîc duo ſunt; quorum unum utrique explicati ſpeciei commune eſt, alterum primæ ſpeciei proprium. Commune eſt, cùm propoſitio eſt particularis; quæ ex communi explicatorum regula generalis aut propria eſſe debuit.

Sophiſma primæ ſpeciei proprium eſt, cùm argumentum tertium in altera parte antecedentis non negatur, ut definitio primæ ſpeciei præcipit: unde illud vulgò dictum, Ex duabus affirmatis in ſecunda figura, nihil concluditur. Excipiendum tamen eſt, ſi propoſitio fortè axioma reciprocum ſit: ut, homo eſt animal rationale: Socrates eſt animal rationale; ergo Socrates eſt homo. Verùm hîc potius inverſio partium propoſitionis intelligenda eſt; animal rationale eſt homo: atque ita ad ſequentem ſpeciem ſyllogiſmi referetur.

CAP. XII.

De Secunda ſpecie Syllogiſmi ſimplicis explicati.

Hæc ſpecies ab Ariſtotele, prima figura dicitur; ſed naturæ ordine eſt poſtrema. Cùm enim in reliquis ſpeciebus diſpoſitio queſtionis cum argumento tertio ſimplex & uniuſmodi ſit, in hac ſpecie duplex eſt; in propoſitione enim argumentum antecedit quæſtionis conſequentem, utpote ſpecialius; in aſſumptione ſequitur quæſtionis antecedentem, utpote generalius; unde fortè medius terminus in hac ſolùm figura propriè dicitur. Quòd autem propoſitio nunquam particularis, concluſio ſemper antecedenti ſimilis aut parti debiliori eſt, id habet commune cum explicata ſpecie priore; hoc etiam cum contracta, affirmatum eſſe in aſſumptione; niſi in contracta, quæſtionis antecedens ut generalius de argumento; in hac, argumentum de antecedente quæſtionis affirmatur.

Hæc maxime figura fundatur dicto illo de omni & nullo: antecedens enim ſive ſubjectum propoſitionis continet genus, adeoque eſt ſemper generalis, ſubjectum aſſumptionis continet ſpeciem quæ de illo genere affirmatur. Aſſumptio itaque ſemper eſſe debet affirmata. Ex quo ſequitur, quicquid de genere in propoſitione dicitur, id dè eo quod in aſſumptione ſpecies eſſe illius generis affirmatur, in concluſione rectiſſimè concludi. Quod ſi genus illud ſubjectum ſcil. propoſitionis termino infinito negante, ſeu topicè contradictorio exprimitur, non negata continuò cenſenda erit aſſumptio quamvis eſſe videatur; aſſumit n. tantummodo genus ex propoſitione termino illo topicè duntaxat contradictorio expreſſum, ipſa nihil axiomaticè negat: ut, quiſquis non credit, damnatur: aliquis Judæus non credit; ergo aliquis Judæus damnatur. Hîc propoſitionis ſubjectum eſt genus

Ex hac autem affirmatione ſequitur, nullum argumentum ab antecedente quæſtionis diſſentaneum, in hac ſecunda ſpecie locum habere. De cætero, hæc ſpecies neque ad particulares quæſtiones, ut contracta, neque ad negatas, ut prior ſpecies explicati, reſtringitur; ſed ad omnia quæſtionum genera concludenda rectè adhibetur.

Reſtant hujus ſpeciei modi; qui quanquam partim affirmati ſunt partim negati, plures tamen non ſunt quàm in altera ſpecie, ubi omnes erant ſolùm negati. Æqualitatis ratio eſt quòd aſſumptionis affirmatio, & ſolius inde propoſitionis negatio negatorum numerum minuit. Modi igitur hujus ſpeciei ſex itidem ſunt; tres affirmati, tres item negati; utrique rurſum ſunt generales ſpeciales & proprii.

Primus eſt affirmatus generalis: ut, omne juſtum eſt utile; omne honeſtum eſt juſtum, omne igitur honeſtum eſt utile. Quod Cic. 2. Off. ita concludit: quicquid juſtum ſit, id etiam utile eſſe cenſent: item quod honeſtum, idem juſtum: ex quo efficitur, ut quicquid honeſtum ſit, idem ſit utile. Propoſitionis proſyllogiſmus à teſtimonio Stoicorum primo in loco ponitur, deinde omnes partes ordine ſequuntur. Partes hujus ſyllogiſmi ſunt axiomata relatæ eſſentiæ quæ ſimplicium axiomatum vim habent.

Secundus modus eſt negatus generalis: Timidus non eſt liber: avarus eſt timidus; avarus itaq; non eſt liber. Hoc ita concluditur & judicatur ab Horatio, epiſt. l. 1. 16.

Quò melior ſervo quò liberior ſit avarus,
In triviis fixum, cùm ſe demittit ob aſſem,
Non video. Nam qui cupiet, metuet quoque: porro
Qui metuens vivit, liber mihi non erit unquam.

In hoc exemplo duplex eſt crypſis, inverſio partium & proſyllogiſmus. Primo in loco ponitur concluſio, eáque duabus proſyllogiſmis illuſtratur; primò à pari, quod avarus non ſit liberior ſervo: ſecundò ab effectis, quod ſe demittit ob aſſem. Tum ponitur aſſumptio qui cupiet, metuet quoque. Propoſitio poſtremo in loco ponitur,

Qui metuens vivit, liber mihi non erit unquam.

Sic Terent. in Eunuch. concludit & judicat: conſilii expers, conſilio regi non poteſt: amor eſt conſilii expers; conſilio itaque regi non poteſt. Syllogiſmus his verſibus ſequitur:

Here, que res in ſe neque conſilium neque modum
habet ullum, eam conſilio regere non potes.
In amore hac omnia inſunt vitia; injuria,
ſuſpiciones, inimicitia, inducia, bellum, pax rurſum: incerta hac ſi tu poſtules
ratione certâ facere, nihilo plus agas, quàm ſi des operam, ut cum ratione inſanias.

In hoc exemplo propoſitio ſuo loco eſt qua res in ſe &c. Pro aſſumptione ponitur ejus proſyllogiſmus variorum amoris adjunctorum quæ conſilium impediunt; amor conſilii expers eſt, quia in amore hac inſunt vitia, &c. Concluſio ſequitur incerta hac, &c. Cujus ſententia comparatione parium comprehenditur, ergo ſi amorem conſilio regere vis, nihilo plus, &c.

Tertius modus eſt affirmatus ſpecialis: Conſules propter virtutem facti, ſtudiosè remp. tueri debent: Cicero eſt propter virtutem factus conſul; Cicero igitur ſtudiosè remp. tueri debet. Sic orator diligentiam ſuam, Agr. 2. concludit & judicat: Nam cùm omnium conſulum, ait, gravis in repub. cuſtodienda, cura ac diligentia debet eſſe, tum eorum maximè, qui non in incunabulis, ſed in campo ſunt conſules facti. Nulli populo Rom. pro me majores noſtri ſpoſponderunt mihi creditum eſt: à me petere quod debeo, me ipſum appellare debetis. Quemadmodum cùm petebam, nulli me auctores generis mei vobis commendarunt: ſic ſiquid deliquero, nulla ſunt imagines, quæ me à vobis deprecentur. Quare modò ut vita ſuppetat (quanquam ego ſim is qui eam poſſim ab iſtorum ſcelere inſidiiſque defendere) polliceor vobis, Quirites, bona fide, remp. vigilanti homini, non timido, diligenti, non ignavo, commiſiſtis. Partes hujus ſyllogiſmi proſyllogiſmis ornantur. Propoſitio à minori illuſtratur: cujus ſententia eſt comparationis redditio, diverſis illuſtrata; nam cùm omnium conſulum gravis, &c. tum eorum maximè: diverſa ſunt, non in incunabulis, ſed in campo. Aſſumptio ſequitur, nulli populo Rom. &c. quæ iiſdem rurſus diverſis illuſtratur, & à ſimili; meis, non majorum meritis; in campo, non in incunabulis: ſimilitudo his verbis continetur; quemadmodum cùm petebam, &c. Tandem concluſionis ſententia ſequitur illuſtrata, primùm teſtimonio promiſſi, obligationis vim habentis, polliceor, &c. Deinde diverſo & diſparato; quare modò, &c. Ergo Cicero erit vigilans, non timidus; diligens, non ignavus.

Si quicquam cupidóque optantíque obtigit unquam &
Inſperanti, hoc gratum eſt animo propriè.
Quare hoc eſt gratum, nobis quoque charius auro,
Quod te reſtituis, Lesbia, mi cupido.
Reſtituis cupido atque inſperanti ipſa refers te
Nobis; ô lucem candidiore nota!
Quis me uno vivit felicior, aut magis hac quid
Optandum vita dicere quis poterit?

In hoc exemplo propoſitio videtur eſſe compoſita, ſimplex tamen eſt, & ſyllogiſmus ſimplex; quia ſimplex eſt diſpoſitio argumenti cum partibus quæſtionis. Duplex hîc crypſis eſt, inverſio & redundantia. Primo loco eſt propoſitio ſi quicquam cupido, &c. i. e. quicquid cupido; ſi enim non ſemper connexi nota eſt. Aſſumptio eſt in quarto & quinto verſu, Lesbia Catullo optata rediit. Concluſio eſt verſu tertio illuſtrata à minori, quare hoc eſt gratum & auro charius. Tribus poſtremis verſibus iteratur ſententia concluſionis, primum ab adjuncto tempore, ô lucem: deinde à pari, nemo me felicior, aut magis hac quid, &c.

Quartus modus eſt negatus ſpecialis: deceptor amantis puellæ non eſt laudandus: Demophoon eſt deceptor amantis puellæ; Demophoon igitur non eſt laudandus. Phyllis apud Ovidium ita judicat Demophoontem laudandum non eſſe.

Fallere credentem non eſt operoſa puellam
Gloria: ſimplicitas digna favore fuit.
Sum decepta tuis & amans & fœmina verbis;
Dii faciant laudis ſumma ſit iſta tuæ.

Propoſitio ſuum obtinet locum cum proſyllogiſmo adjunctæ ſimplicitatis, ut cauſæ cur deceptor non ſit laudandus. Aſſumptio ſequitur, ſum decepta tuis, &c. Concluſionis ſententia imprecatione continetur, dii faciant, &c.

Hujus itaque ſpeciei laus eſt præ cæteris, quòd omnia quæſtionum genera concludat; nempe generales, ſpeciales vel proprias, eáſque vel affirmatas vel negatas; & præſertim generales affirmatas: ob quam potiſſimum cauſam Ariſtoteles ſpeciem hanc & reliquis antepoſuit, quod primus ejus modus nempe affirmatus generalis ſit maximè ſcientificus, poſt. l. 11. cùm præcepta artium ſolus demonſtret, & reductionem reliquarum ad hanc figuram ſive ſpeciem laborioſè & ſubtiliter excogitavit, verum non ſic præſtat hæc ſpecies cæteris duabus, ut earum idcirco ad hanc reductio cum tanta ut ſit, alphabeti vexatione elaboranda fuerit, quandoquidem & reliquæ ſpecies non imperfectæ ſunt, nec minus neceſſariò concludunt, id enim ſyllogiſmi ſpeciebus commune cunctis eſt, quæſtiones denique illas, quæ ad ipſarum judicium rectè referuntur, interdum aptius concludunt, quàm in hac ſpecie concludi queunt. Meritò itaque Galenus, l. 2. de placit. Hippoc. & Plat. reductionem hanc omnémque ejus ſupellectilem abecedariam tanquam vaniſſimæ ſubtilitatis doctrinam inanem ac futilem poſt Antipatrum & Chryſippum explodit. Et Keckermannus ipſe, in P. Ramum ferè iniquior, reductionem tamen illam quam vocant per impoſſibile, ad eos duntaxat refutandos inventam, homines ſanè abſurdos & raròadmodum repertos, qui utraque præmiſſa conceſſa, concluſionem negent, fatetur ſe potius propter conſuetudinem ſcholarum, quàm propter magnum ejus uſum retinuiſſe. At conſuetudo certè gnaviter nugandi ejicienda è ſcholis potius, quàm retinenda erat.

Tres hîc paralogiſmi refellendi ſunt; quorum duo ſunt utrique ſpeciei explicatæ communes, propoſitio nimirum particularis, & concluſio partis non debilioris: utriuſque exemplum hoc eſſe poteſt: quoddam animal eſt rationale: beſtia eſt animal; ergo beſtia eſt rationalis. Et præterea totum medium, nempe quoddam animal, non aſſumitur.

Hîc etiam ſolus & unicus pro negandi particulis habendi ſunt; paritérque reddunt aſſumptionem captioſam: ut, quicquid eſt in mea domo, eſt in oppido: unicus fons eſt in mea domo; ergo unicus fons eſt in oppido. Sic, quicquid eſt riſibile, eſt animal: ſolus homo eſt riſibilis; ergo ſolus homo eſt animal. Tam enim hæ particulæ quàm negatio in minore, oſtendunt non reciprocum eſſe majorem; adeóque concluſionem ex majore per minorem, vel generale ex proprio non ſequi.

Expendenda porrò hîc definitionis verba ſunt; quæ non tam aſſumptionem ipſam quàm argumentum in aſſumptione affirmatum ſignificant. Cùm enim propoſitionis antecedens (quod tertium argumentum eſt) negatione infinita topica duntaxat exprimatur, aſſumptionis conſequens (quod etiam tertium argumentum eſt) eandem negationem retinere debet; alioqui non ſequeretur argumentum affirmatum in aſſumptione, ſed contradictione ſublatum. Negatio autem hæc non dicenda eſt vel aſſumptionis vel argumenti negatio, ſed argumenti infiniti affirmatio: tum enim demum negatur in aſſumptione argumentum, cùm illius negatio propoſitionis affirmationi opponitur. Exempli gratia: qui non eſt dives, contemnitur: Poſthumus non eſt dives; ergo Poſthumus contemnitur. Aſſumptionem hîc non negari probat affirmatio concluſionis: ſed perinde eſt acſi hoc modo argumentaretur: omnis homo qui non eſt dives, contemnitur: Poſthumus eſt homo qui non eſt dives; ergo Poſthumus contemnitur. Vel hoc modo: omnis non dives contemnitur: Poſthumus eſt non dives; ergo contemnitur. Sed hæc ex iis etiam quæ ſuprà ad definitionem ipſam hujus ſpeciei diximus, puto non eſſe obſcura.

Præterea in quibuſdam exemplis, quorum propoſitio eſt reciproca, videtur interdum ſyllogiſmus iſte habere aſſumptionem negatam; cùm dicendum ſit potius, partes propoſitionis inverti? quæ ſi in ordinem revocentur, ſyllogiſmus erit in prima ſpecie explicati: ut, Joan. 8. 47. Qui ex Deo eſt, verba Dei audit: vos ex Deo non eſtis; ergo verba Dei non auditis. Propoſitio invertenda eſt: qui verba Dei audit, is ex Deo eſt: vos non eſtis ex Deo; ergo verba Dei non auditis.

CAP. XIII.

De Syllogiſmo connexo primo.

Syllogiſmus compoſitus eſt ſyllogiſmus ubi tota quæſtio eſt pars altera propoſitionis affirmata & compoſita; argumentum eſt pars reliqua.

Negat Ariſtoteles ullam eſſe ſyllogiſmi ſpeciem præter tres figuras; & tamen ipſe ſæpe utitur compoſito, qui ad nullam ex tribus figuris referri poteſt: Verùm uſus, optimus magiſter docet, ſæpius in communi hominum ſermone ac diſputationibus, compoſitos adhiberi ſyllogiſmos, quàm ſimplices: ut qui multas quæſtiones, multa argumenta commodè ſatis diſponant, quæ ſyllogiſmi ſimplices reſpuunt. Theophraſtus etiam & Eudemus, Ariſtotelis diſcipuli, quin etiam Stoici, & poſt eos Cicero & Boëthius, uſum præceptorem ſecuti, compoſitos non omiſerunt. Syllogiſmus autem compoſitus dicitur non tam quod ex compoſitis axiomatis, nam & ſimplex poteſt ex compoſitis, nimirum relatis conſtare, ſed à compoſita diſpoſitione quæſtionis totius cum tertio argumento in propoſitione; unde aſſumptio tota etiam aſſumitur; & concluſio non partim ex propoſitione partim ex aſſumptione, ſed tota ex propoſitione deducitur: propoſitio enim cùm ſit compoſita, duas reliquas ſyllogiſmi partes (quæ axiomata ſimplicia ſunt ) conjunctionis vinculo conjunctas complectitur: pars illa efficit aſſumptionem quæ argumentum continet, altera concluſionem. Propoſitio autem debet eſſe affirmata, quia negata ſi eſſet, compoſita eſſe deſineret, ipſa enim compoſitio negatione diſſolveretur. Propoſitionem autem negatam efficit, ut de axiomate compoſito ſuprà dictum eſt, non partium ſed conjunctionis negatio: ut, ſi non eſt animal, non eſt homo; hæc propoſitio ex omnibus etiam partibus negatis affirmata eſt: rectè igitur inde aſſumitur atque concluditur, at non eſt animal, ergo neque homo. Sin hoc modo dicerem, non ſi non eſt animal, idcirco non eſt homo, ex hac negata propoſitione nihil omnino deduci aut concludi poſſet. In ſyllogiſmis itaque compoſitis ex ipſa conjunctionis vi deducuntur aſſumptio & concluſio. Ex duobus enim quæ propoſitione conjunguntur, aut unum aſſumitur ut alterum concludatur, aut unum tollitur ut alterum tollatur.

Specialis autem contradictio, ut in axiomate ſimplici jam diximus, particularis eſt aut propria. Tollere igitur propoſitionis partem aliquam in aſſumptione aut concluſione, eſt ejus contradictionem particularem aut propriam ponere. Particulari autem generaliter contradici, generali particulariter, ibidem etiam docemur. Exemplis rem planam ſuo quamque loco faciemus.

Sequitur nunc compoſiti ſyllogiſmi diſtributio: cujus genera ex propoſitionum compoſitione oriuntur: propoſitiones axiomata compoſita ſemper ſunt: ex quatuor autem axiomatum compoſitorum generibus copulatum ſi affirmatum ſit, non habet locum in compoſito ſyllogiſmo; ſi negatum, æquipollet interdum disjuncto: diſcretum ſyllogiſmi expers eſt, quia diverſa ex quibus conſtat, nec planè conſentiunt, & tamen ita leviter diſſentiunt, ut uno poſito vel remoto, non tamen ſequatur alterum poni vel removeri; aut vim habet connexi.

Syllogiſmus connexus eſt ſyllogiſmus compoſitus propoſitionis connexæ. Vel cujus propoſitio eſt axioma connexum.

Cùm autem axiomati connexo affine ſit relatum temporis, ut ibidem oſtendimus, etiam ſyllogiſmi connexi propoſitio poterit relata eſſe temporis: nam quantitatis, qualitatis, loci propoſitiones relatæ in ſimplicibus ſyllogiſmis locum habent; quia in iis propoſitionibus quæſtionis duntaxat conſequens cum argumento diſponitur. Relatum denique conſequentiæ, de quo ſupra cap. 6. ſyllogiſmus idoneus non eſt.

Syllogiſmus connexus eſt duorum modorum.

Quo modo Cicero judicat & concludit l. 2. de divinatione: ſi dii ſunt, divinatio eſt: ſunt autem dii; divinatio eſt igitur.

Aliud ex 3. Offic. Atque ſi etiam hoc natura præſcribit, ut homo homini, quicunque ſit, ob eam ipſam cauſam, quòd is homo ſit, conſultum velit, neceſſe eſt ſecundum eandem naturam, omnium utilitatem eſſe communem. Quod ſi ita eſt, una continemur omnes & eadem lege naturæ. Idque ipſum ſi ita eſt, certè violare alterum lege naturæ prohibemur. Verum autem primum; verum igitur & extremum

Propoſitio hujus ſyllogiſmi eſt ſorites ( de quo infrà ) trium graduum, ſi hoc natura præſcribit, ut, &c.

Ut 1 Catil. Si te parentes odiſſent, diſcederes: nunc patria te odit ( quæ communis eſt omnium noſtrum parens ) multo magis ergo diſcedes. Sed majus illud facile contineri in propoſitione poterit hoc modo; ſi propter odium parentum diſcederes, multo magis propter odium patriæ. At illud; ergo hoc multo magis.

Simili ratione concluditur etiam majus vel minus; ut Cic. pro Quint. Etſi vadimonium deſeruiſſet, non debuiſſes tamen ad extrema jura deſcendere: at non deſeruit; multò minus ergo debuiſti, vel multò magis non debuiſti.

Ut, cùm Paris Oenonem deſeret, Xanthus recurrit; Paris Oenonem deſeret; Xanthus ergo recurrit.

Sed tamen relata temporis ut & reliqua axiomata compoſita, id quod ſupra monuimus, ad ſyllogiſmum ſimplicem pertinebunt quoties non tota quæſtio in propoſitione diſponitur: quod quidem ſemper fit, cùm de certo & definito tempore quæſtio eſt: ut ſi quæratur an hoc tempore ſit æſtas, hujuſmodi erit ſyllogiſmus: cùm ſol eſt in cancro, æſtas eſt: at hoc tempore ſol eſt in cancro; ergo hoc tempore æſtas eſt.

C A P. XIV.

De Syllogiſmo connexo ſecundo.

SEcundus modus connexi tollit conſequens, ut tollat antecedens.* Hæc enim vis connexi axiomatis eſt, ſi conſequens non ſit, nec eſſe antecedens. Sic Cicero 4. de fin. docent nos, inquit, Dialectici, &c. Si illud, hoc: non autem hoc; igitur ne illud quidem.

Sequuntur exempla: ſi ulli rei ſapiens aſſentietur unquam, aliquando etiam opinabitur: nunquam autem opinabitur; nulli igitur rei aſſentietur. Hîc conſequens contradictione ſpeciali in aſſumptione tollitur, aliquando, nunquam; concluſio etiam antecedenti ſpecialiter contradicit; ulli rei, nulli rei.

Eodem ſyllogiſmo Ovid. 2. de Triſt. ſtultitiam ſuam judicat:

Si ſaperem doctas odiſſem jure ſorores,
Numina cultori pernicioſa ſuo.
At nunc (tanta meo comes eſt inſania morbo)
Saxa memor refero rurſus ad icta pedem.

Propoſitio eſt, ſi ſaperem, Muſas odiſſem: cujus proſyllogiſmus eſt ab adjuncta pernicie. Aſſumptio, at non odi; quæ à ſimili exprimitur, at nunc ſaxa memor, &c. ergo non ſapio: cujus concluſionis ſententia in parentheſi eſt; tanta meo, &c. Atque in hoc exemplo eſt contradictio propria.

Hæ duæ ſyllogiſmi ſpecies ſunt omnium uſitatiſſimæ.

Non enim ea ſolùm argumenta quæ in ſimplicibus & disjunctis ſyllogiſmis diſponi non poſſunt, in connexis facile diſponuntur, ſed etiam ex iis quæ poſſunt aliis formis concludi, multa in his ſpeciebus facilius & promptius concluduntur: immo nullum omnino argumentum, quod in ſyllogiſmum uſum habet, has connexi ſpecies reſpuit.

Præter hos duos connexi ſyllogiſmi modos nonnulli duos alios adjiciunt; quorúm prior tollit antecedens ut tollat conſequens, poſterior aſſumit conſequens ut concludat antecedens. In quos modos etſi communis fortè ſermo, boni etiam authores nonnunquam incidunt, tamen cum in ſyllogiſmo non veritas partium ſed neceſſitas conſequentiæ ſpectetur, tenendum eſt, vitioſos eſſe eos modos qui ex veris verum juxta & falſum poſſunt concludere. Prior ergo hîc modus qui tollit antecedens eſt prioris legitimi modi paralogiſmus, affinis negatæ aſſumptioni in ſecunda ſpecie explicati: ut, ſi homo eſt leo, ſentit: non eſt leo; ergo non ſentit. Et hoc: ſi Dio eſt equus, eſt animal: at non eſt equus; ergo non eſt animal. Si orator eſt, homo eſt: non eſt orator; ergo nec homo. Hoc ſi ſic reſolvas in ſecundam ſpeciem explicati, omnis orator eſt homo, fallacia patebit. Immo ſine iſta reductione per ſe etiam patet: tollit enim antecedens, quod minus eſt, ut tollat conſequens, quod majus eſt: à minore autem ad majus nulla eſt hujuſmodi conſequentia.

Modus poſterior, qui aſſumit conſequens ut concludat antecedens, eſt captio poſterioris legitimi modi, affinis paralogiſmo ex omnibus affirmatis in prima ſpecie explicati: ut, ſi homo eſt leo, ſentit: at ſentit; ergo eſt leo. Utrumque hunc paralogiſmum Ariſtoteles appellat fallaciam conſequentis; quæ toties fit quoties propoſitio non eſt reciproca.

Sed eſt etiam aliud ſophiſma ſecundi modi, cùm aſſumptio non tollit contradictione ſpeciali; id eſt, quando conſequenti vel generali generaliter, vel particulari particulariter contradicit. Generalis contradictionis exemplum eſt, ſi omne animal eſt irrationale, omnis etiam homo eſt irrationalis: at nullus homo eſt irrationalis: nullum ergo animal eſt irrationale. Particularis hoc: ſi homo eſt rationalis, aliquod animal eſt rationale: ſed aliquod animal non eſt rationale; ergo nec homo.

CAP. XV.

De Syllogiſmo disjuncto primo.

Ciceronis pro Cluentio judicium tale eſt: ſed cùm eſſet hæc illi propoſita conditio, ut aut juſtè piéque accuſaret, aut acerbè indignéque moreretur; accuſare quoque modo poſſet, quàm illo modo mori maluit. Disjunctio clarior ſic erit: aut accuſandum aut moriendum: non moriendum; accuſandum igitur. In hoc exemplo, ut eſt apud Cic. eſt partium inverſio, totuſque ſyllogiſmus in axiomate relato conſequentiæ involvitur. Propoſitio non eſt abſoluté vera, ſed ex conditione. Aſſumptio & concluſio per comparationem minoris ponuntur; ita, ut concluſio præcedat.

Sic idem 2 Phil. ratiocinatur: nunquamne intelligis tibi ſtatuendum eſſe, utrum illi qui iſtam rem geſſerunt, homicidæ ſint an vindices libertatis? Attende, &c. Nego quicquam eſſe medium. Confiteor illos niſi liberatores populi Rom. conſervatoréſque reip. ſint, plus quàm ſicarios, plus quàm homicidas, plus quam parricidas eſſe: ſiquidem eſt atrocius patria parentem, &c. Si parricida, cur honoris cauſa à te ſunt & in hoc ordine & apud populum Rom. ſemper appellati? Cur, &c. Atque hæc acta per te. Non igitur homicida. Sequitur ut liberatores tuo judicio ſint; quandoquidem tertium nihil poteſt eſſe. Quæſtio hîc proponitur initio de Cæſaris interfectoribus, utrum, &c. Propoſitio proponitur axiomate connexo, confiteor illos niſi, &c. quod æquipollet disjuncto, aut vindices ſunt libertatis aut pluſquam homicida: illuſtratur enim ea pars disjunctionis à majori: & præcedit proſyllogiſmus, quo oſtenditur disjunctionem hanc eſſe ſine medio, & proinde neceſſariam. Aſſumptio ſequitur, non ſunt homicida; idque confirmatur proſyllogiſmo à teſtimonio & factis ipſius Antonii. Proſyllogiſmus concluditur in ſecundo connexo, ſi parricidæ, cur, &c? at hæc acta per te; non igitur homicida. Concluſio denique ſequitur, ut liberatores fuerint; idque repetito propoſitionis proſyllogiſmo confirmatur, quandoquidem tertium ſive medium nihil poteſt eſſe.

Quamvis autem disjunctionis partes eſſe poſſint ſæpenumerò plures quàm duæ, id quod in diſparatis accidit, ipſius tamen propoſitionis duæ tantummodo partes ſunt; quarum una eſt quæſtio, altera eſt argumentum. In hoc modo ubi quæſtio ſemper concluditur, tertium argumentum plura oppoſita comprehendit, quæ omnia in aſſumptione tollenda ſunt, ut quæſtio concludatur: nam oppoſitorum plura ſimul affirmari nequeunt, negari plura ſimul queunt.

Sic Cic. judicat Rabirium cum conſulibus eſſe oportuiſſe. Aut enim cum conſulibus, aut cum ſeditioſis, aut latuiſſe: at nec cum ſeditioſis fuiſſe, nec latuiſſe; fuiſſe ergo cum conſulibus. Pro Rabir. Atqui videmus ait hæc in rerum natura tria fuiſſe, ut aut cum Saturnino eſſet, aut cum bonis, aut lateret. Latere autem, mortis erat inſtar turpiſſimæ: cum Saturnino eſſe, furoris & ſceleris; virtus & honeſtas & pudor cum coſſ. eſſe cogebat. Propoſitio per ſe clara eſt. Aſſumptionis partes proſyllogiſmis illuſtrantur, primo à ſimili, deinde ab adjunctis. Concluſio proſyllogiſmo ab efficiente illuſtratur.

Notandum eſt in hoc modo non ita exigi ſpecialem contradictionem, ut in reliquis; neque enim ad conſequentiæ neceſſitatem pertinet in hoc modo, ut in reliquis, ſed ad aſſumptionis ſolius veritatem. Si ergo aſſumptio generalem contradictionem ferre poteſt, per conſequentiam licebit uti: ad conſequentiæ enim rationem ſufficit, alterum quovis modo tolli, ut reliquum concludatur, eademque concluſio erit, ſive ſpecialis ſive generalis in aſſumptione contradictio fuerit, in altero verò modo ſecus erit, ubi contradictio in ipſam concluſionem cadit.

CAP. XVI.

De Syllogiſmo disjuncto ſecundo.

D*Isjunctus ſecundus è propoſitione partibus omnibus affirmata aſſumit unum & reliquum tollit.*

Secundus efficitur, quia minus generalis eſt primo, utpote proprietatibus quibuſdam aſtrictus, quibus prior immunis erat. Proprietates autem hæ ſunt, 1. partium omnium propoſitionis affirmatio, non totius modò propoſitionis, id enim ſyllogiſmis omnibus compoſitis commune eſt; & affirmari quidem propoſitio vel omnibus negatis partibus poteſt. 2. Aſſumptio affirmatur, quoniam in propoſitione affirmata fuerat. 3. In concluſione ſemper eſt negatio, eáque ſpecialis contradictio: in primo quidem concluſio nonnunquam negatur; ſed hoc tum fit cùm pars propoſitionis quæ concluditur negata fuit. Exempli gratia: aut dies eſt, aut nox: dies eſt; ergo nox non eſt.

Non & dies, & nox eſt: at dies eſt; non igitur nox eſt. De hac negata copulatione ſic Cic. in Top. non & hoc & illud: hoc autem; non igitur illud.

Pertinet autem ad hunc ſecundum duntaxat modum negata copulatio; quod cum in hujuſmodi propoſitione quævis oppoſita diſponi poſſint, ex uno eorum negato, niſi in iis qui medio carent, non neceſſariò alterum affirmatur & concluditur, quod fit in primo modo, ſed ex altero affirmato alterum negatur, quæ communis eſt regula omnium oppoſitorum, & fit duntaxat in hoc ſecundo.

Ad ſophiſmata quod attinet horum modorum, primi quidem nullum occurrit. Secundi quæ ſunt, ex definitione redarguuntur. Primum eſt, ſi aliqua pars propoſitionis negata erit: ut, leo aut animal eſt, aut non eſt homo; at non eſt homo, ergo nec animal. Secundum eſt, ſi aſſumptio ſit negata; ut in exemplo ſuperiore. Tertium eſt, ſi ſpecialis contradictio non erit in concluſione: ut hoc; aut homo eſt animal, aut omne animal eſt irrationale; ſed homo eſt animal, ergo nullum animal eſt irrationale.

Appendix de enthymemate, dilemmate, & ſorite.

EXpoſitis omnibus cùm ſimplicis tum compoſiti ſyllogiſmi ſpeciebus, ſequitur axiomatis & ſyllogiſmi communis affectio, vel potius anomalia, de qua antediximus, crypſis. Quæ in omni cùm loquendi uſu tum ſcribendi genere tam frequens eſt, idque brevitatis plerumque cauſa, ut nemo ferè ſyllogiſmos integròs ſine crypſi aliqua vel loquatur vel ſcribat.

Sed quoniam crypſis ejúſque triplex modus ſyllogiſmorum omnes ſpecies afficiunt, ea re dicendi locus de ſyllogiſmi crypſibus antè non erat, quàm de ſyllogiſmi ſpeciebus cunctis dictum eſſet.

Ut ab exemplo: Themiſtocli licuit urbem relinquere; ergo mihi. Addatur propoſitio; quod Themiſtocli licuit, licet & mihi. Ab inductione: inventio & diſpoſitio in argumentis verſantur; ergo Logica tota. Addatur aſſumptio; Logica tota eſt eorum inventio & diſpoſitio.

Hoc etiam perpetuò obſervandum eſt, ſi concluſionis prædicatum deeſt, deeſſe majorem; ſi ſubjectum, minorem: ſi utrumque, ſyllogiſmi compoſiti majorem vel potius majoris antecedentem, quæ cum tota quæſtione ut cum conſequente diſponitur; quod indicat plenum ſyllogiſmum fore compoſitum, & antecedens pars enthymematis erit antecedens majoris; totúmque enthymema convertetur in majorem propoſitionem ſyllogiſmi connexi: ut, virtus reddit beatos; vitium ergo miſeros. In antecedente hujus enthymematis nec antecedens nec conſequens quæſtionis apparet: totum igitur converte in axioma connexum aut disjunctum, plenum ſyllogiſmum compoſitum eſſe intelliges; ut, ſi virtus reddit beatos, vitium reddit miſeros; at illud; hoc igitur. Non eſt nox; ergo eſt dies. Totum converte in axioma disjunctum, majorem ſupplebis, & ſyllogiſmum plenum disjunctum conficies: aut dies eſt, aut nox; non nox. ergo dies.

Si quid ad tres illas ſyllogiſmi partes acceſſerit, proſyllogiſmus dicitur. Eſt enim ad partem aliquam ſyllogiſmi addita probatio.

Partium etiam ordo ſæpe confunditur. Quod utrumque accidit in dilemmate & ſorite.

Dilemma eſt ſpecialis quædam crypſis non ſyllogiſmi, ſed ſyllogiſmorum; à duplici propoſitione dictum quam lemma Stoici vocant, vulgò disjunctivus biformis & ſyllogiſmus cornutus, quaſi cornibus feriens: cujus vis in duobus axiomatis connexis citra ſyllogiſmi formam ſatis manifeſta eſt: ut illud Martialis;

Hæc, ſi diſplicui, fuerint ſolatia nobis;
Hæc fuerint nobis præmia, ſi placui.

Et illud in evangelio: ſi bene locutus ſum, cur me cædis? ſi male, teſtare de malo. Et reciprocum illud inſigne Protagora magiſtri ad Euathlum diſcipulum, apud Gellium, l. 5. c. 10. & 11: ſi contra te lis data erit merces mihi ex ſententia illa debebitur, quia ego vicero; ſin vero ſecundum te judicatum erit, merces mihi ex pacto debebitur, quia tu viceris. Cui contrà Euathlus; & ego bone magiſter, utrovis modo vicero, &c. Hujuſmodi eſt etiam illud apud Ariſtot. Rhet. 3. 23. non agendum eſſe cum populo; quia, ſi juſta dixeris, hominibus inviſus eris; ſi injuſta, Deo. Immo agendum eſſe cum populo: nam, ſi injuſta dixeris, hominibus gratus eris; ſi juſta, Deo.

Explicatur autem hæc crypſis axiomate disjuncto; tot deinde ſyllogiſmis connexis vel etiam categoricis, quot erant disjuncti axiomatis membra: ut illud Biantis conſilium de uxore non ducenda: aut formoſam duces, aut deformem; ſi formoſam, communem; ſi deformem, pœnam: neutrum autem bonum; non eſt igitur ducenda uxor. Vel categoricè ſic; communis non eſt ducenda; formoſa erit communis; ergo, &c. pœna non eſt ducenda; deformis erit pœna; ergo, &c. Sed axioma illud disjunctum partes omnes disjunctas non enumerat: eſt enim media quæ nec formoſa nec deformis eſt; & neutrius connexi conſequens eſt vera; fieri enim poteſt, ut nec formoſa communis, nec deformis pœna ſit futura.

Sorites & ſyllogiſmus crypticus multarum propoſitionum continua ſerie ita progredientium, ut prædicatum præcedentis propoſitionis perpetuò ſit ſubjectum ſequentis, donec tandem conſequens propoſitionis ultima concludatur de antecedente primæ: ut, homo eſt animal; animal eſt corpus ſentiens; corpus ſentiens eſt vivens; vivens eſt ſubſtantia; ergo homo eſt ſubſtantia. Græcè autem ſorites, acervalis Latinè à Cicerone dicitur; quia minutatim addit, & quaſi acervum efficit.

Adhibetur ferè vel ad ſummum genus de infima ſpecie, vel ad cauſam primariam, licet remotam, effecto attribuendam; & illud quidem per genera ſubalterna, ut in exemplo ſuperiore; hoc per cauſas medias, ut in exemplo ſequente: quos Deus prænovit, eos prædeſtinavit; quos prædeſtinavit, eos vocavit; quos vocavit, eos juſtificavit; quos juſtificavit, eos glorificavit; ergo, quos prænovit, eos glorificavit.

Utitur autem ſorites & ſubalternis generibus & ſubordinatis cauſis quaſi tot mediis terminis ad probandum concluſionem; tot nempe quot ſunt termini inter ſubjectum primæ propoſitionis & prædicatum concluſionis: quot autem termini medii, tot ſunt ſyllogiſmi.

Eſt itaque progreſſio enthymematica ſyllogiſmos uno pauciores continens quàm propoſitiones. Syllogiſmus principalis habet pro majore propoſitionem concluſioni proximam; pro minoris termino minore, ſubjectum concluſionis pro termino majore; ſubjectum propoſitionis majoris: ex. gr. quos juſtificavit, glorificavit; quos prænovit, juſtificavit; quos ergo prænovit, glorificavit. Reliqui ſunt minorum proſyllogiſmi, & præcedens quiſque probatio ſequentis.

Unde intelligitur ſoritæ crypſis triplex, & defectus, & redundantia, & inverſio. Si igitur partium, ſive ſpecies ſive cauſæ ſint, non erit recta ſubordinatio firmaque connexio, ſorites probus non erit: ut, ex malis moribus exiſtunt bonæ leges; ex bonis legibus ſalus reip. ex reip. ſalute bona omnia; ergo ex moribus malis bona omnia. Hîc cauſæ per ſe male ſubordinantur cauſæ per accidens.

Fallit hic etiam: ſi nullum tempus eſſet, nox non eſſet; ſi nox non eſſet, dies eſſet; ſi dies eſſet, aliquod tempus eſſet; ergo, ſi nullum tempus eſſet, aliquod tempus eſſet. Nam ſi nullum tempus eſſet, certè nec dies eſſet: fallit ergo in propoſitione ſecunda; quæ non vere continuatur; ſed ponit effectum, ſublata cauſa. Cætera ſorites vitia habet cum aliis ſyllogiſmi ſpeciebus communia.

CAP. XVII.

De Methodo.

Methodus eſt diſpoſitio dianoëtica variorum axiomatum homogeneorum pro natura ſuæ claritatē præpoſitorum, unde omnium inter ſe convenientia judicatur, memoriâque comprehenditur.

Methodi permagnus eſt in omni vita uſus, magna proinde laus. Hanc Plato, in Philebo, eſſe ait donum hominibus divinitus datum. Ariſtoteles etiam ordinem in maximis bonis numeravit. Fabius, Nec mihi, inquit, errare videntur, qui ipſam rerum naturam ſtare ordine putant; quo confuſo, peritura ſunt omnia.

Eſt autem methodus diſpoſitio variorum axiomatum homogeneorum, i. e. eorum quæ ad eandem rem pertinent, eandémque ad finem referuntur. Homogenea niſi fuerint, ſubordinata ſibi invicem eſſe non poterunt, adeóque ne ordinata quidem. Itaque Arithmeticum in Geometria, Geometricum in Arithmetica veluti heterogenium & alienum methodus excludit. Pro naturæ autem ſuæ claritate axiomata quæque præponenda ſunt, prout ar[illegible]menta priora, notiora, illuſtriora complectuntur. Prima autem præcedant an orta à primis parum refert, cùm utrorumque eadem affectio ſit.

Atque ut ſpectatur in axiomate veritas aut falſitas, in ſyllogiſmo conſequentia & inconſequentia; ſic in methodo conſideratur, ut per ſe clarius præcedat, obſcurius ſequatur; omninóque ordo & confuſio judicatur. Sic diſponetur ex homogeneis axiomatis primo loco abſoluta notione primum, ſecundo ſecundum, tertio tertium, & ita deinceps.

Prius autem ſicut & poſterius quinque modis dicimus: tempore, ut ſenem juvene; natura, ut cauſam effecto, genus ſpecie; quicquid denique exiſtendi conſecutione eſt prius; i. e. quod alio poſito, ponitur; & quo poſito, aliud non ponitur, ut unitas binario: nonnunquam etiam ubi conſecutio reciproca eſt, quod ſimul eſt tempore, natura tamen eſt prius, ut ſol ſuo lumine. Bifariam etiam dicitur prius natura; generante ſcilicet, ut partes toto, ſimplex compoſito, media fine; vel intendente, ut totum partibus, compoſitum ſimplici, finis mediis. Prius diſpoſitione ſive loco dicitur, quod initio eſt proprius; ut in dicendo, narratio confirmatione. Prius dignitate; ut magiſtratus cive, aurum argento, virtus auro. Prius denique cognitione, quod cognitu facilius eſt: idque vel in ſe, vel nobis: in ſe quod naturâ eſt prius; nobis, quod poſterius eſt, & ſenſibus objectum: illa perfectior eſt cognitio, hæc imperfectior.

Unde intelligitur agi hîc de methodo tradendi ſive docendi, quæ analytica rectè dicitur, non inveniendi. Methodus n. inveniendi quæ à Platone dicitur ſynthetica, procedit à ſingularibus quæ tempore ſunt priora, ſenſibúſque ſe prius offerunt; quorum inductione generales notiones colliguntur: methodus autem docendi ſive inventa & judicata diſponendi, de qua hic agitur. Contraria via, ut etiam docet Ariſt. 1. Metaph. c. 1. & 2. procedit ab univerſalibus, quæ natura ſunt priora & notiora; non quo prius aut facilius cognoſcantur, ſed quòd poſteaquam ſunt cognita, præcedunt notionis natura & claritate quanto ſunt à ſenſibus remotiora. Sic generales rerum ſpecies (ut Optici etiam docent) citius in ſenſus incurrunt: ut advenientem aliquem, judico prius animal eſſe quàm hominem, & hominem quàm Socratem. Atque hanc ſolam methodum Ariſtot. paſſim docuit.

Subalterna conſequentur, quia claritate ſunt proximæ: utque ex his naturâ notiores præponentur, minus nota ſubſtituentur.

Tandémque ſpecialiſſima conſtituentur.

Definitio itaque generaliſſima prima erit; cauſas n. continet Definitioni conſectaria ſubjungentur, ſive proprietatum ſi quæ ſunt & ex definitione per ſe non patent, explicationes Diſtributio ſequetur.

Quæ ſi multiplex fuerit, præcedet in partes integras partitio, ſequetur diviſio in ſpecies. Partéſque ipſæ & ſpecies eodem ordine ſunt rurſus tractandæ ac definiendæ, quo diſtributæ fuerint.

Et tranſitionum vinculis ſi longior inter eas interſit explicatio, colligandæ ſunt: id n. auditorem reficit ac recreat.

Tranſitio autem vel perfecta eſt vel imperfecta. Perfecta, quæ breviter & quid dictum ſit & quid ſequatur, oſtendit: qualis illa hujus libri ſecundi initio adhuc prima Artis Logicæ pars fuit, &c. Imperfecta eſt quæ alterutrum duntaxat oſtendit vel quid dictum ſit, vel quid ſequatur: qualis illa l. 1. c. 18. argumenta ſimplicia ita fuerunt, &c.

Exemplo ſit Grammatica. Hujus definitio, ut quæ generaliſſima ſit, ex lege methodi primo loco ſtatuatur; ars ſcilicet bene loquendi: ſecundo loco erit Grammaticæ partitio, in etymologiam & ſyntaxin; tum etymologia, quæ de vocibus agit, definiatur; dein vocis partes in literis & ſyllabis, ſpecieſque in vocibus numeri & ſine numero ſubſequantur, exituumque tranſitiones ſuis locis collocentur: atque ita omnium etymologiæ partium definitiones, diſtributiones, colligationes, exempla denique ſpecialiſſima in ſingulis diſponentur: idémque in ſyntaxi fiet. Hanc viam omnes artes ſibi propoſuerunt.

Moderni quidem duplicem methodum inſtituunt, ſyntheticam & analyticam: illam ſcientiis theoreticis tradendis, Phyſicæ putà vel Mathematicæ magis accommodatam; qua partes ſcientiæ ita diſponuntur, ut à ſubjecto contemplationis univerſali ad particularia, à ſimplicibus ad compoſita progreſſus fiat: ſic Phyſica exorditur à corporis naturalis definitione; ad ejus deinde cauſas vel partes effectionéſque generales ad ſpecies denique progreditur. Methodum analyticam definiunt, qua ita diſponuntur partes ſcientiæ practicæ ut à notione finis fiat progreſſus ad notitiam principiórum vel mediorum, ad illum finem aſſequendum: ſic in Ethicis à fine, ſcilicet beatitudine, ad media, nempe virtutes proceditur: Verùm cùm hac utraque methodus una eadémque via, à definitione ſcilicet generaliſſima, ſive illa ſubjectum ſive finem generalem contineat, ad minus generalia, à notioribus ad minus nota, à ſimplicibus ad compoſita æque utrobique dividendo progrediatur, non videtur ob diverſam in definitione generali, illic ſubjecti, hìc finis mentionem, duplicem eſſe methodum conſtituendam; ſed unum potius, artium quidem tradendarum, eámque analyticam eſſe dicendam.

Ideóque poetæ, oratores, omnéſque omninò ſcriptores, quoties docendum ſibi auditorem proponunt, hanc viam ſequi volunt, quamvis non uſquequaque ingrediantur atque inſiſtant.

Sic Virgilius, in Georgicis, diſtribuit propoſitam materiam in quatuor partes, ut antedictum eſt: primóque libro res communes perſequitur, ut aſtrologiam, meteorologiam, déque ſegetibus & earum culta diſſerit, quæ pars operis prima erat, túmque tranſitio adhibetur initio ſecundi libri.

> Hactenus arvorum cultus, &c.

Dein ſcribit generaliter de arboribus, tum ſpecialiter de vitibus. Sic toto opere, generaliſſimum, primo; ſubalterna, medio; ſpecialiſſima, extremo loco ponere ſtuduit.

Eandem Ovidius, in Faſtis, diſpoſitionis hujus gratiam ſequitur. Proponit initio ſummam operis:

> Tempora cum cauſis Latium digeſta per annum, &c.

Mox imploratione facta, partitionem anni ſtatuit. Tum communes differentias interpretatus diei faſti, nefaſti, &c. tandem unumquemque menſem ſuo loco perſequitur, & ordinis hujus à generalibus ad ſpecialia ſtudium ſuum præfatione indicat.

> Hæc mihi dicta ſemel, totis hærentia faſtis,
> Ne ſeriem rerum ſcindere cogar, erunt.

Oratores in proœmio; narratione, confirmatione, peroratione hunc ordinem affectant, eumque artis & naturæ & rei ordinem appellant, & interdum ſtudioſius aſſectantur.

Vt

Ut in verrem, Cicero primùm proponendo tum partiendo. Quæſtor inquit Cn. Papyrio coſ. fuiſti abhinc annos quatuordecim, & ex illa die ad hanc diem quæ feciſti, in judicium voco, &c. Propoſitio hîc & definitio ſummæ rei eſt, tanquam in hoc judicio generaliſſimo. Partitio ſequitur: hi ſunt anni, &c. quare hæc eadem erit quadripartita diſtributio totius accuſationis meæ. Quas partes quatuor earúmque partium particulas deinceps ſuo quamque ordine & loco tractat, & tranſitionibus copulat; tres primas tertio libro; & ſic deinceps.

Hæc igitur in variis axiomatis homogeneis ſuo vel ſyllogiſmi judicio notis methodus erit, quoties perſpicuè res docenda erit.

At cùm delectatione motúve aliquo majore ab oratore quovis aut poeta, ut quibuſcum vulgo potiſſimum res eſt, ducendus erit auditor, crypſis methodi ferè adhibebitur; homogenea quædam rejicientur, ut definitionum, partitionum, tranſitionúmque lumina. Quædam aſſumentur heterogenea, velut digreſſiones à re, & in re commorationes. Et præcipuè rerum ordo invertetur:

Sed oratoribus & poetis ſua methodi ratio relinquenda eſt; vel ſaltem iis, qui oratoriam & poeticam docent.

PRAXIS LOGICÆ

Analytica ex Dounamo.

Ad Cap. tertium RAMIÆ Dialecticæ.

E*Xemplum primum eſt cauſa procreantis & conſervantis ex Ovidii primo de Remed.*

Ergo ubi viſus eris noſtra medicabilis arte,
Fac monitis fugias otia prima meis.
Hæc, ut ames, faciunt: hæc quæ fecere tuentur;
Hæc ſunt jucundi cauſa, cibuſque mali.
Otia ſi tollas, periere Cupidinis arcus,
Contemptaque jacent & ſine luce faces.

In ſingulis, quæ ad efficientis doctrinam illuſtrandam afferuntur, exemplis, tria conſideranda ſunt, efficiens, effectum, efficiendi modus. In hoc exemplo effectum eſt amor, efficiens eſt otium, quod amorem efficit duplici modo, tum procreando, tum conſervando, ut in ſecundo diſticho Poeta docet. Diſpoſitio autem hujus exempli (ut pleniorem ejus analyſin inſtituam) ſyllogiſtica eſt. Quæſtio, quam Poeta concludendam proponit, hæc eſt; fugiendum eſſe otium ei, qui ab amore immunis eſſe velit: eáque duobus ſyllogiſmis concluditur: in priori argumentum tertium ducitur ab effectis quidem otii, amoris verò cauſa procreante & conſervante, hoc modo: amoris procreans & conſervans cauſa vitanda eſt ei, qui ab amore ipſo liber eſſe velit; otium verò amoris procreans & conſervans cauſa eſt. Otium igitur fugiendum eſt ei, qui ab amore liber eſſe velit. Propoſitio deeſt. Aſſumptio in ſecundo diſticho primò ſimpliciter proponitur, deinde altera ejus pars de conſervante per ſimilitudinem cibi illuſtratur. Concluſio præcedit in primo diſticho. Secunda ratio eſt conſectarium ex aſſumptione prioris ſyllogiſmi deductum. Otium eſt cauſa procreans & conſervans amoris; ergo ſublato otio, amor tollitur. Cujus propoſitio & fundamentum eſt Logicum illud axioma; ſublata cauſa, tollitur effectum, quæ propoſitio ſi addatur, plenus erit ſyllogiſmus.

Exemplum ſecundum ibid. ex Æneid. 4.

Non tibi diva parens generis nec Dardanus auctor
Perfide: ſed duris genuit te cautibus horrens
Caucaſus. Hyrcanaque admôrunt ubera Tigres.

Hic effectum eſt Æneas. Cauſæ efficientes, pater, mater, nutrix; modus autem efficiendi non unus: parentes enim liberos efficiunt procreando, nutrix verò conſervando. Diſponitur autem hoc exemplum axiomate diſcreto. Anchiſes & Venus non ſunt Æneæ parentes, ut Didoni placet, ſed horrens Caucaſus & duræ cautes: Hyrcaniæ autem tigres ut nutrices ubera admoverunt.

Exemplum tertium eſt ſolitariæ cauſæ cap. 4. ex Æneid. 9.

Me, me: adſum, qui feci, in me convertite ferrum
O Rutuli, mea fraus omnis: nihil iſte nec auſus,
Nec potuit. ——

In hoc exemplo effectum eſt cædes Rutulorum. Efficiens hujus cædis Nyſus. Quod autem ad modum attinet efficiendi, effecit, ut ipſe de ſe ait, ſolus. Diſpoſitio autem hujus exempli ſyllogiſtica eſt. Qui ſolus auctor eſt cædis, is ſolus eſt occidendus. Ego verò, inquit, ſolus auctor cædis ſum; ergo, &c. Propoſitio deeſt: aſſumptio continetur verſu 2. Mea fraus, i. e. culpa omnis, quam probat remotione ſociæ cauſæ, nihil iſte nec auſus eſt, &c. Concluſio verſu 1. Me, me ſcilicet occidite, in me convertite ferrum, &c.

Ejuſdem cauſæ exemplum aliud, in oratione Ciceronis pro Marcello. Nam bellicas laudes ſolent quidam extenuare verbis, eáſque detrahere ducibus & communicare cum multis, ne propria ſint imperatorum: & certè in armis militum virtus, locorum opportunitas, ſociorum auxilia, claſſes, commeatus multum juvant: maximam verò partem, quaſi ſuo jure, fortuna ſibi vendicat, & quicquid eſt proſperè geſtum, id penè omne ducit ſuum. At verò hujus gloria, Cæſar, quàm es paulò ante adeptus, ſocium habes neminem: totum hoc quantumcunque eſt, quod certè maximum eſt, totum inquam, eſt tuum. Nihil tibi ex iſta laude centurio, nihil præfectus, nihil cohors, nihil turma decerpit: quin etiam illa ipſa rerum humanarum domina fortuna in iſtius ſe ſocietatem gloria non offert: tibi cedit, tuam eſſe totam ac propriam fatetur. Hoc exemplum continet plenam comparationem à minore ad majus, ad amplificandam Cæſaris laudem clementiæ. In proto exemplum eſt cauſarum, quæ cum aliis efficiunt. Effectum eſt victoria; efficiens imperator, non quidem ſolus, ſed cum aliis, quarum alia principalis eſt, &imperatori quaſi ſocia fortuna: aliæ adjuvantes & miniſtræ, cujuſmodi quinque recenſentur, militum fortitudo, locorum opportunitas, ſociorum auxilia, claſſes, commeatus. In apodoſi exemplum habemus ſolitariæ cauſæ: effectum eſt clementia in Marcellum, præſtita, Cujus cauſa & quidem ſola eſt ipſe Cæſar; eáque illuſtratur remotione cauſarum adjuvantium. Scopus Ciceronis eſt, ut oſtendat Cæſarem plus laudis ob clementiam mereri, quàm propter res geſtas: ídque oſtendit ex collatis inter ſe efficiendi modis, quod nimirum rerum geſtarum Cæſar non ſolus auctor fuerit, clementiæ verò præſtitæ ſolus. Jam verò efficiens plus laudis vel vituperationis meretur, quæ ſola quid facit; quæ verò cum aliis, minus. Sic igitur hæc ratio poteſt concludi. Cujus Cæſar ſolus auctor eſt, id plus meretur laudis, quàm cujus ſolus non eſt auctor. Rerum in bello geſtarum ſolus auctor non eſt; clementiæ verò in Marcellum præſtitæ ſolus; proinde clementia Cæſaris plus meretur laudis, quàm res in bello geſtæ. Hujus ſyllogiſmi aſſumptio tantum in hoc exemplo proponitur; ejúſque prior pars enumeratione cauſarum adjuvantium, poſterior remotione earundem illuſtratur.

Ibidem exemplum cáuſæ inſtrumentalis primo de Nat. deor. Quibus oculis animi intueri potuit veſter Plato fabricam illam tanti operis, quæ conſtrui à Deo atque ædificari nondum facit? Quæ molitio? quæ ferramenta? qui vectes? quæ machinæ? qui miniſtri tanti operis fuerunt? Syllogiſmus ſic ſeſe habet. Qui inſtrumenta non habuit, is mundum non creavit: Deus inſtrumenta non habuit; ergo, &c. Hujus ſyllogiſmi propoſitio falſiſſima deeſt; concluſio præcedit; aſſumptio ſequitur: eaque per inductionem quandam ſpecierum illuſtratur. Utraque autem tum aſſumptio tum concluſio per interrogationem ἐμφατικωτερον negatur.

Joanne Thoma Freigio,
Reciſis digreſſionibus, deſcripta.

PEtrus Ramus natus eſt anno milleſimo quingenteſimo decimo quinto. Ejus avus, ut ipſe in præfatione ſuæ Regiæ Profeſſionis memorat, in Eburonum gente, familia imprimis illuſtri fuit: ſed patria à Carolo, Burgundionum duce, capta & incenſa, in Veromanduorum agrum profugus, ac ſpoliatus, carbonariam facere coactus eſt: hinc Ramo carbonarius pater probri loco objectus: ſed pater Agricola fuit. Puer vix è cunis egreſſus, ut ipſe in Scheckiano epilogo de ſe narrat, duplici peſte laboravit. Juvenis invita modíſque omnibus repugnante fortuna, Lutetiam ad capeſſendas artes ingenuas venit. Erat ſtatura corporis grandi ac generoſa, vultu mitiſſimo, moribus integerrimis, valetudine firma ac robuſta, quam perpetua abſtinentia continentiáque & continuo labore etiam firmiorem reddidit. Lutetiæ Magiſterii titulum ſuſcepturus, problema hoc ſumpſit; quæcunque ab Ariſtotele dicta eſſent, commentitia eſſe. Attoniti novitate atque inſolentia problematis examinatores ac magiſtri, per diem integrum, ſed irrito conatu, Magiſtrandum, ut vocant, oppugnarunt. Ex hoc fortuito ſucceſſu, anſam deinceps ſeriò & liberè in Ariſtotelem animadvertendi & inquirendi arripuit. Logicámque imprimis, utpote inſtrumentum reliquarum artium expolire inſtituit (ut ipſe pluribus perſequitur in epilogo l. 5. Scholarum Dialecticarum) ſed annum agens ætatis primum & vigeſimum hæc moliri incœperat. Septimo pòſt, primam, ut putatur, Dialecticam & Ariſtotelicas Animadverſiones ad Academiam Pariſienſem edidit: ſequente anno Euclidem Latinè, quam & præfatione commendavit. Ex eo tempore multos adverſarios contra ſe irritavit, & præſertim duos homines, quos Talæus in Academia ſua dum contentionem totam enarrat, non nominat tamen. Vix, inquit, Ariſtotelicæ Animadverſiones lectæ erant, cùm P. Ramus repentè ad prætorii tribunalis capitalem contentionem per certos homines falſo Academiæ nomine rapitur, novíque criminis accuſatur, quòd ſcilicet, Ariſtotelem oppugnando, artes enervaret: hac enim oratione Ariſtotelea actio inſtituta eſt. Hinc Ariſtoteleorum clamoribus agitatus, ad ſummum Pariſienſis curiæ concilium traducitur. Id cum ex adverſariorum ſententia non procederet, novis artibus à ſenatu Pariſienſi ad regiam cognitionem res defertur: conſtituuntur judices quinque bini ab utraque parte, quintus à rege nominatur; cauſam de ſingulis animadverſionum capitibus dicere jubetur Ramus: qui tametſi de quinque judicibus tres infenſiſſimos habebat, tamen ut mandato regio obtemperaret, ad diem conſtitutam adfuit; ſcriba unus aderat, qui rationes Rami & judicum ſententias exciperet. Biduo magna contentione de Dialecticæ artis definitione & partitione, quæ in Logici Organi libris nullæ eſſent, concertatum eſt Tres Ariſtotelei judices primo die, contra omnes bene deſcriptæ artis leges, judicarunt ad Dialecticæ artis perfectionem definitione nihil opus eſſe. Qui duo judices à Ramo iecti erant, contrà cenſuerunt. Poſtridie tres judices Ariſtotelei vehementer conturbati, de Partitione aſſentiuntur, cauſámque in aliam diem rejiciunt. Verùm ne non damnaretur Ramus, novum conſilium initur, ut ab initio tota diſputatio retexatur, judicata pridie, pro nihilo habeatur. Ab iſta judicum inconſtantia provocat Ramus; ſed fruſtrà; judicium n. ſine provocatione tribus illis judicibus datur; condemnantur triumvirali illa ſententia non ſolùm Animadverſiones Ariſtotelicæ, ſed Inſtitutiones etiam Dialecticæ: auctori interdicitur, ne in poſterum vel docendo vel ſcribendo, ullam Philoſophiæ partem attingeret: ludi etiam magno apparatu celebrantur, in quibus Ramus & Ramea Dialectica ludibrio habetur. Ab his difficultatibus unus omnium Carolus Lotharingus Ramum liberavit: Henrico enim regi perſuaſerat, Philoſophiam ſemper liberam eſſe oportere. Hinc Ramus priſtinæ docendi ac ſcribendi libertati reſtitutus, per annos quatuor ſumma in pace ſtudiis operam dedit. Anno ætatis trigeſimo primo Orationem de ſtudiis Philoſophiæ & Eloquentiæ conjungendis habuit: cum Talæo fratre (ſic eum perpetuo vocat) profeſſionis partes ita diviſit, ut Talæus matutinis horis philoſophiam, ipſe pomeridianis Eloquentiam doceret: in poetis, oratoribus, philoſophis omníſque generis authoribus explicandis, uſum dialecticæ demonſtravit: id Ramo poſtea crimini datum eſt, quòd in philoſophico ſtudio non Philoſophos, ſed, contra leges Academiæ, pro philoſophis Poetas explicaret: purgat ſe Ramus; petítque ut gymnaſium ſuum Praleum per probos & doctos homines inviſatur. Sed judex quidam, nobilis adoleſcens, datus, diſcipulos Rami indicta cauſa, condemnat; publicis & ſcholis & ſigillis & tabulis prohibet; omnibus denique Academiæ muneribus & præmiis excludit. Ab hac ſententia tam nova diſcipuli Rami ad Julianenſe philoſophorum comitium provocant, & abſolvuntur, modò præceptor eorum jurejurando confirmet, libros, Academiæ legibus definitos, à ſe eſſe prælectos. Confirmat Ramus: paulò tamen pòſt ab eodem judice adoleſcente, non diſcipuli, ut antea, ſed magiſtri eorum oppugnantur: Ramo injungitur, ut in publicis ſcholis diſciplinam ſuam ipſe deteſtaretur & ejuraret. Is ad ſuperiores Academiæ ordines ſecundò provocat: ſed cùm vitandi tumultus cauſa, ſcripto ſe abſens, defenderet, adoleſcens ille judex, etſi duabus appellationibus rejectus, tertiò judicat ac damnat. Quartò provocat Ramus: cùm provocationis diem accuſator antevertiſſet, coactus eſt Ramus ſubito in ſenatum venire: hîc iterum Carolus Lotharingus unico præſidio fuit: accuſationem cujuſdam audiit graviſſimam Ramum Academicum nominantis, qui de humanis diviniſque legibus dubitaret, qui lubricos D. Auguſtini locos ad effrænatam atque impiam libertatem ſuis auditoribus proponeret, & quo facilius incautis animis abuteretur, omnes Logicas diſputationes tolleret. Contra has calumnias facile ſe defendit Ramus. Decretum eſt itaque in ſenatu, uti Ramus diſcipulíque ejus in priſtinum atque integrum ſtatum reſtituerentur. Ipſe anno ætatis trigeſimo ſexto cùm Bleſſiis Carolus Lotharingus ad Henricum regem de diſciplina Ramea retuliſſet, in numerum atque ordinem Regiorum Profeſſorum per literas regias honorificè ad ſe ſcriptas, eſt cooptatus. Gratias itaque & regi Henrico & Carolo Lotharingo publicè egit; ſibique perſuaſit, ſe à rege in præſtantiſſima reip. parte eſſe collocatum; ſibíque adeo dies ac noctes eſſe ſummo ſtudio enitendum, ne tanto muneri ac profeſſioni eloquentiæ ſimul & philoſophiæ deeſſet: unde animos adoleſcentium tanta audiendi & proficiendi cupiditate inflammavit, ut ſchola regia, licet ad audiendum ampliſſima, plerumque tamen auditorum concurſum frequentiámque capere minime potuerit. Adverſariorum petulantiam ſumma conſtantia tulit atque pervicit; ſymbolúmque ejus hoc fuit, Labor omnia vincit. Anno 1552. cum in Cameracenſi ſchola frequentiſſimis auditoribus Dialecticam ſuam auſpicaretur, inter ſtrepitus, clamores, ſibilos nihil commotus, per intervalla clamorum, incredibili conſtantia perexit & peroravit: qua ejus virtute conſternati inimici, in poſterum minus ei moleſtiæ exhibuerunt. In Heidelbergenſi etiam Academia, principis authoritate ad profitendum adductus, conſimiles æmulorum clamores invicto animo pertulit. Adverſus doctos aliquot homines Goveanum, Gallandium, Perionium, Turnebum, Melancthonum, pari ſilentio eſt uſus. Viginti annis abſtemius fuit, donec ſanitatis cauſa medici vino uti ſuaſerunt: vini enim faſtidium ceperat ex quo infans in cellam vinariam clam parentibus irrepens, ſe tam immodicè ingurgitavit, ut mortuo ſimilis humi reperiretur. Pro lectulo ſtramentis ad ſenectutem uſque uſus eſt. Cœlebs tota vita permanſit. Pralei gymnaſii labore (qui ipſi ſine ullo publico ſtipendio erat mandatus) contentus fuit. A diſcipulis ſuis oblata munera, quamvis debita, tamen non accepit. Anno 1556. Ciceronianum edidit de Optima juventutis inſtituendæ ratione. Pronuntiationem Latinæ linguæ in Academia Pariſienſi tunc temporis inquinatiſſimam, corrigendi author cùmprimis fuit, reclamantibus licet Sorboniſtis, pravarum omnium conſuetudinum propugnatoribus tam obſtinatis, ut ſacerdotem quendam novatæ pronuntiationis coram ſenatu Pariſienſi inſimulatum, quaſi ob hæreſin, ut aiebant, Grammaticam, ampliſſimis proventibus eccleſiaſticis privandum contenderent: & lite quidem ſuperiores videbantur diſceſſuri, niſi P. Ramus cæteríque profeſſores regii ad curiam convolantes, judicii tam alieni inſolentiam diſſuaſiſſent. Verùm illius temporis tam craſſa ignorantia fuit, ut libris editis proditum ſit, in ea Academia doctores extitiſſe, qui mordicus defenderent, ego amat tam commodam ſyntaxin eſſe, quàm ego amo; ad eámque pertinaciam comprimendam, authoritate publica opus fuiſſe. In Mathematicis quid effecerit Ramus, Scholæ Mathematicæ aliáque ejus opera teſtantur. Ea meditantem, belli civilis calamitas interpellavit; acceptis igitur à rege literis, ad regiam Fontisbelaquei bibliothecam profectus, Mathematicas prælectiones ab initio plenius & uberius retractavit. Tum id Italiam cogitabat, quo ipſum Bononia honorificè invitarat; vel ſaltem in Germaniam: ſed viis omnibus terror mortis intentatus, rumor etiam Pralei ſui indignis modis direpti ac bibliothecæ ſpoliatæ, ad regiam Vincennarum proprius urbem revocarunt. Sed & alia vis etiam gravius urgebat, ut è Vincennis per invia itinera profugiendum eſſet, & ſubinde variis in locis deliteſcendum: in fuga tamen & latebris otium hoſpitéſque ſui cupidiſſimos reperit; in eóque otio Scholas Phyſicas conſcripſit, vel potius inchoavit. Erumpente rurſus bello civili, in optimatum caſtra profugit: eo tumultu poſt ſex menſes ſedato, reverſus, nihil in bibliotheca præter inania reperit ſcrinia; mathematicas tantùm commentationes Reſnerus (qui Pariſiis permanſit) direptoribus commodùm eripuit. Impendente jam tertium civili bello, impetravit à rege Carolo ad inviſendas exteras Academias annuam dimiſſionem, quaſi legationem liberam. In extremis regni finibus, vix militum quorundam manus, niſi prolato in medium diplomate regio, effugiſſet. Ter dimiſſus, ter repetitus, tandem velocitate ſumma eo pervenit, ubi ſicariis licentia nequaquam pareat. Adventus ejus in Germaniam bonorum ac doctorum omnium ſingulari humanitate & gratulatione exceptus eſt. Argentorati Joannes Sturmius, ejus Academiæ author ſimul & rector, peramanter eum accepit deinde Academia tota adjunctis etiam quibuſdam ad ampliorem gratulationem comitibus & baronibus, liberaliſſimè tractavit: quo die, denique, nobiliſſimæ nuptiæ in eo loco celebrabantur, in prytaneum ſummus urbis Magiſtratus, publicæ gratulationis gratia cum Sturmio eum adduxit. Bernam præteriens, tantùm vidit, nec tamen ſine Conſulis Stegeri honorifica liberalitate, atque Halleri, Aretii, aliorúmq; doctiſſimorum hominum amica gratulatione diſceſſit. Tiguri, Henricus Bullingerus ſimulatque in urbem. ingreſſus eſt Ramus, gratulator primus affuit, coenámque ei apparavit, eruditiſſimis convivarum, Joſia Simleri, Rodolphi Gualteri, Lodovici Lavalteri ſermonibus longè gratiſſimam. Poſtridie cùm ab eodem Bullingero in aulam publicam deduceretur, miratus quid ſibi vellet in eum locum frequentiſſimus civium cujuſque ordinis conventus, quæſivit ex eo, ecquæ illic etiam, ut Argentina, nobiles nuptiæ celebrarentur. Cui Bullingerus, Tibi, inquit, noſtra civitas nuptias iſtas celebrat. Præbuit ei Heidelberga amicum Urſinum, Olevitanum, hoſpitem etiam Immanuelem Tremellium, fautorem denique ipſum Electorem Palatinum, qui diſcedentem Ramum, aurea imagine ſua donavit. Inde Francofurtum pergens, à primariis aliquot civibus honorificè eſt acceptus: deinde Noribergam ad præſtantiſſimos opifices & mechanicos alióſque viros doctos & præſertim Joachimum Camerarium, profectus eſt: hîc juriſconſultorum collegio mandatum à ſenatu eſt, ut P. Ramo convivium publico urbis nomine inſtruerent. Inde Auguſtam perexit ubi urbis conſul primarius eum liberaliſſimè tractavit, adhibitis in convivium eruditis variæ doctrinæ convivis, ſed imprimis Hieronimo Wolfio, & Tichone Bracheo, cum quo poſt prandium in ſuburbanum conſulis deductus, varios ſermones de ſtudiis mathematicis habuit. Rumore tandem reſtitutæ pacis revocatus, Lauſannam contendit: hîc a viris doctis exoratus, Logicam ἀκρόασιν dies aliquot maximo concurſu exhibuit. Geneva cum doctiſſimis hominibus tum de cæteris liberalibus ſtudiis, tum de Logicis collocutio illi aſſidua fuit, maximè cum Franciſco de Cretenſi & Andrea Melvino Scoto. Cum aliis multis eruditiſſimis viris, in Italia Commandino & Papio, pio, in Anglia Dio & Acontio, in Germania Chytreo, aliiſque permultis amicitiam per literas jaxantè coluerat. Nobiles & inclytæ civitates eum magnis & honorificis muneribus, & ſexcentorum coronatorum oblato ſtipendio appetiverunt. Joannes electus rex Pannoni ampliſſimo ſtipendio Alba Julia regendam Academiam illi obtulit. Cracoviam liberaliſſimè, immo in Italiam mille ducatorum ſtipendio Bononiam invitatus, patriam tamen deſerere noluit: itaque Carolus ix. petitum undique calumniis domi, invidorúmque morſibus, non ſolùm præſenti ope ſublevavit, ſed honore auxit & amplificavit, eíque vacationem à laboribus conceſſit. Tandem, anno 1572. in illa Pariſienſi Chriſtianorum ac civium iternecione, indigniſſime periit. Necis cauſam ſunt qui in æmulos ejus conferant: plerique eandem quæ cæteris ea nocte trucidatis fuiſſe exiſtimant. Legatum annuum Mathematico Profeſſori in Pariſienſi Academia luculentum teſtamento reliquit.

Thomæ Junio Præceptori ſuo.

1. Quanquam ſtatueram apud me (Præceptor optime) Epiſtolium quoddam numeris metricis elucubratum ad te dare, non ſatis tamen habuiſſe me exiſtimavi, niſi aliud inſuper ſoluto ſtylo exaraſſem; incredibilis enim illa & ſingularis animi mei gratitudo, quam tua ex debito vendicant in me merita, non conſtricto illo, & certis pedibus ac ſyllabis anguſtato dicendi genere exprimenda fuit, ſed Oratione liberâ, immò potius, ſi fieri poſſet, Aſiaticâ verborum exuberantiâ. Quamvis quidem ſatis exprimere quantum tibi debeam, opus ſit meis viribus longè majus, etiamſi omnes quoſcunque Ariſtoteles, quoſcunque Pariſienſis ille Dialecticus congeſſit argumentorum τόπους exinanirem, etiamſi omnes elocutionis fonticulos exhaurirem. Quereris tu vero (quòd merito potes) literas meas raras admodum & perbreves ad te delatas eſſe; ego vero non tam doleo me adeo jucundo, adeoque expetendo defuiſſe officio, quam gaudeo & pene exulto eum me in amicitia tua tenere locum, qui poſſit crebras à me Epiſtolas efflagitare. Quod autem hoc pluſquam triennio nunquam ad te ſcripſerim, quæſo ut ne in pejus trahas, ſed pro mirifica iſta tua facilitate & candore, in mitiorem partem interpretari digneris. Deum enim teſtor quam te inſtar Patris colam, quam ſingulari etiam obſervantiâ te ſemper proſecutus ſim, quamque veritus chartis meis tibi obſtrepere. Curo nempe cum primis, cum Tabellas meas nihil aliud commendet, ut commendet raritas. Deinde, cum ex vehementiſſimo, quo tui afficior deſiderio, adeſſe te ſemper cogitem, teque tanquam præſentem alloquar & intuear, dolorique meo (quod in amore fere fit) vanâ quâdam præſentiæ tuæ imaginatione adblandiar; vereor profecto, ſimulac literas ad te mittendas meditarer, ne in mentem mihi ſubito veniret, quam longinquo à me diſtes terrarum intervallo; atque ita recrudeſceret dolor abſentiæ tuæ jam prope conſopitus, ſomniúmque dulce diſcuteret. Biblia Hebræa, pergratum ſane munus tuum, jampridem accepi. Hæc ſcripſi Londini inter urbana diverticula, non Libris, ut ſoleo, circumſeptus: Si quid igitur in hac Epiſtola minus arriſerit, tuamque fruſtrabitur expectationem, penſabitur aliâ magis elaboratâ, ubi primum ad Muſarum ſpatia rediero.

2. Accepi literas tuas, & quæ me mirifice oblectavêre, carmina ſane grandia, & Majeſtatem vere Poeticam, Virgilianumque ubique ingenium redolentia. Sciebam equidem quam tibi tuóque genio impoſſibile futurum eſſet, à rebus Poeticis avocare animum, & furores illos coelicus inſtinctos, ſacrúmque & æthereum ignem intimo pectore eluere, cum tua (quod de ſeipſo Claudia-

Neſcio ſane an Henrico Naſſovio plus gratuler de urbe capta, an de tuis Carminibus: nihil enim exiſtimo victoriam hanc peperiſſe Poematio hoc tuo illuſtrius, aut celebrius. Te vero, cum proſperos ſociorum ſucceſſus tam ſonorâ triumphaliſque tubâ canere audiamus, quantum vatem ſperabimus, ſi forte res noſtræ demum feliciores tuas Muſas poſcant Gratulatrices. Vale vir erudite, ſummaſque à me tibi gratias Carminum tuorum nomine haberi ſcias.

3. PRiori illâ Epiſtola meâ non tam reſcripſi tibi, quam reſcribendi vices deprecatus ſum, alteram itaque brevi ſecuturam tacite promiſi, in qua tibi me amiciſſime provocanti latius aliquanto reſponderem; verum ut id non eſſem pollicitus, hanc utcunque ſummo jure deberi tibi fatendum eſt, quandoquidem ſingulas ego literas tuas non niſi meis binis penſari poſſe exiſtimem, aut ſi exactius agatur, ne centenis quidem meis. Negotium illud de quo ſcripſi ſubobſcurius, ecce Tabellis hiſce involutum, in quo ego, cum tua ad me pervenit Epiſtola, diſtrictus temporis anguſtiâ magno tum primum opere deſudabam: quidam enim Ædium noſtrarum Socius, qui Comitiis his Academicis in Diſputatione Philoſophicâ reſponſurus erat, Carmina ſuper quæſtionibus pro more annuo componenda, prætervectus ipſe jamdiu leviculas illiuſmodi nugas, & rebus ſeriis intentior, forte meæ Puerilitati commiſit. Hæc quidem Typis donata ad te miſi, utpote quem nôrim rerum Poeticarum judicem acerrimum, & mearum candidiſſimum. Quod ſi tua mihi viciſſim communicare dignaberis, certè non erit qui magis iis delectetur, erit, fateor, qui rectius pro eorum dignitate judicet. Equidem quoties recolo apud me tua mecum aſſidua pene colloquia (quæ vel ipſis Athenis, ipsâ in Academiâ, quæro, deſideróque) cogito ſtatim nec ſine dolore, quanto fructu me mea fraudârit abſentia, qui nunquam à te diſceſſi ſine manifeſta Literarum acceſſione, & ἐπιδόσει, planè quaſi ad Emporium quoddam Eruditionis profectus. Sane apud nos, quod ſciam, vix unus atque alter eſt, qui non Philologiæ, pariter & Philoſophiæ, prope rudis & profanus, ad Theologiam devolet implumis; eam quoque leviter admodum attingere contentus, quantum forte ſufficiat conciunculæ quoquo modo conglutinandæ, & tanquam tritis aliunde pannis conſuendæ: adeo ut verendum ſit ne ſenſim ingruat in Clerum noſtrum ſacerdotalis illa ſuperioris ſæculi Ignorantia. Atque ego profecto cum nullos fere ſtudiorum conſortes hic reperiam, Londinum rectà reſpicerem, niſi per juſtitium hoc æſtivum in otium alte Literarium recedere cogitarem, & quaſi Clauſtris Muſarum deliteſcere. Quod cum jam tu indies facias, nefas eſſe propemodum exiſtimo diutius in præſentia tibi interſtrepere. Vale.

5. SI mihi Aurum, aut cælata pretioſe vaſa, aut quicquid iſtiuſmodi mirantur Mortales, dono dediſſes, puderet certe non viciſſim, quantum ex meis facultatibus ſuppeteret, te aliquando remuneraſſe. Cum vero tam lepidum nobis, & venuſtum Hendecaſyilabon nudiuſtertius donaveris, quanto charius quidem Auro illud eſt merito, tanto nos reddidiſti magis ſolicitos, quâ re conquiſitâ tam jucundi beneficii gratiam rependeremus; erant quidem ad manum noſtra hoc in genere nonnulla, ſed quæ tuis in certamen muneris æquale nullo modo mittenda cenſerem. 6. JAM iſtuc demum plane video te agere, ut obſtinato ſilentio nos aliquando pervincas; quod ſi ita eſt, euge habe tibi iſtam gloriolam, en ſcribimus priores: quanquam certe ſi unquam hæc res in contentionem veniret, cur neuter alteri οὕτω διὰ χρόνου ſcripſerit, cave putes quin ſim ego multis partibus excuſatior futurus: δῆλον ὅτι ὡς βραδύς καὶ ὀκνηρός τις ὢν φύσει πρὸς τὸ γράφειν, ut probe nôſti, cum tu contra ſive naturâ, ſive conſuetudine, ad hujuſmodi Literarias προσφωνήσεις haud ægre perduci ſoleas. Simul & illud pro me facit, quod tuam ſtudendi rationem ita inſtitutam cognovi, ut crebro interſpires, ad amicos viſas, multâ ſcribas, nonnunquam iter facias; meum ſic eſt ingenium, nulla ut mora, nulla quies, nulla ferme ullius rei cura, aut cogitatio diſtineat, quoad pervadam quo feror, & grandem aliquam ſtudiorum meorum quaſi periodum conficiam. Atque hinc omnino, nec aliunde, ſodes, eſt factum, uti ad officia quidem ultro deferenda ſpiſſius accedam, ad reſpondendum tamen, O noſter Theodote non ſum adeo ceſſator; neque enim commiſi ut tuam Epiſtolam unquam ullam debitâ vice noſtra alia ne clauſerit. 7. QUod cæteri in Literis ſuis plerunque faciunt amici, ut unicam tantum ſalutem dicere ſat habeant, tu illud jam video quid ſit quod toties impertias; ad ea enim quæ tute prius, & alii adhuc ſola afferre poſſunt vota, jam nunc artem inſuper tuam, vimque omnem medicam quaſi cumulum accedere vis me ſcilicet intelligere. Jubes enim ſalvere ſexcenties, quantum volo, quantum poſſum, vel etiam amplius. Næ ipſum te nuper Salutis condum promum eſſe factum oportet, ita totum ſalubritatis penum dilapidas, aut ipſa proculdubio ſanitas jam tua Paraſita eſſe debet, ſic pro Rege te geris atque imperis ut dicto ſit audiens; itaque gratulor tibi, & duplici proinde nomine gratias tibi agam neceſſe eſt, cum amicitiæ tum artis eximiæ. Literas quidem tuas, quoniam ita convenerat, diu expectabam; verum acceptis neque dum ullis, ſi quid mihi credis, non idcirco veterem meam erga te benevolentiam tantillum refrigeſcere ſum paſſus; immo vero quâ tarditatis excuſatione uſus Literarum initio es ipſam illam te allaturum eſſe jam animo præſenſeram, idque recte, noſtræque neceſſitudini convenienter. Non enim in Epiſtolarum ac Salutationum momentis veram verti amicitiam volo, quæ omnia ficta eſſe poſſunt; ſed altis animi radicibus niti utrinque & ſuſtinere ſe; cœptamque ſinceris, & ſanctis rationibus, etiamſi mutua ceſſarent officia, per omnem tamen vitam ſuſpicione & culpa vacare: ad quam fovendam non tam ſcripto ſit opus, quam vivâ invicem virtutum recordatione. Nec continuò, ut tu non ſcripſeris, non erit quo illud ſuppleri officium poſſit, ſcribit vicem tuam apud me tua probitas veraſque literas intimis ſenſibus meis exarat, ſcribit morum ſimplicitas, & recti amor; ſcribit ingenium etiam tuum, haudquaquam quotidianum, & majorem in modum te mihi commendat. Quare noli mihi, arcem illam Medicinæ tyrannicam nactus, terrores iſtos oſtentare, ac ſi ſalutes tuas ſexcentas velles, ſubductâ minutim ratiunculâ, ad unum omnes à me repoſcere, ſi forte ego, quod ne ſiverit unquam Deus, amicitiæ deſertor fierem; atque amove terribile illud ἐπιτείχισμα quod cervicibus noſtris videris impoſuiſſe, ut ſine tua bona venia ne liceat ægrotare. Ego enim ne nimis minitêre, tui ſimiles impoſſibile eſt quin amem, nam de cætero quidem quid de me ſtatuerit Deus neſcio, illud certe; δεινόν μοι ἔρωτα, εἴπερ τῳ ἄλλῳ, τοῦ καλοῦ ἐνέσταξε. Nec tanto Ceres labore, ut in fabulis eſt, Liberam fertur quæſiviſſe filiam, quanto ego hanc τοῦ καλοῦ ἰδέαν, veluti pulcherrimam quandam imaginem, per omnes rerum formas & facies: (πολλαὶ γὰρ μορφαὶ τῶν δαιμονίων) dies noctesque indagare ſoleo, & quaſi certis quibuſdam veſtigiis ducentem ſector. Unde fit, ut qui, ſpretis quæ vulgus pravâ rerum æſtimatione opinatur, id ſentire & loqui & eſſe audet; quod ſumma per omne ævum ſapientia optimum eſſe docuit, illi me protinus, ſicubi reperiam, neceſſitate quadam adjungam. Quod ſi ego ſive naturâ, ſive meo fato ita ſum comparatus, ut nullâ contentione, & laboribus meis ad tale decus & faſtigium laudis ipſe valeam emergere; tamen quo minus qui eam gloriam aſſecuti ſunt, aut eò feliciter aſpirant, illos ſemper colam, & ſuſpiciam, nec Dii puto, nec homines prohibuerint. Cæterum jam curioſitati tuæ vis eſſe ſatisfactum ſcio. Multa ſolicite quæris, etiam quid cogitem. Audi, Theodote, verum in aurem ut ne rubeam, & ſinito paulisper apud te grandia loquar; quid cogitem quæris; ita me bonus Deus, immortalitatem. Quid agam vero? πτεροφυῶ, & volare meditor: ſed tenellis admodum adhuc pennis evehit ſe noſter Pegaſus, humile ſapiamus. Dicam jam nunc ſerio quid cogitem, in hoſpitium Juridicorum aliquod immigrare, ſicubi amœna & umbroſa ambulatio eſt, quod & inter aliquot ſodales, commodior illic habitatio, ſi domi manere, & ὁρμητήριον εὐπρεπέστερον quocunque libitum erit excurrere; ubi nunc ſum, ut noſti, obſcure, & anguſte ſum; de ſtudiis etiam noſtris fies certior. Græcorum res continuatâ lectione deduximus uſquequo illi Græci eſſe ſunt deſiti: Italorum in obſcura re diu verſati ſumus ſub Longobardis, & Francis & Germanis, ad illud tempus quo illis ab Rodolpho Germaniæ Rege conceſſa libertas eſt; exinde quid quæque Civitas ſuo Marte geſſerit, ſeparatim legere præſtabit. Tu vero quid? quouſque rebus domeſticis filiusfamilias immінebis urbanarum ſodalitatum oblitus? quod, niſi bellum hoc novercale, vel Dacico, vel Sarmatico infeſtius ſit, debebis profecto maturare, ut ad nos ſaltem in hyberna concedas. Interim, quod ſine tua moleſtia fiat, Juſtinianum mihi Venetorum Hiſtoricum rogo mittas; ego mea fide aut in adventum tuum probe aſſervatum curabo; aut, ſi mavis, haud ita multo poſt ad te remiſſum. Vale.

Benedicto Bonmatthæo Florentino.

8. QUod novas patriæ linguæ Inſtitutiones adornas (Benedicte Bonmatthæe) jam operi faſtigium impoſiturus, & commune tu quidem cum ſummis quibuſdam ingeniis iter ad laudem ingrederis, & eam ſpem, quod video, eamque de te opinionem apud Cives tuos concitâſti, ut qui ab aliis quæ tradita jam ſunt, iis aut lucem, aut copiam, aut certe limam, atque ordinem tuo marte facile ſis allaturus. Quo nomine profecto populares tuos quam non vulgarem in modum tibi devinxeris, ingrati nempe ſint ipſi, ſi non perſpexerint. Nam qui in civitate mores hominum ſapienter nôrit formare, domique & belli præclaris inſtitutis regere, illum ego præ cæteris omni honore apprime dignum eſſe exiſtimem. Proximum huic tamen, qui loquendi ſcribendique rationem & normam probo gentis ſæculo receptam, præceptis reguliſque ſancire adnititur, & veluti quodam vallo circummunire; quod quidem ne quis tranſire auſit, tantum non Romulea lege ſit cautum. Utriuſque enim horum utilitatem conferre ſi libet juſtum utrique & ſanctum Civium convictum alter ille ſolus efficere poteſt; hic vero ſolus liberalem, & ſplendidum, & luculentum, quod proxime in votis eſt. Ille in hoſtem fines invadentem, ardorem credo excelſum, & intrepida conſilia ſuppeditat; Hic Barbariem animos hominum late incurſantem, fœdam & inteſtinam ingeniorum perduellem, doctâ aurium cenſurâ, Authorumque bonorum expeditâ manu, explodendam ſibi, & debellandam ſuſcipit. Neque enim qui ſermo, puruſne an corruptus, quæve loquendi proprietas quotidiana populo ſit, parvi intereſſe arbitrandum eſt, quæ res Athenis non ſemel ſaluti fuit: immo vero, quod Platonis ſententia eſt, immutato veſtiendi more habituq; graves in Republica motus, mutationeſq; portendi, equidem potius collabente in vitium atq; errorem loquendi uſu, occaſum ejus urbis, remq; humilem & obſcuram ſubſequi crediderim: verba enim partim inſcita & putida, partim mendoſa, & perperam prolata; quid ſi ignavos & oſcitantes, & ad ſervile quidvis jam olim paratos incolarum animos haud levi indicio declarant? Contra, nullum unquam audivimus imperium, nullam civitatem non mediocriter ſaltem floruiſſe, quamdiu Linguæ ſua gratia, ſuuſq; cultus conſtitit. Tu itaque, Benedicte, hanc operam Reipublicæ tuæ navare modo ut pergas, quam pulchram, quamq; ſolidam à civibus tuis neceſſario gratiam initurus ſis, vel hinc liquido ſpecta. Quæ à me eo dicta ſunt, non quod ego te quidquam horum ignorare cenſeam, ſed quod mihi perſuadeam, in hoc te magis multo intentum eſſe, quid tute patriæ tuæ poſſis perſolvere, quam quid illa tibi jure optimo ſit debitura. De exteris jam nunc dicam, quorum demerendi, ſi tibi id cordi eſt, perſane ampla in præſens oblata eſt occaſio; ut enim eſt apud eos ingenio quis forte floridior, aut moribus amœnis & elegantibus, Linguam Hetruſcam in deliciis habet præcipuis, quin & in ſolida etiam parte eruditionis eſſe ſibi ponendam ducit, præſertim ſi Græca aut Latina, vel nullo, vel modico tinctu imbiberit. Ego certe iſtis utriſque Linguis non extremis tantummodo labris madidus; ſed ſiquis alius, quantum per annos licuit, poculis majoribus prolutus, poſſum tamen nonnunquam ad illum Dantem, & Petrarcham alioſque veſtros compluſculos, libenter & cupide commeſſatum ire: nec me tam ipſæ Athenæ Atticæ cum illo ſuo pellucido Iliſſo, nec illa vetus Roma ſuâ Tiberis ripâ retinere valuêrunt; quin ſæpe Arnum veſtrum, & Fæſulanos illos colles inviſere amem. Jam vide, obſecro, numquid ſatis cauſæ fuerit, quæ me vobis ultimum ab Oceano hoſpitem per hoſce aliquot dies dederit, veſtræq; Nationis ita amantem, ut non ullius, opinor, magis. Quo magis merito potes meminiſſe, quid ego tanto opere abs te contendere ſoleam; uti jam inchoatis, majori etiam ex parte abſolutis, velles, quantâ maxima facilitate res ipſa tulerit, in noſtram exterorum gratiam, de recta linguæ pronuntiatione adhuc paululum quiddam adjicere. Cæteris enim ſermonis veſtri conſultis in hanc uſque diem id animi videtur fuiſſe, ſuis tantum ut ſatisfacerent, de nobis nihil ſoliciti. Quanquam ille meo quidem judicio, & famæ ſuæ, & Italici ſermonis gloriæ, haud paulo certius conſuluiſſent, ſi præcepta ita tradidiſſent, ac ſi omnium mortalium referret ejus linguæ ſcientiam appetere: verum per illos non ſtetit quo minus nobis videremini vos Itali, intra Alpium duntaxat pomœria ſapere voluiſſe. Hæc igitur laus prælibata nemini, tota erit tua, tibi intactam & integram hucuſque ſe ſervat; nec illa minus, ſi in tanta Scriptorum turba commonſtare ſeparatim non gravabere, quis poſt illos decantatos Florentinæ linguæ auctores poterit ſecundas haud injuriâ ſibi aſſerere: quis Tragœdia inſignis, quis in Comœdia feſtivus & lepidus; quis ſcriptis Epiſtolis aut Dialogis, argutus aut gravis; quis in Hiſtoria nobilis: ita & ſtudioſo potiorem quemque eligere volenti non erit difficile, & erit, quoties vagari latius libebit, ubi pedem intrepide poſſit figere. Quâ quidem in re, inter Antiquos Ciceronem & Fabium habebis, quos imiteris; veſtrorum autem hominum haud ſcio an ullum. Atque hæc ego tametſi videor mihi abs te (niſi me animus fallit) jam primo impetraſſe, quoties in iſtius rei mentionem incidimus, quæ tua comitas eſt, & benignum ingenium; nolo tamen id tibi fraudi ſit, quo minus exquiſite, ut ita dicam atque elaborate exorandum te mihi eſſe putem. Nam quod tua virtus, tuuſque candor, minimum rebus tuis pretium, minimamque æſtimationem addicit; iis ego, juſtam volo, & exactam, cum rei dignitas, tum adeo mea obſervantia imponat; & certe hoc æquum eſt ubique, quanto quis petenti faciliorem ſe præbet, tanto minus concedentis honori deeſſe oportebit. De cætero, ſi forte cur in hoc argumento, Latinâ potius quam veſtrâ Linguâ utar, miraris; id factum eâ gratiâ eſt ut intelligas quam ego Linguam abs te mihi præceptis exornandam cupio, ejus me plane meam imperitiam, & inopiam Latine confiteri; & hâc ipſâ ratione plus me valiturum apud te ſperavi ſimul & illud, ſi canam; & venerandam è Latio matrem, in filiæ cauſâ ſuæ mecum adjutricem adduxiſſem, credidi fore ejus authoritati, & reverentiæ, auguſtæque per tot ſæcula Majeſtati, nihil ut denegares. Vale.

expeditas modo Typographi manus, & μαιευτικὴν poſcere videbantur; partim tuâ operâ etiamnum editi, paſſim ab eruditis avide accipiuntur; quorum & unius etiam duplici dono abs te auctus dimittor. Tum nec aliter crediderim, quam quæ tu de me verba feceris ad præſtantiſſimum Cardin. Franc. Barberinum, iis factum eſſe, ut cum ille paucis poſt diebus ἀκρόαμα illud Muſicum magnificentiâ vere Romana publice exhiberet, ipſe me tanta in turba quæſitum ad fores expectans, & pene manu prehenſum perſane honorifice intro admiſerit. Quâ ego gratiâ cum illum poſtridie ſalutatum acceſſiſſem, tute idem rurſus is eras, qui & aditum mihi feciſti, & colloquendi copiam; quæ quidem cum tanto viro, quo etiam in ſummo dignitatis faſtigio nihil benignius, nihil humanius, pro loci & temporis ratione largiuſcula profecto potius erat, quam nimis parca. Atque ego (Doctiſſime Holſteni) utrum ipſe ſim ſolus tam te amicum, & hoſpitem expertus, an omnes Anglos, id ſpectans ſcilicet quod triennium Oxoniæ Literis operam dederis, iſtiuſmodi officiis etiam quoſcunque proſequi ſtudium ſit, certe neſcio. Si hoc eſt, pulchre tu quidem Angliæ noſtræ, ex parte etiam tuæ, διδασκάλια perſolvis; privatóque noſtrûm cujuſque nomine, & patriæ publico, parem utrobiq, gratiam promereris. Sin eſt illud, eximium me tibi præ cæteris habitum, dignumque adeo viſum quîcum velis ξενίαν ποιεῖσθαι, & mihi gratulor de tuo judicio, & tuum ſimul candorem præ meo merito pono. Jam illud vero quod mihi negotium dediſſe videbare, de inſpiciendo codice Mediceo, ſedulo ad amicos retuli, qui quidem ejus rei efficiendæ ſpem perexiguam in præſens oſtendunt. In illa Bibliotheca, niſi impetratâ prius venia, nihil poſſe exſcribi, ne ſtylum quidem ſcriptorium admoviſſe tabulis permiſſum; eſſe tamen aiunt Romæ Joannem Baptiſtam Donium, is ad legendas publice Græcas Literas Florentiam vocatus indies expectatur, per eum ut conſequi poſſis quæ velis facile eſſe; quanquam id ſane mihi pergratum accidiſſet, ſi res tam præſertim optanda quæ ſit, meâ potius opellâ ſaltem aliquando plus promoviſſet, cum ſit indignum tam tibi honeſta & præclara ſuſcipienti, non omnes undecunque homines, & rationes, & res favere. De cætero, novo beneficio devinxeris, ſi Eminentiſſimum Cardinalem quantâ poteſt obſervantiâ meo nomine ſalutes, cujus magnæ virtutes, rectique ſtudium, ad provehendas item omnes Artes Liberales egregie comparatum, ſemper mihi ob oculos verſantur; tum illa mitis, &, ut ita dicam, ſummiſſa animi celſitudo, quæ ſola ſe deprimendo attollere didicit; de qua vere dici poteſt, quod de Cerere apud Callimachum eſt, diverſâ tamen ſententiâ, ἴθματα μὲν χέρσω κεφαλὰ δέ οἱ ἅπτετ' ὀλύμπω. Quod cæteris fere Principibus documento eſſe poteſt, triſte illud ſupercilium, & aulici faſtus, quam longe à vera magnanimitate diſcrepantes & alieni ſint. Nec puto fore, dum ille vivit, Eſtenſes, Farnaſios, aut Mediceos, olim doctorum hominum fautores, ut quis amplius deſideret. Vale, Doctiſſime Holſteni, & ſi quis tui, tuorúmque ſtudiorum amantior eſt illi me quoque, ſi id eſſe tanti exiſtimas, ubicunque ſim gentium futurus, velim annumeres.

10. PErlatis inopinatò Literis ad me tuis, mi Carole, quantâ, & quam novâ ſim voluptate perfuſus, quandoquidem non eſt ut pro re ſatis queam dicere, volo ex dolore ſaltem, ſine quo vix ulla magna hominibus delectatio conceſſa eſt, id aliquantum intelligas. Dum enim illa tua prima percurro, in quibus elegantia cum amicitia pulchre ſane contendit, merum illud quidem gaudium eſſe dixerim, præſertim cum uti vincat amicitia, operam te dare videam. Statim vero cum incido in illud quod ſcribis, ternas te jam olim ad me dediſſe, quas ego periiſſe ſcio, tum primum ſincera illa infici, triſtique deſiderio conturbari, coepta eſt lætitia; mox etiam gravius quiddam ſubit, in quo vicem meam dolere perſæpe ſoleo, quos forte viciniæ, aut aliqua nullius uſus neceſſitudo mecum, ſive caſu, ſive lege conglutinavit, illos nullâ re aliâ commendabiles aſſidere quotidie, obtundere, etiam enecare mehercule quoties collibitum erit; quos mores, ingenium, ſtudia, tam belle conciliaverant, illos jam pene omnes, aut morte, aut iniquiſſimâ locorum diſtantiâ invideri mihi, & ita confeſtim è conſpectu plerumque abripi, ut in perpetuâ fere ſolitudine verſari mihi neceſſe ſit.

Te, quod ais, ex quo Florentiâ diſceſſi, meâ de ſalute ſolicitum, ſemperque mei memorem fuiſſe, gratulor mihi ſane, par illud utrique & mutuum accidiſſe, quod ego me ſolum ſenſiſſe meo fortaſſe merito arbitrabar. Gravis admodum, ne te celem, diſceſſus ille & mihi quoque fuit, eoſque meo animo aculeos infixit, qui etiam nunc altius inhærent, quoties mecum cogito tot ſimul ſodales atque amicos tam bonos, tamque commodos unâ in urbe, longinquâ illâ quidem, ſed tamen chariſſimâ, invitum me, & plane divulſum reliquiſſe. Teſtor illum mihi ſemper ſacrum & ſolenne futurum Damonis tumulum; in cujus funere ornando cum luctu & mœrore oppreſſus, ad ea quæ potui ſolatia confugere, & reſpirare pauliſper cupiebam, non aliud mihi quicquam jucundius occurrit, quam veſtrum omnium gratiſſimam mihi memoriam, tuique nominatim in mentem revocaſſe. Id quod ipſe jamdiu legiſſe debes, ſiquidem ad vos carmen illud pervenit, quod ex te nunc primum audio. Mittendum ego ſane ſedulo curaveram, ut eſſet ingenii quantulumcunque, amoris autem adverſum vos mei, vel illis paucis verſiculis, emblematis ad morem incluſis, teſtimonium haudquaquam obſcurum. Exiſtimabam etiam fore hoc modo, ut vel te vel alium ad ſcribendum allicerem; mihi enim ſi prior ſcriberem, neceſſe erat, ut vel ad omnes, vel ſi quem aliis prætuliſſem, verebar ne in cæterorum, qui id reſciſſent, offenſionem incurrerem; cum permultos adhuc ſupereſſe iſtic ſperem, qui hoc à me officium vendicare certe potuerint. Nunc tu omnium primus, & hâc amiciſſimâ Literarum provocatione, & ſcribendi officio ter jam repetito debitas tibi à me jampridem reſpondendi vices reliquorum expoſtulatione liberaſti. Quanquam fateor acceſſiſſe ad illam ſilentii cauſam, turbulentiſſimus iſte, ex quo domum reverſus ſum, Britanniæ noſtræ ſtatus, qui animum meum paulo poſt ab ſtudiis excolendis, ad vitam & fortunas quoquo modo tuendas neceſſario convertit. Ecquem tu inter tot Civium commiſſa prælia, cædes, fugas, bonorum direptiones, receſſum otio Literario tutum dari putes poſſe? Nos tamen etiam inter hæc mala, quoniam de ſtudiis meis certior fieri poſtulas, ſermone patrio haud pauca in lucem dedimus; quæ niſi eſſent Anglice ſcripta, libens ad vos mitterem, quorum judiciis plurimum tribuo. Poematum quidem quæ pars Latina eſt, quoniam expetis, brevi mittam; atque id ſponte jamdudum feciſſem, niſi quod, propter ea quæ in Pontificem Romanum aliquot paginis aſperius dicta ſunt, ſuſpicabar veſtris auribus fore minus grata. Nunc abs te peto, ut quam veniam, non dico Aligerio, & Petrarchæ veſtro eadem in cauſâ, ſed meæ, ut ſcis, olim apud vos loquendi libertati, ſingulari cum humanitate, dare conſueviſtis, eandem impetres (nam de te mihi perſuaſum eſt) ab cæteris amicis, quoties de veſtris ritibus noſtro more loquendum erit. Exequias Ludovici Regis à te deſcriptas libenter lego, in quibus Mercurium tuum, non compitalem illum & mercimoniis addictum, quem te nuper colere jocaris, ſed facundum illum, Muſis acceptum, & Mercurialium virorum præſidem, agnoſco. Reſtat ut de ratione aliqua & modo inter nos conſtet, quo literæ deinceps noſtræ certo itinere utrinque commeare poſſint. Quod non admodum difficile videtur, cum tot noſtri Mercatores negotia apud vos, & multa, & ampla habeant, quorum Tabellarii ſingulis hebdomadis ultro citroque curſitant; quorum & navigia haud multo rarius hinc illinc ſolvunt. Hanc ego curam Jacobo Bibliopolæ, vel ejus hero mihi familiariſſimo, recte, ut ſpero, committam. Tu interim, mi Carole, valebis, & Cultellino, Francino, Freſcobaldo, Malateſtæ, Clementillo minori, & ſi quem alium noſtri amantiorem noviſti; toti denique Gaddianæ Academiæ, ſalutem meo nomine plurimam dices. Interim vale.

11. AD Literas tuas, Nobiliſſime Hermanne, 17 Decemb. ad me datas, antequam reſpondeam; ne me ſilentii tam diutini reum fortaſſis apud te peragas, primum omnium oportet exponam, cur non reſponderem prius. Primum igitur ne neſcias, moram attulit, quæ perpetua jam fere Adverſatrix mihi eſt, adverſa valetudo; deinde valetudinis cauſa, neceſſaria quædam & ſubita in ædes alias migratio, quam eo die forte inceperam, quo tuæ ad me Literæ perferebantur; poſtremo certe pudor, non habuiſſe me quicquam de tuo negotio quod gratum fore tibi judicabam. Nam cum poſtridie in Dominum Froſtium caſu incidiſſem, exque eo diligenter quærerem, ecquod tibi reſponſum etiamnum decerneretur? ( ipſe enim à Concilio valetudinarius ſæpe aberam ) reſpondit, & commotior quidem, nihil dum decerni, ſeque in expedienda re iſta nihil proficere. Satius itaque duxi ad tempus ſilere, quam id quod moleſtum tibi ſciebam fore, extemplo ſcribere, donec, quod ipſe vellem, tuque tantopere expetebas, libentiſſime poſſem ſcribere; quod & hodie, uti ſpero, perfeci: nam cum in Concilio Præſidem de tuo negotio ſemel atque iterum commonefeciſſem, ſtatim ille retulit, adeóque in craſtinum diem de reſponſo quamprimum tibi dando conſtituta deliberatio eſt. Hac de re ſi primus ipſe, quod conabar certiorem te facerem, & tibi jucundiſſimum, & mei in te ſtudii indicium aliquod fore exiſtimabam.

Clariſſimo Viro Leonardo Philaræ Athenienſi, Ducis Parmenſis ad Regem Galliæ Legato.

12. BEnevolentiam erga me tuam, Ornatiſſime Leonarde Philara, nec non etiam præclarum de noſtra pro P. A. defenſione judicium, ex Literis tuis ad Dominum Augerium Virum apud nos, in obeundis ab hac Republica Legationibus, fide eximiâ illuſtrem, partim eâ de re ſcriptis cognovi: miſſam deinde ſalutem cum effigie, atque Elogio tuis ſane virtutibus digniſſimo; Literas denique abs te humaniſſimas per eundem accepi. Atque ego quidem cum nec Germanorum ingenia, ne Cymbrorum quidem, aut Suecorum aſpernari ſoleo, tum certe tuum, qui & Athenis Atticis natus, &, Literarum ſtudiis apud Italos fœliciter peractis magno rerum uſu Honores ampliſſimos es conſecutus, judicium de me non poſſum quin plurimi faciam. Cum enim Alexander ille magnus in terris ultimis bellum gerens, tantos ſe Militiæ labores pertuliſſe teſtatus ſit, τῆς παρ᾽ Ἀθηναίων εὐδοξίας ἕνεκα; quidni ego mihi gratuler, meque ornari quam maxime putem, ejus Viri laudibus, in quo jam unà priſcorum Athenienſium Artes, atque Virtutes illæ celebratiſſimæ, renaſci tam longo intervallo, & refloreſcere videntur. Quâ ex urbe cum tot Viri Diſertiſſimi prodierint, eorum potiſſimùm ſcriptis ab adoleſcentia pervolvendis, didiciſſe me libens fateor quicquid ego in Literis profeci. Quod ſi mihi tanta vis dicendi accepta ab illis & quaſi transfuſa ineſſet, ut exercitus noſtros & claſſes ad liberandam ab Ottomannico tyranno Græciam, Eloquentiæ patriam, excitare poſſem, ad quod facinus egregium noſtras opes pene implorare videris, facerem profecto id quo nihil mihi antiquius aut in votis prius eſſet. Quid enim vel fortiſſimi olim Viri, vel eloquentiſſimi glorioſius aut ſe dignius eſſe duxerunt quam vel ſuadendo vel fortiter faciendo ἐλευθέρους καὶ αὐτονόμους ποιείσθαι τοὺς Ἕλληνας? Verùm & aliud quiddam præterea tentandum eſt, meâ quidem ſententia longe maximum, ut quis antiquam in animis Græcorum virtutem, induſtriam, laborum tolerantiam, antiqua illa ſtudia dicendo, ſuſcitare atque accendere poſſit. Hoc ſi quis effecerit, quod à nemine potius quam abs te, pro tua illa inſigni erga patriam pietate, cum ſumma prudentia, reique militaris peritia, ſummo denique recuperandæ libertatis priſtinæ ſtudio conjunctâ, expectare debemus; neque ipſos ſibi Græcos neque ullam Gentem Græcis defuturam eſſe confido. Vale.

Neque enim poteſt fieri, niſi in virtute ac pietate, rerumque optimarum ſtudiis, progreſſus pluſquam mediocres feciſſes, ut in eos, qui tibi ad ea acquirenda vel minimum adjumentum attulere, tam grato animo eſſes. Quapropter, mi alumne, hoc etiam nomine utor libenter, ſi ſinis; ſic velim exiſtimes, tecum primis à me diligi, nec mihi quicquam optatius fore, quam, ſi tua commoda rationéſque ferrent, quod & tibi etiam in votis eſſe video, ut poſſis prope me alicubi degere, quo frequentior inter nos atque jucundior, & vitæ uſus & ſtudiorum eſſet. ### Henrico Oldenburgo Bremenſium ad Sen. A. Oratori.

14. PRiores Literæ tuæ, Vir Ornatiſſime, tum mihi ſunt datæ, cum Tabellarius veſter diceretur jamjam rediturus: quo factum eſt, ut reſcribendi eo tempore facultas nulla eſſet: id vero quamprimum facere cogitantem inopinatæ quædam occupationes excepêre; quæ niſi accidiſſent, Librum profecto, defenſionis licet titulo munitum, non ita nudum ad te ſene excuſatione miſiſſem; cum ecce tuæ ad me alteræ, in quibus pro muneris tenuitate ſatis ſupérque gratiarum ſunt actæ. Et erat quidem haud ſemel in animo, Latinis tuis noſtra reponere; ut qui ſermonem noſtrum exteris omnibus, quos ego quidem novi, accuratius ac fœlicius addiceris, ne quam occaſionem eundem quoque ſcribendi, quod æque te arbitror accurate poſſe, amitteres. Verum id prout dehinc impetus tulerit, tua perinde optio ſit. De argumento quod ſcribis, plane mecum ſentis, clamorem iſtiuſmodi ad cœlum ſenſus omnes humanos fugere: quo impudentior ſit is, neceſſe eſt, qui audiſſe ſe eum tam audacter affirmaverit. Is autem quis ſit, ſcrupulum injeciſti: atqui dudum, aliquoties hâc de re eſſemus inter nos locuti, tuque recens ex Hollandia huc veniſſes, nulla tibi de Authore dubitatio ſubeſſe videbatur; quin is Morus fuiſſet: eam nimirum iis in locis famam obtinuiſſe, neminem præterea nominari. Si quid igitur hac de re certius nunc demum habes, me rogo certiorem facias. De argumenti tractatione vellem equidem ( quid enim diſſimulem ) abs te non diſſentire; id pene ut audeam quid eſt quod perſuadere facilius poſſit, quam virorum, qualis tu es, cordatorum ſincerum judicium, omniſque expers adulationis laudatio? Ad alia ut me parem, neſcio ſane an nobiliora aut utiliora (quid enim in rebus humanis aſſerendâ libertate nobilius aut utilius eſſe poſſit?) ſiquidem per valetudinem & hanc luminum orbitatem, omni ſenectute graviorem, ſi denique per hujuſmodi Rabularum clamores licuerit, facile induci potero: neque enim iners otium unquam mihi placuit, & hoc cum libertatis adverſariis inopinatum certamen, diverſis longe, & amœnioribus omnino me ſtudiis intentum, ad ſe rapuit invitum; ita tamen ut rei geſtæ quando id neceſſe erat nequaquam pœniteat: nam in vanis operam conſumpſiſſe me, quod innuere videris, longe abeſt, ut putem. Verum de his alias; tu tandem, Vir Doctiſſime, ne te prolixius detineam, vale; meque in tuis numera.

15. CU M ſim à pueritia totius Græci nominis, tuarúmque in primis Athenarum cultor, ſi quis alius, tum una hoc ſemper mihi perſuaſiſſimum habebam, fore ut illa urbs præclaram aliquando redditura vicem eſſet benevolentiæ erga ſe meæ. Neque defuit ſane tuæ Patriæ Nobiliſſimæ antiquus ille genius augurio meo; dedíque te nobis & germanum Atticum & noſtri amantiſſimum:

ſimum: Qui me, ſcriptis duntaxat notum, & locis ipſe disjunctus humaniſſime per Literas compellaveris, & Londinum poſtea inopinatus adveniens, viſenſque non videntem, etiam in ea calamitate, propter quam conſpectior nemini, deſpectior multis fortaſſe ſim, eadem benevolentiâ proſequaris. Cum itaque author mihi ſis, ut viſus recuperandi ſpem omnem ne abjiciam, habere te amicum ac neceſſarium tuum Pariſiis Tevenotum Medicum, in curandis præſertim oculis præſtantiſſimum, quem ſis de meis luminibus conſulturus, ſi modo acceperis à me unde is cauſas morbi & ſymptomata poſſit intelligere; faciam equidem quod hortaris, ne oblatam undecunque divinitus fortaſſis opem repudiare videar. Decennium, opinor, plus minus eſt, ex quo debilitari atque habeſcere viſum ſenſi eodémque tempore lienem, viſceráque omnia gravari, flatibuſque vexari: & mane quidem, ſiquid pro more legere cœpiſſem, oculi ſtatim penitus dolere, lectionemque refugere, poſt mediocrem deinde corporis exercitationem recreari; quam aſpexiſſem lucernam, Iris quædam viſa eſt redimere: haud ita multò poſt ſiniſtrâ in parte oculi ſiniſtri ( is enim oculus aliquot annis prius altera nubilavit ) caligo oborta, quæ ad latus illud ſita erant, omnia eripiebat. Anteriora quoque, ſi dexterum forte oculum clauſiſſem, minora viſa ſunt. Deficiente per hoc fere triennium ſenſim atque paulatim altero quoque lumine, aliquot ante menſibus quam viſus omnis aboleretur, quæ immotus ipſe cernerem, viſa ſunt omnia nunc dextrorſum, nunc ſiniſtrorſum natare; frontem totam atque tempora inveterati quidem vapores videntur inſediſſe; qui ſomnolentâ quadam gravitate oculos, à cibo præſertim uſque ad veſperam, plerunque urgent atque deprimunt; ut mihi haud raro veniat in mentem in Salmydeſſii Vatis Phinei in Argonauticis,

—— κάρος δέ μιν ἀμφεκάλυψεν πορφύρεος· γαῖαν δὲ πέριξ ἐδόκησε φέρεσθαι νειόθεν, ἀβληχρῷ δ' ἐπὶ κώματι κέκλιτ' ἄναυδος.

Sed neque illud omiſerim, dum adhuc viſûs aliquantum ſupererat, ut primum in lecto decubuiſſem, meque in alterutrum latus reclinaſſem, conſueviſſe copioſum lumen clauſis oculis emicare; deinde, imminuto indies viſu colores perinde obſcuriores cum impetu & fragore quodam intimo exilire; nunc autem, quaſi extincto lucido, merus nigror, aut cineraco diſtinctus, & quaſi intextus ſolet ſe affundere: Caligo tamen quæ perpetuo obverſatur, tam noctu, quam interdiu albenti ſemper quam nigricanti proprior videtur; & volvente ſe oculo aliquantillum lucis quaſi per rimulam admittit. Ex quo tametſi Medico tantundem quoque ſpei poſſit elucere, tamen ut in re plane inſanabili, ita in me paro atque compono; illudque ſæpe cogito, cum deſtinati cuique dies tenebrarum, quod monet Sapiens multi ſint, meas adhuc tenebras, ſingulari Numinis benignitate, inter otium & ſtudia, vocéſque amicorum, & ſalutationes, illis lethalibus multo eſſe mitiores. Quod ſi, ut ſcriptum eſt, non ſolo pane vivet homo, ſed omni verbo prodeunte per os Dei, quid eſt, cur quis in hoc itidem non acquieſcat, non ſolis ſe oculis, ſed Dei ductu an providentia ſatis oculatum eſſe. Sane dummodo ipſe mihi proſpicit, ipſe mihi providet, quod facit, meque per omnem vitam quaſi manuducit atque deducit, ne ego meos oculos, quandoquidem ipſi ſic viſum eſt, libens feriari juſſero. Teque, mi Philara, quocunque res ceciderit, non minus forti & confirmato animo, quam ſi Lynceus eſſem, valere jubeo.

Ad Librum quod attinet de divortiis, quem dediſſe te cuidem Hollandice vertendum ſcribis, mallem equidem Latine vertendum dediſſes: Nam vulgus opiniones nondum vulgares, quemadmodum excipere ſoleat, in iis libris expertus jam ſum. Tres enim ea de re tractatus olim ſcripſi: Primum duobus Libris, quibus Doctrina & Diſciplina divortii, is enim libro titulus eſt, diffuſe continetur: Alterum qui Tetrachordon inſcribitur, & in quo quatuor præcipua loca Scripturæ ſupra ea doctrina quæ ſunt, explicantur: Tertium, Colaſterion, in quo cuidam Sciolo reſpondetur. Quem horum Tractatum vertendum dederis, quamve editionem, neſcio; nam eorum primus bis editus eſt, & poſteriori editione multo auctius. 17. Neſcio quo caſu acciderit, ut Literæ tuæ poſt paulo minus tres menſes mihi ſint redditæ, quam abs te datæ: meis profecto expeditiore prorſus ad te commeatu plane eſt opus; quas dum de die in diem ſcribere conſtituebam, occupationibus quibuſdam continuis impeditus, in alterum fere trimeſtre ſpatium procraſtinaſſe me ſentio. Tu vero ex hac mea tarditate reſcribendi velim intelligas, benevolentiæ erga me tuæ non refrixiſſe gratiam, ſed eo altius inſediſſe memoriam, quo ſæpius atque diutius de officio meo viciſſim tibi reddendo indies cogitabam. Habet hoc ſaltem officii tarda ſolutio quo ſe excuſet, dum clarius confitetur deberi, quod tanto poſt tempore, quam quod ſtatim perſolvitur. Illa te imprimis Literarum initio non fefellit de me opinio; non mirari ſi à peregrino homine ſalutor: neque enim rectius de me ſenſeris, quam ſi ſic exiſtimes, neminem me virum bonum in peregrini aut ignoti numero habere. Talem te eſſe facile mihi perſuadetur, cum quòd Patris doctiſſimi atque ſanctiſſimi es filius, tum quod à Viris bonis bonus exiſtimaris, tum deniq; quod odiſti malos. Cum quibus, quandoquidem mihi quoque bellum eſſe contigit, fecit pro humanitate ſua Calandrinus, déque mea ſententia, ut ſignificaret tibi, pergratum mihi fore, ſi contra communem adverſarium tua ſubſidia mecum communicaſſes. Id quod his ipſis Literis perhumaniter feciſti, quarum partem, tacito Authoris nomine, tuo erga me ſtudio confiſus, in defenſionem meam pro teſtimonio inſerere non dubitavi. Quem ego Librum, ut primum in lucem prodierit, ſi quis erit cui recte poſſim committere, mittendum ad te curabo. Tu interim quas ad me Literas deſtinaveris, Turrettino Genevenſi Londini commoranti, cujus illic fratrem nôſti, haud fruſtra, puto, inſcripſeris; per quem ut ad vos hæ noſtræ, ita ad nos veſtræ, commodiſſime pervenerint. QUod in Angliam trajicienti tibi dignus ſum viſus, quem præter cæteros viſendum duceres & ſalutandum, fuit ſane mihi & meritò quidem gratum; quod per Literas tanto etiam intervallo nunc denuo ſalutas, id aliquanto fuit gratius. Poteras enim primò aliorum fortaſſis opinione ductus ad me veniſſe, per Literas nunc redire, niſi proprio judicio vel ſaltem benevolentiâ reductus, vix poteras. Unde eſt ſane, ut poſſe videar jure mihi gratulari: multi enim ſcriptis editis floruere, quorum viva vox & conſuetudo quotidiana nihil fere prætulit non demiſſum atque vulgare: ego ſi id aſſequi poſſum, ut ſi qua commode ſcripſi, iis par animo ac moribus eſſe videar; & pondus ipſe ſcriptis addidero, & laudem viciſſim, quantulacunque ea eſt, eo tamen majorem ab ipſis retulero: cum rectum & laudabile quod eſt, id non magis ab Authoribus præſtantiſſimis accepiſſe, quam ab intimo ſenſu mentis atque animi depromſiſſe purum atque ſincerum videbor. De mea igitur animi tranquillitate in hoc tanto luminis detrimento deque mea in excipiendis exteris hominibus comitate ac ſtudio, perſuaſum tibi eſſe gaudeo. Orbitatem certe luminis quidni leniter feram, quod non tam amiſſum quam revocatum intus atque retractum, ad acuendam potius mentis aciem quam ad hebetandam, ſperem. Quo ſit, ut neque Literis iraſcar, nec earum ſtudio penitus intermittam, etiamſi me tam male multaverint: tam enim moroſus ne ſim, Myſorum Regis Telephi ſaltem exemplum erudiit; qui eo telo, quo vulneratus eſt, ſanari poſtea non recuſavit. Quod ad illum Librum de modo tenendi Parlamenta quem apud te habes, ejus deſignata loca ex Codice Clariſſimi Viri Domini Bradſciavi, nec non ex Codice Cottoniano, vel emendanda, vel dubia ſi erant, confirmanda curavi; ut ex reddita hic tibi tua chartula perſpicies. Quod autem ſcire cupis, num etiam in arce Londinenſi Autographum hujus Libri extet, miſi qui id quæreret ex feciali, cui Actorum cuſtodia mandata eſt, & quo ipſe utor familiariter: reſpondit is, nullum exemplar illius Libri iis in monumentis extare. Tu viciſſim quam mihi operam deſers in re libraria procuranda, pergratum habeo: deſunt mihi ex Byzantinis Hiſtoriis, Theophanis Chronographia Græc. Lat. fol. Conſtant. Manaſſis Breviarium Hiſtoricum, & Codini Excerpta de Antiquit. C. P. Græc. Lat. fol. Anaſtaſii Bibliothecarii Hiſt. & Vitæ Rom. Pontific. fol. quibus Michaelem Glycam, & Joannem Sinnamum, Annæ Commenæ Continuatorem ex eadem Typographia, ſi modo prodierunt, rogo adjicias: quàm queas minimo non addo; cum quòd, id ut te moneam hominem frugaliſſimum, non eſt opus, tum quód pretium eorum Librorum certum eſſe aiunt, & omnibus notum: nummos D. Stuppius numerató ſe tibi curaturum recepit, nec non etiam de Vectura, quæ ſit commodiſſima, proviſurum. Ego vero quæ tu vis, quæque optas, cupio tibi omnia. Vale.

22. TArdius multo accepi Literas tuas quam abs te datæ ſunt, poſt quindecim puto dies quam ſepoſitæ alicubi apud matrem delituiſſent. Ex quibus tandem ſtudium erga me tuum gratique animi ſenſum libentiſſime cognovi: mea certe erga te benevolentia monitáque fidiſſima, neque optimæ matris tuæ de me opinioni atque fiduciæ, neque indoli tuæ unquam defuere. Eſt quidem, ut ſcribis, amoenitatis atque ſalubritatis eo in loco, quo nunc receſſiſti, eſt & Librorum quod Academiæ ſatis eſſe poſſit; ſi ad ingenium incolarum tantum conferret iſta ſoli amoenitas, quantum ad delicias confert, ad felicitatem illius loci nihil deeſſe videretur. Et Bibliotheca etiam illic inſtructiſſima eſt; verum niſi ſtudioſorum mentes Diſciplinis optimis inſtructiores inde reddantur, Apothecam Librorum illam quam Bibliothecam rectius dixeris. Oportere itaque ad hæc omnia diſcendi animum atque induſtriam accedere percommode ſane agnoſcis. 23. VIdeo te, Domine, id quod perpauci ex hodierna juventute faciunt, qui oras exteras perluſtrant, non juvenilium ſtudiorum ſed amplioris undique comparandæ eruditionis cauſâ, veterum exemplo Philoſophorum, recte & ſapienter peregrinari. Quanquam ea quæ ſcribis quoties intueor, ad eruditionem non tam aliunde capiendam, quam aliis impertiendam, ad commutandas potius, quam ad coemendas bonas merces, acceſſiſſe ad exteros videris. Atque utinam mihi tam facile eſſet, iſta tua præclara ſtudia rebus omnibus adjuvare ac promovere, quam eſt jucundum ſane & pergratum tuam egregiam indolem id à me petere. Quod ſcribis tamen ſtatuiſſe te ut ad me ſcriberes, meáque reſponſa peteres ad eas difficultates enucleandas, circa quas à multis ſæculis Hiſtoriarum Scriptores videntur caligaſſe, nihil equidem hujuſmodi neque unquam mihi ſumpſi, neque auſim ſumere. De Salluſtio quod ſcribis, dicam libere, quoniam ita vis plane ut dicam quod ſentio, Salluſtium cuivis Latino Hiſtorico me quidem anteferre; quæ etiam conſtans fere Antiquorum ſententia fuit. Habet ſuas laudes tuus Tacitus; ſed eas meo quidem judicio maximas, quod Salluſtium nervis omnibus ſit imitatus. Cum hæc tecum coram diſſererem, perfeciſſe videor, quantum ex eo quod ſcribis conjicio, ut de illo cordatiſſimo Scriptore ipſe jam idem prope ſentias: adeóque ex me quæris, cum is in exordio Belli Catilinarii perdifficile eſſe dixerit Hiſtoriam ſcribere, propterea quod facta dictis exæquanda ſunt, qua potiſſimum ratione id aſſequi Hiſtoriarum ſcriptorem poſſe exiſtimem. Ego vero ſic exiſtimo; qui geſtas res dignas digne ſcripſerit, eum animo non minus magno rerumque uſu præditum ſcribere oportere, quam is qui eas geſſerit: ut vel maximas pari animo comprehendere atque metiri poſſit, & comprehenſas ſermone puro atque caſto diſtincte gravitérque narrare: nam ut ornate, non admodum laboro; Hiſtoricum enim, non Oratorem requiro. Crebras etiam ſententias, & judicia de rebus geſtis interjecta prolixe nollem, ne, interruptâ rerum ſerie, quod Politici Scriptoris munus eſt Hiſtoricus invadat; qui ſi in conſiliis explicandis, factiſque enarrandis, non ſuum ingenium aut conjecturam, ſed veritatem potiſſimum ſequitur, ſuarum profecto partium ſatagit. Addiderim & illud Salluſtianum, qua in re ipſe Catonem maxime laudavit, poſſe multa paucis abſolvere; id quod ſine acerrimo judicio, atque etiam temperantiâ quâdam neminem poſſe arbitror. Sunt multi in quibus vel ſermonis elegantiam, vel congeſtarum rerum copiam non deſideres, qui brevitatem cum copia conjunxerit, id eſt, qui multa paucis abſolverit, princeps meo judicio Latinorum eſt Salluſtius. Has ego virtutes Hiſtorico ineſſe putem oportere, qui facta dictis exæquaturum ſe ſperet. Verum quid ego tibi iſta? ad quæ tu ipſe, quo es ingenio, per te ſufficis; quíque eam ingreſſus es viam, in qua ſi pergis, neminem te ipſo doctiorem poteris brevi conſulere: & uti pergas, quanquam tibi hortatu non opus eſt cujuſquam, ne omnino tamen nihil pro expectatione tua reſpondiſſe videar, quantum valere me auctoritate apud te ſinis, hortor magnopere atque auctor ſum. Vale, tuáque virtute & ſapientiæ acquirendæ ſtudio macte eſto.

26. Impeditus per hoſce dies occupationibus quibuſdam, Illuſtriſſime Domine, ſerius reſcribo quam volebam. Volebam enim eo citius, quod Literas tuas multâ jam nunc eruditione plenas, non tam præcipendi tibi quicquam (id quod à me honoris credo mei, non uſus tui causâ poſtulas) quam gratulandi duntaxat, reliquiſſe mihi locum videbam. Gratulor autem & mihi imprimis fœlicitatem meam, qui Salluſtii ſententiam ita commode explicaſſe videar, & tibi tam aſſiduam illius auctoris ſapientiſſimi tanto cum fructu lectionem. De quo idem tibi auſim confirmare quod de Cicerone Quintilianus, ſciat ſe haud parum in re Hiſtorica profeciſſe cui placeat Salluſtius. Illud autem Ariſtotelis præceptum ex Rhetoricorum tertio quod explicatum cupis, Sententiis utendum eſt in narratione & in fide, moratum enim eſt; non video quid habeat magnopere explicandum, modo ut narratio & fides, quæ & probatio dici ſolet, ea hic intelligatur, quâ Rhetor, non quâ Hiſtoricus utitur: diverſæ enim ſunt partes Rhetoris & Hiſtorici, ſive narrant, ſive probant; quemadmodum & Artes ipſæ inter ſe diverſæ ſunt. Quid autem conveniat Hiſtorico, ex Auctoribus antiquis Polybio, Halicarneſſæo, Diodoro, Cicerone, Luciano, aliiſque multis, qui ea de re præcepta quædam ſparſim tradidere, rectius didiceris. 28. QUod tardius ad te reſcribo, Vir clariſſime & reverende, non recuſabit, credo noſter Duræus, quo minus tardioris culpam reſcriptionis à me in ipſum transferam. Poſtea enim quam ſchedulæ illius, quam mihi recitatam volebas, de iis quæ Evangelii cauſâ egiſſes atque perpeſſus eſſes copiam mihi fecit non diſtuli parare has ad te literas ut ei darem Tabellario, qui primus diſceſſiſſet, ſollicitus quam in partem ſilentium meum tam diuturnum interpretarere. Maximam interim habeo gratiam Molinæo veſtro Nemauſenſi, qui ſuis de me ſermonibus & amiciſſima prædicatione, tot per ea loca bonorum virorum me in gratiam immiſit. Et ſane quanquam non ſum neſcius, me vel eo quod cum adverſario tanti nominis publice juſſus certamen non detrectaverim, vel propter argumenti celebritatem, vel denique ſcribendi genus longe latéque ſatis innotuiſſe; ſic tamen exiſtimo, me tantundem duntaxat habere famæ, quantum habeo bonæ exiſtimationis apud bonos. Atque in eadem te quoque eſſe ſententia, plane video; qui Veritatis Chriſtianæ ſtudio atque amore accenſus, tot labores pertuleris, tot hoſtes ſuſtinueris; eaque quotidie fortiter facias, quibus tantum abeſt, ut ullam ab improbis famam tibi quæras, ut eorum certiſſima odia & maledicta in te concitare non verearis. O te beatum! quem Deus unum ex tot millibus virorum, alioqui ſapientum atque doctorum, ex ipſis inferorum portis ac faucibus ereptum, ad tam inſignem atque intrepidam Evangelii ſui profeſſionem evocavit. Et habeo nunc quidem cur putem Dei voluntate ſingulari factum, ut ad te citius non reſcriberim: cum enim intelligerem ex Literis tuis, te ab infeſtis undique hoſtibus petitum atque obſeſſum, circumſpicere, & meritò quidem, quo te poſſes in extremo diſcrimine, ſi ita res tuliſſet, recipere, & Angliam tibi in primis placuiſſe, gaudebam equidem non uno nomine, te id conſilii cepiſſe; cum tui potiundi ſpe, tum te de mea patria tam placare ſentire: illud dolebam, non tum vidiſſe me unde tibi hic apud nos præſertim Anglice neſcienti, pro eo ac deceret proſpectum eſſet poſſet. Nunc vero peropportune accidit ut Miniſter quidam Gallicus ætate confectus, ante paucos dies è vita migraverit. In iſta Eccleſia qui plurimum poſſunt, teque illis in locis non ſatis tutò verſari intelligunt ( non hoc incertis rumoribus collectum, ſed ex ipſis auditum refero ) cooptatum te illius Miniſtri in locum ſummopere cupiunt, immo invitant; ſumptuſque itineris ſuppeditandos tibi decreverunt; atque ita tibi de re familiari proviſum iri pollicentur, ut Miniſtrorum apud nos Gallicorum nemini melius; nec tibi quicquam defore, quod ad munus Evangelicum apud ſe libenter obeundum poſſit conducere. Quare advola quamprimum, ſi me audis, Vir Reverende, ad cupidiſſimos tui, meſſem hic meſſurus, etſi commodorum hujus mundi fortaſſe non ita uberem, tamen, quam tui ſimilis potiſſimum exoptant, animarum, ut ſpero, numeroſam: tibique perſuadeas, te viris bonis omnibus expectatiſſimum eſſe venturum; & quanto citius, tanto gratiorem. Quod ſcire cupis, valeo equidem, Deo juvante, ut ſoleo: ab hiſtoria noſtrorum motuum concinnanda, quod hortari videris, longe abſum; ſunt enim ſilentio digniores quam præconio: nec nobis qui motuum hiſtoriam concinnare, ſed qui motus ipſos componere feliciter poſſit, eſt opus: tecum enim vereor ne libertatis ac religionis hoſtibus nunc nuper ſociatis, nimis opportuni inter has noſtras Civiles diſcordias vel potius inſanias, videamur; verum non illi gravius, quam noſmetipſi jamdiu flagitiis noſtris, religioni vulnus intulerint. Sed Deus, uti ſpero, propter ſe Gloriamque ſuam, quæ nunc agitur, conſilia impetuſque hoſtium ex ipſorum ſententia ſuccedere non ſinet, quicquid Reges & Cardinales turbarum meditentur aut ſtruant. Synodo interea Proteſtantium Laodunenſi, propediem, ut ſcribis, convocandæ, precor id, quod nulli adhuc Synodo contigit, fœlicem exitum, non Nazianzenicum; fœlicem autem huic nunc ſatis futurum, ſi nihil aliud decreverit, quam ejiciendum eſſe Morum. Hanc quocunque natam, cum adoleverat ad ætatem nuptiis maturam, poſcit ſibi uxorem Phanes Paſtor; annuente Matre, refragatur illa, negatque ſe ignoti viri & nuſquam viſi, moribuſque inſuper tam longe diverſis, concubitum inituram. Repulſam Phanes ægre ferens, verſo in odium amore, nigellam hanc Telluris filiam per omnes orbis Terrarum tractus ad necem ſequitur indignabundus. Illa vero quem amantem ſprevit, eum hoſtem non minus tremit; propterea ne apud ultimas quidem Nationes, & disjuncta quam maxime loca, immo ne in ipſo ſinu parentis ſatis ſe tutam rata, ad inceſtos Erebi fratris amplexus furtim & clanculum ſe corripit; timore ſimul gravi ſoluta, maritumque nacta proculdubio ſui ſimilem. Hoc itaque tam venuſto conjugum pari Æther & Dies perhibentur editi, ut Author eſt idem, cujus ſupra mentionem fecimus Heſiodus:

> Νυκτὸς δ' ἀῦτ' αἰθήρτε ϗ ἡμέρα ἐξεγένοντο,
> Οὓς τέκεκυσσα μένη Ἐρέβει φιλότητι μιγεῖσα.

At enim vetant humaniores Muſæ, ipſa etiam prohibet Philoſophia Diis proxima, ne minus Poetis Deorum figulis, præſertim Græcanicis, omni ex parte habeamus fidem; nec quiſquam iis hoc probro datum putet, quod in re tanti momenti Authores videantur vix ſatis locupletes. Si quis enim eorum aliquantillum deflexerit à vero, id non tam ingeniis eorum aſſignandum, quibus nihil divinius, quam pravæ & cæcutienti ejus ætatis ignorantiæ, quæ tunc tempeſtatis pervadebat omnia. Abunde ſane laudis hinc ſibi adepti ſunt, affatim gloriæ, quod homines in ſylvis atque montibus diſpalatos belluarum ad inſtar, in unum compulerint locum, & Civitates conſtituerint, quodque omnes Diſciplinas quotquot hodie traduntur, lepidis fabellarum involucris obveſtitas pleni Deo primi docuerint; eritque hoc ſolum iiſdem ad aſſequendam nominis immortalitatem tatem non ignobile ſane ſubſidium, quod Artium ſcientiam feliciter inchoatam poſteris abſolvendam reliquerint.

Noli igitur, quiſquis es, arrogantiæ me temere damnare, quaſi ego jam veterum omnium Poetarum decreta, nullâ nixus authoritate, perfregerim aut immutaverim; neque enim id mihi ſumo, ſed ea tantummodo ad normam rationis revocare conor, exploraturus hoc pacto num rigidæ poſſint veritatis examen pati. Quocirca primò noctem Tellure ortam erudite quidem & eleganter fabulata eſt Antiquitas; quid enim aliud mundo noctem obducit quam denſa & impervia terra, Solis lumini noſtroque Horizonti interpoſita? quòd eam deinde nunc patrimam, fuiſſe negant Mythologi, nunc matrimam, id quoque feſtiviter fictum; inde ſiquidem recte colligitur ſpuriam fuiſſe aut ſubdititiam, aut demum parentes prolem tam famoſam & illiberalem præ pudore non agnoviſſe. At vero cur exiſtimarent Phanetem illum mirificâ ſupramodum humanum facie, noctem Æthiopiſſam & monogrammam etiam in Matrimonium adamaſſe, arduum impenſe negotium videtur è veſtigio divinare, niſi quod fœminarum inſignis admodum id temporis paucitas delectum ſuppeditaret nullum. Atqui preſſe agamus & cominus. Phanetem interpretantur Veteres Solem ſive Diem; quem dum commemorant Noctis conjugium primo petiiſſe, deinde in ultionem ſpreti connubii inſecutum, nihil aliud quam Dierum & Noctium vices oſtendere volunt. Ad hoc autem quid opus erat introduxiſſe Phanetem Noctis nuptias ambientem, cum perpetua illa eorum ſucceſſio & mutuus quaſi impulſus innato & æterno odio melius adſignificetur; quippe conſtat ſudum & tenebras ab ipſo rerum principio acerrimis inter ſe diſſediſſe inimicitiis. Atque ego ſane noctem credo, εὐφρόνης cognomen hinc ſolum accepiſſe, quod Phanetis connubio permiſcere ſe caute recuſarit, nec non cogitate; etenim ſi illum ſemel in ſuos admiſiſſet thalamos, extra dubium radiis ejus & impatibili fulgore abſumpta vel in nihilum interiiſſet, vel penitus conflagraſſet, ſicuti olim invito Jove Amaſio arſiſſe ferunt Semelem. Quapropter huic, non improvida ſalutis ſuæ, Erebum prætulit. Unde ſcitum illud Martialis & perurbanum,

Uxor peſſima, peſſimus Maritus,

Nec tacendum exiſtimo, quam formoſâ & ſe dignâ virum auxerit, prole nimirum Ærumna, Invidiâ, Timore, Dolo, Fraude, Pertinaciâ, Paupertate, Miſeriâ, Fame, Querelâ, Morbo, Senectute, Pallore, Caligine, Somno, Morte, Charonte, qui ultimo natus eſt partu; adeo ut hic apprime quadret quod in Proverbii conſuetudinem venit; κακοῦ κόρακος κακὸν ᾠόν. Cæterum nec deſunt qui etiam Ætherem & Diem itidem Erebo ſuo Noctem peperiſſe tradunt. At enim quotuſquiſque eſt, non impos mentis, qui ſic Philoſophantem non explodat ac rejiciat tanquam Democritica Commenta aut Nutricularum Fabulas proferentem? Ecquam enim veri ſpeciem præ ſe fert, poſſe obſcuram & fuſcam noctem tam venuſtulum, tam amabilem, tam omnibus gratum acceptumque reddere partum? Qui etiam ut primum conceptus eſſet, præmaturo impetu erumpens utro matrem enecâſſet, ipſumque Erebum patrem abegiſſet protinus, vetulumque coegiſſet Charontem, ut ſub imo Styge noctuinos abderet oculos, & ſi qua ſub Inferis latibula ſunt, ut eo ſe remigio & velis reciperet. Nec ſolum apud Orcum non eſt natus dies, ſed ne unquam quidem ibi comparuit; neque poteſt illuc niſi fatorum ingratiis vel per minimam intromitti rimulam; quid! quod etiam diem nocte antiquiorem audeo dicere, eamque mundum recens emerſum è Chao diffuſo lumine colluſtraſſe, priuſquam nox ſuas egiſſet vices; niſi craſſam illam & immundam caliginem noctem vel ipſi Demogorgoni equævam velimus perperam nominare. Ideoque Diem Urani filiam natu maximam arbitror, vel filii potius dixeris, quem ille in ſolatium humanæ gentis & terrorem Infernalium Deorum procreaſſe dicitur; ne ſcilicet, occupante tyrannidem nocte, nulloque inter Terras & Tartara diſcrimine poſito, Manes & Furiæ atque omne illud infame Monſtrorum genus ad terras uſque, deſertâ Barathri ſede, ſe proreperent, miſellique homines denſis obvoluti umbris, & quaquaverſum occluſi, defunctarum animarum pœnas etiam vivi experirentur. Hactenus, Academici, obſcuram noctis propaginem atris & profundiſſimis eruimus tenebris; habebitis ilicet ut ſe dignam præbuerit Natalibus ſuis, ſed ſi prius Diei laudibus impenſam dederim opellam meam, quamvis & illa ſane omnium laudatorum Eloquentiam anteeat. Et certe primo quam omnium animantium ſtirpi grata ſit & deſiderabilis, quid opere eſt vobis exponere; cum vel ipſæ volucres nequeant ſuum celare gaudium, quin egreſſæ nidulis, ubi primum diluculavit, aut in verticibus Arborum concentu ſuaviſſimo deliniant omnia, aut ſurſum librantes ſe, & quam poſſunt prope ſolem volitent, redeunti gratulaturæ luci. At primus omnium adventantem Solem triumphat inſomnis Gallus, & quaſi præco quivis, monere videtur Homines, ut excuſſo ſomno prodeant, atque obviam effundant ſe novam ſalutatum auroram: tripudiant in agris capellæ, totumque genus quadrupedum geſtit & exultat lætitiâ. Quinetiam & mœſta Clyſie totam fere noctem, converſo in Orientem vultu, Phœbum præſtolata ſuum, jam arridet & adblanditur appropinquanti Amatori. Caltha quoque & Roſa, ne nihil addant communi gaudio, aperientes ſinum, Odores ſuos Soli tantum ſervatos profuſè ſpirant, quibus noctem dedignantur impertiri, claudentes ſe folliculis ſuis ſimulatque veſper appetat; cæterique flores inclinata paulum, & rore languidula erigentes capita quaſi præbent ſe Soli, & tacite rogant ut ſuis oſculis abſtergat Lacrymulas, quas ejus abſentiæ dederant. Ipſa quoque Tellus in adventum Solis cultiori ſe induit veſtitu, nubeſque juxta variis Chlamydatæ coloribus, pompâ ſolenni, longoque ordine videntur ancillari ſurgenti Deo. Ad ſummam, nequid deeſſet ad ejus dilatandas laudes, huic Perſæ, huic Libyes, divinos Honores decrevere; Rhodienſes pariter celeberrimum illum ſtupendæ magnitudinis Coloſſum, Charetis Lyndii miro extructum artificio, huic ſacrârunt; huic itidem hodie Occidentalis Indiæ Populi thure cæteroque apparatu ſacrificare accepimus. Vos teſtor, Academici, quam jucundum, quam optatum diuque expectatum vobis illuceſcat mane, utpote quod vos ad manſuetiores Muſas revocet, à quibus inſaturabiles & ſitibundos dimiſerat ingrata nox. Teſtor ultimo Saturnum Cœlo deturbatum in Tartara, quam lubens vellet, ſi modo per Jovem liceret, ab exoſis tenebris ad auras reverti; Quòd demum Lux vel ipſi Plutoni ſuâ caligine longe ſit potior, id quidem in confeſſo eſt, quando cœleſte regnum toties affectavit, unde ſcite & veriſſime Orpheus in hymno ad Auroram, Ἡ χαίρει θνητῶν μερόπων γένος, οὐδέ τις ἐστὶν,

Ὃς φεύγει τὴν σὴν ὄψιν καθυπέρτερον, οὖσαν
Ἡνίκα, τὸ γλυκὺν ὕπνον ἀπὸ βλεφάρων ἀποσείσης.
Πᾶς δὲ βροτὸς γήθει, πᾶν ἑρπετὸν, ἀλλάτε φῦλα
Τετραπόδων, πτηνῶντε, καὶ ἐνναλίων πολυεθνῶν.

Nec mirum utique cum Dies non minus utilitatis adferat quam delectationis, & ſola negotiis obeundis accommodata ſit; quis enim mortalium lata & immenſa maria trajicere ſuſtineret, ſi deſperaret affuturum diem; immo non aliter Oceanum navigarent quam Lethen & Acherontem Manes, horrendis nimirum undiquaque tenebris obſiti. Unuſquiſque etiam in ſuo ſe contineret gurguſtio, haud unquam auſus foras prorepere; adeo ut neceſſe eſſet diſſui ſtatim humanam ſocietatem. Fruſtra Venerem exeuntem è mari inchoaſſet Apelles; fruſtra Zeuxis Helenam pinxiſſet, ſi nox cæca & obnubila res tam viſendas oculis noſtris adimeret; tum quoque fruſtra tellus ſerpentes multiplici & erratico lapſu vites, fruſtra decentiſſimæ proceritatis arbores profunderet, incaſſum denique gemmis & floribus tanquam ſtellulis interpoliret ſe, cœlum exprimere conata; tum demum nobiliſſimus ille videndi ſenſus nullis animalibus uſui foret; ita prorſus, extincto mundi oculo, defloreſcerent omnia & penitus emorerentur; nec ſane huic cladi diu ſupereſſent ipſi homines, qui tenebricoſam incolerent terram, cum nihil ſuppeteret unde victitarent, nihil denique obſtaret, quo minus in antiquum Chaos ruerent omnia. Hiſce quidem poſſit quiſpiam inexhauſto ſtylo plura adjicere; verum non permitteret ipſa verecunda dies ut ſingula perſequatur, & proclivi curſu ad occaſum præcipitans, nullo modo pateretur immodice laudantem. Jam igitur declinat in veſperam dies, & nocti ſtatim cedet, ne adultâ hieme ſolſtitialem contigiſſe diem facete dicatis. Tantum pace veſtra liceat adjungere pauca quæ non poſſum commode præterire. Meritò igitur Poetæ noctem Inferis exurgere ſcriptitarunt; cum impoſſibile plane ſit aliunde tot tantaque mala niſi ex eo loco mortalibus invehi. Obortâ enim nocte ſordeſcunt & obfuſcantur omnia, nec quicquam tunc profecto intereſt inter Helenam & Canidiam, nihil inter pretioſiſſimos & viles Lapillos, niſi quod gemmarum nonnullæ etiam noctis obſcuritatem vincant: Huc accedit, quod amœniſſima quæque loca tunc quidem horrorem incutiant, qui etiam alto & triſti quodam augetur ſilentio; ſiquidem quicquid uſpiam eſt in agris, aut hominum aut ferarum, vel domum, vel ad antra raptim ſe conferunt; ubi ſtratis immerſi ad aſpectus noctis terribiles claudunt oculos. Nullum foris conſpicies præterquam Fures & Laverniones Lucifugos, qui cædem anhelantes & rapinas, inſidiantur bonis Civium, & noctu ſolum vagantur, ne detegantur interdiu; quippe dies nullum non indagare ſolet nefas, haud paſſura lucem ſuam iſtiuſmodi flagitiis inquinari; nullum habebis obvium niſi Lemures & Larvas, & Empuſas quas ſecum nox comites è locis aſportat ſubterraneis, quæque totâ nocte terras in ſua ditione eſſe, ſibique cum hominibus communes vendicant. Ideoque opinor noctem auditum noſtrum reddidiſſe ſolertiorem, ut umbrarum gemitus bubonum & ſtrygum ululatus, ac rugitus Leonum, quos fames evocat; eò citius perſtringerent aures, animoſè; graviori metu percellerent. Hinc liquidò conſtat, quam ſit ille falſus animi qui noctu homines à timore otioſos eſſe, noctemque curas ſopire omnes autumnat; namque hanc vanam eſſe nugatoriam opinionem infœlici nôrunt experientia, quicunque ſceleris cujuſpiam conſcii ſibi fuere; quos tunc Sphinges & Harpyiæ, quos tunc Gorgones & Chimæræ intentatis facibus inſequuntur, nôrunt miſeri, qui cum nullus adſit qui ſubveniat iis & opituletur, nullus qui dulcibus alloquiis dolores leniat; ad bruta ſaxa irritas jaciunt querelas, ſubinde exoptantes oriturum diluculum: Idcirco Ovidius Poetarum elegantiſſimus noctem jure optimo curarum maximam nutricem appellavit. Quod autem eo potiſſimum tempore fracta & defatigata laboribus diurnis corpora recreemus ſomno & refocillemus, id numinis beneficium eſt non noctis munus; ſed eſto, non eſt tanti ſomnus ut ejus ergo noctem in honore habeamus, enimvero cum proficiſcimur dormitum, revera tacite fatemur nos imbelles & miſeros homines, qui minuta hæc corpuſcula ne ad exiguum tempus ſine requie ſuſtentare valeamus. Et certe quid aliud eſt ſomnus quam mortis imago & ſimulachrum? hinc Homero Mors & Somnus Gemelli ſunt uno generati conceptu, uno partu editi. Poſtremò, quod Luna cæteraque Sydera nocti ſuas præferant faces, id quoque Soli debetur; neque enim habent illa quod transfundant lumen niſi quod ab illo accipiant mutuum. Quis igitur, ſi non tenebrio, ſi non effractor, ſi non aleator, ſi non inter Scortorum greges noctem pernoctare perpetem integroſque dies ronchos efflare ſolitus, quis inquam niſi talis tam inhoneſtam, tamque invidioſam cauſam in ſe ſuſceperit defendendam? Atque demiror ego ut aſpicere audeat Solem hunc, & etiam num communi luce impune frui, quam ingratus vituperat, dignus profecto quem adverſis radiorum ictibus veluti Pythonem novum interimat Sol; dignus qui Cimmeriis occluſus tenebris longam & peroſam vitam tranſigat; dignus denique cujus Oratio ſomnum moveat auditoribus, ita ut quicquid dixerit non majorem ſomnio quovis fidem faciat; Quique ipſe etiam ſomnolentus, nutantes atque ſtertentes Auditores annuere ſibi & plaudere peroranti deceptus putet. Sed nigra video Noctis ſupercilia, & ſentio atras inſurgere tenebras; recedendum eſt, ne me nox improviſum opprimat. Vos igitur, Auditores, poſteaquam Nox nihil aliud ſit quam obitus, & quaſi mors Diei, nolite committere ut Mors Vitæ præponatur; ſed cauſam dignemini meam veſtris ornare ſuffragiis, ita ſtudia veſtra fortunent Muſæ; exaudiatque Aurora Muſis amica, exaudiat & Phœbus qui cuncta videt auditque quos habeat in hoc cœtu Laudis ejus Fautores. Dixi.

De Sphærarum Concentu.

SI quis meæ tenuitati locus Academici, poſt tot hodie, tantoſque exauditos Oratores, conabor etiam ego jam pro meo modulo exprimere, quam bene velim ſolenni hujus lucis celebritati, & tanquam procul ſequar hodiernum hunc Eloquentiæ triumphum. Dum itaque trita illa, & pervulgata dicendi argumenta refugio penitus, & reformido, ad novam aliquam materiem ardue tentandam accendit animum, & ſtatim erigit hujus diei cogitatio, horumque ſimul quos digna die loquuturos haud injuriâ ſuſpicabar; quæ duo vel tardo cuivis, & obtuſo cæteroquin ingenio ſtimulos, aut acumen addidiſſe poterant. Hinc idcirco ſubiit pauca ſaltem ſuper illo cœleſti concentu, dilatatâ (quod aiunt) manu, & ubertate Oratoriâ præfari, de quo mox quaſi contracto pugno diſceptandum eſt; habitâ tamen ratione temporis, quod me jam urget & coarctat. Hæc tamen perinde accipiatis velim auditores, quaſi per luſum dicta. Quis enim ſanus exiſtimaverit Pythagoram Deum illum Philoſophorum, cujus ad nomen omnes ejus ſæculi mortales non ſine perſancta veneratione aſſurgebant, quis, inquam, eum exiſtimaverit tam lubrice fundatam opinionem unquam protuliſſe in medium. Sanè ſi quam ille Sphærarum docuit harmoniam, & circumactos ad modulaminis dulcedinem cœlos, per id ſapienter innuere voluit, amiciſſimos orbium complexus, æquabileſque in æternum ad fixam fati legem converſiones: in hoc certe vel Poetas, vel quod idem pene eſt, divina imitatus oracula, à quibus nihil ſacri reconditique myſterii exhibetur in vulgus, niſi aliquo involutum tegumento & veſtitu. Hunc ſecutus eſt ille Naturæ Matris optimus interpres Plato, dum ſingulis Cœli orbibus Sirenas quaſdam inſidere tradidit, quæ mellitiſſimo cantu Deos Homineſque mirabundos capiant. Atque hanc deinque conſpirationem rerum univerſum, & conſenſum amabilem, quem Pythagoras per Harmoniam Poetico ritu ſubinduxit, Homerus etiam per auream illam Jovis catenam de Cœlo ſuſpenſam inſigniter, appoſitéque adumbravit. Hinc autem Ariſtoteles, Pythagora, & Platonis æmulus & perpetuus Calumniator, ex labefactatis tantorum virorum ſententiis viam ſternere ad gloriam, cupiens inauditam hanc Cœlorum ſymphoniam, Sphærarumque modulos affinxit Pythagora. Quod ſi ſic tuliſſet ſive fatum, ſive ſors, ut tua in me Pythagora Pater, tranſvolâſſet anima, haud utique deeſſet qui te facile aſſereret, quantumvis gravi jamdiu laborantem infamiâ. At vero quidni corpora cœleſtia, inter perennes illos circuitus, Muſicos efficiant ſonos? Annon æquum tibi videtur Ariſtoteles? næ ego vix credam intelligentias tuas ſedentarium illum rotandi Cœli laborem potuiſſe tot ſæculis perpeti, niſi ineffabile illud Aſtrorum melos detinuiſſet abituras, & modulationes delinimento ſuaſiſſet moram. Quam ſi tu Cœlo adimas ſane mentes illas pulchellas, & miniſtros Deos plane in Piſtrinum dedis, & ad molas truſatiles damnas. Quinetiam ipſe Atlas ruituro ſtatim Cœlo jampridem ſubduxiſſet humeros, niſi dulcis illa conſentus anhelantem, & tanto ſub onere ſudabundum lætiſſimâ voluptate permulſiſſet. Ad hæc, pertæſus Aſtra Delphinus jamdiu coelo ſua præoptâſſet maria, niſi probe calluiſſet, vocales Cœli Orbes Lyram Arioniam ſuavitate longe ſuperare. Quid! quod credibile eſt ipſam alaudam primâ luce rectâ in nubes evolare, & Luſciniam totam noctis ſolitudinem cantu tranſigere, ut ad Harmonicam cœli rationem, quam attente auſcultant, ſuos corigant modulos. Hinc quoque Muſarum circa Jovis Altaria dies noctéſque ſaltantium ab ultima rerum origine increbuit fabula; hinc Phœbo lyræ peritia ab longinqua vetuſtate attributa eſt. Hinc Harmoniam Jovis, & Electra fuiſſe filiam reverenda credidit Antiquitas, quæ cum Cadmo nuptui data eſſet, totus Cœli chorus concinuiſſe dicitur. Quid ſi nullus unquam in terris audiverit hanc aſtrorum Symphoniam? Ergone omnia ſupra Lunæ Sphæram muta prorſus erunt, torpidoque ſilentio conſopita? Quinimo aures noſtras incuſemus debiles, quæ cantus & tam dulces ſonos excipere aut non poſſunt, aut non dignæ ſunt. Sed nec plane inaudita eſt hæc cœli melodia; quis enim tuas Ariſtoteles in media aeris plaga tripudiantes capras putaverit, niſi quod præcinentes cœlos ob vicinitatem clare cum audiant, non poſſint ſibi temperare quo minus agant choreas. At ſolus inter Mortales concentum hunc audiſſe fertur Pythagoras, niſi & ille bonus quiſpiam genius, & cœli indigena fuerit, qui forte Superum juſſu delapſus eſt ad animos hominum ſacrâ eruditione imbuendos, & ad bonam frugem revocandos: ad minimum certe vir erat, qui omnes virtutum numeros in ſe continebat, quique dignus erat cum Diis ipſis ſui ſimilibus ſermones miſcere, & cœleſtium perfrui conſortio: ideoque nihil miror, ſi Dii ejus amantiſſimi abditiſſimis eum Naturæ ſecretis intereſſe permiſerint. Quod autem nos hanc minime audiamus Harmoniam ſane in cauſa videtur eſſe furacis Promethei audacia, quæ tot mala hominibus invexit, & ſimul hanc fœlicitatem nobis abſtulit quâ nec unquam frui licebit, dum ſceleribus cooperti belluinis cupiditatibus obbruteſcimus; qui enim poſſumus cœleſtis illius ſoni capaces fieri, quorum animæ (quod ait Perſius) in terras curvæ ſunt, & cœleſtium prorſus inanes. At ſi pura, ſi caſta, ſi nivea geſtaremus pectora, ut olim Pythagoras, tum quidem ſuaviſſimâ illâ ſtellarum circumeuntium muſicâ perſonarent aures noſtræ, & opplerentur; atque dein cuncta illico tanquam in aureum illud ſæculum redirent; noſque tum demum miſeriarum immunes, beatum & vel Diis invidendum degeremus otium. Hîc autem me veluti medio in itinere tempus interſecat, idque perſane opportune vereor enim ne incondito miniméque numeroſo ſtylo, huic quam prædico harmoniæ, toto hoc tempore obſtrepuerim; fuerímque ipſe impedimento, quo minus illam audiveritis; Itaque Dixi.

Contra Philoſophiam Scholaſticam.

QUærebam nuper obnixe, Academici, nec in poſtremis hoc mihi curæ erat quo potiſſimum verborum apparatu vos Auditores meos exciperem, cum ſubito mihi in mentem venit id quod Marcus Tullius (à quo, non ſine fauſto omine exorditur Oratio mea) toties commiſit literis, in hoc ſcilicet partes Rhetoris ſitas eſſe, ac poſitas, ut doceat, delectet, & denique permoveat. Proinde iſtuc mihi tantummodo propoſui negotium, ut ab hoc triplici Oratoris munere quam minime diſcedam. At quoniam docere vos conſummatos undique homines non eſt quod ego mihi ſumam, nec quod vos ſuſtineatis, liceat ſaltem (quod proximum eſt) monere aliquid fortaſſe non omnino abs re futurum; delectare interim, quod ſane perquam vereor, ut ſit exilitatis meæ, nec tamen deſiderii ſumma, quam ſi attigero, certe parum erit quin & permoveam. Permovebo autem in præſens abunde, ex animi ſententia, ſi vos Auditores inducere potero, ut immania illa, & prope monſtroſa ſubtilium, quod aiunt, doctorum volumina rariori manu evolvatis, atque verrucoſis Sophiſtarum controverſiis paulo remiſſius indulgeatis. At vero ut palam fiat omnibus, quam ſit æquum atque honeſtum quod ſuadeo, ſtrictim oſtendam, & pro mea ſemihorula hiſce ſtudiis nec oblectari animum, nec erudiri, nec denique commune bonum quicquam promoveri. Ea certe in primis ad vos proferam, Academici, ſi qua fieri poteſt ex mea veſtri ingenii conjectura; quid, quæſo, voluptatis ineſſe poteſt in feſtivis hiſce tetricorum ſenum altercationibus, quæ ſi non in Trophonii antro, certe in Monachorum ſpecubus natæ olent, atque ſapiunt ſcriptorum ſuorum torvam ſeveritatem, & paternas rugas præ ſe ferunt, quæque inter ſuccinctam brevitatem plus nimio prolixæ tædium creant, & faſtidium; ac ſi quando productiones leguntur, cum quidem averſationem pene naturalem, & [illegible] ſatura eſt innati odii pariunt Lectoribus. Sæpius ego, Auditores, cum mihi forte aliquoties imponeretur neceſſitas inveſtigandi paulliſper has argutiolas, poſt [illegible] diutinâ lectione & animi & oculorum aciem, ſæpius [illegible] ad reſpirandum reſtiti, & ſubinde penſum oculis emenſus quæſivi miſerum [illegible]); cum vero plus ſemper viderem ſupereſſe, quàm quod legendo abſolveram, [illegible] inculcatis hiſce ineptiis quoties præoptavi mihi repurgandum Augeæ ſtabulum, fœlicemque prædicavi Herculem, cui facilis Juno hujuſmodi ærumnam nunquam imperaverat exantlandam. Nec materiam hanc enervem, languidam, & humi ſerpentem erigit, aut attollit floridior ſtylus, ſed jejunus & exuccus rei tenuitatem adeo conjunctiſſime comitatur, ut ego utique facile crediderim ſub triſti Saturno ſcriptam fuiſſe, niſi quod innocua tunc temporis ſimplicitas ignoraret prorſus offucias iſtas, & diverticula, quorum hi Libri ſcatent ubique. Mihi credite, Juvenes Ornatiſſimi, dum ego inanes haſce quæſtiunculas nonnunquam invitus percurro, videor mihi per confragoſa teſqua, & ſalebras, perque vaſtas ſolitudines, & præruptas montium anguſtias iter conficere; propterea nec veriſimile eſt venuſtulas, & elegantes Muſas pannoſis hiſce, & ſqualidis præeſſe ſtudiis, aut deliros horum Sectatores in ſuum vendicare patrocinium; immo exiſtimo nullum unquam fuiſſe in in Parnaſſo locum, niſi aliquem forte in imo colle angulum incultum, inamœnum, dumis & ſpinis aſperum, atque horridum, carduis, & denſâ urticâ coopertum, à choro & frequentia Dearum remotiſſimum, qui nec emittat Lauros nec fundat Flores, quò denique Phœbeæ Citharæ nunquam perve-nerit ſonus. Divina certe Poeſis eâ, quâ cœlitus impertita eſt, virtute obrutam terrenâ fæce animam in ſublime exuſcitans, inter cœli templa locat, & quaſi Nectareo halitu afflans, totamque perfundens Ambroſia, cœleſtem quodammodo inſtillat beatitudinem, & quoddam immortale gaudium inſuſurrat. Rhetorica ſic animos capit hominum, adeoque ſuaviter in vincula pellectos poſt ſe trahit, ut nunc ad miſericordiam permovere valeat, nunc in odium rapere, nunc ad virtutem bellicam accendere, nunc ad contemptum mortis evehere. Hiſtoria pul-chre concinnata nunc inquietos animi tumultus ſedat & componit, nunc delibutum gaudio reddit, mox evocat lachrymas, ſed mites eas & pacatas, & quæ mœſtæ neſcio quid voluptatis ſecum afferant. At vero futiles hæ, nec non ſtri-goſæ controverſiæ, verborumque velitationes in commovendis animi affectibus, certe nullum habent imperium; ſtuporem duntaxat & torpedinem accerſunt in-genio; proinde neminem oblectant, niſi qui agreſtis, & hirſuti plane pectoris eſt, quique ex arcano quodam impetu ad lites & diſſidia proclivis, & inſuper impendio loquax à recta & ſana ſapientia abhorret ſemper atque avertitur. Amandetur itaque cum ſuis captiunculis ſane vel in montem Caucaſum, aut ſicubi terrarum cæca dominatur Barbaries, ibiq; ſubtilitatum ſuarum & præſtigiarum ponat of-ficinam, & pro libitu de rebus nihili torqueat & angat ſe, uſque dum nimia ſoli-citudo, veluti Prometheum ille vultur cor exederit, penituſque abſumſerit.

Sed nec minùs infrugifera ſunt, quam injucunda hæc ſtudia, & quæ ad rerum cognitionem nihil prorſus adjutant. Ponamus enim ob oculos omnes illos tur-matim cucullatos vetulos, harum præcipue captionum figulos, quotuſquiſque eſt qui ullo beneficio locupletaverit rem literariam? Citra dubium profecto cultam & nitidam, & manſuetiorem Philoſophiam aſperitate impexâ deformem pene reddidit, & veluti malus genius, humana pectora ſpinis & ſentibus implevit, & perpetuam in Scholas intulit diſcordiam, quæ quidem fœlices diſcentium pro-greſſus mirum in modum remorata eſt. Quid enim? ultrò citróque argutantur verſipelles Philoſophaſtri? hic ſuam undique ſententiam graviter firmat, ille contra magnâ mole labefactare annititur, & quod inexpugnabili argumento munitum exiſtimes, id ſtatim adverſarius haud multo negotio amolitur. Hæret interea Lector, tanquam in bivio, quò divertat, quò inclinet anceps, & incertus con-ſilii, dum tot utrinque confertim vibrantur tela, ut ipſam lucem adimant rebuſque profundam afferant caliginem, adeo ut jam lectori tandem opus ſit, ut diuturnos Cereris imitatus labores, per univerſum terrarum orbem accenſâ face quærat veritatem, & nuſquam inveniat: eouſque demum inſaniæ redactus eſt, ut ſe miſere circuire putet, ubi nihil eſt, quod videat. Ad hæc non rarenter uſu venit, ut, qui harum diſputationum fuligini addicunt ſe totos & devovent, ſi forte aliud quodvis aggrediantur à ſuis deliramentis alienum, mire prodant inſcitiam ſuam, & [illegible] inſcitiam. Noviſſime, ſummus hic tam ſerio nava-tæ operæ fructus erit, ut ſtultus evadas accuratior, & nugarum artifex; atque ti-bi accedat quædam peritior ignorantia, nec mirum; quandoquidem hæc omnia, de quibus adeo afflictim & miſere laboratum eſt, in natura rerum nullibi exiſtunt, ſed leves quædam imagines, & ſimulachra tenuia noſtris obverſantur animis, & rectioris ſapientiæ vacua. Cæterùm ad integritatem vitæ, & mores emendados (quod multo maximum eſt) quam minime conducant hæ nugæ, etiamſi ego taceam, abunde vobis perſpicuum eſt. Atque vel hinc liquido evincitur quod mihi poſtremo dicendum propoſui, ſcilicet [illegible] hanc λογομαχίαν nec in publicum cedere commodum, nec ullo modo Gloriæ vel Honori eſſe, vel Utilitati, quod tamen in ſcientiis omnes antiquiſſimum eſſe ducunt. Siqui-dem his maxime duobus auctam atque exornatam præcipue patriam animadverti; vel præclare dicendo, vel fortiter agendo; atqui litigioſa hæc diſcrepantium opinionum digladiatio, nec ad eloquentiam inſtruere, nec ad prudentiam inſtituere, nec ad fortia facinora incitare poſſe videtur. Abeant igitur cum ſuis formalitatibus argutatores verſuti; quibus poſt obitum hanc par erit irrogari poenam, ut cum Ocno illo apud inferos torqueant funiculos. At quanto ſatius eſſet, Academici, quantóque dignius veſtro nomine nunc deſcriptas chartulâ terras univerſas quaſi oculis perambulare, & calcata vetuſtis Heroibus inſpectare loca, bellis, triumphis, & etiam illuſtrium Poetarum fabulis nobilitatas Regiones percurrere, nunc æſtuantem tranſmittere Adriam, nunc ad Ætnam flammigerantem impune accedere, dein mores hominum ſpeculari, & ordinatas pulchre gentium reſpublicas; hinc omnium animantium naturas perſequi, & explorare, ab his in arcanas Lapidum & Herbarum vires animum demittere. Nec dubitetis, Auditores, etiam in coelos evolare, ibique illa multiformia nubium ſpectra, niviſque coacervatam vim, & unde illæ matutinæ lachrymæ contemplemini, grandineſque exinde loculos introſpicite. & armamenta fulminum perſcrutemini; nec vos clam ſit quid ſibi velit aut Jupiter aut Natura, cum dirus atque ingens Cometa coelo ſæpe minitatur incendium, nec vos vel minutiſſimæ lateant ſtellulæ, quotquot inter polos utroſque ſparſæ ſunt, & diſpalatæ: immo Solem peregrinantem ſequamini comites, & ipſum tempus ad calculos vocate, æternique ejus itineris exigite rationem. Sed nec iiſdem, quibus orbis, limitibus contineri & circumſcribi ſe patiatur veſtra mens, ſed etiam extra mundi pomoeria divagetur; perdiſcatque ultimò (quod adhuc altiſſimum eſt) ſeipſam cognoſcere, ſimulque ſanctas illas mentes, & intelligentias quibuſcum poſt hæc ſempiternum initura eſt ſodalitium. Quid multa nimis? vobis ad hæc omnia Diſciplinæ ſit ille, qui tantopere in deliciis eſt, Ariſtoteles, qui quidem hæc prope cuncta ſcienter & conquiſite ſcripta nobis reliquit addiſcenda. Cujus ego ad nomen jam ſubito permoveri ſentio vos, Academici, atque in hanc ſententiam duci pedetentim, & quaſi eo invitante proclivius ferri. Quod ſi ita ſit, ſane ejus rei laudem, cujuſquemodi eſt, illi debebitis & gratiam: Quod interim ad me attinet, ego certe ſatis habeo, ſi veniam prolixitatis meæ pro veſtra humanitate impetravero. Dixi.

THESIS.

ERror an è Pandoræ pixide, an ex penitiſſimo eruperit Styge, an denique unus ex Terræ filiis in coelites conjuraverit, non eſt hujus loci accuratius diſquirere. Hoc autem vel non ſcrutanti facile inncteſcat, eum ex infimis incrementis, veluti olim Typhon, aut Neptuno genitus Ephialtes in tam portentoſam creviſſe magnitudinem, ut ipſi quidem veritati ab illo metuam. Video enim cum ipsâ Divâ ἀληθεια haud raro æquo Marte pugnantem, video poſt damna factum ditiorem, poſt vulnera vireſcentem, victumque victoribus exultantem. Quod de Antæo Lybico fabulata eſt Antiquitas. Adeo ut hinc ſane non levi de cauſa carmen iſtud Ovidianum poſſit quiſpiam in dubium vocare, an ſcilicet ultima coeleſtum terras reliquerit Aſtræa; vereor etenim ne Pax & Veritas multis poſt eam ſæculis inviſos etiam mortales deſeruerint. Nam certe ſi illa adhuc in terris diverſaretur, quis inducatur ut credat, luſcum & cæcutientem errorem veritatem Solis æmulam poſſe intueri, quin plane vincatur oculorum acies, quin & ipſe rurſus abigatur ad inferos, unde primum emerſus eſt? At vero citra dubium aufugit in coelum, patriam ſuam miſellis hominibus nunquam reditura; & jam totis in Scholis dominatur immundus error, & quaſi rerum potitus eſt, non inſtrenuos utique & non paucos nactus aſſertores. Quarum acceſſione virium, ultra quam ferri poteſt inflatus, quænam eſt ulla Phyſiologiæ particula vel minutula, in quam non impetiverit, quam non profanis violaverit unguibus, quemadmodum Harpias Phinei Regis Arcadum menſas conſpurcaſſe accepimus? unde ſane eò res deducta eſt, ut lautiſſima Philoſophiæ cupedia, ipſis quibus Superi veſcuntur Dapibus non minus opipara, nunc ſuis conviviis nauſeam faciant. Contingit enim ſæpenumero ingentia Philoſophorum volumina evolventi, & diurnis nocturniſque manibus obterenti, ut dimittatur incertior quam fuerit pridem. Quicquid enim affirmat hic, & ſatis valido ſe putat ſtatuminare argumento, refellit alter nullo negotio aut ſaltem refellere videtur, atque ita pene in infinitum ſemper habet hic quod opponat, ſemper ille quod reſpondeat; dum miſer interim Lector hinc atque inde tanquam inter duas belluas diu divulſus ac diſcerptus, tædióque prope enectus, tandem veluti in bivio relinquitur, huc an illuc inclinet plane anceps animi: ab utro autem ſtet veritas, fortaſſe (ne vera diſſimulem) non eſt operæpretium eâ, quâ expedit, induſtriâ explorare: quippe ſæpius de re perquam minimi momenti maxima inter Centurias philoſophantium agitatur controverſia. Cæterùm videor mihi inaudire ſubmuſſitantes quoſdam, quo nunc ſe proripit ille? dum in errorem invehitur, ipſe toto errat Cœlo: equidem agnoſco erratum; neque hoc feciſſem, niſi de veſtro candore magna mihi pollicitus. Jam igitur tandem accingamur ad inſtitutum opus: & his tantis difficultatibus Dea Lua (quod ait Lipſius) me fœliciter expediat. Quæſtio quæ nobis hodie proponitur enucleanda hæc eſt, an interitu cujuſlibet rei detur reſolutio uſque ad materiam primam? Quod aliis verbis ſic proferre ſolent, an ulla accidentia quæ fuere in corrupto maneant etiam in genito? hoc eſt, an intereunte formâ omnia intereant accidentia quæ in compoſito præextiterant? Magna quidem eſt inter multos haudquaquam obſcuri nominis Philoſophos hac de re ſententiarum diſcrepantia; hi dari ejuſmodi reſolutionem contendunt acerrimè, illi neutiquam dare poſſe mordicus defendunt; hos ut ſequar inclinat animus, ab illis ut longe latéque diſſentiam tum ratione adductus, uti opinor, tum etiam tantorum virorum authoritate hoc autem quo pacto probari queat, reliquum eſt ut pauliſper experiamur; idque ſuccincte quoad poterimus, atque primo hunc in modum. Si fiat reſolutio ad Materiam primam ſubinfertur inde eſſentiale iſtud effatum, nempe eam nunquam reperiri nudam, materiæ primæ perperam attribui; occurrent adverſarii, hoc dicitur reſpectu formæ, verum ſic habento Scioli iſti formas ſubſtantiales nullibi gentium reperiri citra formas accidentarias: ſed hoc leve, nec cauſæ admodum jugulum petit; firmiora his adhibenda ſunt. Atque imprimis videamus ecquos habeamus veterum Philoſophorum noſtrarum partium fautores; inquirentibus ecce ultro ſe nobis offert Ariſtoteles, cumq; lectiſſima manu ſuorum interpretum ſe nobis agglomerat; quippe velim intelligatis Auditores, ipſo duce & hortatore Ariſtotele initum hoc prælium, & bonis avibus, uti ſpero auſpicatum. Qui quidem id ipſum quod nos arbitramur, innuere videtur, Metaph. 7. Text. 8. ubi ait quantitatem primò ineſſe materiæ; huic perinde ſententiæ quicunque refragabitur, poſſum illi dicam hæreſeωs ex lege omnium ſapientium audacter ſcribere. Quinimo alibi plane vult quantitatem materiæ primæ proprietatem, quod idem aſſerunt plerique ejus ſectatores; proprium autem à ſuo ſubjecto avellentem quis ferat ipsâ vel edititii judicis ſententiâ: Verum age, comminus agamus, & quod ſuadeat ratio perpendamus. Aſſertio itaque probatur primo hinc, quod materia habet propriam entitatem actualem ex ſuâ propriâ exiſtentiâ, ergo poteſt ſuſtentare quantitatem, eam ſaltem quæ dicitur interminata. Quid? quod nonnulli confidenter affirment formam non niſi mediante quantitate in materiam recipi, Secundo, Si accidens corrumpitur, neceſſe habet ut his tantum modis corrumpatur, vel per introductionem contrarii, vel per deſitionem termini, vel per abſentiam alterius cauſæ conſervantis, vel deniq; ex defectu proprii ſubjecti cui inhæreat priori modo nequit corrumpi quantitas, poſteaquam contrarium non habeat; & quantumvis habeat qualitas hic tamen introduci non eſt ſupponendum: Secundus modus huc non ſpectat, utpote qui ſit relatorum proprius; Nec per abſentiam cauſæ conſervantis, ea enim, quam aſſignant adverſarii, eſt forma; accidentia autem à forma pendere concipiuntur bifariam, vel in genere cauſæ formalis, aut efficientis; prior dependentia non eſt immediata, forma enim ſubſtantialis non informat accidentia, neque intelligi poteſt quod aliud munus exerceat circa ea in hoc genere cauſa, ideoque tantummodo mediata eſt, nimirum in quantum materia dependet à forma, & hæc deinceps à materia; modus dependentiæ poſterior eſt in genere cauſæ efficientis, à forma tamen an accidentia pendeant in hoc genere nécne, in ambiguo res eſt: ſed ut donemus ita eſſe, non ſequitur tamen, depereunte formâ juxta etiam perire accidentia, propterea quod cauſæ illi recedenti, ſuccedit è veſtigio alia ſimilis omnino ſufficiens ad conſervandum eundem numero effectum abſque interruptione: Poſtremo, quod non ex defectu proprii ſubjecti in nihilum recidit quantitas aliáque id genus accidentia, probatur quia ſubjectum quantitatis eſt aut compoſitum, aut forma, aut materia; quod compoſitum non ſit, ex eo liquet, quod accidens quod eſt in compoſito attingit ſimul ſuâ unione & materiam & formam per modum unius, at vero quantitas non poteſt ullo modo attingere animam rationalem, dum hæc ſpiritualis ſit, & effectus formalis quantitatis, hoc eſt extentionis quantitativæ minime capax; porro quod forma non ſit ſubjectum ejus, ex ſupradictis ſatis eſt perſpicuum: reſtat igitur ut materia ſola ſit ſubjectum quantitatis, atque ita præciditur omnis interitus illatio in quantitate. Quod pertinet ad id quod vulgo affertur de cicatrice, argumentum efficaciſſimum eſſe cenſeo; quis enim mihi fidem adeo extorqueat, ut credam eam in cadavere plane diverſam eſſe ab ea quæ fuit nuperrime in vivo, cum nulla ſubſit ratio, nulla neceſſitas corrigendi ſenſus noſtri, qui raro quidem hallucinatur circa proprium objectum; citiuſque ego & facilius audirem de Larvis, deque Empuſis mira commemorantem, quam cerebroſos hoſce Philoſophaſtros de accidentibus ſuis de novo procreatis ſtulte & inſubide obgannientes. Etenim calorem, cæteraſque animalis qualitates intenſibiles & remiſſibiles eaſdem prorſus pernovimus in ipſo mortis articulo, & poſt mortem itidem; quorſum enim deſtruerentur hæ, cum aliæ ſimiles ſint producendæ? huc accedit, quod ſi de novo procrearentur, ad tempus non adeo exiguum durarent, neque etiam repente ad ſummum pervenirent intenſionis gradum, ſed paulatim & quaſi pedetentim. Adde quod vetuſtiſſimum ſit axioma, quantitatem ſequi materiam, & qualitatem formam. Potui quidem, immo ac debui huic rei diutius immorari, ac profecto neſcio an vobis, mihimet certe ipſe maximopere ſum tædio. Supereſt ut jam ad adverſariorum argumenta deſcendamus, quæ faxint Muſæ, ut ego in materiam primam ſi fieri poteſt, vel potius in nihilum redigam. Quod ad primum attinet, Ariſtoteles teſtimonium, quod dixerit in generatione non manere ſubjectum ſenſibile, occurrimus illud intelligi debere de ſubjecto completo & integro (i. e.) de ſubſtantiali compoſito, quod teſtatur Philoponus antiquus & eruditus Scriptor. 2. Quod inquit Ariſt. materia eſt nec quid, nec quantum, nec quale; hoc non dicitur quod nullâ quantitate aut qualitate afficiatur, ſed quia ex ſe, & in entitate ſua nullam aut quantitatem aut qualitatem includat. Tertio, ait Ariſt. deſtructis primis ſubſtantiis deſtrui omnia accidentia, quod ſane futurum non inficiamur ſi ipſi corruptæ ſubinde ſuccederet alia. Poſtremo, Formam inquit recipi in materiam nudam; hoc eſt, nuditate formæ ſubſtantialis. Adhuc incrudeſcit pugna, & nutat victoria, ſic enim inſtaurato prælio incurſant, materia quandoquidem ſit pura petentia, nullam habet eſſe præterquam illud quod emendicatâ formâ, unde non ſatis ex ſe valet ad ſuſtentanda accidentia, niſi prius ad minimum naturâ conjungatur formæ à qua τὸ εἶναι acceptum ferat; huic errori ſic mederi ſolent, materiam primam ſuum habere proprium eſſe, quod licet in genere ſubſtantiæ ſit incompletum, cum accidente tamen ſi conferatur eſſe ſimpliciter haud incommode dici poteſt. Quinetiam objiciunt materiam reſpicere formam ſubſtantialem ut actum primum, at accidentia ut actus ſecundarios. Reſpondeo, materiam reſpicere formam prius ordine intentionis, non generationis aut executionis. Gliſcit jam atque efferveſcit contentio, & tanquam ad internecionem dimicaturi urgent nos acrius hunc ad modum: omnis proprietas manat active ab eſſentia ejus cujus eſt proprietas; quantitas autem hoc nequit, quia hæc dimanatio eſt aliqua efficientia, materia autem ſecundum ſe nullam habet efficientiam, cum ſit mere paſſiva; ergo, &c. Reſpondeo, duobus modis poſſe intelligi naturalem conjunctionem materiæ cum quantitate, ratione ſolum potentiæ paſſivæ intrinſecus naturâ ſuâ poſtulantis talem affectionem; neque enim ulla impellit neceſſitas, ut omnis innata proprietas ſit debita ſubjecto ratione principii activi; namque interdum ſufficit paſſivum, quo modo multi opinantur motum eſſe naturalem cœlo. Secundo poteſt & intelligi per intrinſecam dimanationem activam, cum in ſe habeat veram & actualem eſſentiam. Sed nec adhuc omnis amiſſa ſpes victoriæ; iterum enim facto impetu adoriuntur, inferentes ideo formam mediâ quantitate in materiam recipi, quoniam ineſt materiæ prius: nos è contra aperte reclamamus huic ſequelæ, & nihilominus quo omnia poſſimus ſalva reddere, hac utimur diſtinctione, recipi formam in materiam mediâ quantitate ut diſpoſitione, ſeu conditione neceſſariâ, verum nullo modo tanquam potentiâ proxime receptivâ formæ. Ultimò, ſic arguunt, ſi quantitas inſit materiæ ſoli ſequitur eſſe ingenerabilem & incorruptibilem;

bilem; quod videtur repugnare, quia motus per ſe fit ad quantitatem. At nos utique largimur conſequentiam, quippe revera quantitas eſt incorruptibilis quoad ſuam entitatem, licet quoad varios terminos poſſit incipere & deſinere eſſe per conjunctionem & diviſionem quantitatis, neque enim eſt per ſe motus ad quantitatis productionem, ſed ad accretionem; & nec eo fit quaſi nova quantitas incipiat eſſe in rerum natura, ſed eo quod una quantitas adjungatur alteri, & quæ erat aliena fit propria. Poſſem equidem plura argumenta ultro citroque proferre, quæ tamen tædii levandi gratia prætermitto; hic igitur ſatius erit receptui canere.

Non dantur formæ partiales in animali præter totalem.

Romani rerum olim Domini altiſſimum imperii faſtigium adepti ſunt, quale nec Aſſyria Magnitudo, nec Virtus Macedonica, unquam potuit attingere, quò nec futura Regum Majeſtas efferre ſe olim valebit: ſive ipſe Jupiter annis jam gravior, cœloque contentus ſuo in otium ſe tradere voluerit, commiſſis Populo Romano tanquam Diis terreſtribus rerum humanarum habenis; ſive hoc Saturno Patri in Italiam detruſo ad amiſſi cœli ſolatium conceſſerit, ut Quirites ejus nepotes, quicquid uſpiam eſt, terræ, mariſque potirentur. Utcunq; certe non ultro largitus eſt hoc illis beneficium, ſed per aſſidua bella, perque longos labores ægre dedit, exploraturus opinor, an Romani ſoli digni viderentur, qui ſummi vices Jovis inter mortales gererent; itaque parce duriterque vitam degere coacti ſunt, quippe inchoatas pacis blanditias abrupit ſemper belli clamor, & circumcirca ſtrepitus armorum. Ad hæc, devictis quibuſque urbibus & provinciis præſidia imponere & ſæpius renovare neceſſe habuere, omnemque pene juventutem nunc in longinquam militiam, nunc in colonias mittere. Cæterùm non incruentam ſemper victoriam domum reportârunt, immo ſæpe funeſtis cladibus affecti ſunt. Siquidem Brennus Gallorum Dux vireſcentem modo Romanam gloriam pene delevit; & parum abfuit, quo minus divinitus creditum orbis moderamen abripuerit Romæ Carthago urbs nobiliſſima. Denique Gothi & Vandalici ſub Alarico Rege, Hunnique & Panonii Attyla & Bleda Ducibus totam inundantes Italiam, florentiſſimas imperii opes, ex tot bellorum ſpoliis aggeſtas, miſere, diripuere, Romanos paulo ante Reges hominum turpi fugâ ſtravêre, ipſamque urbem, ipſam inquam Romam, ſolo nominis terrore ceperunt; quo facto nihil dici aut fingi potuit glorioſius, plane quaſi ipſam victoriam aut amore captant, aut vi & armis exterrefactam in ſuas traxiſſent partes. Satis admirati eſtis Auditores, quorſum hæc omnia protulerim, jam accipite. Hæc ego quoties apud me recolo animoque colligo, toties cogito quantis viribus de tuenda veritate certatum ſit, quantis omnium ſtudiis, quantis vigiliis contenditur labantem ubique, & profligatam veritatem ab injuriis hoſtium aſſerere. Nec tamen prohiberi poteſt, quin fœdiſſima colluvies errorum invadat indies omnes diſciplinas, quæ quidem tanta vi aut veneno pollet, ut vel niveæ veritati ſuam imaginem inducere valeat, aut ſydeream veritatis ſpeciem neſcio quo fuco ſibi adſciſcere, quâ, ut videtur, arte & magnis Philoſophis frequenter impoſuit, & honores, venerationemque uni veritati debitam ſibi arrogavit. Quod in hodierna quæſtione videre poteritis, quæ quidem non inſtrenuos nacta eſt pugiles, eoſque clari nominis, ſi relictis hiſce partibus veritatem demereri mallent: Itaque noſtræ nunc erit operæ, ut nudatum, plumiſque emendicatis exutum errorem deformitati nativæ reddamus; quod ut expeditius fiat graviſſimorum veſtigiis Authorum inſiſtendum eſſe mihi exiſtimo, neque enim expectandum eſt, ut ego quicquam de meo adjiciam quod utique tot viros ingenio præſtabiles fugit & præteriit: idcirco quod ſufficit ad rem dilucidandam, expromam brevi, argumentoque uno atque altero tanquam aggere vallabo; tum ſi quid reclamat, atque obſtat noſtræ ſententiæ diluam, ut potero; quæ tamen omnia paucis perſtringam, & quaſi extremis alis radam. Contra unitatem formæ, quam in una eademque materia ſtatuere ſemper emunctiores Philoſophi ſolent, varias opiniones ſubortas eſſe legimus, quidam enim plures in animali formas totales dari pertinaciter contendunt, idque pro ſuo quiſque captu varie defendunt; alii tota-lem unicam, partiales vero multiplices ejuſdem materiæ hoſpitio excipi importunius aſſeverant. Cum illis ad tempus more bellico paciſcemur inducias, dum in hos omnem prælii vim atque impetum transferimus. Ponatur prima in acie Ariſtoteles, qui noſter plane eſt, quique ſub finem primi Libri de Anima, non occulte favet noſtræ Aſſertioni. Huic authoritati aliquot attexere argumenta non eſt longæ diſquiſitionis opus: præbet ſe mihi imprimis Chryſoſtomus Javellus, cujus è ſtercorario, nimirum horridulo & incompto ſtylo, Aurum & Margaritas effodere poſſimus, quæ ſi quis delicatus aſpernetur, in illum ſane aliquatenus belle quadrabit ille Æſopici Galli Apologus. In hunc ferme modum argumen-tatur; Diſtinctio illa & Organizatio partium diſſimilarium præcedere debet in-troductionem animæ, utpote quæ ſit actus corporis non cujuſlibet, ſed Phyſici organici; quapropter immediate ante productionem totalis formæ, neceſſe eſt corrumpi partiales illas niſi corruat penitus receptiſſimum illud Axioma, Gene-ratio unius eſt alterius Corruptio; quarum productionem non ſequitur ſimilium præſentanea productio; id enim fruſtra foret, & ad Naturæ matris ſapientiam parum conveniens. Deinde poſteaquam omnis forma, ſive perfecta ſit, ſive imperfecta, tribuat eſſe ſpecificum, neceſſe eſt, ut quamdiu manet iſta forma, tamdiu res illa maneat eadem non variata ſecundum ſubſtantiam ſuam, proin-déque ſuperveniet forma totalis tanquam accidens, non per generationem ſed per alterationem. Sequitur porro animam totalem ſive diviſibilem, ſive indiviſibilem, non ſufficere ad omnes partes animantis plene perfecteque informandas, quod ut largiamur nulla ſuadet ratio. Sequitur itidem unam formam ſubſtantialem eſſe quaſi diſpoſitionem proximam & permanentem ad aliam, quod veritati abſonum eſt, quandoquidem unaquæque forma conſtituit eſſentiam completam in genere ſubſtantiæ. Poſtremo, ſi in omnibus partibus puta ho-minis plurificientur formæ partiales, ex illis certe conſurget una integra diſtincta ab anima rationali, unde illa erit, aut forma inanimati ſeu corporeitatis, aut miſtionis (quam præter animam in homine dari fuſe ultra quam credibile eſt) vel erit anima ſenſitiva, aut vegetativa, hoc autem affirmantem nullo modò audiat eruditior chorus Philoſophantium; cujus rei ampliori probatione ſuperſedeo, quoniam in confeſſo eſt, nec admodum accedit ad apicem cauſæ. Verum, quod caput eſt controverſiæ, objiciunt adverſarii, partem ab animali amputatam remanere actu poſt ſeparationem, non per formam totius cum ſit extra to-tum, nec per formam recens acquiſitam, cum nullum adſit agens, nulla perceptibilis actio, nulla prævia alteratio; ergo, actu exiſtit per formam propriam quam prius habebat, dum erat una in toto. Atque hoc argumento arietare ſe putant cauſam noſtram & funditus evertere: Cæterum non minus vere quam vulgariter ſolet reſponderi, formam de novo genitam, cum viliſſima ſit utpote cadaveris, & quaſi via ad reſolutionem, certe nec multum temporis, nec diſpo-ſitiones multas, nec ordinatam alterationem efflagitare. Quid ſi etiam cauſa ali-qua univerſalis concurrat cum proviſo temperamento ad inducendam quamcuncunque formam ne materia reperiatur vacua? Quod autem multiplices viſuntur in animali operationes, id non à formis diſtinctis partialibus petendum eſt, ſed ab animæ totalis eminentia, quæ quidem æquipollet formis ſpecie diſtinctis. Cæ-teras quæ occurrunt, leviori momenti objectiones ex compoſito præterire li-bet, neque enim [illegible], [illegible] amoveri, & [illegible] pote-rant, ſi foret [illegible] fuerint in quæſtione. Quæcunque res [illegible] non cedere; ſatis enim ſuperque ſuo Ma-

ORATIO.

Exercitationes nonnunquam Ludicras Philoſophiæ ſtudiis non obeſſe.

CUM ex ea Urbe quæ caput urbium eſt, huc nuper me reciperem, Academici, deliciarum omnium, quibus is locis ſupra modum affluit, uſque ad ſaginam, prope dixerim, ſatur, ſperabam mihi iterum aliquando otium illud Literarium, quo ego vitæ genere etiam cœleſtes animas gaudere opinor; eratq; penitus in animo jam tandem abdere me in Literas, & jucundiſſimæ Philoſophiæ perdius & pernox aſſidere; ita ſemper aſſolet Laboris & Voluptatis viciſſitudo amovere ſatietatis tædium, & efficere, ut intermiſſa repetantur alacrius. Cum his me incalentem ſtudiis repente avocavit, atque abſtraxit pervetuſti moris fere annua celebritas, juſſuſque ego ſum eam operam quam acquirendæ ſapientiæ primò deſtinâram, ad nugas transferre, & novas ineptias excogitandas: quaſi jam nunc non eſſent omnia ſtultorum plena, quaſi egregia illa, & non minus Argo decantata navis ſtultifera feciſſet naufragium, plane denique ac ſi ipſi Democrito materia jam ridendi deeſſet. Verum date quæſo veniam, Auditores; hic enim hodiernus mos, utut ego liberius paulo ſum locutus, ſane quidem non eſt ineptus, ſed impenſe potius laudabilis, quod quidem ego jam mihi propoſui ſtatim luculentius patefacere. Quod ſi Junius Brutus ſecundus ille rei Romanæ conditor, magnus ille ultor regiæ libidinis, animum prope Diis immortalibus parem, & mirificam indolem ſimulatione vecordiæ ſupprimere ſuſtinuit; certe nihil eſt, cur me pudeat aliquantiſper μωροσοφῶς nugari, ejus præſertim juſſu, cujus intereſt, tanquam ædilis hos quaſi ſolennes ludos curare. Tum nec mediocriter me pellexit, & invitavit ad has partes ſubeundas veſtra, vos qui ejuſdem eſtis mecum Collegii, in me nuperrime comperta facilitas; cum enim ante præteritos menſes aliquam multos oratorio apud vos munere perfuncturus eſſem, putaremque lucubrationes meas qualeſcunque etiam ingratas propemodum futuras, & mitiores habituras judices Æacum & Minoëm, quam è vobis fere quemlibet, ſane præter opinionem meam, præter ſpem meam ſi quid erat ſpeculæ, non vulgari ſicuti ego accepi, imo ipſe ſenſi, omnium plauſu exceptæ ſunt, immo eorum, qui in me alias propter ſtudiorum diſſidia eſſent prorſus infenſo & inimico animo: generoſum ſane ſimultatis exercendæ genus, & regio pectore non indignum, ſiquidem cum ipſa amicitia plerumque multa inculpate facta depravare ſoleat, tum profecto acris & infeſta inimicitia errata ſane multa, & haud pauca ſine dubio indiſerte dicta, leniter & clementius quam meum erat meritum interpretari non gravabatur. Jam ſemel unico hoc exemplo vel ipſa demum ira mentis compos fuiſſe videbatur, & hoc facto, furoris infamiam abluiſſe. At vero ſummopere delector, & miris in modum voluptate perfundor, cum videam tanta doctiſſimorum hominum frequentia circumfuſum me, & undique ſtipatum: Et rurſus tamen cum in me deſcendo, & quaſi flexis introrſum oculis tenuitatem meam intueor, quod quidem ſæpius facio, mihimet ſoli conſcius erubeſco & repentina quædam ingruens ægritudo ſubſilientem deprimit & jugulat lætitiam. Sed nolite, Academici, ſic me jacentem & conſternatum, & acie oculorum veſtrorum tanquam de cœlo tactum, nolite quæſo ſic deſerere, erigat me ſemianimum, quod poteſt, & ſuſcitabit veſtri favoris aura, ita fiet, ut, vobis authoribus, quemadmodum grave ſit hoc malum; at remedium mali vobis exhibentibus, eo jucundius & ſalubrius, adeo ut mihi fuerit perquam gratum ſic ſæpius exanimari, modo liceat à vobis recreari me toties & refici. At ô interim ſingularem in vobis vim, atque eximiam virtutem, quæ tanquam haſta illa Achillea, Vulcani munus, vulnerat & medicatur! Cæterum nec miretur quiſpiam, ſi ego tot eruditione inſignes viros, totumque pene Academiæ florem huc confluxiſſe, tanquam inter aſtra poſitus triumphem; vix etenim opinor plures olim Athenas adventâſſe ad audiendum duos Oratores ſummos Demoſthenem & Æſchinem de principatu eloquentiæ certantes, nec eam unquam fœlicitatem contigiſſe peroranti Hortenſio, nec tot tam egregie literatos viros condecorâſſe orantem Ciceronem; adeo ut quamvis ego hoc opus minus fœliciter abſolvero, erit tamen mihi honori non aſpernando in tanto concurſu conventuque præſtantiſſimorum hominum vel verba feciſſe. Atque hercle non poſſum ego nunc, quin mihi blandiuſcule plaudam qui vel Orpheo, vel Amphione multo ſim meo judicio fortunatior: hi enim chordulis ſuavi concentu adſonantibus digitos tantum docte & perite admovebant; eratque in ipſis fidibus, & in apto dextroque manuum motu æqualis utrinque pars dulcedinis: atqui ego ſi quid hodie laudis hinc reportavero, ea ſane & tota erit & vere mea, tantoque nobilior, quanto ingenii opus vincit ac præſtat manuum artificium. Deinde hi ſaxa, & feras, ſylvaſque ad ſe trahebant, & ſi quos homines, rudes illos & agreſtes: at ego doctiſſimas mihi deditas aures, & ab ore meo pendentes video. Noviſſime agreſtes illi, & feræ jam ſatis notam & complures exauditam ſequebantur nervorum harmoniam; vos vero huc rapuit, & jam detinet ſola expectatio. Sed tamen Academici, hîc vos imprimis commonefactos volo, me non hæc glorioſius crepuiſſe; utinam enim mihi vel in præſentia concederetur melleum illud, ſeu verius Nectareum Eloquentiæ flumen quicquid unquam Attica vel Romana ingenia imbuebat olim, & quaſi cœlitus irrorabat, utinam mihi liceret omnem penitus Suadæ medullam exugere, & ipſius etiam Mercurii ſcrinia ſuffurari, omneſque elegantiarum loculos funditus exinanire, quo poſſim aliquid tanta expectatione, tam præclaro cœtu, tam denique terſis & delicatis auribus dignum adferre. Ecce, Auditores, quo me raptat & impellit vehementiſſimus ardor & prolubium placendi vobis, quippe de improviſo me provectum ſentio in ambitionem quandam, ſed eam ſane piam, & honeſtum, ſi hoc fieri poteſt, Sacrilegium. Et certè exiſtimo haudquaquam mihi opus eſſe Muſarum auxilium implorare & expoſcere, iis enim me circumſeptum puto, qui Muſas omnes ſpirant & Gratias, totumque reor Helicona, & quæcunque ſunt alia Muſarum delubra ad hunc diem celebrandum omnes ſuos effudiſſe alumnos; adeo ut credibile ſit jam nunc propter eorum abſentiam lugere & defloreſcere Parnaſſi Lauros; unde profecto fruſtra erit Muſas, & Charites, & Libentias uſquam terrarum quæritare, quam in hoc loco; quod ſi ita ſit, neceſſe eſt protinns ipſam Barbariem, Errorem, Ignorantiam, & omne illud Muſis inviſum genus quam celerrimè aufugere ad aſpectum veſtrum, & ſub diverſo longe cœlo abſcondere ſeſe; atque deinde quidem quid obſtat, quo minus quicquid eſt barbaræ, incultæ & obſoletæ locutionis abigatur extemplò ab Oratione mea, atque ego afflatu veſtro, & arcano inſtinctu diſertus & politus ſubito evadam. Utcunque tamen vos, Auditores, obteſtor, ne quem veſtrûm pœniteat meis pauliſper vacâſſe nugis; ipſi enim Dii omnes, cœleſtis politiæ curâ ad tempus depoſitâ, depugnantium homunculorum ſpectaculo ſæpius interfuiſſe perhibentur; aliquoties etiam humiles non dedignati caſus, & paupere hoſpitio excepti, fabas & olera narrantur eſitâſſe. Obſecro itidem ego vos, atque oro, Auditores optimi, ut hoc meum quale quale conviviolum ad ſubtile veſtrum & ſagax palatum faciat. Verum etiamſi ego permultos noverim Sciolos quibus uſitatiſſimum eſt, ſi quid ignorârunt, id ſuperbe & inſcite apud alios contemnere, tanquam indignum cui operam impendant ſuam; quemadmodum hic Dialecticam inſulſe vellicat, quam nunquam aſſequi potuit; ille Philoſophiam nihili facit, quia ſcilicet formoſſima Dearum Natura nunquam illum tali dignata eſt honore, ut ſe nudam illi præbuerit intuendam: Ego tamen Feſtivitates & Sales, in quibus quoque perexiguam agnoſco facultatem meam, non gravabor, ut potero, laudare; ſi prius hoc unum addidero, quod ſane arduum videtur, & minime proclive, me jocos hodie ſeriò laudaturum. Atque id non immeritò quidem, quid enim eſt quod citius conciliet, diutiuſque retineat amicitias, quam amœnum & feſtivum ingenium? & profecto cui deſunt ſales, & lepores, & politulæ facetiæ, haud temere invenietis cui ſit gratus & acceptus. Nobis autem, Academici, ſi quotidiani moris eſſet indormire & quaſi immori Philoſophiæ, & inter dumos & ſpinas Logicæ conſeneſcere citra ullam enim relaxationem, & nunquam conceſſo reſpirandi loco, quid, quæſo, aliud eſſet philoſophari, quam in Trophonii antro vaticinari, & Catonis plus nimio rigidi Sectam ſectari; immo dicerent vel ipſi ruſticani, ſinapi nos victitare. Adde quod, quemadmodum qui luctæ & campeſtri ludo aſſueſcunt ſe, multo cæteris valentiores redduntur, & ad omne opus paratiores; ita pariter uſuvenit, ut per hanc ingenii palæſtram corroboretur nervus animi, & quaſi melior ſanguis & ſuccus comparetur, utque ipſa indoles limatior fiat acutiorque, & ad omnia ſequax & verſatilis. Quod ſi quis urbanus & lepidus haberi nolit, ne ſis hoc illi ſtomacho ſi paganus & ſubruſticus appelletur; & probe novimus illiberale quoddam genus hominum, qui cum ipſi prorſus inſulſi ſint & infeſtivi, ſuam tacite ſecum æſtimantes vilitatem & inſcitiam, quicquid forte urbanius dictitatum audiunt, id ſtatim in ſe dici putant; digni ſane quibus id vere eveniat, quod injuriâ ſuſpicantur, ut ſcilicet omnium dicteriis everberantur, pene uſquedum ſuſpendium cogitent. Sed non valent iſtæ hominum quiſquiliæ urbanitatis elegantulæ licentiam inhibere. Vultis itaque me Auditores, rationis fundamento fidem exemplorum ſuperſtruere? ea utique mihi abunde ſuppetunt, primus omnium occurrit Homerus ille oriens, & Lucifer cultioris literaturæ, cum quo omnis eruditio tanquam Gemella nata eſt; ille enim interdum à Deorum conſiliis & rebus in Cœlo geſtis divinum revocans animum, & ad facetias divertens, murium & ranarum pugnam lepidiſſime deſcripſit. Quinetiam Socrates, teſte Pythio, ſapientiſſimus ille mortalium, jurgioſam uxoris moroſitatem ſæpenumero quam urbane perſtrinxiſſe fertur. Omnia deinde veterum Philoſophorum diverbia ſale ſparſa, & lepore venuſto paſſim legimus referta; & certe hoc unum erat quod antiquos omnes Comœdiarum & Epigrammatum Scriptores, & Græcanicos & Latinos, æternitate nominis donavit. Quinimo accepimus, Ciceronis jocos & facetias tres Libros à Tyrone conſcriptos impleviſſe. Et cuique jam in manibus eſt ingenioſiſſimum illud Moriæ encomium non infimi Scriptoris opus, multæque aliæ clariſſimorum hujus memoriæ Oratorum de rebus ridiculis extant haud infacetæ proluſiones. Vultis ſummos Imperatores, & Reges, & fortes viros? Accipite Periclem, Epaminondam, Ageſilaum, & Philippum Macedonem, quos (ut Gelliano more loquar) feſtivitatum & ſalſè dictorum ſcatuiſſe memorant Hiſtorici: Ad hos Caium Lælium, Pub. Cor. Scipionem, Cneium Pompeium, C. Julium & Octavium Cæſares, quos in hoc genere omnibus præſtitiſſe coætaneis author eſt M. Tullius. Vultis adhuc majora nomina? ipſum etiam Jovem reliquoſque Cœlites inter epulas & pocula jucunditati ſe dantes inducunt Poetæ ſagaciſſimi veritatis adumbratores. Veſtrâ demum, Academici, utar tutelâ & patrocinio, quod mihi erit omnium adinſtar; quippe quam non diſpliceant vobis ſales & joculi; indicat ſatis tantus hodie veſtrûm factus concurſus, & hoc ſane unumquodque caput mihi annuere videtur; nec mirum eſt mehercle feſtam hanc & mundulam urbanitatem omnes probos, ſimulque claros viros ſic oblectare, cum & ipſa inter ſplendidos virtutum Ariſtotelicarum ordines ſublimis ſedeat, & velut in Panthæo quodam Diva cum Divis Sororibus colluceat. Sed forte non deſunt quidam Barbati Magiſtri tetrici oppido & difficiles, qui ſe magnos Catones, nedum Catunculos putantes, vultu ad ſeveritatem Stoicam compoſito, obſtipo nutantes capite anxie querantur omnia nunc dierum commiſceri, & in deterius perverti & loco Priorum Ariſtotelis ab initiatis recens baccalaureis exponendorum, ſcommata & inanes nugas inverecunde & intempeſtive jactari; hodiernum quoque exercitium à majoribus noſtris ſine dubio recte & fideliter inſtitutum ob inſignem aliquem, ſive in Rhetorica, ſive in Philoſophia fructum inde percipiendum, nunc nuper in inſipidos ſales perperam immutari. At vero his quod reſpondeatur ad manum mihi eſt, & in procinctu; Sciant enim illi, ſi neſciant, Literas, cum leges Reipub. noſtræ Literariæ primum eſſent latæ, ab exteris regionibus vix has in oras fuiſſe advectas: idcirco cum Græcæ & Latinæ Linguæ peritia impendio rara eſſet & inſolens, expediebat eò acriori ſtudio, & magis aſſiduis exercitationibus ad eas eniti & aſpirare: nos autem quandoquidem ſuperioribus noſtris pejus ſumus morati, melius eruditi, oportebit relictis quæ haud multam habent difficultatem ad ea ſtudia accedere, ad quæ & illi contuliſſent ſe, ſi per otium licuiſſet; nec vos præteriit primos quoſque legumlatores duriora paulo ſcita, & ſeveriora quam ut ferri poſſint ſemper edere ſolere, ut deflectentes & paululum relapſi homines in ipſum rectum incidant. Denique mutatâ nunc omnino rerum facie, neceſſe eſt multas leges, multaſque conſuetudines ſi non antiquari & obſoleſcere, coanguſtari ſaltem nec per omnia ſervari. Verum ſi leves iſtiuſmodi nugæ palam defenſitatæ fuerint & approbatæ, publicamque demeruerint laudem (ſic enim arduis ſuperciliis ſolent dicere) nemo non averſo ab ſana & ſolida eruditione animo eum ad ludicra ſtatim & hiſtrionalem prope levitatem adjunget, adeo ut ipſa Philoſophorum ſpatia pro doctis & cordatis nugatores emiſſura ſint vel nimis & ſcurris proterviores. At vero ego exiſtimo eum qui jocis inſubidis ſic ſolet capi, ut præ iis ſeria & magis utilia plane negligat, eum inquam, nec in hac parte, nec in illa poſſe admodum proficere: non quidem in ſeriis, quia ſi fuiſſet ad res ſerias tractandas naturâ comparatus, factuſque, credo non tam facile pateretur ſe ab iis abduci; nec in nugatoriis, quia vix queat ullus belle & lepide jocari, niſi & ſerio agere prius addidicerit. Sed vereor, Academici, ne longius æquo deduxerim Orationis filum; nolo excuſare quod potui, ne inter excuſandum ingraveſcat culpa. Jam oratoriis ſoluti legibus proſiliemus in Comicam licentiam. In qua ſi forte morem meum, ſi rigidas verecundiæ leges tranſverſum, quod aiunt, digitum egreſſus fuero, ſciatis Academici, me in veſtram gratiam exuiſſe antiquum meum, & parumper depoſuiſſe: aut ſi quid ſolute, ſi quid luxurianter dictum erit, id quidem non mentem & indolem meam, ſed temporis rationem & loci genium mihi ſuggeſſiſſe putetis. Itaque, quod ſimile ſolent exeuntes implorare Comœdi, id ego inceptans flagito. Plaudite, & ridete.

Proluſio.

Laboranti, ut videtur, & pene corruenti ſtultorum rei ſummæ, equidem neſcio quo merito meo Dictator ſum creatus. At quorſum ego? cum Dux ille, & Anteſignanus omnium Sophiſtarum & ſedulò ambiverit hoc munus, & fortiſſime potuerit adminiſtrare; ille enim induratus Miles ad quinquaginta pridem Sophiſtas ſudibus breviculis armatos per agros Barwellianos ſtrenue duxit, & obſeſſurus oppidum ſatis militariter aquæductum disjecit, ut per ſitim poſſet oppidanos ad deditionem cogere; at vero abiiſſe nuper hominem valde doleo, ſiquidem ejus diſceſſu nos omnes Sophiſtas non ſolum ἀκεφάλους reliquit, ſed & decollatos. Et jam fingite, Auditores, quamvis non ſint Aprilis Calendæ, feſta adeſſe Hilaria, matri Deùm dicata, vel Deo Riſui rem divinam fieri. Ridete itaque & petulanti ſplene ſuſtollite cachinnum, exporrigite frontem, & uncis indulgete naribus, ſed naſo adunco ne ſuſpendite; profuſiſſimo riſu circumſonent omnia, & ſolutior cachinnus hilares excutiat lachrymas, ut iis riſu exhauſtis ne guttulam quidem habeat dolor quâ triumphum exornet ſuum. Ego profecto ſi quem nimis parce diducto rictu ridentem conſpexero, dicam eum ſcabros & carioſos dentes rubigine obductos, aut indecoro ordine prominentes abſcondere, aut inter prandendum hodie ſic oppleviſſe abdomen, ut non audeat ilia ulterius diſtendere ad riſum, ne præcinenti ori ſuccinat, & ænigmata quædam nolens effutiat ſua non Sphinx ſed Sphincter anus, quæ medicis interpretanda non Oedipo relinquo; nolim enim hilari vocis ſono obſtrepat in hoc cœtu poſticus gemitus: Solvant iſta Medici qui alvum ſolvunt. Si quis ſtrenuum & clarum non ediderit murmur, eum ego aſſeverabo tam gravem & mortiferum faucibus exhalare ſpiritum, ut vel Ætna, vel Avernus nihil ſpiret tetrius; aut certe allium aut porrum comediſſe dudum, adeo ut non audeat aperire os, ne vicinos quoſque fœtido halitu enecet. At vero abſit porro ab hoc cœtu horrendus & tartareus ille ſibili ſonus, nam ſi hîc audiatur hodie, credam ego Furias & Eumenides inter vos occulte latitare, & angues ſuos colubroſque pectoribus veſtris immiſiſſe, & proinde Athamanteos Furores vobis inſpiraviſſe. At enimvero, Academici, veſtram ego in me benevolentiam demiror atque exoſculor, qui me audituri per flammas & ignes irrupiſtis in hunc locum. Hinc enim in ipſo limine: ſcintillans ille noſter Cerberus aſtat, & fumido latratu horribilis, flammeoque coruſcans baculo favillas pleno ore egerit; illinc ardens & voraciſſimus Fornax noſter luridos eructat ignes, & tortuoſos fumi globos evolvit, adeo ut non ſit difficilius iter ad inferos vel invito Plutone; & certe nec ipſe Jaſon minori cum periculo boves illos Martis πυριπνέοντας aggreſſus eſt. Jamque Auditores, credite vos in cœlum receptos, poſteaquam evaſiſtis purgatorium, & neſcio quo novo miraculo ex fornace calida ſalvi prodiiſtis, neque ſane mihi in mentem venit ullius Herois cujus fortitudinem commode poſſim veſtræ æquiparare, neque enim Bellerophontes ille ignivomam Chimæram animoſius debellavit, nec validiſſimi illi Regis Arthuri pugiles, igniti & flammigerantis Caſtelli incantamenta vicerunt facilius & diſſiparunt; atque hinc ſubit, ut puros mihi Auditores & lectiſſimos pollicear, ſi quid enim fæcis huc advenerit poſt explorationem camini, ego ſtatim dixero ignes noſtros janitores eſſe fatuos. At fœlices nos & incolumes perpetuo futuros! Romæ enim ad diuturnitatem imperii ſempiternos ignes ſollicite & religioſe ſervabant, nos vigilibus & vivis ignibus cuſtodimur: Quid dixi vivis & vigilibus? id ſane improviſo lapſu prætervolavit, quippe nunc melius commemini, eos primo crepuſculo extinguere ſeſe, & non niſi claro ſudo ſeſe reſuſcitare. Attamen ſpes eſt, tandem iterum domum noſtram poſſe inclareſcere, cum nemo inficias iverit duo maxima Academiæ Luminaria noſtro collegio præſidere; quamvis illi nuſquam majori forent in honore quam Romæ ibi enim vel virgines Veſtales inextinctos eos, & inſomnes totas noctes ſervarent, vel forte ordini Seraphico initiarentur flammei fratres. In hos deniq; optime quadrat Hemiſtichion illud Virgilianum, Igneus eſt ollis vigor: immo pene inductus ſum ut credam Horatium horum noſtrorum ignium mentionem feciſſe, major enim horum, dum ſtat inter conjugem & liberos, micat inter omnes velut inter ignes Luna minores. Non poſſum autem præterire fædum Ovidii errorem, qui ſic cecinit, Nataque de flamma corpora nulla vides. Videmus enim paſſim oberrantes igniculos hoc noſtro igne genitos, hoc ſi negaverit Ovidius, neceſſum habebit uxoris pudicitiam vocare in dubium. Ad vos redeo, Auditores; Ne vos pœniteat tam moleſti & formidoloſi itineris, ecce convivium vobis apparatum! eccas menſas ad luxum Perſicum extructas, & cibis conquiſitiſſimis onuſtas, qui vel Apicianam gulam oblectent & deliniant! Ferunt enim Antonio & Cleopatræ octo integros apros in epulis appoſitos, vobis autem primo ferculo hem quinquaginta ſaginatos apros cerviſiâ conditaneâ per triennium maceratos, & tamen adhuc adeo calloſos, ut vel caninos dentes delaſſare valeant. Dein totidem optimos boves inſigniter caudatos famulari noſtro igni præ foribus recens aſſos; ſed vereor ne omnem ſuccum in patinam exudaverint. Ab his tot etiam en vitulina capita, ſane craſſa & carnoſa, ſed adeo pertenui cerebro, ut non ſufficiat ad condimentum. Tum quidem & hœdos plus minus centum, ſed puto crebriori Veneris uſu nimium macros: Arietes aliquot expectavimus ſpecioſis & patulis cornubus, ſed eos Coqui noſtri nondum ſecum attulerunt ex oppido. Si quis aves mavult, habemus innumeras, turundis, & offis, & ſcobinato caſeo diu altiles: Inprimis, neſcio quod genus avium tam ingenio, quam plumâ viride, unde eas è regione Pſittacorum ſuſpicor aſportatas; quæ quia gregatim ſemper volitant, & eodem fere loco nidulantur, eodem etiam diſco apponentur; iis vero parce velim veſcamini, quia præterquam quod admodum crudi ſint, & nihil in ſe habeant ſolidi nutrimenti, ſcabiem etiam comedentibus protrudunt (modo vera tradit Comeſtor.) Jam vero libere & genialiter epulamini; hic enim præſto eſt miſſus quem vobis præ omnibus commendo, prægrandis ſcilicet Gallinago, pertriennalem faginam adeo unguinoſæ pinguedinis, ut illi vix ſatis largum ſit unum ferculum ampliſſimum, roſtro eouſq; prælongo & eduro, ut impune poſſit eum Elephante aut Rhinocerote certamen ingredi; eam autem in hunc diem commode obtruncavimus, propterea quod prægrandium Simiorum more incepit puellis inſidiari, & vim inferre mulieribus. Hunc ſubſequuntur aves quædam Hibernicæ, neſcio quo nomine; ſed inceſſu & corporis filo gruibus perſimiles, quamvis utplurimum ſoleant in poſtremam menſam aſſervari; hic quidem eſt novus & rarus magis quam ſalutaris cibus: his itaque abſtineatis moneo, ſunt enim efficaciſſimi (modo vera tradit Comeſtor) ad generandos pediculos inguinales: has igitur arbitror ego agaſonibus utiliores futuras; nam cum ſint naturæ vividæ, vegetæ, & ſaltaturientes, ſi equis ſtrigoſis per podicem ingerantur, reddent eos protinus vivaciores & velociores quam ſi decem vivas anguillas in ventre haberent. Anſeres etiam complures aſpicite, & hujus anni & ſuperiorum argutos valde, & ranis Ariſtophanicis vocaliores; quos quidem facile dignoſcetis; mirum enim eſt ni ſe jam prodiderint ſibilando, ſtatim fortaſſe audietis. Ova inſuper aliquot habemus, ſed ea κακȣ κόρακος; Frugum vero nihil præterquam mala & meſpila, eaque infœlicis arboris, nec ſatis matura, præſtabit itaque iterum ad Solem ſuſpendi. Videtis apparatus noſtros, quæſo vos, quibus palato ſunt, commeſſamini. Verum hariolor dicturos vos, epulas haſce, veluti nocturnæ illæ dapes quæ à Dæmone veneficis apparantur, nullo condiri ſale, vereorque ne diſcedatis jejuniores quam veniſtis. Verum ad ea pergo quæ ad me propius attinent. Romani ſua habuere Floralia, Ruſtici ſua Palilia, Piſtores ſua Fornacalia, nos quoque potiſſimum hoc tempore rerum & negotiorum vacui, Socratico more ludere ſolemus. Itaque hoſpitia Leguleiorum ſuos habent, quos vocant Dominos, vel hinc indicantes quam ſint honoris ambitioſi. Nos autem, Academici, ad paternitatem quamproxime accedere cupientes id ficto nomine uſurpare geſtimus, quod vero non audemus ſaltem nonniſi in occulto; quemadmodum puellæ nuptias luſorias & puerperia ſolenniter fingunt, earum rerum quas anhelant & cupiunt, umbras captantes & amplectentes. Quorſum autem eo, qui proxime ſe circumegit, anno intermiſſa fuerit hæc ſolennitas, ego ſane haud poſſum divinare; niſi quod ii qui patres futuri erant, adeo ſtrenue ſe geſſerint in oppido, ut is cui id negotii dabatur, tantorum miſertus laborum ultro juſſerit eos ab hac cura otioſos eſſe. At vero unde eſt quod ego tam ſubito factus ſum Pater? Dii veſtram fidem! Quid hoc eſt prodigii Pliniana exuperantis portenta! numnam ego percuſſo angue Tyreſia fatum expertus ſum? ecqua me Theſſala ſaga magico perſudit unguento? an denique ego à Deo aliquo vitiatus, ut olim Cnœeus, virilitatem pactus ſum ſtupri pretium, ut ſic repente ἐκ θηλείας εις ἀῤῥενά ἀλλα χθείω ἄν? A quibuſdam, audivi nuper Domina. At cur videor illis parum maſculus? Ecquis Priſciani pudor? itane propria quæ maribus fœmineo generi tribuunt inſulſi Grammaticaſtri! ſcilicet quia Scyphos capaciſſimos nunquam valui pancratice haurire; aut quia manus tenendâ ſtivâ non occaluit. aut quia nunquam ad meridianum Solem ſupinus jacui ſeptennis bubulcus; fortaſſe demum quod nunquam me virum præſtiti, eo modo quo illi Ganeones: verum utinam illi poſſint tam facile exuere aſinos, quam ego quicquid eſt fœminæ; at videte quam inſubide, quam incogitate mihi objecerint id, quod ego jure optimo mihi vertam gloriæ. Namque & ipſe Demoſthenes ab æmulis adverſariiſque parum vir dictus eſt. Q. itidem Hortenſius omnium Oratorum poſt M. Tullium, clariſſimus, Dionyſia Pſaltria appellatus eſt à L. Torquato. Cui ille, Dionyſia, inquit, malo equidem eſſe, quam quod tu Torquate, ἄμουσος, ἀγροδίαιτος, ἀπρόσιτος. Ego vero quicquid hoc Domini aut Dominæ eſt à me longe amolior atque rejicio, niſi in roſtris atque ſubſelliis veſtris, Academici, dominari non cupio. Quis jam prohibebit me quin lætar tam auſpicato & fœlici omine, exultemque gaudio me tantis viris ejuſdem opprobrii ſocietate conjunctum! Interea ut bonos omnes & præſtantes ſupra invidiam poſitos arbitror, ita hos lividos adeo omnium infimos puto, ut ne digni ſint qui maledicant. Ad filios itaque pater me converto, quorum cerno ſpecioſum numerum, & video etiam lepidulos nebulones occulto nutu me patrem fateri. De nominibus quæritis? Nolo ſub nominibus ferculorum filios meos epulandos vobis tradere, id enim Tantali & Lycaonis feritati nimium eſſet affine; nec membrorum inſignibo nominibus, ne putetis me pro integris hominibus tot fruſta hominum genuiſſe; nec ad vinorum genera eos nuncupare volupe eſt, ne quicquid dixero, ſit ἀπροσδίονυσον, & nihil ad Bacchum; volo ad prædicamentorum numerum nominatos, ut ſic & ingenuos natales & liberalem vitæ rationem exprimam; & eadem opera curabo, uti omnes ad aliquem gradum ante meum obitum provecti ſint. Quod ad Sales meos nolo ego edentulos, ſic enim tritos, & veteres dicatis, & aniculam aliquam tuſſientem eos expuiſſe: proinde credo neminem ſales meos dentatos inculpaturum, niſi qui ipſe nullos habet dentes, ideoque reprehenſurum, quia non ſunt ipſius ſimiles. Et certe in præſens ego exoptarem obtigiſſe mihi Horatii ſortem, nempe ut eſſem ſalſamentarii filius, tunc enim ſales mihi eſſent ad unguem, vos etiam ſale ita pulchre defricatos dimitterem, ut noſtros milites qui nuper ab Inſula Reana capeſſere fugam non magis pœniteret ſalis petiti. Non libet mihi in conſilio vobis exhibendo, mei gnati, gnaviter eſſe operoſo, ne plus operæ vobis erudiendis quam gignendis inſumpſiſſe videar, tantum caveat quiſque ne ex filio fiat nepos: liberique mei ne colant liberum, ſi me velint patrem. Si qua ego alia præcepta dedero, ea linguâ vernaculâ proferenda ſentio; conaborque pro viribus ut omnia intelligatis. Cæterum exorandi ſunt mihi Neptunus, Apollo, Vulcanus, & omnes Dii Fabri; uti latera mea vel tabulatis corroborare, vel ferreis laminis circumligare velint. Quinetiam ſupplicanda mihi eſt Dea Ceres, ut quæ humerum eburneum Pelopi dederit, mihi pariter latera pene abſumpta reparare dignetur. Neque enim eſt cur miretur quiſlibet, ſi poſt tantum clamorem & tot filiorum genituram paulo infirmiora ſint. In his itaque ſenſu Neroniano ultra quam ſatis eſt, moratus ſum: nunc Leges Academicas veluti Romuli muros tranſiliens à Latinis ad Anglicana tranſcurro. Vos quibus iſtæc arrident, aures atque animos nunc mihi attentos date.

ORATIO.

TAmetſi mihi, Auditores, nihil magis jucundum ſit atque optabile aſpectu veſtro aſſiduâque togatorum hominum frequentiâ, hoc etiam honorifico dicendi munere, quo ego vice unâ atque alterâ apud vos non ingratâ operâ perfunctus ſum; tamen, ſi quod res eſt fateri liceat, ſemper ita fit, ut, cum neque meum ingenium, nec ſtudiorum ratio ab hoc Oratorio genere multum abhorreat, ego vix unquam meâ voluntate, aut ſponte ad dicendum accedam; mihi ſi fuiſſet integrum, vel huic veſpertino labori haud illibenter equidem parſiſſem: nam quoniam ex Libris & Sententiis doctiſſimorum hominum ſic accepi, nihil vulgare, aut mediocre in Oratore, ut nec in Poeta poſſe concedi, eumque oportere, qui Orator eſſe meritò & haberi velit, omnium Artium, omneſque Scientiæ circulari quodam ſubſidio inſtructum & conſummatum eſſe; id quando mea ætas non fert, malui jam prius ea mihi ſubſidia comparando, longo & acri ſtudio illam laudem veram contendere, quàm properato & præcoci ſtylo falſam præripere. Quâ animi cogitatione & conſilio dum æſtuo totus indies, & accendor, nullum unquam ſenſi gravius impedimentum & moram, hoc frequenti interpellationis damno; nihil vero magis aluiſſe ingenium, &, contra quam in corpore fit, bonam ei valetudinem conſervâſſe erudito & liberali otio. Hunc ego divinum Heſiodi ſomnum, hos nocturnos Endymionis cum Luna congreſſus eſſe crediderim; hunc illum duce Mercurio Promethei ſeceſſum in altiſſimas Montis Caucaſi ſolitudines ubi ſapientiſſimus Deûm atque hominum evaſit, utpote quem ipſe Jupiter de Nuptiis Thetidis conſultem iſſe dicatur. Teſtor ipſe lucos, & flumina, & dilectas villarum ulmos, ſub quibus æſtate proxime præteritâ ( ſi Dearum arcana eloqui liceat ) ſummam cum Muſis gratiam habuiſſe me jucundâ memoriâ recolo; ubi & ego inter rura & ſemotos ſaltus velut occulto ævo creſcere mihi potuiſſe viſus ſum. Hic quoq; eandem mihi deliteſcendi copiam utique ſperaſſem, niſi intempeſtive prorſus interpoſuiſſet ſe importuna hæc dicendi moleſtia, quæ ſic ingrate arcebat ſacros ſomnos, ſic torſit animum in aliis defixum, & inter præruptas Artium difficultates ſic impedivit & oneri fuit, ut ego amiſsâ omni ſpe perſequendæ quietis mœſtus cogitare cœperim, quam procul abeſſem ab ea tranquillitate quam mihi primò Literæ pollicebantur, acerbam fore inter hos æſtus & jactationes vitam, ſatius eſſe vel omnes Artes dedidiciſſe. Itaque vix compos mei, temerarium cœpi conſilium laudandæ Ignorantiæ, quæ nihil prorſus haberet harum turbarum; propoſuique in certamen utra ſuos cultores beatiores redderet Ars an Ignorantia? Neſcio quid eſt, noluit me meum ſive fatum, ſive genius ab incepto Muſarum amore diſcedere; imo & ipſa cæca ſors tanquam derepente prudens providenſque facta hoc idem noluiſſe viſa eſt; citius opinione meâ Ignorantia ſuum nacta eſt patronum, mihi Ars relinquitur defendenda. Gaudeo ſane ſic illuſum me, nec me pudet vel cæcam Fortunam mihi reſtituiſſe oculos; hoc illi nomine gratias habeo. Jam ſaltem illam laudare licet, cujus ab amplexu divulſus eram, & quaſi abſentis deſiderium ſermone conſolari; jam hæc non plane interruptio eſt, quis enim interpellari ſe dicat, id laudando & tuendo quod amat, quod approbat, quod magnopere aſſequi velit. Verum, Auditores, ſic ego exiſtimo in re mediocriter laudabili maxime elucere vim Eloquentiæ; quæ ſummam laudem habent, vix ullo modo, ullis limitibus Orationis contineri poſſe, in his ipſa ſibi officit copia, & rerum multitudine comprimit & coanguſtat expandentem ſe elocutionis pompam; hac ego argumenti fœcunditate nimiâ laboro, ipſæ me vires imbecillum, arma inermem reddunt; delectus itaque faciendus, aut certe enumeranda verius quam tractanda quæ tot noſtram cauſam validis præſidiis firmam ac munitam ſtatuunt: nunc illud mihi unice elaborandum video, ut oſtendam quid in utraque re, & quantum habeat momentum ad illam in quam omnes ferimur, beatitudinem; in qua contentione facili certe negotio verſabitur Oratio noſtra, nec admodum eſſe puto metuendum quid poſſit Scientiæ Inſcitia, Arti Ignorantia objicere; quamvis hoc ipſum quod objiciat, quod verba faciat, quod in hac celebritate Literatiſſimæ Concionis vel hiſcere audeat, id totum ab arte precariò vel potius emendicato habet. Notum hoc eſſe reor, Auditores, & receptum omnibus, magnum mundi opificem, cætera omnia cum fluxu & caduca poſuiſſet, homini præter id quod mortale eſſet, divinam quandam auram, & quaſi partem ſui immiſcuiſſe, immortalem, indelebilem lethi & interitus immunem; quæ poſtquam in terris aliquandiu tanquam cœleſtis hoſpes, caſte, ſanctéque peregrinata eſſet, ad nativum cælum ſurſum evibraret ſe, debitamque ad ſedem & patriam reverteretur: proinde nihil merito recenſeri poſſe in cauſis noſtræ beatitudinis, niſi id & illam ſempiternam, & hanc civilem vitam aliquâ ratione reſpiciat. Ea propemodum ſuffragiis omnium ſola eſt contemplatio, quâ ſine adminiſtro corpore ſeducta & quaſi conglobata in ſe mens noſtra incredibili voluptate immortalium Deorum ævum imitatur, quæ tamen ſine arte tota infrugifera eſt & injucunda, imo nulla. Quis enim rerum humanarum divinarumque ἰδέας intueri digne poſſit aut conſiderare, quarum ferme nihil nôſſe queat, niſi animum per artem & diſciplinam imbutum & excultùm habuerit; ita prorſus ei cui Artes deſunt, interclusus eſſe videtur omnis aditus ad vitam beatam: ipſam hanc animam altæ ſapientiæ capacem & prope inexplebilem, aut fruſtra nobis Deus, aut in pœnam dediſſe videtur, niſi maxime voluiſſet nos ad excelſam earum rerum cognitionem ſublimes eniti, quarum tantum ardorem naturâ humanæ menti injecerat. Circumſpicite quaqua poteſtis univerſam hanc rerum faciem, illam ſibi in gloriam tanti operis ſummus Artifex ædificavit; quanto altius ejus rationem inſignem, ingentem fabricam, varietatem admirabilem inveſtigamus, quod ſine arte non poſſumus, tanto plus authorem ejus admiratione noſtrâ celebramus, & veluti quodam plauſu perſequimur, quod illi pergratum eſſe, certum ac perſuaſiſſimum habeamus. Ecquid, Auditores, putabimus tanta immenſi ætheris ſpatia æternis accenſa atque diſtincta ignibus, tot ſuſtinere concitatiſſimos motus, tanta obire converſionum itinera ob hoc unum ut lucernam præbeant ignavis & pronis hominibus? & quaſi facem præferant nobis infra torpentibus & deſidioſis? nihil ineſſe tam multiplici fructuum herbarumque proventui, præterquam fragilem viriditatis ornatum? Profecto ſi tam injuſti rerum æſtimatores erimus, ut nihil ultra craſſum ſenſus intuitum perſequamur, non modo ſerviliter & abjecte, ſed inique & malitioſe cum benigno numine egiſſe videbimur; cui per inertiam noſtram, & quaſi per invidiam titulorum magna pars, & tantæ potentiæ veneratio penitus intercidet. Si igitur dux & inchoatrix nobis ad beatitudinem ſit eruditio, ſi potentiſſimo numini juſſa & complacita, & ejus cum laude maxime conjuncta, certe non poteſt ſui cultores non efficere vel ſumme beatos. Neque enim neſcius ſum, Auditores, contemplationem hanc quâ tendimus ad id quod ſumme expetendum eſt, nullum habere poſſe veræ beatitudinis guſtum ſine integritate vitæ, & morum innocentia; multos autem vel inſigniter eruditos homines nefarios extitiſſe, præterea iræ, odio, & pravis cupiditatibus obedientes; multos è contra literarum rudes viros probos atque optimos ſe præſtitiſſe; quid ergo? Num beatior Ignorantia? minime vero. Sic itaque eſt, Auditores, paucos fortaſſe doctrinâ præſtabiles ſuæ civitatis corruptiſſimi mores & illiteratorum hominum colluvies in nequitiam pertraxere, unius perdocti & prudentis viri induſtriâ multos mortales ab arte impolitos in officio continuit: nimirum una domus, vir unus arte & ſapientia præditus, velut magnum Dei munus toti Reipub. ſatis eſſe poſſit ad bonam frugem. Cæterum ubi nullæ vigent Artes, ubi omnis exterminatur eruditio, ne ullum quidem ibi viri boni veſtigium eſt, graſſatur immanitas atque horrida barbaries; hujus rei teſtem appello non civitatem unam, aut provinciam, non gentem, ſed quartam orbis terrarum partem Europam, quâ totâ ſuperioribus aliquot ſæculis omnes bonæ Artes interierant, omnes tunc temporis Academias præſides diu Muſæ reliquerant; pervaſerat omnia, & occupârat cæca inertia, nihil audiebatur in Scholis præter inſulſa ſtupidiſſimorum Monachorum dogmata, togam ſcilicet nacta, per vacua noſtra & pulpita, per ſqualentes Cathedras jactitavit ſe prophanum & informe monſtrum, Ignorantia. Tum primum lugere Pietas, & extingui Religio & peſſum ire, adeo ut ex gravi vulnere, ſero atque ægre vix in hunc uſque diem convaluerit. At vero, Auditores, hoc in Philoſophia ratum, & antiquum eſſe ſatis conſtat, omnis artis, omniſq; ſcientiæ perceptionem ſolius intellectus eſſe, virtutum ac probitatis domum atque delubrum eſſe voluntatem. Cum autem omnium judicio in-

tellectus humanus cæteris animi facultatibus princeps & moderator præluceat tum & ipſam voluntatem cæcam alioqui & obſcuram ſuo ſplendore temperat & colluſtrat, illa veluti Luna, luce lucet alienâ Quare demus hoc ſane, & largiamur ultro potiorem eſſe ad beatam vitam virtutem ſine arte, quam artem ſine virtute; at ubi ſemel fœlici nexu invicem conſociatæ fuerint, ut maxime debent, & ſæpiſſime continget, tum vero ſtatim vultu erecto atq; arduo ſuperior longe apparet, atq; emicat ſcientia, cum rege & imperatore intellectu in excelſo locat ſe, inde quaſi humile & ſub pedibus ſpectat inferius quicquid agitur apud voluntatem; & deinceps in æternum excellentiam & claritudinem, majeſtatemq; divinæ proximam facile ſibi aſſerit. Age deſcendamus ad civilem vitam, quid in privata, quid in publica proficiat utráq; videamus; taceo de arte quod ſit pulcherrimum juventutis honeſtamentum, ætatis virilis firmum præſidium, ſenectutis ornamentum atq; ſolatium. Prætereo & illud multos apud ſuos nobiles, etiam P. R. principes poſt egregia facinora, & rerum geſtarum gloriam ex contentione & ſtrepitu ambitionis ad literarum ſtudium tanquam in portum ac dulce perfugium ſe recipiſſe; intellexere nimirum ſenes præſtantiſſimi jam reliquam vitæ partem optimam optime oportere collocari; erant ſummi inter homines, volebant his artibus non poſtremi eſſe inter Deos; petierant honores, nunc immortalitatem; in debellandis imperii hoſtibus longe aliâ militiâ uſi ſunt, cum morte maximo generis humani malo conflictaturi, ecce quæ tela ſumpſerint, quas legiones conſcripſerint, quo commeatu inſtructi fuerint. Atqui maxima pars civilis beatitudinis in humana ſocietate & contrahendis amicitiis fere conſtituta eſt; doctiores pleroſque difficiles, inurbanos, moribus incompoſitis, nullâ fandi gratiâ ad conciliandos hominum animos multi queruntur: fateor equidem, qui in ſtudiis fere ſecluſus atque abditus eſt, multo promptius eſſe Deos alloqui quam homines, ſive quod perpetuo fere domi eſt apud ſuperos infrequens rerum humanarum & vere peregrinus, ſive quod aſſiduâ rerum divinarum cogitatione mens quaſi grandior facta in tantis corporis anguſtiis difficulter agitans ſe minus habilis ſit ad exquiſitiores ſalutationum geſticulationes; at ſi dignæ atque idoneæ contigerint amicitiæ nemo ſanctius colit; quid enim jucundius, quid cogitari poteſt beatius illis doctorum & graviſſimorum hominum colloquiis, qualia ſub illa platano plurima ſæpe fertur habuiſſe divinus Plato, digna certe quæ totius confluentis generis humani arrecto excipiantur ſilentio; at ſtolide confabulari, alios aliis ad luxum & libidines morem gerere ea demum ignorantiæ eſt amicitia, aut certe amicitiæ ignorantia. Quinetiam ſi hæc civilis beatitudo in honeſta liberaque oblectatione animi conſiſtit, ea profecto doctrinæ & arti repoſita eſt voluptas, quæ cæteras omnes facile ſuperet; quid omnem cœli ſyderumque morem tenuiſſe? omnes aeris motus & viciſſitudines, ſive auguſto fulminum ſonitu, aut crinitis ardoribus inertes animos perterrefaciat, ſive in nivem & grandinem obrigeſcat, ſive denique in pluvia & rore mollis & placidus deſcendat; tum alternantes ventos perdidiciſſe, omneſque halitus aut vapores quos terra aut mare eructat; ſtirpium deinde vires occultas, metallorumque calluiſſe, ſingulorum etiam animantium naturam, & ſi fieri poteſt, ſenſus intellexiſſe; hinc accuratiſſimam corporis humani fabricam & medicinam; poſtremo divinam animi vim & vigorem, & ſi qua de illis qui Lares, & Genii, & Dæmonia vocantur ad nos pervenit cognitio? Infinita adhæc alia, quorum bonam partem didiciſſe licuerit, antequam ego cuncta enumeraverim. Sic tandem, Auditores, cum omnimoda ſemel eruditio ſuos orbes confecerit, non contentus iſte ſpiritus tenebricoſo hoc ergaſtulo eouſque late aget ſe, donec & ipſum mundum, & ultra longe divinâ quadam magnitudine expatiatâ compleverit. Tum demum plerique caſus atque eventus rerum ita ſubito emergent, ut ei, qui hanc arcem ſapientiæ adeptus eſt, nihil pene incautum, nihil fortuitum in vita poſſit accidere; videbitur ſane is eſſe, cujus imperio & dominationi aſtra obtemperent, terra & mare obſecundent, venti tempeſtateſque morigeræ ſint; cui denique ipſa Parens Natura in deditionem ſe tradiderit, plane ac ſi quis Deus abdicato mundi imperio, huic jus ejus, & leges, adminiſtrationemque tanquam præfectori cuidam commiſiſſet. Huc quanta accedit animi voluptas, per omnes gentium hiſtorias & loca pervolare Regnorum, Nationum, Urbium, Populorum ſtatus mutationeſque ad prudentiam, & mores animadvertere: hoc eſt, Auditores, omni ætati quaſi vivus intereſſe, & velut ipſius temporis naſci contemporaneus; profecto cum nominis noſtri gloriæ in futurum proſpeximus, hoc erit ab utero vitam retro extendere & porrigere, & nolenti fato anteactam quandam immortalitatem extorquere. Mitto illud cui quid poteſt æquiparari? Multarum Gentium oraculum eſſe, domum quaſi templum habere, eſſe quos Reges & Reſpublicæ ad ſe invitent, cujus viſendi gratiâ finitimique exterique concurrant, quem alii vel ſemel vidiſſe quaſi quoddam bene meritum glorientur; hæc ſtudiorum præmia, hos fructus eruditio ſuis cultoribus in privata vita præſtare, & poteſt, & ſæpe ſolet. At quid in publica? Sane ad Majeſtatis faſtigium paucos evexit laus doctrinæ, nec probitatis multò plures. Nimirum, illi apud ſe regno fruuntur, omni terrarum ditione longe glorioſiori: & quis ſine ambitionis, infamiâ geminum affectat regnum? addam hoc tamen amplius, duos tantum adhuc fuiſſe qui quaſi cœlitus datum univerſum terrarum orbem habuere, & ſupra omnes Reges & Dynaſtas æquale Diis ipſis partiti ſunt imperium, Alexandrum nempe magnum & Octavium Cæſarem, eoſque ambos Philoſophiæ alumnos. Perinde quoddam electionis exemplar divinitus exhibitum eſſet hominibus, quali potiſſimum viro clavum & habenas rerum credi oporteret. At multæ reſp. ſine literis, rebus geſtis & opulentiâ claruere. Spartanorum quidem, qui ad literarum ſtudium contulerint ſe, pauci memorantur; Romani intra urbis mœnia Philoſophiam ſero receperunt; at illi Legiſlatore uſi ſunt Lycurgo, qui & philoſophus fuit & Poetarum adeo ſtudioſus, ut Homeri ſcripta per Ioniam ſparſa ſummâ curâ primus collegerit. Hi poſt varios in urbe motus & perturbationes ægre ſe ſuſtentare valentes, ab Athenis eâ tempeſtate artium ſtudio florentiſſimis, Leges Decemvirales, quæ & duodecim tabulæ dictæ ſunt, miſſis legatis emendicarunt. Quid ſi hodiernos Turcas per opima Aſiæ regna rerum late potitos omnis literaturæ ignaros nobis objiciant? Equidem in ea repub. (ſi tamen crudeliſſimorum hominum per vim & cædem arreptâ potentiâ, quos unum in locum ſceleris conſenſus convocavit, continuo reſpub. dicenda ſit) quod in ea ad exemplum inſigne ſit nil audivi, parare vitæ commoda, tueri parta, id Naturæ debemus, non Arti; aliena libidinoſe invadere, ſibi mutuo ad rapinam auxilio eſſe, in ſcelus conjurare, id Naturæ pravitati. Jus quoddam apud eos exercetur; nec mirum: cæteræ virtutes facile fugantur, juſtitia vere regia, ad ſui cultum impellit, ſine qua vel injuſtiſſimæ ſocietates cito diſſolverentur. Nec omiſerim tamen, Saracenos Turcarum propemodum conditores non armis magis quam bonarum literarum ſtudiis imperium ſuum propagaſſe. Sed ſi antiquitatem repetamus, inveniemus non inſtitutas modo ab Arte, ſed fundatas olim fuiſſe reſpublicas. Antiquiſſimi quique gentium indigenæ in ſylvis & montibus erraſſe dicuntur, ferarum ritu pabuli commoditatem ſequuti, vultu erecti, cætera proni, putâſſes præter formæ dignitatem nihil non commune cum beſtiis habuiſſe; eadem antra, iidem ſpecus cœlum & frigora defendebant; nulla tunc urbs, non ædes marmoreæ, non aræ Deorum, aut fana collucebant, non illic fas ſanctum, nondum jura in foro dicebantur, nulla in nuptiis tæda, non chorus, nullum in menſa geniali carmen, nullum ſolenne funeris, non luctus, vix tumulus defunctos honeſtabat; nulla convivia, nulli ludi, inauditus citharæ ſonus, ipſa tunc omnia aberant, quibus jam inertia ad luxum abutitur. Cum repente Artes & Scientiæ, agreſtia hominum pectora coelitus afflabant, & imbutos notitiâ ſui in una mœnia pellexere. Quamobrem certe quibus authoribus urbes ipſæ primum conditæ ſunt, dein ſtabilitæ legibus poſt conſiliis munitæ poterunt iiſdem etiam gubernatoribus quam diutiſſime fœliciſſimeque conſiſtere. Quid autem ignorantia? ſentio, Auditores, caligat, ſtupet, procul eſt, effugia circumſpicit, vitam brevem queritur, artem longam; immo vero tollamus duo magna ſtudiorum noſtrorum impedimenta, alterum artis male traditæ, alterum noſtræ ignaviæ, pace Galeni, ſeu quis alius ille fuit; totum contra erit, vita longa ars brevis; nihil arte præſtabilius, adeoque laborioſius, nihil nobis ſegnius, nihil remiſſius; ab operariis & agricolis nocturnâ & antelucanâ induſtriâ vinci nos patimur; illi in re ſordida ad vilem victum magis impigri ſunt, quam nos in nobiliſſima ad vitam beatam; nos cum ad altiſſimum atque optimum in humanis rebus aſpiremus, nec ſtudium ferre poſſumus, nec inertiæ dedecus; immo pudet eſſe id, quod non haberi nos indignamur. At valetudini cavemus à vigiliis & acri ſtudio: turpe dictu, animum incultum negligimus, dum corpori metuimus, cujus vires quis non imminuat, quo majores acquirantur animo? quanquam certe qui hæc cauſantur perditiſſimi plerique, abjectâ omni temporis, ingenii, valetudinis curâ, comeſſando, belluæ marinæ ad morem potando, inter ſcorta & aleam pernoctando, nihilo ſe infirmiores factos queruntur. Cum itaque ſic ſe afficiant atque aſſueſcant, ut ad omnem turpitudinem ſtrenui atque alacres; ad omnes virtutis actiones & ingenii hebetes & languidi ſint, culpam in naturam aut vitæ brevitatem falſo & inique transferunt. Quod ſi modeſte ac temperanter vitam degendo, primos ferocientis ætatis impetus ratione & pertinaci ſtudiorum aſſiduitate mallemus edomare, cœleſtem animi vigorem ab omni contagione & inquinamento purum & intactum ſervantes; incredibile eſſet, Auditores, nobis poſt annos aliquot reſpicientibus quantum ſpatium confeciſſe, quam ingens æquor eruditionis curſu placido navigâſſe videremur. Cui & hoc egregium afferet compendium, ſi quis nôrit & artes utiles, & utilia in artibus recte ſeligere. Quot ſunt imprimis Grammaticorum & Rhetorum nugæ aſpernabiles? audias in tradenda arte ſua illos barbare loquentes, hos infantiſſimos. Quid Logica? Regina quidem illa artium ſi pro dignitate tractetur: At heu quanta eſt in ratione inſania! non hic homines, ſed plane Acanthides carduis & ſpinis veſcuntur. O dura Meſſorum ilia! Quid repetam illam, quam Metaphyſicam vocant Peripatetici, non artem, locupletiſſimam quippe me ducit magnorum virorum authoritas, non artem inquam plerumque, ſed infames ſcopulos, ſed Lernam quandam Sophiſmatum ad naufragium & peſtem excogitatam? hæc illa quæ ſupra memini togatæ ignorantiæ vulnera ſunt; hæc eadem cucullorum ſcabies etiam ad Naturalem Philoſophiam late permanavit: vexet Mathematicos demonſtrationum inanis gloriola; his omnibus quæ nihil profutura ſunt meritò contemptis & amputatis, admirationi erit quot annos integros lucrabimur. Quid! quod Juriſprudentiam præſertim noſtram turbata methodus obſcurat, & quod pejus eſt, ſermo neſcio quis, Americanus credo, aut ne humanus quidem, quo cum ſæpe Leguleios noſtros clamitantes audiverim, dubitare, ſubiit quibus non eſſet humanum os & loquela, an & his ulli affectus humani adeſſent: vereor certe ut poſſit nos ſancta Juſtitia reſpicere, vereor ut querelas ullo tempore noſtras aut injurias intelligat, quorum linguâ loqui neſciat. Quapropter, Auditores, ſi nullum a pueritia diem ſine præceptis & diligenti ſtudio vacuum ire ſinamus, ſi in arte, aliena ſupervacanea otioſa ſapienter omittamus, certe intra ætatem Alexandri magni majus quiddam & glorioſius illo terrarum orbe ſubegerimus: tantumque aberit quo minus brevitatem vitæ, aut artis tædium incuſemus, ut flere & lachrymari promptius nobis futurum credam, ut illi olim, non plures ſupereſſe mundos de quibus triumphemus. Expirat Ignorantia, jam ultimos videte conatus & morientem luctam; Mortales præcipue gloriâ tangi, antiquos illos illuſtres longa annorum ſeries atque decurſus cum celebrârit, nos decrepito mundi ſenio, nos properante rerum omnium occaſu premi, ſi quid prædicandum æterna laude reliquerimus, noſtrum nomen in anguſto verſari, cujus ad memoriam vix ulla poſteritas ſuccedat, fruſtra jam tot Libros & præclara ingenii monumenta edi quæ vicinus mundi rogus cremârit. Non inficior illud eſſe poſſe veriſimile; at vero non morari gloriam cum bene feceris, id ſupra omnem gloriam eſt. Quam nihil beavit iſtos inanis hominum ſermo cujus ad abſentes & mortuos nulla voluptas, nullus ſenſus pervenire potuit? nos ſempiternum ævum expectemus quod noſtrorum in terris ſaltem benefactorum memoriam nunquam delebit; in quo, ſi quid hic pulchre meruimus, præſentes ipſi audiemus, in quo qui prius in hac vita continentiſſime actâ omne tempus bonis artibus dederint, iiſque homines adjuverint, eos ſingulari & ſummâ ſupra omnes ſcientiâ auctos eſſe futuros multi graviter philoſophati ſunt. Jam cavillari deſinant ignavi quæcunque adhuc nobis in ſcientiis incerta atque perplexa ſint, quæ tamen non tam ſcientiæ, quam homini attribuenda ſunt; hoc eſt, Auditores, quod & illud neſcire Socraticum & timidam Scepticorum hæſitationem aut refellit, aut conſolatur, aut compenſat. Jam vero tandem aliquando quænam Ignorantiæ beatitudo? ſua ſibi habere, à nemine lædi, omni curâ & moleſtia ſuperſedere, vitam ſecure & quiete, quoad poteſt, traducere; verum hæc feræ aut volucris cujuſpiam vita eſt quæ in altis & penitiſſimis ſylvis in tuto nidulum cœlo quamproximum habet, pullos educit, ſine aucupii metu in paſtum volat, diluculo, veſperique ſuaves modulos emodulatur. Quid ad hæc deſideratur æthereus ille animi vigor? Exuat ergo hominum, dabitur ſane Circæum poculum, ad beſtias prona emigret: Ad beſtias vero? at illæ tam turpem hoſpitem excipere nolunt, ſi quidem illæ ſive inferioris cujuſdam rationis participes, quod plurimi diſputârunt, ſive pollenti quodam inſtinctu ſagaces, aut artes, aut artium ſimile quoddam apud ſe exercent. Namque & Canes in perſequenda fera Dialecticæ non ignaros eſſe narratur apud Plutarchum, & ſi ad trivia forte ventum ſit, plane disjuncto uti Syllogiſmo. Luſciniam veluti præcepta quædam Muſices pullis ſuis tradere ſolere refert Ariſtoteles; unaquæque fere beſtia ſibi medica eſt, multæ etiam inſignia medicinæ documenta hominibus dedere. Ibis Ægyptia alvi purgandæ utilitatem, Hippopotamus detrahendi ſanguinis oſtendit. Quis dicat Aſtronomiæ expertes à quibus tot ventorum, imbrium, inundationum ſerenitatis præſagia petantur? Quam prudenti & ſeverâ Ethica ſupervolantes montem Taurum anſeres obturato lapillis ore periculoſæ loquacitati moderantur; multa formicis res domeſtica, civitas apibus debet; excubias habendi, triquetram aciem ordinandi rationem ars militaris gruum eſſe agnoſcit. Sapiunt altius beſtiæ, quam ut ſuo cœtu & conſortio ignorantiam dignentur; inferius detrudunt. Quid ergo? ad truncos & ſaxa. At ipſi trunci, ipſa arbuſta, totumque nemus ad doctiſſima Orphei carmina ſolutis quondam radicibus feſtinavêre. Sæpe etiam myſteriorum capaces, ut quercus olim Dodonea, divina Oracula reddidêre. Saxa etiam ſacræ Poetarum voci docilitate quâdam reſpondent: an & hæc aſpernantur à ſe Ignorantiam? Num igitur infra omne Brutorum genus, infra Stipites & Saxa, infra omnem Naturæ ordinem licebit in illo Epicureorum noneſſe requieſcere? Ne id quidem: quandoquidem neceſſe eſt, quod pejus, quod vilius, quod magis miſerum, quod infimum eſt, eſſe Ignorantiam? Ad vos venio, Auditores intelligentiſſimi, nam & ipſe ſi nihil dixiſſem, vos mihi tot non tam Argumenta, quam tela video, quæ ego in Ignorantiam uſque ad perniciem contorquebo. Ego jam Claſſicum cecini, vos ruite in prælium; ſummovete à vobis hoſtem hanc, prohibete veſtris porticibus & ambulacris; hanc ſi aliquid eſſe patiamini, vos ipſi illud eritis, quod noſtis omnium eſſe miſerrimum. Veſtra itaque hæc omnium cauſa eſt. Quare ſi ego jam multo fortaſſe prolixior fuerim, quam pro conſuetudine hujus loci liceret, præterquam quod ipſa rei dignitas hos poſtulabat, dabitis & vos mihi veniam, opinor, Judices, quandoquidem, tanto magis intelligitis in vos quo ſim animo, quam veſtri ſtudioſus, quos Labores, quas Vigilias veſtrâ causâ non recusârim. Dixi.
